By the Witness: Sorry. I will repeat it entirely. 4-29-46, check No. 396, cash, $2,300.00, the endorsers William H. Heitmann, Edward L. Urban, charge to accounts payable. The explanation, "Liquid syrup 25 drums".

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, do you have on your work sheets of 3470 seven years ago the check to cash which is Exhibit 93, check No. 474?

A. Exhibit 93, check—yes, I have.

Q. Well, who endorsed that check to cash?

A. William Heitmann, Edward L. Urban.

Q. Now, will you look at the entry you made in those days and see how it was charged?

By the Court: Which exhibit is this?

By the Witness: This is 93.

By the Court: Oh, the second check.

By the Witness: The second check.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, it so happens, Judge, there are two checks, each of 2300.

By the Witness:

A. May 2, 1946, check No. 474, cash, 2300, endorsers, William H. Heitmann, Edward L. Urban, accounts payable, 25 drums liquid syrup.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So that these two checks, each for 2300, were entered at that time as having gone for the purchase of liquid syrup?

A. Syrup, that's right.

Q. And that information was given to you by 3471 whom, do you know?

A. I do not remember whether Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman gave me that information, in this particular instance.

Q. Well, did they ever show you a document, such as this Government's Exhibit 13, and say that was overage for candy to Shotwell and "You can look right here where it says plus two checks for 4600, or a total of 4600," did they ever tell you that they cashed the money and took it and gave it to Shotwell?

A. I never received that information. I never saw this sheet before.

Q. And that thing in Lubben's handwriting, he didn't come up and show that to you to explain what he did with the money?

A. I never saw the sheet before.

Q. Now, it was posted, so far as you know, the last time you saw the books for the purchase of some liquid syrup from somebody?

A. That's right.

Q. And not candy at all.

A. Not candy at all.

Q. Now, then, this memorandum goes on down
3472 past this 4600, and it has a number of figures which there never were any checks produced on, but did they ever say to you to charge those kind of figures to Shotwell on the accounts payable book?

A. I have no recollection of having any instructions about charging Shotwell in connection with this sheet. I never saw the sheet.

3473 Q. And were those amounts following the 4600 on that sheet, shown in the purchases book of the company, representing purchases of any candy?

A. I don't recollect any amounts being in that purchase book.

Q. So that so far as you remember, that series of transactions following the two checks totaling 4600, you never saw that at all?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, your books, they came in balance from time to time, didn't they?

A. Right.

Q. If the amount of money which is on this sheet, Exhibit 13, were not entered, your books would be badly out of balance, wouldn't they?

A. That's right.

Q. But they did balance?

A. I proved that by mail confirmation.

Q. With Shotwell?

A. With Shotwell.

Q. That is, that the accounts as shown on the books of General Confections on Shotwell jibed up?

A. It was proper audit procedure to confirm accounts payable and accounts receivable by mail.

3474 Q. And with no such amounts as this on the books charged against Shotwell, isn't that true?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, the next item of proof that they gave us for the period when you were the auditor is a group of three so-called memorandums, being Exhibits 94, 95 and 96, and I show them to you and ask you if you ever were shown that type—or those memorandums?

A. I never saw those memorandums before.

Q. Well, were those memoranda posted to the books then in existence?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Well, they didn't show us any checks on it, we just have those memoranda. You never saw them, in the seven years ago period?

A. I never saw them.

3475 Q. Is that also in the period when you were asking Miss Feldman to show you everything that did exist?

A. That's right.

Q. The next item of proof in the period when you were the auditor that they showed us was a couple of pages again of memorandums which are in Hankermeyer's handwriting, I think, 97 and 98; did you ever see those before?

A. I never saw those sheets before.

Q. So far as you know, were they ever posted to the books in your period there?

A. So far as I know, they never were posted to the books.

Q. The next material that they showed us as to payments they alleged to have made were two memoranda I have already shown you, Exhibit 101 in Lubben's handwriting, and Exhibit 102 which is supposedly a typewritten copy of the same with some added material at the bottom, and I will ask you if you ever saw those before. And I think that you answered already that you didn't.

A. I have already stated I did not see these sheets.

3476 Q. Now those sheets that you have total $33,567. No checks were shown on it, but there are some supposed payments mentioned on the bottom there. Did Mr. Lubben ever report to you that he had made a payment to Frank on the way to the barn in the amount of $1,488. that should be entered on the books?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever report to you that there was a payment of fourteen thousand in Chicago for Frank?

A. No.

Q. Or any of the other payments on there?

A. I never saw or heard anything about any of these payments.

Q. The next two that they showed us were Exhibits 112 and 120, Exhibit 120, coming down to December 17 of 1946, and did they ever show you those memos at that time?

A. I never saw these memoranda.

Q. The remaining memoranda which they introduced were 122-A, 122-C, 126-A, 126-B, and 126-C, and I will ask you if Miss Feldman showed you those memoranda?

A. I never saw these memoranda.

3477 Q. But what you were shown, or what they did have available at that time was posted to the then books, is that right?

A. We checked purchases—the purchase book was checked by means of getting actual bills from suppliers. We went through their purchase book, and all the bills that we could locate we checked and verified. We made schedules of all the purchases for General Confections.

Q. I think you already told me that you reconciled the Shotwell accounts payable on the books of the General Confections?

A. That's right, as of February 28, 1947, we have a record—rather, a signed confirmation, and we reconciled against Shotwell's letter to Mr. Lubben as of that date.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 60-A and 60-B.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 60-A and 60-B for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

Q. And is the conciliation letter which I have had marked 60-A and 60-B; is this the letter?

A. That's right.

3478 A. And did the accounts check out, that is to say, the Shotwell books and the General Confections books balance out—I don't mean the General Confections had paid all they owed, but I mean there was an agreement?

A. There was an agreement after we made certain adjustments.

3479 Q. Well, those adjustments were to reflect that there had been some commissions applied against the account, and things like that.

By Mr. Lockley: If you don't mind, just ask him a question and I won't have to object to your testifying so often.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, that is a good objection, and I apologize.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Meyer, what were the adjustments, please?

A. The adjustments covered commissions in two periods that the General Confections had not reflected on their books, which we, as auditors, had to pick up in order to reconcile.

Q. You mean sales commissions?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Meyer, there were some checks cashed which you were told back seven years ago are to be charged against Shotwell, is that right?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: Please, Mr. Kirby. I don't like to have to object to your constant testimony in this case.

By the Court: Yes.

3480 By Mr. Kirby: Yes, that's right, Judge.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Were there any checks at any time to cash which they did tell you back in those days should be charged against Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were?

A. Yes.

Q. But how about these that I have gone down with you, none of them were, were they?

A. I don't recollect any. I don't remember charging any.

Q. Well, the 35,536.00 I showed you, the two—

A. That was not questioned. That was in our records as actually charged against Eatsum. I had no reason to question that check. That was actually charged in the account and verified as paid to Eatsum.

Q. But the items that I have gone over with you represent items that were not charged on the books to Shotwell, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. Now, those entries with respect to Shotwell, were they made concurrently or later?

3481 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he is a little more specific as to which entries he is referring to.

By the Court: Yes. I don't know what you mean by concurrently. With what?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, were they already posted when you came there or did you post them when you asked what happened to the cash and they said to charge it; what was the fact?

By Mr. Lockley: Were what posted?

By Mr. Kirby: Any checks to cash.

By Mr. Lockley: What checks to cash?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you ever remember any?

A. Yes, some checks.

By the Court: You mean the checks to cash which he posted as going to Shotwell?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And that was based on information given to you by Lubben or Miss Feldman?

A. Well, I remember one check was charged to Shotwell, of cash, and there was a cash authorization 3482 slip in connection with it. And when we did confirm this accounts payable item, it was necessary to set up a purchase in order to agree with Shotwell. I think, if I recollect, the amount was $17,000.00 that was charged to Shotwell, but there was a cash authorization slip in connection with that charge to Shotwell.

Q. Made out by Miss Feldman?

A. Made out by Miss Feldman in that. As far as I know, it was made out by Miss Feldman. I would have to look at the cash authorization slip to verify her handwriting.

Q. But am I correct in believing that except for those instances that you have just related these other items were not charged to Shotwell?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what is a journal entry?

A. A journal entry represents either an adjustment, a correction, additional information. That is, as far as an auditor is concerned.

A journal entry in the regular course of business could be any type information that cannot be handled by any other book of original entry. You can use a journal 3483 during the normal operations of a business.

It is an auditor's means of correcting, adjusting, placing additional information on the books and records of a corporation.

Q. Well, in layman's language a journal entry by an auditor means he has to make some kind of an addition or correction to what he finds when he comes there?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you have to make journal entries in order to change or correct what you found in this bookkeeping system when you came there?

A. We made very many entries in this system.

3484 Q. And I asked you one time how many you made during this General Confections audit, how many different things did they tell you had to be changed or corrected from what you found when you got there?

A. We made about 450 journal entries during the course of a one-year audit.

Q. At their request?

A. Well, it isn't at their request. An auditor makes a journal entry because he knows something has to be corrected. We couldn't put out a statement for them unless we made those journal entries. Actually, after we get the information, we compile it and we find out what accounts have been incorrectly charged and correct them by means of a journal entry.

Q. And there were some 457 of those journalizing or correcting entries on this set of books?

A. That's right.

Q. Based on information supplied by Lubben or Feldman?

A. Or employees—also employees during the course of our investigation and audit.

Q. Now, do you remember making a special audit one time which would be captioned "General Confec-3485 tions list of checks requiring additional information"?

A. Yes, I did. I think it was in the first—if I remember, it was in the first period of the audit.

Q. And as you remember now, did you have to charge a substantial amount of checks off to Lubben personally?

A. I did.

Q. Because there was no explanation at all?

A. There was no explanation of those checks, so we had to charge it against Lubben's personal account.

Q. Now, one of the items of proof—

Yes. There wasn't even an oral explanation from Lubben on what happened to that money, is that right?

A. There was no explanation.

By Mr. Lockley: I object again to your testifying, Mr. Kirby.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Meyer, one bit of proof that we have had here—a man said he went to a bank in the summer of '46 and he cashed four checks for $5,000.00 each and he took the money and he put it in his shirt and he went over and paid it to Shotwell. Now, I can't show you those 3486 checks because they haven't been produced. But I ask you, did you ever work as an auditor at General Confections on their bank statements, such as these marked in the 38 series?

A. We reconciled every bank statement that they had.

Q. And checked the checks to the bank statement?

A. We checked all of their checks against their cash disbursements and then verified actually what cash they had at the bank at specific periods of time, and at the three periods in question.

Q. And those sheets that you hold in your hand are photostats of their account at the Manufacturers Bank?

A. That's right.

Q. And if any checks cleared would they show on there?

A. That's right,

3487 Q. That is for the period April on into November, 1946, isn't that, that group of sheets?

A. I can't verify that here. It is so—wait a minute now.

By the Court: What exhibits are they?

By Mr. Kirby: They are in the 38 series, your Honor.

By the Witness: Wait a minute now. I see April. April, right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. They go from April to November of 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. Now before you testified here to-day—

By the Court: What did you say, 38?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.
By the Court: Are you sure of that?
By Mr. Kirby: Well, it is the defense.
By the Court: Oh, the defense.
By the Witness: That is right. It says so here.
By the Court: All right,
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Now, before you got in here to testify and while you were waiting to be called, did I hand you those 3488 sheets and ask you to look at them?
A. Yes.
Q. And did I ask you to look for some particular thing?
A. I was asked to look for four consecutive checks for $5,000.00 each.
Q. Clearing the bank account?
A. Clearing the bank account.
Q. And did any such group of four checks ever clear?
A. I couldn't locate four checks consecutive at $5,000.00 each.
Q. Well, you couldn't even find any on the same day?
A. That is right.
Q. Or the same week?
A. I can't say in the same week. I didn't verify dates. I just looked in the different sections and from looking on those sections I saw maybe five thousand on one and never more than two on one page, as I recollect.
Q. But never a group of four?
A. Never a group of four.
By Mr. Kirby: I offer in evidence Defendants' 3489 Exhibits for identification 56, 57, 58 and 59, and I have no further questions of Mr. Meyer.
Thank you. Thank you especially for speaking up, Mr. Meyer.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Are these all of the work papers to which Mr. Meyer had reference during the period on the stand?
A. No. There are additional ones here. I think here were some questions about cash checks about which there are papers here in connection.
By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to this then, your Honor.
By the Court: Very well. They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 56, 57, 58 and 59.)

By the Court: Gentlemen, are we making good progress?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think so, Judge. I don't think 3490 we will be as long as we anticipated.

By the Court: You aren't able to prognosticate it? I don't mean to—

By Mr. O'Brien: No. I feel it will be noticeably shorter than I thought.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: I feel it will be noticeably shorter than I thought.

By Mr. McConnell: I am going to make a prognostication. I am going fishing on the 14th.

By the Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I was just asking counsel if things were going slower or faster than they anticipated. Mr. O'Brien tells me we are going faster than anticipated. I thought that might be good news for the jury. It is twenty minutes after four o'clock—

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, may I temporarily at least withdraw my agreement to Defendants' Exhibit 56 until I have had an opportunity to examine it and might I also ask that the witness make available to me
3491 for examination the other work papers which he testified to so that I might cross examine him on those Monday morning?

3492 By the Court: I assume you couldn't complete your cross examination in ten minutes?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir, I couldn't I can ask some questions, however, if you care to use up that time.

By the Court: Well—

By Mr. Kirby: I wish he would clear up with Mr. Meyer what the audit sheets are, and I wish Mr. Meyer would give him the audit sheet now.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Because your Honor could see, I didn't know just which ones were important.

By the Witness: Well, I gave him all the sheets necessary.

By the Court: Wait a minute, Mr. Meyer.

Mr. Lockley, just what do you have in mind?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Meyer referred to a list of cash checks which were made up. Is that this exhibit, Mr. Meyer?

By the Witness: I would have to look that up.

3493 There may be more exhibits.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I may be able to shorten it by asking you, are these all of the work sheets from which you testified while you were on direct examination?

A. There is one other.

By the Court: Mr. Meyer, I am afraid you will have to take the stand.

By the Witness: I think there is one other sheet that says, "Is further additional information on checks." Outside of that, I think it covers it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. May I have that sheet, too, then?

A. I think I testified about the seventy-four thousand. I think that was the sheet that was used to question Mr. Lubben about additional checks.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, he didn't refer to this. He didn't have it in his hand, but I think this is the one (indicating.)

By the Witness: This is the one you asked about additional—

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Witness: That would be the additional one,

3494 because there is where the seventy-four thousand dollar item applies.

By Mr. Kirby: Let Mr. Lockley have that, will you?

By the Witness: Sure.

By the Court: Well, now, I understand, Mr. Meyer, you have turned over to Mr. Lockley all of the work papers or additional computations that refer to the testimony you have given in your direct examination?

By the Witness: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: May the record show just what sheets were delivered now?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Meyer, perhaps you had better describe the sheets, item by item for the record, please?

By the Witness:

A. Right. General Confections general schedule of checks drawn to cash, and others, for the period March 1st to June 30, 1946. Schedule of checks drawn to cash and others, July to October, 1946. Schedule of checks drawn to cash and others, November, 1946 to February 28, 1947.

Analysis Eatsum Food Products based on sources of books of original entry, March 1st to June 30, 1946.

Pardon me. The first of those were the debits, and the second part were the credits. In other words, the debits and credits covering that period in the accounts payable.

Last, the confirmation by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company on April 21, 1947, addressed to Mr. David Lubben in New York, which we reconcile, that we have a schedule, a separate schedule which gave us our reconciliation after we had certain adjustments.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that set of work papers include the list of checks to cash for all of the period to which you have testified?

A. That is right.

3496 By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By the Court: Well, I gather that completes——

By Mr. Kirby: Can we have those photostated and returned to us tomorrow morning?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, indeed. We will arrange to have them back to counsel tomorrow morning.

3497 By the Court: Well, members of the jury, we will adjourn now until Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Counsel told me that we are going along a little faster than they anticipated and I am sure it is good news to us and if you will be patient, I am sure the time will come when we will have the case concluded.

As I told you the other day, I am sure you will want to do a good job and will be as patient as you possibly can be.

I realize your jury service may be burdensome but it isn't very often that the government asks you to perform duties of citizenship and I am sure you will want to approach your duties with that idea in mind. This is an important lawsuit. It is important to the government and it is important to the defendants.

I don't know that I encourage you very much when I say this but I try to. I know it is hard to sit on a jury for this period of time.

We will be adjourned until 10:00 o'clock Monday
3498 morning. Remember the admonition that I have given you not to talk to anybody about this case and not to permit anyone to talk to you about it. If they do, I want you to report it to the Court. Refrain from reading any newspaper accounts of the proceedings of this trial as long as you are on the jury in this case.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room?

This Honorable Court will recess until Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause to Monday, October 5, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Monday, October 5, 1953,
10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pusuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

3500 JOSEPH P. MEYER, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Meyer, how long have you been an accountant?

A. I have been an accountant for about twenty years.

Q. About how many sets of books have you worked on in that length of time?

A. In the neighborhood of about 200.

Q. How many of those since 1946?

A. About 150, I'd say, approximately.

Q. And did you conduct audits on all of them?

A. I was in private accounting before I became a public accountant.

Q. Well, since you have been a public accountant, that has been since 1946?

A. No, I was a public accountant from September of '42 to June of '43.

Q. Then when you came back from the war did you go back into public accounting?

A. That's right.

Q. And a public accountant does conduct audits,

3501 doesn't he?

A. That's right.

Q. I mean, that's about all a public accountant does?

A. They conduct audits and—in other words, there are other investigations, possibly, but mostly in the nature of audits and audit procedure, audit practice, preparation of tax returns, and anything applicable to accounting indirectly has to do with audit procedure.

Q. In other words, you don't actually make entries in the books of original entry, that is left to a bookkeeper?

A. That's right.

Q. What you do is come in, go over those books after they have been set up by the bookkeeper and you post to the general ledger?

A. No, we don't post to a general ledger, I beg to differ. The posting is all done by employees.

3502 Q. I see. Well, you take off a profit and loss statement, is that so?

A. We take it off our own working papers. We audit the books and records, prove those books and records, make all our statements from our own working papers. In other words, we make journal entries, we put those journal entries on our working papers and compile our certified statement from our working papers.

Q. Not from the books and records?

A. Not from the books and records. We then proceed to give the bookkeeper those adjustments necessary to bring the books and records in line with the certified statement and the tax return.

Q. Okay. Thank you. Now, as I understand it, you began your audit of this first period in General Confections from March 1st to June 30th about August, 1946, is that correct?

A. I can give you the exact date.

Q. Well, what was it?

A. August 19th the audit started.

Q. And Miss Feldman was there at that time?

A. Miss Feldman was present at General Confections.

3503 Q. Did she tell you that she had just arrived on August 1st?

A. I don't know when she arrived, but I know it was approximately around that date. I couldn't say definitely the exact date at this time when she arrived.

Q. Now, General Confections had what is commonly known as a double entry set of books, didn't they?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you consider those to be adequate from an accounting viewpoint?

A. Yes, double entry books are adequate from a double entry viewpoint, if properly maintained.

Q. Now, did you recommend any changes in that set of books when you audited them?

A. After our audit we recommended a number of changes. I personally made a list of all the changes in connection with General Confections.

Q. Did you recommend among other things any change in the method of handling cash checks?

A. Yes, we recommended quite a number of changes in connection with cash checks.

Q. And were those changes carried out?

A. Those changes were never carried out—those 3504 changes—the recommendation we gave in connection with that change was given during the course and after the audit, but the recommendations about cash were not carried out because in the third period there were still numerous cash checks.

Q. Do you have a list of those recommended changes that you made?

A. Well, I had a typewritten list in my working papers.

Q. You had one. Do you have it now?

A. I don't have it with me. I know—I think it is in my working papers.

Q. Do you have your other working papers with you, the ones you testified from Friday?

A. I just have the ones that are applicable to my testimony in connection with those cash schedules and also the letter, the accounts payable.

Q. Now, when did you say those working papers from which you testified on direct examination were prepared?

A. All of those cash schedules were prepared at the time of the audits.

Q. And is all the handwriting on them yours?

A. Not all mine. There were two other account-
3505 ants accompanying me in connection with that audit and sometimes Mr. Scholz came up. And there might have been four at that time when he was present.

Q. When is the last time you did any work on them?

A. The last time we did work at General Confections audit was the end of April and I am not positive, but it might have carried into the beginning of May, 1947.

Q. I said what is the last time you worked on the papers, not on the audit, on your work papers.

A. On our work papers, well, we examined the work papers before—when we were subpoenaed by the Shotwell people to present them. I was working on them, examining them and looking them over when we brought them out to Shotwell in Chicago. That was about a year ago, I suppose.

Q. Have you gone over them recently with the defendants' counsel?

A. Yes. I went over the work papers.

Q. All right. Now, are you prepared to state that those are in the same condition now as they were when they were prepared by you in 1946 and 1947?

A. As far as I could see, those working papers were the same working papers we had when we com-3506 pleted the audit.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, we have no objection to the introduction of Defendants' Exhibits 56, 57, 58, 59 and 60-A and 60-B.

By the Court: Very well. They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendant's Exhibits 56, 57, 58, 59, and 60-A and 60-B.)

3507 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you please get the remainder of your work papers, Mr. Meyer?

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think we offered them as yet.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, I offered those particular ones.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wasn't sure.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. May I have the remainder of your working papers?

A. This is stuff—this wasn't work papers in connection with the audit at all. Those were the only work papers I had on the audit. This is correspondence I had in connection with it, that I had since that time, with people. You have all—.

Q. Where are the originals of these documents which were given to us to photostat Friday?

A. I haven't got those. Mr. Kirby may have them.

By Mr. Kirby: Here they are.

By Mr. Lockley: These are only Exhibits 56, 57, 58 and 59, 60-A and 60-B.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all we offered.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I would like to have the three schedules of checks drawn to cash from which you 3508 testified Friday and also the list of checks requiring additional information from which you testified Friday, if your Honor please.

By Mr. Kirby: We gave him photostats of all that material which they have. If they want to introduce it in evidence—

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, if you please, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: They have photostats of all that. We gave them the originals to photostat on Friday when Mr. Meyer left the stand.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you have any objection to the admission of the photostats in lieu of the originals?

By Mr. Kirby: No. It makes no difference at all.

By Mr. O'Brien: No. Neither do we have any objection to the originals, Mr. Lockley, but we just didn't bring them.

By Mr. Lockley: Would you prefer to put in the originals?

By Mr. O'Brien: We don't have them here.

By Mr. Lockley:

3509 Q. Does defense counsel now have custody of those original work papers, Mr. Meyer, if you know?

A. Yes, sir. They subpoenaed all our work papers.

Q. The government had previously subpoenaed them, hadn't they?

A. No, sir, not General Confections audit work papers.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you mark this Government's Exhibit 175 and this one 175-A.

By Mr. O'Brien: What were those numbers?

By Mr. Lockley: 175 and 175-A, Mr. O'Brien, which is a schedule of checks drawn to cash from the period March to June. 176 is the list of checks requiring additional information.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 175, 175-A and 176 for identification.)

By the Court: What do you call it again?

By Mr. Lockley: It is called the list of checks requiring additional information.

Will you please mark these 177, 177-A and 177-B, for identification.

3510 (Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 177, 177-A and 177-B for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley: It is the schedule of checks for July to August.

By the Court: From what?

By Mr. Lockley: It is a schedule of checks drawn to cash for the period July to August. I am sorry. It is July to October, your Honor.

178 and 178-A is the list of checks drawn to cash from the period November to February, 1947.

By Mr. O'Brien: What were those dates, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley.: November 6th to February 28th, 1947.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, are those photostatic copies true and correct copies of the work sheets originally prepared by you, Mr. Meyer, and to which you testified Friday?

A. They appear to be, yes.

3511 Q. Were they made by you, the originals?

A. Some were made by me and some were made by other accountants.

Q. Under your supervision?

A. Under my supervision.

Q. Were those records taken from the books and records of the corporation which are not now available?

A. These records were taken from—

By Mr. Kirby: You mean the sheets themselves?

By Mr. Lockley: The sheets themselves, the work sheets.

By the Witness:

A. The sheets themselves were taken from actual checks of the corporation.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are those true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. They are true and correct, to the best of my knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I wish to offer Exhibits—

You just hold on to them.

3512 By the Witness: Hold on to them?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Witness: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: I wish to offer Government's Exhibits 175, 175-A, 176, 177, 177-A and B, 178 and 178-A. Is there any objection?

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 175, 175-A, 176, 177, 177-A, 177-B, 178 and 178-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Meyer, will you examine Government's Exhibit 175 and 175-A which relate to the first audit period. You testified last Friday on page 3448:

"On our first audit we covered the period from March 1st to June 30th, after our bank reconciliation, we made a list of three pages of cash checks. Many of these cash checks were in the cash disbursements book but actually, there was no way of charging them from the cash disbursements book due to the 3513 lack of information."

Now, was it Exhibit 175 and 175-A, the list that you referred to?

A. That is right.

Q. It is two pages and not three, isn't that so?

A. These are two pages, that is right.

Q. Now, you also stated at page 3448:

"In the first period, from March 1st to June 30th, there were 81 checks to cash totaling $323,663.23." Will you show me where those totals are on that work paper?

A. There are no totals on this work paper. I compiled that by examination.

Q. Well, then there is something that you used Friday that you didn't give us, is that so?

A. Well, I compiled that information after the audit.

Q. Well, when did you compile that?

A. August of last year.

Q. Where is it now?

A. I have it with me.

Q. May I see it? So, you are not testifying from the work papers but from the schedules you prepared from work papers, is that right?

3514 A. These schedules were prepared on the basis of the work papers. That is the first period, the second period, the third period, but all of those checks are listed right here, (indicating).

By Mr. McConnell: "Right here", what do you mean?

By the Witness: Right on the schedule.

By Mr. O'Brien: 175 and 175-A.

By the Witness: Well, the first period would be on the first exhibit and schedule and the second period on the second one and the third period on the third one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. This paper you showed me, the work paper headed "First Period"—

By the Court: Headed what?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The work paper headed "First Period Checks Inquired About" has a total of $150,599.13.

A. Those were the checks questioned. If you look a little further you will find that is the checks numbering 28. You will find listing of 28 questioned.

Q. Where are the 81 checks for $323,000.00?

3515 A. Every one of these checks on this.

Q. There is no total on that of $323,000.00, is there?

A. I think if they were totaled you will find they total that much money. There are tapes to prove it.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I think Mr. Lockley read on page 3448 this answer:

"In the first period, from March 1st to June 30th, there were 81 checks to cash totaling $323,663.23," but he neglected to read the next question and answer:

"And how many of those checks to cash"—

By Mr. Lockley: You will please, Mr. Kirby, I would like to conduct my own examination of the witness.

By Mr. Kirby: You are implying he said to the contrary on Friday and I would like to read the next question and answer.

"And how many of those"—

By Mr. Lockley: I will get to it, if you don't mind.

3516 By the Court: I think Mr. Lockley has to conduct his own examination.

By Mr. Kirby: Assuming the witness testified to the contrary on Friday—

By the Court: If there is anything you would like to clear up, you can clear it up on redirect examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. All I was asking, Mr. Meyer, is if you would show me on those work pages 175 and 175-A where you got the figures of 81 checks and $323,000?

By Mr. Kirby: I object on the grounds he said those work sheets were the questioned checks, not the total checks to cash and counsel is assuming precisely the opposite.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are such figures on Exhibit 175 and 175-A?

A. What figures?

Q. The figure of 81 checks and $323,000.00?

A. The 81 checks are listed here, and an adding machine tape of those total checks will result in the figure of $323,663.23.

Q. That's all I wanted you to tell me before. Now, 3517 as Mr. Kirby pointed out, the next question is:

"And how many of those checks to cash were checks as to which there was inadequate information to tell who got the money?"

And did you reply: "There were 18 checks totaling $150,599.13"?

A. That is right.

Q. Now going back to Exhibit 175 and 175-A for just a moment. That is the list of checks to cash which you referred to, isn't it?

A. That is right.

3518 Q. Well, that is actually headed Schedule of Checks drawn to cash and others, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. Will you please examine that list and tell me how many checks are drawn to cash? I don't mean checks that are drawn to payroll or petty cash, or to David Lubben or to somebody else. I want to know how many checks are drawn to cash.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that question. It assumes the check is drawn to Lubben and that a check endorsed by Lubben is not a check to cash.

By Mr. Lockley: It certainly isn't. This witness has testified they are checks drawn to cash.

By the Court: I don't know what the witness testified to with respect to checks to cash. I assume a check to cash is made out to cash.

By the Witness: We considered David Lubben checks—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I asked you a question. Will you count the checks to cash?

3519 By Mr. O'Brien: I think he has a right to define it, if the Court please.

By the Court: This is proper examination. You mean the payee is cash?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. There is a column on this work sheet which has "Payee' and there are various names under it.

By the Court: You may ask the question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I want to know how many of those are drawn to cash?

A. You mean to eliminate petty cash in that respect?

Q. Well, petty cash is for a specific purpose.

A. But they were still drawn to cash.

Q. Did you require an explanation for petty cash checks?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you still do exactly as I told you and just count those that are drawn to cash, c-a-s-h?

A. Right.

By Mr. O'Brien: How about currency Mr. Lockley?

3520 By Mr. Lockley: There are none.

By the Witness: I counted 43, but if you wish, I will check it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, your figures agree with mine, Mr. Meyer. So you were wrong Friday when you said there were 81 checks to cash? There are only 43?

A. That is a misinterpretation.

Q. That is no misinterpretation.

A. That is a misinterpretation of what cash is. If David Lubben checks are drawn to the order of David Lubben and he goes to the bank and endorses that David Lubben, we consider it as auditors, cash transactions because he received the cash.

Q. You didn't testify that is how you interpreted it last Friday. You said last Friday there were 81 checks to cash.

A. I said cash and the schedule says "and others."

Q. The schedule is "and others" and your testimony Friday on the first period was: "In the first period, from March 1st to June 30th, there were 81 checks to cash totaling $323,663.23"?

A. My testimony was—

Q. Was that your testimony?

3521 A. My testimony was to cash but my interpretation as to cash as an auditor may be somewhat different than yours.

Q. I am asking you if that was your testimony last Friday and not your interpretation?

A. My answer was made.

Q. All right. Now, I call your attention to this schedule which is headed "Checks drawn to cash and others", isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. There are checks in here to Myron Roth?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were endorsed by Myron Roth?

A. And cash was received in connection with those checks.

Q. And there were checks on David Lubben?

A. That is right, and cash was received on those checks.

3522 Q. Is David Lubben—

A. Possibly the bank teller may be able to explain when he endorsed it that he received cash in connection with those checks.

Q. Why do you issue a check, Mr. Roth—or, Mr. Meyer, rather; to get cash, isn't it?

A. You issue a check in payment of bills and when we find there is cash received for it we want an explanation, as auditors.

Q. And when you get to a bank you get cash for it, don't you?

A. You get cash or you get credit for it.

Q. Will you please examine that list, schedule, 175 and 175-A, and tell me how many of those checks are drawn to cash payroll or payroll cash?

A. 15, I think it is. Unless you want me to check. If that agrees with your analysis.

Q. Isn't it a common practice for companies to issue checks to cash for the purpose of obtaining payroll cash?

A. The most common practice is to issue checks in connection with payrolls. But it is done—it is possible that you can draw cash.

Q. And it is a perfectly proper practice, isn't 3523 it?

A. It is a perfectly proper practice and it is perfectly proper for an auditor to also check that cash against payrolls.

Q. And you did check it, didn't you?

A. That's right. That's why we investigated.

Q. It says so right on here, "Checked."

A. That's right.

Q. And you found it was all charged out to the payroll book, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. And it was paid out to the employees?

A. That's right.

Q. What was so unusual about checks being drawn to cash for money to pay employees?

A. We wanted to be sure the cash was distributed to the proper people.

Q. And did you find that it was?

A. In most cases, as far as I know, yes. Because we proved out the payrolls.

Q. Was that among the 81 checks that you said Friday were issued to cash?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you bother to explain to the jury that 3524 there were those checks to cash included in your 81 checks?

A. I only explained what was on our schedule.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that as argumentative, did he bother to explain it to the jury.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you look at Exhibits 175 and 175-A and tell me how many checks are payable to petty cash?

A. I picked out seven. I may have missed one.

3525 Q. Isn't it common and customary practice for concerns to issue checks for the purpose of getting petty cash?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And weren't you able to check out those petty cash checks against the petty cash records?

A. We checked the petty cash records against the records.

Q. And was there anything unusual in issuing such checks to cash?

A. Nothing unusual, except that it had to be checked, as any other cash check had to be checked.

Q. And did you check it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you found it had been used for petty cash?

A. Yes.

Q. Nothing unusual about it?

A. Nothing unusual about petty cash checks, no, but they still had to be checked against the records and vouchers, because those items are paid out to different people in cash.

Q. But you found out that they were used for that purpose?

A. For the petty cash items, yes.

3526 Q. And now you told us Friday that there were 18 checks payable to David Lubben, is that so?

A. To David Lubben? I didn't say—I don't think I said how many were payable to David Lubben, did I?

Q. You said there was a list of checks requiring additional information.

A. I didn't say they were all payable to David Lubben, I said they required additional information.

Q. Check the number of checks.

A. Is this on the first one?

Q. On the first one, 175 and 175-A. Will you count the number of checks in which David Lubben is the payee.

A. I counted 17, but it could be 18. I may have overlooked one.

Q. Well, I counted 18. It is not too important. And were those included in the 81 checks to cash that you testified to on Friday?

A. That's right.

Q. They are actually drawn to David Lubben, aren't they?

A. And endorsed by David Lubben and considered 3527 by us to be cash.

Q. But you didn't mention that last Friday?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, will you please tell me how many of those checks drawn to David Lubben's order and endorsed by David Lubben were checks charged to David Lubben's personal account?

A. I think all of them were charged to David Lubben.

Q. Is there anything improper in the president of a corporation having checks made payable to himself and having them charged to his own account?

A. On this period they were charged to his account. I think—

Q. I just asked you if they were charged—

By Mr. McConnell: Let him answer the question.

By Mr. Lockley: I didn't ask what he thought, I just asked whether there was anything improper about it.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to have the witness, in general, permitted to complete his answer before he is interrupted.

By the Court: He may answer.

3528 By the Witness:

A. These checks, at the moment were charged to David Lubben. At the end of the audit period we analyzed David Lubben's account, and went over it with Mr. David Lubben and he—we told him about all these items in there, we had an analysis of David Lubben's account, and some of these items which were originally charged to David Lubben eventually were in the purchase account when the audit was completed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And is that the list, Exhibit 176, those listed checks that you referred to?

A. Where there was seventy-four thousand, on the first period audit, where you have that—

Q. Will you examine it, 176.

A. It is 176.

Q. That's the list of checks.

A. That was a list of checks that totaled seventy-four thousand. In the first period they were charged to David Lubben's account. But when we completed the audit, we had made a summary and an analysis of David Lubben's account, and we have that in our working 3529 papers, and from that analysis there were certain adjustments made. And those adjustments were made at the last audit and we talked with Mr. Lubben about his account and made our entries accordingly.

Q. Have you got Exhibit 176 in your hand?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is headed "A list of checks requiring additional information."

A. That was after we had already inquired about it.

3530 Q. Will you just answer the question, please, Mr. Meyer? I asked you if that is headed "List of checks requiring additional information."

A. Yes.

Q. And there are 18 checks, is that correct?

A. No, there aren't 18.

Q. 23 checks?

A. 15 on that, I think, for the seventy four thousand, if I count right.

Q. There is a total of 23 in all, I believe, Mr. Meyer?

A. Yes, but some of them were charged in other categories.

Q. And of those 23 checks $74,000.00 was transferred to Mr. Lubben's personal account and he was charged for them, isn't that so?

A. That's right.

Q. Is there anything wrong in that?

A. There is nothing wrong in that.

Q. As a matter of fact, by charging them to his personal account he became liable for any income—

A. He became liable for that period, until we analyzed his personal account, and then we had to charge other 3531 accounts because he specified that many of those checks were in payment of purchases.

Q. Not the seventy-four thousand?

A. Yes, the seventy four thousand. At the end of the audit some of those $74,000.00 checks eventually found their way into purchases.

Q. And he satisfactorily explained those, didn't he?

A. He explained them, yes, by verbal notes only.

Q. Were you satisfied with them; were you satisfied with the explanation?

A. For the audit, the explanations, we had to make entries on those seventy-four thousand—

Q. I asked you: Were you satisfied with them, Mr. Meyer?

A. At the time we were satisfied with them.

Q. You prepared a certified public accountant's statement on the basis of it, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. You prepared his tax return on the basis of it, didn't you?

A. Not his tax return.

Q. General Confections.

A. I mean we prepared the corporation's tax return, which was a separate entity from Mr. Lubben.

3532 Q. If you weren't satisfied with the explanation would you have signed that income tax return and the certified public accountant's statement?

A. We had to be satisfied with his explanation.

3533 Q. Now, you look at Exhibit 175 again, and on line 13 you find an entry, "Our Lady of Bethlehem Academy, a thousand dollars," endorsed by Our Lady of Bethlehem Academy. Is that a check to cash?

A. No, it is not a check to cash.

Q. Was it included in the 81 checks that you mentioned?

A. Yes, because we wanted an explanation.

Q. And you got an explanation, didn't you, that that was a donation?

A. That's right.

Q. And it was endorsed by Our Lady of Bethlehem Academy?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you have any question as to whether or not this money went to Our Lady of Bethlehem Academy?

A. No.

Q. Go over on Exhibit 175-A, about seven lines from the bottom of the page, you find a notation M. Cohen, 25 checks, $1,000.00 each, $25,000.00, endorsed M. Cohen, and charged to Loans Payable. Now, were those checks to cash?

A. That is not a check for cash.

Q. It is a check to M. Cohen?

3534 A. That's right.

Q. Did you include that in the 81 checks you mentioned?

A. Because we had to get additional information for our audit in connection with that check.

Q. And to what account were those 25 checks charged?

A. To the accounts as listed at that time, but they may have been adjusted.

Q. I am not asking what they may have been. What is it charged to on the work sheet?

A. On the work sheet—at that time it was charged there—

Q. How is it charged?

A. To the account named.

Q. And what is that?

A. In this one particular, the Mike Cohen check was charged to Loans Payable.

Q. And is there anything improper in issuing checks to somebody for a loan and setting up as a loan payable?

A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you said there were 81 checks to cash Friday you were somewhat in error, weren't you?

3535 Well, Mr. Meyer?

A. I didn't hear the question.

Q. I said when you told the Court and the jury there were 81 checks to cash issued Friday you were in error?

A. Cash and other.

Q. You didn't say "and other", did you?

A. I am amplifying my statement to mean other, because the schedules prove it is such.

Q. I am glad to hear that now. Now, again on page 3449 you said that there was inadequate information for 28 checks totaling $150,599.13?

A. That's right.

Q. Is there any notation on this Exhibit 175 and 175-A which indicates the 28 checks on which there was inadequate information?

A. No, you would have to have the numbers, and then you could see that we questioned—for that matter, we questioned all of these checks.

Q. Can you tell me today from examination of this work sheet, 175 and 175-A, which of the 28 checks—which 28 checks are questioned?

A. Well, I drew them off.

Q. Do you know which ones they are?

3536 A. I know the ones that we questioned. I went through it and checked out to be sure that—

Q. When did you draw them off?

A. About a year ago.

Q. So you remembered a year ago that back in '47 you questioned 28 of these checks?

A. We questioned 28 to get additional information. I went through my work papers.

Q. How were you able to tell a year ago which ones of these checks were the 28 you questioned.

A. I examined my work papers and made that list.

Q. You were relying on your recollection, is that it?

A. To a certain extent.

3537 Q. Is there anything on Exhibit 175 and 175-A which says "This check questioned"?

A. No, there isn't, but there are explanations here showing everything that was questioned. This schedule was set up right up to "charge to account", and actually we went down and questioned either Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman on all these checks.

Q. And did you get an explanation for each one of those 28 checks?

A. No, not all of them, some of them.

Q. Which ones didn't you get an explanation for?

A. We did not get an explanation—we inquired about these 28. We eventually got verbal explanations, finally, possibly. There are some lines there that are still not filled in.

Q. I hope I understand you correctly. But you say that you questioned 28 of these in 1946, and you got verbal information from Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman on a part of the 28, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And were you able to recall last year the 28 checks out of the 81 which you questioned back in 1946?

A. There are marks here and I looked at each 3538 checks and went through—

Q. That isn't what I asked you. I asked you if there was anything on this sheet.

A. I had a list of the checks. I went through the working papers.

By Mr. Kirby: Just a minute, Mr. Meyer. I insist, if I may, that the witness be permitted to answer his questions, so that—

By the Court: Are they marked on that sheet. That is what he asked.

By the Witness:

A. There are markings here. But I went through this and picked out the 28 that—at the time when I looked at it, where the explanations are.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you show me which ones are marked; where are the markings?

A. There are no markings on the paper.

Q. That is all I asked you, Mr. Meyer. Are there markings on this paper.

A. No.

Q. Markings which can tell you which of the 81 checks you questioned back in '46. I made a listing of the checks I looked at.

3539 Q. When did you make a list of it?

A. About a year ago.

Q. Did you have anything else other than 175 and 175-A at that time by which you could refresh your recollection?

A. Nothing outside of possibly audit notes that are with our working papers. But this was the main schedule I examined. This was the schedule I looked at to get a list of those checks.

Q. Did you bring your audit notes with you?

A. The audit notes are with our working papers. I would have to check into that to see if there was any additional information. But that schedule is actually the schedule we used when we talked with Lubben and Miss Feldman.

Q. You mean then that a year ago you looked at Exhibits 175 and 175-A and you were able to tell which ones of these 81 checks you had questioned back in 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. Now, here is check No. 137 in the amount of $150.00—pardon me, 37—that was charged to the petty cash account.

A. That's right. We questioned that.

3540 Q. You questioned that. You got a satisfactory explanation, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. So that is one less of the 28. And here is one check, No. 81, for $2,500.00, endorsed by Freda Strum, and charged to sundries for deposit on 800 bags of dextrose, see checks Nos. 108 and 453, amount to seventy-two and seventy-five hundred. That is one of the checks you questioned, is it?

A. If it is on the list, it must be.

Q. And you got an explanation for it, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. And were you satisfied with that explanation?

A. Yes.

Q. That is one less out of the 28, isn't it? All right. Then the next one is No. 112, a check to cash in the amount of $38.29, endorsed by Freda Strum and charged to petty cash. You got an explanation for that, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. And you were satisfied, weren't you?

A. That is right.

Q. That is one less from the 28. The next one 3541 charged is drawn to David Lubben, endorsed by David Lubben, charged to Loans Receivable, and the explanation, "Charge to Loans Receivable," David Lubben. You got an explanation for that, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. And you were satisfied with the explanation, weren't you?

A. That's right.

Q. That is one less.

A. It was still questioned, of course. We questioned him about it.

Q. Were you satisfied with it?

A. That's right.

Q. After you questioned him, you were satisfied?

A. After I questioned them, I was satisfied.

Q. Were there any of the 28 checks you had questioned that weren't eventually explained to you?

A. Read the numbers there. Can I see my work sheet?

Q. We will go down them all, if you just bear with me for a few minutes.

A. Let me have my work sheet and I can give you the ones there is no explanation here. You can see it right on your schedule.

3542 Q. We can't both work on it at the same time, so I will read them off to you.

Check No, 178 is another one to David Lubben, endorsed by David Lubben, charged to David Lubben, with the information, "Charge to David Lubben, no details."

Now, did you get a satisfactory explanation for that check?

A. It says "No details" there. I may have gotten an explanation.

3543 Q. So you didn't get a satisfactory explanation?

A. Well, I got an explanation at the time and had to be satisfied with it at that moment.

Q. And if you weren't satisfied, it was charged to David Lubben, anyway, wasn't it?

A. That's right, at that moment.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, Mr. Lockley has refused to allow the witness to see the witness's work papers, which are in evidence. May I hand him a copy?

By the Court: He obtained the information from the exhibit that he has before him.

By Mr. Kirby: You have a photostat?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: I misunderstood. I apologize. When he asked for it, I thought he was asking for something—

By the Witness: I am thinking about my other sheet.

By Mr. Kirby: —something which he did not have.

By Mr. Lockley: And which he did not turn over to the Government last Friday.

3544 By Mr. Kirby: By the way, could I look at 176, Mr. Lockley, while you are examining about 175?

By Mr. Lockley: You have the original.

By Mr. Kirby: I don't know the order in which you numbered them.

By the Court: Proceed with the examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The next check is No. 249, that is drawn to David Lubben, endorsed by David Lubben, charged to David Lubben. Were you satisfied with the explanation you got on that check?

A. Just one moment, please.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to this question. I don't know what difference it makes, whether the auditor is satisfied because he got an oral explanation from Mr. Lubben of what he did with the money.

By the Court: Overruled.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't see how it applies to us.

By the Witness:

A. At the time I was satisfied.

By Mr. Lockley:

3545 Q. And it was charged to Mr. Lubben?

A. It was charged to Mr. Lubben at that time.

A. And Mr. Lubben was the president of the company?

A. That's right.

Q. And it wasn't charged to Shotwell, it wasn't charged to accounts payable, it wasn't charged to purchases?

A. No, not at that time.

Q. It was Mr. Lubben's income?

A. Not at this particular audit.

Q. Do you recall that that particular check was ever transferred back into the books of account?

A. An analysis of David Lubben's—

Q. Do you recall that that particular check was ever transferred back into the general books of the company out of Mr. Lubben's personal account?

A. I would have to refer to David Lubben's analysis to say the answer to that question.

Q. You don't recall?

A. No. I would have to look at the analysis of David Lubben's account.

Q. Well, maybe we can save a little time. Will you go down the remainder of those 28 checks and tell 3546 me which ones you did not eventually get satisfactory explanations for?

A. There was a check for—330—$6,000.00.

Q. Check No. 330. All right. That is one.

A. There was no explanation about it, but it was charged to David Lubben.

3547 Q. Was it charged to Shotwell?

A. No.

Q. Or purchases?

A. No, it was not. The same applies to 331, six thousand. It was charged to David Lubben.

Q. All right.

A. There were no other explanations about 375 and 379, each in the amount of $3,000.00.

Q. And how were they charged?

A. They were charged to David Lubben.

Q O. K.

A. And the same applies to 451 in the amount of $2,000.00.

Q. And how was it charged?
A. David Lubben.
Q. It wasn't charged to Shotwell?
A. It wasn't charged to Shotwell.
Q. It wasn't charged to accounts payable?
A. It was not.
Q. It wasn't charged to purchases?
A. It was charged to David Lubben.
Q. All right.
A. Check No. 708.
Q. All right.
3548 A. $8,191.84.
Q. How was that charged?
A. It was endorsed by David Lubben and Roy Hankermyer, and it was charged to David G. Lubben. There was no explanation on the schedule on it.
Q. That wasn't charged to Shotwell or purchases?
A. It was charged to David Lubben.
Check No. 803 in the amount of $2,000.00, endorser, David Lubben, and it was charged to David Lubben, but there was no explanation of it.
Q. All right.
A. Check No. 877, a thousand dollars, endorser, David Lubben, charged to David Lubben. There was no explanation on it.
Check No. 946 to cash, $4,000.00, was endorsed by David Lubben, and it was charged to David Lubben.
Check No. 962—that is not the one—check No. 966, David Lubben, $2500.00, endorser, David Lubben, charged to David Lubben.
Check No. 0637—I think it is—David Lubben, $3,000.00; endorser, David Lubben; charged to David Lubben.
And check No. 0716, David Lubben, $23,000.00, was 3549 endorsed by David Lubben, charged to David Lubben. It was outstanding on June 30, 1946.
Check No. 0731, $1500.00, David Lubben, charged to David Lubben, no explanation.
Q. So in every one of those cases I recall where you had mentioned that you got no explanation, the check ended up being charged to Mr. Lubben's personal account?
A. In that first period audit.
Q. And there is nothing improper with the president of a corporation drawing a check and charging it to himself, is there?

A. Except that we want to get the information.

Q. I am just asking you for an answer to that question. Is there anything improper in it?

By Mr. Kirby: It might very well be improper.

By Mr. Lockley: He may answer it yes or no.

By the Court: He may answer. He is speaking from an obvious standpoint.

By the Witness:

A. Let me answer it the way I can then.

By Mr. Lockley:

3550 Q. I want you to tell me whether there is anything improper about a president of a corporation drawing a check to himself and having it charged to himself on the accounts of the—on the books of the company?

A. There is nothing improper in drawing it, but we like—as auditors we want an explanation about the check.

Q. And did you get an explanation on these?

A. The ones I listed, where it says "no explanation" I didn't get an explanation.

Q. So if you didn't get an explanation it remained charged to him, didn't it?

A. On the first period audit only.

Q. That is what we are talking about right now, is the first period audit.

3551 So, instead of having 28 checks on which you didn't get any adequate explanation, you ended up with how many? None at all. You got explanations for all of them, didn't you?

A. We questioned those checks, those 28.

Q. You questioned 28?

A. That is right.

Q. And you got explanations for all 28?

A. That is right.

Q. You were satisfied with those explanations?

A. On the first period audit only.

Q. We are talking about the first period audit only.

A. Right.

Q. You were satisfied with those explanations?

A. At the time.

Q. So when you said Friday there were 28 checks for which you didn't get explanations, you were wrong, weren't you?

A. I considered questioning at the time that we questioned them about that. We did—

Q. You didn't tell us that.

A. Those were the list that I gave as check questioned.

3552 Q. Are those charged off—are any of those checks charged off to Shotwell in that period?

A. I didn't see any; unless there were general entries in connection with it, but from this schedule I did not see any against Shotwell.

Q. When you went to Mr. Lubben and asked him for an explanation for these various checks, he didn't tell you, "Why, that is money I sent to Shotwell—I gave to Shotwell"?

A. I did not see the name of Shotwell on any of those exhibits—on that exhibit I looked at.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't believe the witness has answered the question. He asked whether or not he told him any of those were charged to Shotwell.

By the Witness: I said no. I don't see any name "Shotwell", or any charge against "Shotwell" on this schedule.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now I call your attention to check No. 906 dated June 18, 1946 for $27,000.00.

A. Oh, I see, yes. There is one check.

Q. And that carries the explanation, endorsed by David Lubben, charged to accounts payable, pur-

3553 chases from Shotwell?

By the Court: Which period is that, now?

By the Witness: That is in the first period.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The first period. The witness was in error when he said they were not charged to Shotwell.

A. I see one now in the information, one charged, purchases from Shotwell.

Q. There is an adjusting journal entry, isn't there?

A. That is right.

Q. And it says that the information on your Exhibit 175-A refers to that $27,000.00 as "Purchases from Shotwell".

Now, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 153, a check from General Confections to David Lubben for $27,000.00, dated June 18, 1946, and endorsed by him. Is this the $27,000.00 check listed on Exhibit 175-A?

A. Yes.

By the Court: Which exhibit is that, please?

By Mr. Lockley: It is Exhibit 153, your Honor. It is in evidence.

3554 By Mr. O'Brien: What was the date of the check, Mr. Meyer?

By the Witness: Pardon?

By Mr. O'Brien: That date of the check.

By the Witness: The date is June. It looks like June 18th, or I think it is on the 16th. June 18th.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And that is the date for the $27,000.00 check on your work sheet, is it not?

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have the date, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: June 18th, he told you, Mr. O'Brien, 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you.

3555 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibit 153-A which is a cash authorization slip with General Confections dated June 17, 1946 and which reads "Paid to cash. Amount, $27,322.67, for 2,059 cases, two dozen each, one pound chocolates. Sold to McDonald Candy Company and Billy Barron" and bearing the notation "McDonald 1,989 cases and Barron 70 cases."

I ask you if that is not the cash authorization slip to support Government's Exhibit 153?

A. That is the cash authorization slip.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 151 which is a bill of lading for 1,989 cases of candy to McDonald Candy Company and 152, a bill of lading for 70 cases of candy shipped to William Barron, both of which have been identified as shipments on which no invoices were rendered by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Are those bills of lading the documents which reflect the shipments shown on Exhibit 153-A?

A. That is right.

Q. So that when you questioned Mr. Lubben about the $27,000.00 check shown on your work sheets, he 3556 was able to show you a check, a cash authorization slip?

A. That is right.

Q. And two bills of lading to support the purpose for which that $27,000.00 check was issued, isn't that so?

A. That is right.

Q. That was satisfactory to you, wasn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. Are you now satisfied that that $27,000.00 was issued for the purchase of the candy shown on those bills of lading?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question.

By the Court: You mean as an auditor?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. As an auditor, yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And was the certified statement that you prepared based upon information shown on the Exhibit 153-A, the cash authorization slip?

A. That is right.

3557 Q. And is the tax return that you prepared for the General Confections based upon your certified statement?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, this was also mentioned Friday that the checks for $2300.00, Government's Exhibits 92 and 93 endorsed by Mr. Heitmann and Mr. Urban and shown on your work papers, Exhibits 175 and 175-A, as used for the purchase of 25 drums of liquid syrup, will you please look at that Exhibit 175 and Exhibit 175-A and tell me how many $2300.00 checks appear on it?

A. I counted five.

Q. Five of them. And all of them bear the same explanation, for 25 drums of liquid syrup, don't they?

A. I didn't look at the explanation, but I will. That is right.

Q. Do you recall whether Miss Feldman or Mr. Lubben gave you that information?

A. I can't say whether it was Miss Feldman or Mr. Lubben, either one of them. I talked to both of them but there is no way of identifying it on the schedule, whether Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman gave it to me.

3558 Q. Did Mr. Lubben usually refer you to Miss Feldman for such explanations?

A. Well, I had a number of conferences with Mr. Lubben. I may have talked a few more times with Miss Feldman and Mr. Lubben.

Q. Well, both of them gave you some explanation?

A. That is right, but I couldn't actually go down and say which ones Mr. Lubben gave and which ones Miss Feldman gave.

Q. Now, those checks were issued in April, weren't they, those two checks for $2300.00 which were endorsed by Heitmann and Urban?

A. That is right. I think the number—is the number 396 and 474? Are those the ones you have reference to?

Q. That is correct. Both in April.

A. That is right.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman wasn't working at General Confections in April, was she?

A. The check was drawn in April. Don't forget we only started our audit in August.

Q. That is right. You talked about it in August?

A. That is right.

3559 Q. The checks were drawn in April?

A. That is right.

Q. Miss Feldman wasn't working in General Confections when the checks were drawn?

A. That is right, but Miss Feldman may have drawn cash authorization slips when Mr. Lubben wasn't there, if she had the information.

Q. There were three other checks all for $2300.00 and all for 25 drums of syrup?

A. That is correct.

Q. It is perfectly possible Miss Feldman may have assumed those two checks here for the same purpose?

A. I can't assume anything. I have to take our audit program. That is how the audit schedule was maintained throughout. We proceeded on the basis of an audit program and followed that audit program.

3560 Q. Now, will you please take Government's Exhibits 177 and 177-A and B. They relate to the second period of your audit, do they not?

A. That is right, July to October.

Q. And that is also headed "Schedule of checks drawn to cash and others"?

A. That is right.

Q. And you testified, I believe, Friday—is this correct—in the second period there were 131 checks drawn to the order of cash totaling $286,506.13.

Now, it is almost time for recess so I won't ask you to check now but when we have our recess time, I wish you would count for me the checks under the payee column which are actually drawn to cash and let me know if there are 131 checks.

At the same time will you also count for me the number of checks drawn to payroll cash and the number of checks drawn to petty cash so that we may proceed with your testimony after the period.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, I suppose the witness himself, as much as anybody, should have some recess.
3561 I mean, he shouldn't have to employ all his time going over it.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. I have already counted them but I didn't want to use my mathematics.

By the Court: Proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, according to my calculations on that Exhibit 177 and 177-A and B—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Meyer, there are 43 rather than 133 checks drawn to cash. Will you check to see if that is correct?

A. The question means exclusive of checks that say cash and then are drawn, that are charged to petty cash, is that correct?

Q. That is correct. Just where the payee is cash.

A. It could be in the neighborhood of 43, that is right.

Q. So there weren't 131 checks drawn to cash?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that as argumentative. It gets back to the question of whether the checks were 3562 negotiable instruments. The negotiable instruments law doesn't agree with counsel.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, do you mean there were not 131 checks drawn to cash as payee?

By Mr. Lockley: This witness did not tell us the balance of those checks were drawn to various others.

By the Witness:

A. It is a matter of interpretation, what we consider cash and what a lawyer considers cash, as far as the payee.

By Mr. McConnell: The negotiable instruments law says a check drawn that way is a check drawn on currency. He has a right to state it.

By Mr. Lockley: He did not state it Friday.

By Mr. McConnell: He is trying to.

By Mr. Lockley: He didn't do it last Friday.

By Mr. McConnell: You are trying to confuse him.

By the Court: My notes said there were cash checks drawn to cash. He now explained what he means by 3563 it, but they were not payable to cash as such, all of them.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you check. I believe that you will find that there are 28 of those checks which are drawn to payroll or payroll cash.

A. I see quite a few and I assume 28 is right. I haven't checked either one.

Q. According to the information column upon your work sheet, you checked those to the payroll account, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. And you found that these checks for payroll were actually used to pay employees, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. And there is nothing sinister about drawing a check for that purpose?

A. There is nothing sinister about that.

By the Court: I think we will take our morning recess. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the jury and Judge leave the court room.

3564 This honorable court will now recess for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

3565 By the Witness: Did you want these documents?

By Mr. Lockley: You can hang onto them. I will talk about petty cash checks next. There are eight of them. You take your time.

By the Witness: I would like a drink of water.

By Mr. Lockley: Go ahead.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Meyer, I have checked Exhibits 177 and 177-A and B and I find that there are eight checks to petty cash, is that correct?

A. I counted more than eight in the three pages.

Q. Yes.

A. I think there are more than—

Q. There are eight payable to cash. I believe you are correct. There are more actually charged to petty cash but only eight drawn to the order of petty cash?

A. I was looking in the charge to account.

Q. I think there are about 15 of them that are 3566 charged to petty cash.

A. That is right.

Q. Did you verify those charged to petty cash with the petty cash records?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you find that the records were in agreement with those checks?

A. We made—we checked them against the various petty cash vouchers and things and we agreed with it.

Q. So that you had a satisfactory explanation for those checks?

A. That is right.

Q. And the balance of the checks on Exhibit 177 and 177-A and B are all drawn to various natural persons, David Lubben, Roy Hankermeyer, H. E. Harmer, Mike Cohen—in fact, there are about 37, as I count them, that are drawn to either David Lubben or Roy Hankermyer or Mike Cohen or some other natural person, isn't that so?

A. That is right.

Q. They are not drawn to cash?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, at page 3452 of the transcript, did you 3567 testify last Friday at the second period 16 of those checks were questioned totaling $84,620.00?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, how many of those 16 checks were satisfactorily explained when you asked Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman?

Mr. Meyer, did you work up a work paper recently showing those 16 checks which were questioned?

A. My work sheet was made up about a year ago, the same as the other one, in the same fashion and I have the 16 checks totaling $84,620.90.

Q. From what information did you select those 16 checks a year ago?

A. Because they were the ones, to my recollection, we questioned and extended explanations that were necessary for the proper auditing of the books.

Q. And do you remember those—

A. For example on the one —take the first, 0742. There was a $26,000.00 item with David Lubben endorser and there was accounts payable—well, it says "Drop shipments, Shotwell" and there is a "J. E. 66" after that.

Q. And that indicates?

3568 A. And that "J. E. 66" indicates that that check was paid to David Lubben and charged to accounts payable. The endorsement was David Lubben and from this schedule, I would say it was charged to accounts payable against Shotwell for a drop shipment and the payment would be on July 3, 1946, and by referring to the journal entry, I would say—I would have to look at that journal entry. I haven't a reference. If I could look at the journal entry, I may be able to explain why a journal entry was made.

Q. Well, now, nonetheless, you were satisfied at the time you prepared this work sheet that that was an adequate and proper explanation for the $26,000.00 check, is that so?

A. That was an adequate explanation and it occasioned another journal entry with the journal entry 66.

Q. Is there anything wrong with making a journal entry?

A. Well, from the journal entry 66, the only thing I can actually say is—well, from this, there was an adjustment necessarily on the basis of the explanation.

3569 Q. So when you made a journal entry, you were satisfied, weren't you?

A. That is right. I had to make a journal entry to complete, possibly, this transaction.

Q. So that journal entry was eventually reflected in your certified accountant's statement?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall all 16 checks which were questioned or is there something on Exhibits 177-A and B which reflects which 16 checks you had in mind?

A. Well, I took off the checks and inquired about them and listed them. This was about a year ago—similar to that statement.

3570 Q. Well, what I am trying to find out is, is there something on Exhibit 177-A and B and Exhibit 177 which shows without your reference of a year ago which ones of these 131 checks were questioned?

A. No. There are no marks on here to indicate which ones were inquired about. I looked down and checked the ones to my recollection were inquired about.

Q. So you were able to remember 16 checks out 131?

A. That is right.

Q. Last year?

A. There may have been more, I don't know. Those were the ones that I looked at, that I looked into and questioned.

Q. Well, now, did you get a satisfactory explanation on those 16 checks which were questioned?

A. From the schedule, I would say we finally got, in that audit period, we got an explanation about those checks.

Q. And every check was explained to your satisfaction, is that correct?

A. At the time.

Q. You made journal entries whenever necessary?

3571 A. The schedule shows that, sir.

Q. And as a certified public accountant, you wouldn't make such a journal entry unless you were satisfied it reflected the correct information, would you?

A. That is right.

Q. And you wouldn't have issued a certified statement based upon those journal entries unless you were satisfied it was correct, would you?

A. That is right.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 156 and 156-A, and I call your attention to journal entry No. 104 which is on Exhibit 177-B. Now does that check Exhibit 156,—or is that check the same check which is reflected on your work sheet for $7500.00?

A. I think that check, $7500.00, August 29th—let's see. It is on Exhibit 177-A and not B.

Q. All right, sir. Thank you. Is that check which you hold in your hand the same check which is reflected on Exhibit 175 or 177-A?

A. Yes, and it is $7500.00. Let me check the endorser. The endorser is David Lubben.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Meyer.

3572 By the Witness: The endorser is David Lubben. It is a check drawn to cash, $7500.00. The endorser is David Lubben. It was charged to accounts payable. It says "Part payment". I can't read that but then it says "Shotwell" after that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. "Part payment on merchandise from Shotwell included in our JE 104"?

A. Right.

Q. That JE 104 refers to Journal Entry No. 104, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. I also call your attention to an exhibit 157 and ask you if that is a cash authorization slip for $7500.00.

A. That is a cash authorization slip for $7500.00.

Q. And does that bear any relationship to Exhibit 156, the cash check for $7500.00?

A. That is right. That is the cash authorization slip involved.

Q. Do you recognize having seen that cash authorization slip before?

A. Yes, I saw this cash authorization slip before.

3573 Q. Did you see the check before?

A. I may have not seen it but one of the accountants under my supervision may have examined it in connection with the schedule drawn up because I notice this schedule is not in my handwriting.

Q. After having seen cash authoriaztion slip 156-A, were you satisfied that that $7500.00 on that check was used for purchases from Shotwell?

A. That is right.

Q. And you so treated it on the books of the company?

A. And so made it on the journal entry No. 104.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the date?

By the Witness: August 29, 1946.

3574 By Mr. Lockley: At this time, your Honor, I offer Government's Exhibits 156 and 156-A.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. So out of 131 checks which were questioned on this schedule of checks drawn to cash and others and out of the 16 checks which you required further explanation on, you eventually received satisfactory explanations for all, is that correct?

A. For that audit period, yes.

Q. Will you please examine the work sheet for the next audit period, Exhibit 178 and 178-A.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, I have some exhibits here.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have no objection to the items themselves, your Honor. That is, I don't question the documents, but before responding to the offer, I would like to check these against the prior government's proof.

By the Court: Very well. I will defer my ruling.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to note my objection that I made to this offer.

3575 By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: I am afraid, sir, I don't understand the scope of Mr. McConnell's objection.

By the Court: I don't either.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to all of these cash authorization slips as self-serving and not binding on Shotwell. I made that objection all the way through and I want to renew it.

By the Court: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, in the third period you have work papers number—or Exhibit 178 and 178-A, is that correct, Mr. Meyer?

A. That is right.

Q. And your work papers show the dates of each check, don't they?

A. That is right.

Q. So when you testified Friday that you didn't have a breakdown for the month of November and December it was just that you hadn't added up those months separately, isn't that so?

3676 A. That is right.

Q. Now, you testified Friday at page 3456 the third period covered from November 1st to February 28, 1947—51 checks drawn to the order of cash totaling $145,875.91. 29 of these checks were questioned, total $71,725.77, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, this is a schedule of checks likewise drawn to cash for others, is it not?

A. That is right.

Q. And it actually shows that instead of there being 51 checks to cash, there are 22, doesn't it?

A. Well, we come back to the interpretation of an auditor's and a lawyer's ideas of cash.

Q. Well—

A. And your idea would not be mine. Your idea would be 22 and in my idea it would be the number mentioned.

Q. Well, let us look half way down the page. On December 2nd there are two checks No. 1866 and another one 1867 and another one 1868, all of which are drawn to the order of Michael Cohen and endorsed by Michael Cohen. Now, is Michael Cohen synonymous with cash in accounting language?

3577 By Mr. Kirby: He was in New York.

By the Witness:

A. As far as we were concerned, it was synonymous with cash at that time, because—3578 Q. Did Mike Cohen have any ownership in the General Confections?

A. In General Confections—not that I know of. He didn't have ownership in General Confections although he may have had ownership in Reserve Trading Corporation which was a subsidiary. I don't—actually it was in the corporation that Mr. Lubben was in.

Q. And were a number of checks drawn to Saddle River Farms, endorsed by Saddle River Farms—is that synonymous with cash?

A. Saddle River Farms was owned by Mr. Lubben and it was synonymous with cash as far as our auditing program was concerned.

Q. But the checks weren't made out to cash. They were made out to Michael Cohen, weren't they?

A. That is right.

Q. And to Saddle River Farms?

A. That is right.

Q. So that when you testified that there were 51 checks drawn to cash, you were inaccurate, weren't you?

A. My idea of cash differs from yours.

By Mr. McConnell: I object, your Honor.

3579 I object to it as argumentative. He is arguing with the witness.

By the Court: You may answer.

By Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you tell the Judge and the jury what your interpretation of cash checks was, what your interpretation of checks drawn to cash was, last Friday?

A. Nobody asked me for my interpretation. I am giving it to you now and I am giving it to you from any auditor's viewpoint.

Q. In fact, there are nine checks to Mike Cohen, aren't there, and six checks to Saddle River Farms?

A. I see the Saddle River Farms. I didn't check the nine for Michael Cohen but will do so if you request.

Q. Will you do so? Will you also check the number of checks drawn to David Lubben?

A. I agree with the nine checks to Michael Cohen.

Q. And are there 12 checks to David Lubben?

A. I didn't count 12. I don't count 12 to David Lubben so far as payee is concerned.

Q. How many do you count, Mr. Meyer?

By Mr. McConnell: I think it isn't clear what the question is. It isn't clear whether he is asking whether 3580 Lubben got the money or—

By the Court: He is asking whether or not it is payable to David Lubben.

By Mr. McConnell: Meaning the payee of the check?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. The payee of the check. I count six to David Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I accept your correction, Mr. Meyer. I may have been wrong. Now, you testified that there were 29 checks questioned in this period totaling $71,725.77?

A. That is right.

Q. Is there anything on Exhibit 178 and 178-A which shows which checks you questioned at the time you prepared it?

A. No, there is nothing on there.

Q. So, you are relying upon your recollection of a year ago as to which checks you had questioned back in 1947, is that correct?

A. That is right, by the means of different handwriting in this case, possibly.

3581 Q. Did you get an explanation for any of those 29 checks?

A. Yes, we got an explanation and charged it according to our explanation.

Q. You got an explanation for all of them, didn't you?
A. That is right.
Q. And you were satisfied with that explanation, weren't you?
A. At the time, yes.
Q. And you prepared your audit report on the basis of that explanation and your satisfaction with it?
A. That is right.
Q. You made journal entries, I assume?
A. That is right.
Q. And you prepared an income tax return for General Confections?
A. That is right, we prepared an income tax for General Confections because on the basis of all these cash checks that Mr. Lubben gave us explanation about, we accepted what he gave. We couldn't verify who he gave the cash to after he received it but we had to accept it on the basis of the explanation.
3582 Q. Well, as a certified public accountant, would your firm have signed an income tax return if they had any doubt whatsoever as to the accuracy of the return?
A. We had no doubt as to the accuracy of the return, as far as General Confections was concerned. He received the money, possibly from the bank; other people got all this money from the bank. And General Confections—we certified to General Confections as a separate entity from Mr. Lubben, personally.
Q. And all these entries were in the General Confections books, is that right?
A. That is right.
Q. And you put them on there?
A. I did not put them on there.
Q. You put the journal entries there?
A. Well, journal entries were put on our work papers. The journal entries were given to Miss Feldman. In some cases she did not put them on as a journal entry but may have put them on in the book of original entry, as a cash disbursements book, as a purchase book, as something else, but we gave Miss Feldman these journal entries. I couldn't testify that we put them on. Our audit—
Q. But if you didn't put them on yourself you 3583 gave the information to Miss Feldman and she put them on?

A. That is right.

Well, let me correct you. Our statement is based upon our work papers and not on the books. We make separate work papers and prepare our audit from our work papers.

Q. But your work papers were based on the books, weren't they?

A. Our work papers were previously based on the books. Then we come along with adjustment, adjust our work papers, make our auditing statements and certified statements on the basis of our work papers, then make our tax return on the basis of our work papers.

Our last procedure is to give to the bookkeeper or accountant in charge of the specific audit in charge of the specific corporation, a usually typewritten copy of all the journal entries to bring the books in line with our audit and with the tax return.

Q. That was a perfectly proper way of proceeding?

A. I believe that is the usual procedure of accountants both in New York City and other states in the 3584 Union.

Q. Now, was there a single check in this third period shown on Exhibits 178 and 178-A as charged against Shotwell for purchases?

A. I havn't seen the name Shotwell in this list.

Q. So that when Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman explained these various checks to cash were expended for, they didn't tell you it was Shotwell in every case, did they?

A. No.

Q. And not in any case, as a matter of fact?

A. Not in any case in this particular period.

3585 Q. Will you tell me what is the difference between a certified public accountant and a public accountant?

A. A certified public accountant is registered with the particular state as being capable of preparing an audit and he certifies to it that that audit has been in accordance with the laws of that state. And it gives a sort of authority, in the sense that certain audit procedures have been executed to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Q. And there is a high standard of ethics among certified public accountants, is there not?

A. There is a high standard of ethics among all certified public accountants.

Q. When a certified public accountant affixes his name to a certified statement it, in effect, holds out to the public that that is a statement that is worthy of belief, isn't that so?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, if a certified public accountant in preparing an audit found that there were a great many checks to cash which are unexplained, wouldn't it be necessary for him to make some reference to this condition in his certified statement?

3586 A. It is necessary to make an explanation if the checks were not finally settled and charged. If there were checks at the end of the audit that didn't have proper explanation, then we would have to make a qualification in that connection.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 169 for identification and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, this was Mr. Scholz's statement in connection with General Confections.

Q. Was that prepared on the basis of your work papers?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the preparation of it?

A. I had all of the audit procedures. Mr. Scholz prepared—he was the certified public accountant. He prepared the actual statements, although I did check it against the work papers. I did not prepare the pencil copies for typing. Mr. Scholz did, and I checked it against my work papers.

Q. And do you recognize Mr. Scholz's signature?

A. I recognize Mr. Scholz's signature.

Q. And does that agree with your work papers?

A. That agrees with our work papers.

3587 Q. And it was prepared in the ordinary course of business as a public accountant?

A. As a certified public accountant.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you. I offer Exhibit 169 in evidence.

By the Court: My notes show that it was received.

By Mr. Lockley: It was identified, your Honor, by Mr. Sproull.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness: That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: But I didn't offer it at that time, ar.

By the Court: Well, is there any objection to the exhibit?

By Mr. McConnell: My objection is the same as I made to the cash authorization, self-serving. I made it, I think, to all these documents.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I have had no real adequate opportunity to understand what might be the importance of this, one way or another. I don't see that it tends to prove or not to prove any question in the case.

3588 It seems to me, so far as General Confections is concerned for the period ending February 28, 1947, as this witness pointed out, the money was paid out of General Confections. We don't question that Mr. Lubben was able to get the money out. But the question really is, what happened after he took it out.

I don't see that this at all bears upon that issue. It is certainly not to be considered binding upon any of the defendants.

And so, for those reasons, and without being able to give the Court further specific details, but I think that is an adequate objection to it, I object to this Exhibit 169.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, the defense has attempted to attack the credibility of Mr. Lubben's and the General Confection's books and records. I intend to show through this certified statement prepared by the accountant that the accountant at least was satisfied that those books and records were accurate.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

3589 By Mr. Kirby: Well, if the Court please, the real issue is what Lubben did with that money; and since that is the question and since he wants to put in these records, maybe the Government would now withdraw its objection to the income tax return which was prepared showing what Lubben got from General Confections for that period.

By the Court: Let's take one thing at a time. You can make your offer at the proper time.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 169.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Meyer, this is identified as a Consolidated Financial Statement, General Confections, Inc., February 28, 1947. In accordance with a letter dated June 3, 1947. In accordance with a letter dated June 3, 1947, on the let-terhead of Sproull, Scholz & Company to General Confections, Inc., it is stated in part:

"We have made an examination of the balance sheet of General Confections, Inc., as at February 28, 1947, 3590 and of the related profit and loss statement for the period March 1, 1946 to February 28, 1947.

"Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards applicable in the circumstances and included all procedures which we considered necessary. We examined or tested accounting records of the companies and obtained other supporting evidence by methods and to the extent we deemed appropriate, but we did not make a detailed audit of all transactions.

"The accompanying balance sheet and the related statements of the profit and loss and surplus, subject to the appended notes, which form an integral part of these statements, in our opinion, fairly present the financial condition of General Confections, Inc., and subsidiary company as at February 28, 1947, and the results of operations of General Confections, Inc., and its subsidiary, Reserve Trading Corporation, for the period covered by the profit and loss statements and surplus period."

3591 In other words, Sproull, Scholz, as certified public accountants, were certifying that the books and records of General Confections and Reserve Trading Corportion were true and correct, isn't that so?

A. As at that particular date, that's right.

Q. And any exception taken by Sproull, Scholz is, according to the letter of June 3rd, noted in the appended notes, is that so?

A. That's right.

Q. Will you please examine the profit and loss statement for General Confections and show me any note or any other exception taken by Sproull, Scholz to the method of handling checks to cash.

A. There was no note regarding cash in this exhibit.

Q. Will you look at the item of purchases on the profit and loss statement and tell us whether there is any qualification in this certified statement to the amount of purchases?

A. There is no qualification regarding purchases.

Q. In other words, you are certifying that the purchases as shown in that statement were the amounts actually expended for purchases in that period from 3592 March 1, 1946 to February 28, 1947, is that so?

A. We are certifying as to the amounts in that statement, but we don't certify that the amount was placed on the books. We gave the entries to place any adjustments on. I don't know whether the adjustments were made at the end of the period to coincide, or to make agreement with this. But we did give journal entries to bring the books in line. Whether or not the books agreed with that, I can't say, because I never saw the books after the statements were prepared.

Q. Isn't it true that the figures shown on that certified statement were eventually used by Sproull, Scholz in preparing the General Confections return for 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. And Sproull, Scholz signed that return?

A. Mr. Sproull—I don't know whether Mr. Sproull or Mr. Scholz signed the return. I didn't see the return. I had nothing to do actually with the filing of the tax return. Mr. Sproull and Mr. Scholz, I think, filed that and either one of the two would have signed it. But 3593 I did have some work to do with the preparation of this statement.

Q. I show you Exhibit 122-D and Exhibit 124-A and ask if you have seen those before.

A. I saw these cash authorization slips before.

Q. Can you tell me to what account those were posted on the books of General Confections?

A. I would have to refer to the schedules in order to do it.

Q. Isn't there something on the face of those cash authorization sheets which reflects that information?

A. It says, "Cash, Shotwell."

Q. Isn't there a posting notation on it?

A. There is a P-85. I assume that would be purchase 85.

Q. As an accountant don't you know that that indicates that that particular amount of money was posted to the purchase books at page 85.

A. I would say so, from the basis of this, that it was posted to page 85.

Q. And if they were posted to purchases there had to be a corresponding entry in the accounts payable or the books wouldn't balance, isn't that so?

3594 A. That's right.

Q. Do you recall whether General Confections had an account called miscellaneous purchases?

A. Yes, I recall miscellaneous purchases on the General Confections account. I recall that we made an analysis of it which showed a debit balance in the accounts payable account.

Q. You testified that you remembered that there was only one overage payment posted to the Shotwell accounts payable ledger sheet in 1946. Do you recall whether those two purchases, Exhibits 122-D and 124-A, were posted to miscellaneous purchases account or to the Shotwell account?

A. The twelve two thirty-five, I recollect something on that. That to my mind was part of the $17,000.00 item I mentioned about. As I recollect the purchase was never set up. In other words, originally when you make an entry regarding purchases you should charge purchases and credit the people involved that sell you the material. And as I recollect it, that entry was not made at the time the purchase was made and we made an adjustment in connection with that purchase.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 122, a

3595 check for $12,235.00, and ask you if that is the check which is referred to in Government's Exhibit 122-D?

A. The amount agrees, but the dates do not agree. The cash authorization is dated October 7, 1946. The check is dated October 12, 1946. It appears in Miss Feldman's handwriting down here, "Date paid 10-7-46". But the check was actually October 12th.

3596 Q. So the cash authorization slip was issued and then the check was issued, is that correct?

By Mr. O'Brien: Please. Was the check October 12 or August 12?

By the Witness: October 12. The check was October 12. The cash authorization is October 7.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, will you look at Exhibit 177-B, please, the sixteenth entry. That is for the period July to October, 1946, Mr. Meyer, the schedule of checks drawn to cash and others; do you find it?

A. I find it.

Q. And that entry, apparently dated October 7, shows the payee, Shotwell, (check drawn to cash), $12,235.00, charge to accounts payable, with the information, "Purchases, warehouse shipments, journal entry 104."

Now, at the time you saw that check for $12,235.00 and drew up this work sheet, were you satisfied that that paticular check had been in payment of purchases, warehouse shipments?

A. We were satisfied that this check was in payment of warehouse shipments, but there was no entry made 3597 to set up that purchase. So our journal entry No. 104 was set up debiting purchases, warehouse shipments, or charging—when I say debit I mean charging purchases, warehouse shipments—and crediting accounts payable, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and by explanation—inasmuch as General Confections picked up this purchase in their November recordings of purchases, the above journal entry was not recorded.

In other words, we made a journal entry to set up the purchase, but Miss Feldman did not record it as a journal entry, but put it in her purchase book in November.

Q. Were you satisfied that it was a purchase?

A. We were satisfied that it was a purchase, but we would have preferred it to go in the journal instead of the purchase book.

Q. Whichever way it went, the net result was the same, was it not?

A. Well, attention was called to the fact that the first part of this shipment should have been entered in the purchase book for August, not November. It actually wasn't handling it right, your calling it a purchase in November, when by journal entry you really place 3598 it on the books in the month of August, because you are making a journal entry to correct it properly. It wasn't properly corrected. It went in as a November purchase.

Q. When was the payment actually made, if you know?

A. The payment is October, but the actual—when the liability should have been set up was actually in August.

Q. But you were satisfied that the payment was made in October, although it was on an August shipment?

A. The payment was made in October. But the liability wasn't set up in October.

In other words, you paid for the material before you even bought it, according to Miss Feldman.

Q. Now, on Exhibit 56, defense exhibit, you testified Friday to an item of $35,536.00, which has the information, "Check made out to cash, endorsed by Lubben." There is another entry reflecting that $35,536.00 check, is there not, Mr. Meyer?

A. I would have to look at the—

Q. I believe you will find it on Government's Exhibit 177. I am sorry. I am afraid it's the earlier one. It's 176. It is the first schedule.

3599 A. 176, 175—

Q. Now, on that exhibit—

A. What number is that, please? I don't know if I have the one you want.

Q. It is 175. It is for the schedule of checks drawn to cash and others for the first period.

A. Right.

Q. You find an item, the twelfth item on the page, March 29, 1946, check No. 149, payable to David Lubben—

A. Right.

3600 Q. —for $35,536.00, endorsed by David Lubben, charged to accounts payable, with the information, "To apply on inventory payment owed to Eatsum".

Now, you testified that you also handled some of the inventory records when the Eatsum partnership broke up and General Confections bought the inventory, is that so?

A. That's right.

Q. And you testified that there was about $300,000 worth of that inventory, is that correct?

A. As I recollect, it was in the neighborhood of three hundred thousand.

Q. Now, this is a shipment which was sold to the Eatsum partnership, is that not right?

A. Well, I would say it was taken over by General Confections when the Eatsum partnership closed.

In other words, the partnership was selling all of the inventory assets to the new corporation, General Confections.

Q. So when General Confections bought the inventory from Eatsum partnership that set up on the books of General Confections an accounts payable to the Eatsum partnership?

A. That's right.

3601 Q. That's right, isn't it?

A. The schedule you have. I think that's offered as an exhibit, is it not?

Q. That's correct. So now when General Confections pays a premium of $35,000.00—

By Mr. O'Brien: Pays a what?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —a premium or an amount of $35,000.00 to retire a debt of Eatsum, it is proper for General Confections to show on its books that there is a debit to the Eatsum account, isn't that correct?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that as an assumption completely unsupported by the testimony.

By the Court: Well, I don't remember just what the testimony was with reference to that $35,000.00 check. If you are correctly stating the testimony of the record in that regard, then, of course, it is proper.

By Mr. Lockley: The testimony in the record, your Honor, is to the effect that on these work papers the $35,000.00 item is shown to apply on the inventory payment owed to Eatsum.

3602 By Mr. O'Brien: That's right. But you don't mean, Mr. Lockley, that any witness here has testified that that $35,536.00 check was an overage that was paid out to settle an account, in the way you have included it in your question?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lubben and Miss Feldman testified that that $35,000.00 went to The Shotwell Manufacturing Co.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is quite different than saying that it went to discharge an overage of somebody else.

By Mr. Lockley: And their testimony was that this was for overages.

Now, I want to show by this witness that when the General Confections paid an Eatsum liability to Shotwell—

By the Court: Well, the question is, is there testimony in the record that this was a liability of the Eatsum partnership?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By Mr. Lockley: There is testimony in the record that this was a premium due on shipments received during 3603 the period of the partnership. When Mr. Lubben took the partnership inventory over he also took over with it the liability of those—

By Mr. O'Brien: No, he didn't. The agreement that is here is that he did not take over the liability.

By the Court: If Mr. Lockley correctly states the testimony that this was a payment to Shotwell from the Eatsum partnership, and it was paid by General Confections, then it will be proper credit against the inventory account.

By Mr. O'Brien: He does not correctly state, with all due respect—

By the Court: Sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is not a correct statement of the testimony.

By the Court: I confess I don't remember.

By Mr. O'Brien: Indeed it is quite contrary. The written agreement was that Eatsum keep his own obligations and General Confections assumed none.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lubben testified that he paid those premiums twice, once to the Eatsum partner-3604 ship and once again to Shotwell in order to continue to obtain purchases.

3605 By the Court: You can refer to the testimony to clear that matter up. I confess that I don't remember.

By Mr. O'Brien: It merely means that in the absence of a showing on Mr. Lockley's part, we have to keep remembering these things and going back to them. There is no such foundation in the record.

By the Court: I think you will have to refer to the record so that we may obtain the correct understanding of the prior testimony.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. In any event, Mr. Meyer, your work sheet doesn't show that that check to cash went to the Eatsum partnership, does it?

A. Yes, it does, on my schedule, that you have a photostat copy of. It has CD-4, on the analysis of the Eatsum account, and it has a debit, thirty five five thirty six.

Q. Which one is that, please?

A. Accounts payable, on the debit side. And there is an item there, as I recollect, it is CD-4, coming from the cash book, and it was charged against Eatsum 3606 Food Products Company. And I think it has the check number also inserted in the Eatsum account.

Q. 149?

A. That's right.

Q. That reflects that the check was made out to cash. It doesn't show it was paid out to Eatsum Food Products?

A. That's right. But the cash disbursements book, 4, charged that to Eatsum Food Products, and we examined that and we were satisfied that it was a charge against Eatsum Food Products.

Q. Precisely.

A. On the basis of our identification.

Q. And that was a proper entry to make, under the circumstances, wasn't it?

A. Thats' right, against Eatsum Food Products.

Q. And when General Confections was paying an Eatsum liability, it was proper to debit that account to General Confections—pardon me—Eatsum Food Products?

A. When General Confections was paying a liability, it was proper to debit the Eatsum Food Products account.

Q. That's exactly what I thought. Now, I want to 3607 call your attention further to Exhibit 56, defense exhibit, and to the entries dated April 30. They follow the $35,000.00 entry.

A. Exhibit what?

Q. 56. It is the defense exhibit. This one.

A. All right. I haven't got one of those.

Q. All right. You take this one, please.

A. Thank you.

Q. Now, will you please describe the entries under the date of April 30, the Journal 3?

A. April 30, J 3, seventy four twenty five, debit for Eatsum Food Products, seventy four twenty five—debit sales due—it looks like $75.00—credit C. W. Brown accounts receivable, $75.00. And there is a star on it.

Q. In other words, the effect of that entry is to debit the Eatsum Food Products, debit sales discount, and credit C. W. Brown. Does that mean that because the Eatsum Food Products account was debited that Eatsum Food Products got that check of $74.25?

By Mr. Kirby: What is in evidence about $74.25?

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 56.

By the Court: He is referring to a record that is 3608 in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Is that charged against us?

By the Court: He is referring to Exhibit 56. It is in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, Mr. Meyer, what that actually shows is that C. W. Brown got $75.00— or seventy four dollars and a quarter, doesn't it?

A. Wait a minute. Yes, Mr. Brown.

Q. But that Eatsum Food Products was debited?

A. That's right.

Q. So what General Confections did in that case was pay Mr. Brown, but they show it on their books that it was a reduction of the Eatsum Food Products accounts payable, isn't that so?

A. That's right.

Q. Precisely. And isn't that exactly the same thing that happened with the $35,000.00 check?

A. Not to my knowledge and belief. There is nothing that I can, from the explanation—there was an entirely different explanation on that journal entry from the explanation on our schedule of $35,536.00, entirely different.

3609 The explanation on this one is March 25, CD-4, check No. 149, $35,536.00, check made out to cash and endorsed by David Lubben.

Now, if the same circumstances applied, wouldn't it be natural for us to write who it would be credited to; wouldn't we write whatever name the credit is.

If that is the case, what we did on others, isn't it natural to assume that we would do the same on the $35,000.00 check?

Therefore, my contention is that that was charged to Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. Take the entry up above, for April 12, that's CD-11, check No. 589, for $6,853.47, with the information, "Check made out to cash, endorsed by Lubben and Edward Urban."

Now, what is your explanation of that entry?

A. The same thing would apply.

Q. And what is the same thing?

A. The same as the $35,536.00.

Q. Will you explain it?

A. The explanation is that from CD-11 check number—it looks like 89, it is 19 or 89—the amount of 3610 $6,853.47, the check was made out to cash, it was endorsed by Lubben and Edward Urban, and as far as I can ascertain from the work papers and our records, it was charged against Eatsum Food Products.

If there was a credit to somebody else I think we would have listed the credit to somebody else on our work papers.

Q. Does that mean Eatsum Food Products got the money?

A. According to the work papers, it means Eatsum Food Products were charged with that money. Whether or not this cash was turned over to Eatsum, I didn't go to Eatsum Food Products to verify, but it was charged against Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. Then you didn't go to Eatsum Food Products to find out whether they actually got the thirty-five thousand?

A. It was charged on the basis of their records. The General Confections posted that. We were auditing General Confections records, not Eatsum Food Products Company records.

Q. Didn't you verify with Eatsum Food Products records whether they got the $35,000.00?

A. I verified that this was properly charged against 3611 Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Eatsum Food Products Company got the $35,000.00?

A. As far as the records go, it went to—

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Eatsum Food Products got the $35,000.00?

By Mr. McConnell: I object. He is arguing.

By the Court: He may answer.

He asked whether or not you have any personal knowledge as to the Eatsum partnership receiving the money.

By the Witness:

A. Actually, I know it was charged against Eatsum Food Products, on the basis of our audit schedule.
3612 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You still haven't answered my question. I asked you if you know what happened to the $35,000.00.

A. It was charged against Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. Do you know if Eatsum Food Products Company got it?

A. I know that it was charged against Eatsum Food Products on the basis of the information—

Q. Do you know if Eatsum Food Products Company got it?

By Mr. Kirby: Why don't you ask him who told him Eatsum got it?

By Mr. Lockley: I will ask my own questions, Mr. Kirby, if you please.

By the Witness:

A. This check was made out to cash.

By the Court: I suppose the only knowledge you have is from—

By the Witness: That Lubben got the money.

By the Court: Wait. I suppose the only knowledge you have is from the books and records.

By the Witness: That's right.

3613 By the Court: You don't pretend to say whether or not the Eatsum Food Products partnership actually received the cash?

By the Witness: Could I explain it to you in my way, that actually we know that Mr. Lubben got the cash from the bank. He said that he paid it to Eatsum Food Products. On his say-so we had to charge—it was charged by his own bookkeeper, not by us, we didn't make any adjustments. It was charged by his own bookkeeper, whether Miss Feldman or an employee, against Eatsum Food Products.

By the Court: You are depending on the verity of the books?

By the Witness: That's right.

By the Court: We will take our recess now.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury, as well as the Judge, leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess till two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above-entitled cause to 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day, being Monday, October 5, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Monday, October 5, 1953,
2:00 o'clock p. m.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By Mr. Lockley: Will you mark this Government's Exhibit No. 179 for identification.

3615 (Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 179 for identification.)

JOSEPH P. MEYER, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Meyer, I believe at the close of the morning session I inquired on Exhibit 56 for the defendants of check No. 589, dated April 12th, for $6,853.47, which you explained as a check made out to cash, endorsed by Lubben and Edward Urban. And did you say that that Exhibit 56 indicates that that check was charged on the books of General Confections to the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. I did.

Q. Now, will you look at Government Exhibit 175, the first page, at the 35th line, do you find there an item dated April 15, 1946, check No. 589, to cash, $6,853.47, endorsed by David Lubben and Edward L. Urban; and now to what account is that charged on that work sheet, 175?

3616 A. To accounts payable, Eatsum.

Q. And what is the explanation given for it?

A. This amount owed by Eatsum to Close, overage on Aunt Jennie—I can't read that last word.

Q. Jars.

A. Jars.

Q. So that whereas Exhibit 56 shows that that was charged to the Eatsum account on General Confections' books, Exhibit 175 shows that that was charged to Eatsum but was in payment of an amount owed by Eatsum to Close, isn't that correct?

A. That's perfectly right.

Q. And is that a proper way of handling such an account?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to, your Honor.

By the Court: Sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: The question as to whether that is a proper way. If he means accounting-wise, I suppose, yes. But as to whether it is proper here wouldn't depend on the facts.

By the Court: I suppose he means accounting-wise.

By Mr. Lockley: Accounting-wise.

3617 By the Witness:

A. Accounting-wise it can be done and it could be considered proper.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Then accounting-wise the $35,000.00 check which was shown on the Eatsum accounts payable was likewise properly handled?

A. Accounting-wise it was likewise properly handled, but it does not show any substantiation in a similar fashion on the cash report.

Q. I see. Now I show you Defendants' Exhibit 6-A and B, which is a two-page letter from Shotwell Manufacturing Company to David G. Lubben. That is a letter which you obtained in the course of your audit, is it not?

A. That's right.

3618 Q. And that tends to show that the accounts receivable on the Shotwell books from General Confections agreed with the accounts payable on the General Confections book to Shotwell, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. It shows that they were in balance. Now, that letter refers to the balances as of what dates?

A. The balance shown by Shotwell was as of April 21, 1947.

Q. And there is another balance, too, is there not, another date?

A. Well, the final figure says, "Balance, April 21, 1947, $28,986.25."

Q. Doesn't it also refer to the balance due on December 31, 1947—'46? I am sorry.

A. It gives the balance, December 31, 1946, that's right, at the beginning—half way between the letter is the figure you mention.

Q. That's right. Now, Mr. Lubben and Miss Feldman testified that all the premium payments to Shotwell had been completed as of December 20, 1946, and this sheet shows no shipments after that date, does it? Exhibit 60, that is.

A. Well, there is an invoice down at the bottom of 3619 the page.

Q. What date is that?

A. It doesn't give a date. It says, "Your invoice 26613."

Q. That's General Confections invoice.

A. That's right.

Q. I am speaking of shipments from Shotwell to General Confections. Were there any made from Shotwell to General Confections after December—

A. I don't see any after December 31.

Q. So all of the premium payments, having been made before December 20, the only thing left on the books of Shotwell, and on the books of General, would be the amount of the invoice, isn't that so?

By Mr. McConnuell: I object to that, a summary of statements of other witnesses and putting them in a question.

By the Court: Well, I assume you must make some further hypothetical reference to testimony before you propound a question of that kind.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, assuming that all of the premium payments were paid by the 20th of December, the only remaining 3620 accounts owed would be for the invoice amounts, is that correct?

A. Under your assumption that would be right.

Q. And they would naturally be in balance, between the two companies, isn't that so?

A. Assuming that the facts as you state them are such, the accounts should be in balance.

Q. And the accounts were in balance, according to that payment?

A. The accounts were in balance after we made adjustments of the account. And the adjustment was JE No. 240.

Q. And what is that JE 240?

A. That happened to be January and February commissions. And Journal entry 240 placed those commissions on the books of General Confections.

Q. In other words, those were commissions due to Mr. Lubben as a broker?

A. They were commissions due to General Confections as broker. Mr. Lubben may have been president, but they were due to General Confections, the way we interpreted it, and we so made our journal entry, to place these amounts on the books as of February 28, 1947.

3621 Q. And does that show then that the commissioners were never actually paid by Shotwell to General Confections but were just credited on their account?

A. The commissions, on the basis of our journal entry, were then credited. The General Confections did not pick them up in the normal course of their business, and it was our duty, as auditors, to rectify their records to include that amount as income to them in order to get the proper statement that we produced, as well as to get the proper income for the preparation of the Federal tax return.

Q. And to show that the account due to Shotwell had been reduced by that amount, isn't that so?

A. That's right. And if—going one step further, taking the balance as of April 24, and eliminating the March entry, and the various invoices, we arrived at a balance of $31,824.55.

Our records on our work sheets showed that after we made a credit of the two commissions we agreed on our accounts payable for the amount of $31,824.55.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you very much. That is all.

3622 Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Meyer, these entries that finally found their way on to the books, represent explanations given you at that time?

A. Explanations that were given at that time by either Mr. Lubben, Miss Feldman or possibly some employee who was involved in the transaction.

Q. Did you ask for explanations?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ask for what had happened to the money?

By the Court: Well, that is too indefinite. What do you mean?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. During these cash items, they were items treated—

A. Yes. I asked during the course of the audit, on the date as specified, as I gave in my testimony.

Q. Now, to get directly to the question of the proof here, I showed you when you testified here before, a number of so-called recap sheets. Do you recall those?

A. Can I look at them again, please?

3623 Yes, I recollect that I have seen these on Friday.

Q. Well, they represent the proof in the absence of the books that was produced and what I want to know from you now is, were those items that you have in your lap on these books shown as payments out to Shotwell?

A. I never saw these. As I testified on Friday I never saw these and as far as I know, there were no records in our work sheets regarding these amounts.

By Mr. Lockley: I didn't understand the question to be whether you saw them. The question is whether or not they were on the books.

By the Witness: As far as I know, they were not on the books.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now where is that audit, that Sproull, Scholz audit?

You were asked a number of questions, Mr. Meyer, about whether you made the audit up which is 16—your company, that is—to the best of your knowledge.

3624 A. That is right.

Q. And when you made it up, did they produce for you these recap or summary sheets before you made it up?

A. I never saw these at all during the course of the until or after the audit, as far as I can recollect, or as audit as I can trace in my working papers.

Q. So that when you did make a certification, you were not certifying those recap sheets and the payments shown on them that have been introduced in evidence here, were you?

A. That is right.

Q. Now the last one that Mr. Lockley asked you about, it would be a little out of order here, but so that it may be a little fresher in our mind, he asked you about an item of $35,536.00 which is shown on your work sheet which is Exhibit 175. Do you recall that?

A. Right.

Q. And you talked to Mr. Lubben about that, you say?

A. Wait a minute. I have Exhibit 56. What exhibit number is that, 175?

3625 Q. 175.

A. 175 you have reference to. Will you repeat the question now, please?

(Question read.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you?

A. Yes.

Q. And the entry which you made on your work sheet, is that what he told you?

A. The entry in connection with that $35,536.00 was made by General Confections on their books because the C.D. 4 indicates on Exhibit 56—Exhibit 56 shows C.D. 4 check No. 149 which is the same check and indicates that it came from cash disbursements 4. The entry was made by a bookkeeper or some employee of General Confections and charged into accounts payable, Eatsum Food Products.

Q. It was never changed?

A. It was never changed by us.

Q. I show you Exhibits which set up the Eatsum account on your work papers, 56, 57.

A. I have them.

Q. 58 and 59 and that $35,536.00 is again there charged against Eatsum, isn't it?

A. That is right.

3626 Q. Mr. Lockley made a point in connection with that check of going down on your Exhibit 175 a few more lines to where he got a check which is $6,853.47 that was charged against Eatsum in connection with Urban. Do you remember that?

A. Yes. I have that item, $6,853.47.

Q. You were told specifically when you inquired about that item that it dealt with overages to Close & Company, weren't you?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, I hope we won't have the same trouble today that we had the other day. This is your witness on redirect examination. I must object, your Honor, to Mr. Kirby's constant testimony in this case and the leading nature of his questions.

By the Court: Yes. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let me ask it this way. That $35,536.00, who told you what entry to make with respect to that?

A. The entry was—we did not make an entry on $35,536.00.

3627 Q. But so far as your notes are concerned, who gave you that information?

A. That information came from Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman.

Q. Well, when you inquired did they say it was for overages?

A. When I inquired the explanation under the heading of "information" was inserted to apply on inventory payment owing to Eatsum.

Q. Now let us get down to the one that Mr. Lockley sought to draw an analogy with. Do you have an entry of what they told you when you asked them about that?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did they tell you?

A. This amount owed—

By Mr. Lockley: What do you mean, Mr. Meyer? Who do you mean, what did they tell you?

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman told me.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you know who told you?

By the Witness: I don't know whether it was Mr. Lubben or Miss Feldman. That I can't recall but I

3628 know it was one or the other and they stated just what is written in my handwriting: "This amount owing by Eatsum to Close, overage on account Jennie Jars".

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Close & Company were a supplier, were they?

A. Yes, Close & Company were suppliers.

Q. Eddie Urban ran that company?

A. I don't know that. That I can't state because I am not familiar with Close & Company officers, but I do recollect examining Close & Company invoices for the General Confections audit.

Q. But at least now on the $35,536.00—am I correct that there is no mention of overages?

A. There is no mention of overages on the $35,536.00, as far as the Exhibit 175 is concerned or No. 756.

Q. But on this one with respect to Close & Company, they told you specifically it was—

A. Exactly as the writing indictates on the exhibit.

Q. No such statement in connection with that bigger check that is now charged against it?

A. There is no such statement about overages on the $35,536.00.

3629 Q. They had an opportunity to tell you that, isn't that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And they had told you that in one case but not in the other?

A. If they had told me that, I would have inserted it in that case.

Q. My question is they told it to you on one case but not on the other?

A. That is right.

Q. When you drew up this audit, that $35,536.00 was not charged against Shotwell, was it?

A. No, sir. According to the papers and records it was charged against Eatsum.

3630 Q. To repeat the line of questioning that Mr. Lockley used, as an accountant and as an auditor, in making up this financial statement, then you were satisfied it should have been charged to Shotwell, isn't that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And when you made up the income tax as to which he asked you, you didn't charge it against Shotwell, did you?

A. It was charged against Eatsum in connection with the income tax as well as the certified audit.

Q. And not against Shotwell?

A. And not against Shotwell.

Q. One of things that Mr. Lockley I thought pressed you on rather hard was whether you could remember when you did some work last August, which of these checks were checks as to which you required additional information. Do you remember he asked you that in each case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, take a look at Exhibits 175 and 176.

A. Right.

Q. Now, Exhibits 176 you made up when?

A. 176 was made up after we had asked questions
3631 about Exhibit 175 and 175-A.

Q. Exhibit 176 was made up back then in 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. And it represents the checks as to which you were questioning the amounts, as to 175 and 175-A; you still didn't have adequate information so you made the list of the ones on 176 that you were short information on, is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: Is that your answer, Mr. Meyer?

By Mr. Kirby: He already did testify.

By the Witness: I testified to this and it is just repetition.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But he was challenging you to whether it was just from memory that you knew the questioned checks. As a matter of fact the questioned checks were all listed on 176?

A. Well, we listed all the checks and questioned them originally. After we had questioned them, there were still some further explanations needed and that was the purpose of the next statement, the following statement, and that is Exhibit 176.

Q. Which Mr. Lockley had when he was asking 3632 you how you knew which ones were added questions?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, another list—oh, and by the way, this $27,000.00 check that he asked you about, that was on the super question list, wasn't it, Exhibit 176?

A. What is that check number on that? Yes, I think you are referring to check No. 906?

Q. Yes.

A. Right.

Q. Now, in the next period Mr. Lockley was asking you about the number of checks as to which you had inadequate information and you gave a number in your testimony—wait a minute. I will get that testimony. He read you this answer from page 3452:

"In the second period 16 of those checks were questioned" and he wanted to know if you only knew from memory which ones were the 16.. Do you remember that series of questions by Mr. Lockley?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on Exhibit 177 which he had in his hand, are there a number of journal entries entered to the right of those sheets?

A. That is right.

3633 Q. What does the journal entry mean—that there was a correction with respect to that check or a change?

A. There was additional information necessary to be placed upon the books in connection with that transaction.

Q. And how many such entries appear right on the sheet that Mr. Lockley had in his hand?

A. I counted 14 journal entries.

Q. Those would indicate to your mind checks as to which there was a question, I suppose?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the form of the question again. Mr. Kirby, I am sorry. I am going to have to continue doing it as long as you persist.

By the Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Kirby: I will withdraw it. Or, I don't have to withdraw it because the Judge sustained the objection, but I am going to make a dangerous step now and disagree with an accountant on adding.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Aren't there 16 journal entries marked?

A. 16. I can't readily read this copy too well.

3634 It isn't very readable on a photostatic copy. I might find them a little bit easier on an original exhibit because I think they were marked in red, if I recollect properly.

Q. Well, I will hand you the original.
A. Because it shows up a little better.
Q. And how are they marked on there?
A. They are marked in red.
Q. And the ones marked in red total how much?
A. 16 is right.
Q. And are those the 16 you mentioned in your answers on page 3452 as to which Mr. Lockley asked you extensively?
A. I would have to check that.
Q. The fact is that in the second period 16 of those were checked?
A. I would have to check whether the amounts jibed again, but at least there were 16 that were questioned so far as my records were concerned.
Q. Now, another period in which Mr. Lockley asked you whether you were just doing this from memory as to which checks were questioned was the third period and he read your testimony at page 3456, that 29 of these 3635 checks were questioned. Now, I call your attention to Exhibit 178 and 178-A which Mr. Lockley had in his hand when he was asking you about that 29 and how you knew it was 29 and I will ask you if there are check marks alongside of certain checks?
A. There are check marks alongside certain checks.
Q. Will you just count the number of the checks that are so specially marked out to the right?
A. 29.
Q. That is the same number you testified about Friday, isn't it?
A. That is right.
3636 By Mr. Kirby: 92 and 93. If you try and find those, Mr. Krane, I will move along.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Mr. Meyer, a number of questions were asked of you as to whether there was anything improper about the president of the company charging checks to himself. Do you remember that?
A. Right.
Q. And actually when you worked on the books there were a lot of them charged to Lubben?
A. That's right.
Q. Now, do you know anything about the question of whether Lubben is now charging those checks that were charged against himself against Shotwell; do you know what the proof is, I mean?

A. Will you repeat that question? I am trying to understand what you are trying to ask me. I can't seem to—

Q. You didn't hear the testimony of Mr. Lubben?

A. No, I did not hear the testimony of Mr. Lubben.

Q. You did not hear the testimony of Miss Feldman?

A. I did not hear the testimony of Miss Feldman.

Q. So do you know or don't you know whether 3637 amounts charged on the books when you worked on them, to Lubben are now being charged against Shotwell; do you know?

A. No, I don't.

Q. So that when you were answering the question about that it is all right for the president to charge it against himself, you were going that far and no further, I assume?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: I am looking for 153-A. Do you know where that is?

By Mr. Krane: It should be there. Mr. Lockley didn't use it.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, he did.

By the Witness: Maybe it is here. There are exhibits here.

By Mr. Kirby: It may be. It is a cash authorization slip.

By the Witness: There are no cash authorizations there.

By Mr. Kirby: You used 153-A this morning. Do you have it?

By Mr. Krane: No. It is there.

3638 By Mr. Kirby: It is a cash authorization slip.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I have these two checks for twenty-three hundred here. Do you recall that Mr. Lockley asked you whether you could find five checks for twenty-three hundred, and you did.

A. That's right.

Q. Well, I only want to ask you about the two checks which the Government put in evidence, 92 and 93. The first one is a check, No. 396. Do you have a record of 396?

A. Yes, I have a record of 396 on my schedule, Exhibit 175.

Q. Now, do you have a record of check 474?

A. I have a record of 474 on Exhibit 175.

Q. Now, those two checks, the Government witnesses on oath said they went to Shotwell and they keyed them specifically to Government Exhibit 13. I will now inquire as to those two checks, what the records show those two checks were spent for.

A. Those checks, according to our record, were spent for 25 drums of liquid syrup, in each case.

Q. Were they charged for candy, as was testi-
3639 fied by the Government witnesses?

A. They were charged on the books of General Confections as 25 drums of liquid syrup, as indicated by our record.

3640 Q. And your record also shows that they were endorsed by this Eddie Urban?

A. That's right.

Q. A supplier of, among other things, liquid syrup; do you know that?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Krane: That is not clear.

By Mr. Lockley: There is no evidence that Mr. Urban is a supplier of liquid syrup, aside from Mr. Kirby's testimony, your Honor. Unless this witness has some knowledge to that effect I ask that the answer be stricken.

By the Court: If he knows it, from what source?

By the Witness: I only know from the way it is endorsed that Mr. Urban is the supplier. Whether he supplies liquid syrup—I know he supplies things, put it that way.

By Mr. Lockley: I move the answer be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby: It is on the books.

3641 By the Court: You mean you learned that from what, the records?

By the Witness: From when we audited, and all the records of the company.

By the Court: Does it appear here on the records?

By the Witness: It doesn't appear here that he is a supplier in this case, no.

By the Court: Well, I suppose you can only testify from the records that are in evidence. The answer may be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby: Not to prolong it, but the lines on which the syrup and the name appear are right together. It would appear to be the purchase of syrup from Urban right on that sheet.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Isn't that what it shows?

A. Let me read it to you.

By Mr. Lockley: Please. Just a moment, Mr. Meyer. The question asked of this witness, your Honor, was whether he knew that Mr. Urban was a supplier of liquid syrup. If he knows, he can answer. If he doesn't 3642 know, it is already in the record what this work sheet shows.

By Mr. Kirby: I will concede that he doesn't know any more than the records show on what they told him.

By the Court: If he wants to read that, he may.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes. Read what it says.

A. All right. It says 2300, and gives the endorsers, William Heitmann, Edward Urban, "accounts payable, 25 drums liquid syrup," in each check as the explanation and the detail.

Q. All right: Now, Mr. Meyer, Mr. Lockley was critical, I thought, of your including checks other than merely to cash in your schedule of the things that you did question. But is it true, sir, that on the day you testified you actually handed forward the sheets that listed every check that you were talking about?

A. That's right.

Q. I mean—

A. I handed the schedule—the schedules are here. They are self-explanatory, as far as title. What I 3643 consider cash may be a different interpretation of cash, as far as Mr. Lockley is concerned.

Q. What I mean is, you gave Mr. Lockley these sheets?

A. I gave him the sheets that day.

3644 Q. It is all written out that day?

A. That's right.

Q. You weren't trying to lie to him?

A. I wasn't trying to lie to anybody.

Q. One of the ones he called your attention to, particularly, on Exhibit 178—

A. 175-A is that?

Q. 178 and 178-A.

A. Right.

Q. —are some checks made payable to Saddle River Farms, Inc. Did you ask Mr. Lubben who was Saddle River Farms?

A. We were familiar with Saddle River Farms during the course of our audit. We analyzed the Saddle River Farms account on the books of General Confections. We knew it was a farm that belonged to Mr. Lubben.

Q. Did they supply any goods?

A. As far as I know, Saddle River Farms never supplied any goods to General Confections.

Q. But I notice here that you are charging those checks against accounts payable, is that true?

A. There must have been an accounts payable subsidiary in the accounts payable called Saddle River 3645 Farms.

Q. So you charged the Saddle River Farms against an accounts payable ledger, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. That incidentally is the same way as they told you to charge that check, 906, which they seek to tie to Shotwell; they said to charge that to accounts payable too?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, are you asking a question or asking a statement?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it is all written out now. I don't know how coy I have to be with the fellow when it is all written right here.

By the Witness: Wait till I get—

By Mr. Kirby: It is Exhibit 176, sir.

By the Witness: Will you repeat your question now, I have everything here. I lost the trend of what the question was.

(Question read.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Exhibit 176 is this.

A. The twenty-seven thousand—

Q. And how is that charged?

A. That is charged to accounts payable, David
3646 Lubben.

Q. The twenty-seven thousand dollar check?

A. It was originally charged on the books to accounts payable, David Lubben.

Q. And then it was taken off and laid against Shotwell?

A. Then it was taken off and a journal entry—the total of that summary column, $40,901.60— and the journal entry was set up making purchases in connection with all of those items.

Q. Well, let me get back to a fairly simple question now, Mr. Meyer. The account of a supplier of goods would be in an accounts payable book?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the Saddle River Farms checks, they went to what kind of a book?

A. They went to an accounts payable, Saddle River Farms also.

Q. But they didn't supply—

A. They didn't supply anything, but there was an account set up, the way the General Confections had it. Otherwise it wouldn't be listed on this schedule.

Q. But that doesn't involve the purchase of any 3647 goods or any goods being supplied?

A. Not that I know of, Mr. Kirby.

Q. All right. Now, in his examination Mr. Lockley was asking you about charging various checks to cash and I think you said you charged them in the manner that you were told they should be charged, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Then he wanted to know if that was adequate for the purposes of General Confections books and I think that you said that is the best you had?

A. That's right.

Q. Then he got into the question of income tax returns of General Confections and you started to point out at one time but didn't get very far with it, that the checks to cash were more connected with the Lubben income tax question than General Confections. Explain what you meant at the point you were talking about then, will you?

By Mr. Lockley: I must object to the form of the question, your Honor. There is no testimony of any sort in the record, that I recall, that reflects—

3648 By the Court: That they might be more material to the Lubben income tax than the General Confections.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And I want to know what you mean by that.

A. When we audited General Confections we examined the books and records and made inquiries regarding cash checks, as far as General Confections was concerned. And we charged on the instructions of Mr. Lubben When he gave us information regarding these checks, we made the necessary entries, as far as General Confections were concerned. And that's as far as we went, because we only did the General Confections audit. We were not auditing Mr. Lubben personally. I can't explain what he did with the money when he got it. As president he possibly—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what he possibly did.

By the Court: Well, you possibly have answered the question now.

By the Witness: Now.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. It was out of General Confection's hands?

A. It was out of General Confections hands 3649 after we got the charge on the books. As far as we were concerned, we were auditing the General Confections books.

Q. And charges that were made against Lubben personally by you, that would be a question for him to take up on his own income tax?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, your firm did make up an income tax return for David Lubben, covering the partnership period, '45 and ending early in '46, and for all of 1946, General Confections, didn't you?

A. Are you talking about Mr. Lubben, personally?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Sproull took care of certain things for Mr. Lubben, but it was not under my jurisdiction, so I think you will have to refer to the testimony of Mr. Sproull in connection with that. I am not familiar with what he said in his testimony.

Q. I show you a document, which is marked in the 19 and 20 series, and ask you whether you had anything to do with the preparation of that income tax return of Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He has al-
3650 ready stated he had nothing to do with it. And your Honor already ruled that that is not admissible evidence.

By the Court: He may answer the question.

By the Witness:

A. Well, actually that is my handwriting. I did not recollect making this out, but it is my handwriting. I can only state that.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And was it made out on the basis of information given you by—

A. Mr. Sproull.

Q. —Mr. Sproull?

A. In other words, I did not audit, or do anything in connection with the details. Mr. Sproull may have given this to me and said to compile a tax return on the basis of his work papers. But, as I recollect, the working papers for this tax return were not prepared by me. I did put in the details, as far as the figures and the name are concerned, but it was Mr. Sproull who made all details and all adjusting entries. And I think he has the working papers in connection with Mr. Lubben's personal tax return.

Q. Well, you know, for instance, from Exhibit
3651 176, that on that exhibit there was charged, after you questioned him, against Mr. Lubben, how much personally in cash checks on that one exhibit?

A. Seventy-four thousand.

Q. And the handwriting on the face of that income tax return of Lubben's is yours, isn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. You can tell from that the amount that you put in for his income from General Confections, can you, from the face there?

3652 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It has no relationship to the issues in this case, whatever Mr. Lubben's income tax return may have shown.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, Mr. Lockley made quite a point that it is all right to charge this to Lubben, it is all right to charge it against the president of the company. Well, if he would stand there and hold it, and admit that he kept it—

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to make a little bit—the immediate question is a simple one, Judge. And that is whether from the part that is in his handwriting—I don't want him to read the amount—just to make some formal proof at the moment—

By the Court: All he did was to act in a clerical capacity, in the first instance. He had nothing to do 3653 with the making up of the income tax report. He merely took the figures given to him by Mr. Sproull.

By the Witness: That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to call to the Court's attention that in his handwriting—I am not going to read any figures—there is a special entry with respect to General Confections, you see, and I just want to ask him—complete the record on that, that that part is in his handwriting.

By the Court: Do you want to ask him if that item is in his handwriting?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: Very well.

By the Witness: What item is that?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I am showing you the face of the income tax return and calling your attention to the item numbered 2, with reference to General Confections; is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And does that purport to show—I am not going to read a figure—the income he got from General Confections in '46?

3654 A. That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to hand up to the Court, so that the Court may examine it, Exhibit 178, and I call your attention to this column here, about which Mr. Lockley questioned him most extensively.

By the Court: Has the income tax for 1946 been marked as an exhibit.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Didn't I rule on that once?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.
By Mr. Kirby: Yes.
By the Court: What exhibit number is it?
By Mr. Kirby: It is in the 19 and 20 series.
But I conceive that by going into the question as Mr. Lockley so elaborately did about the propriety of a president of a company charging it against himself, I would like to go into the question of whether the entries stood that way or whether they were changed before the in-3655 come tax return was filed.
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, my questions were directed entirely to the propriety of such action from an accounting procedure. What Mr. Lubben may have done with the checks which were in his name and cashed by him and which were charged to him on the books of the company is entirely beyond the scope of this lawsuit.
By the Court: Yes, I think so.
By Mr. Lockley: We do not know whether they may have been charged to him as loans and he may have paid them back. We don't know but that he may have used that money for the purchase of materials for the company, and it then had an adjusting entry on the company books to show that he had paid it out.
In other words, these figures standing by themselves have no relationship whatsoever to the net income that he may have received from General Confections.
By Mr. Kirby: Well, but I think it is important.
3656 By the Court: You are going to try an entirely collateral issue, and that would be whether or not Mr. Lubben's income tax for 1946 was correct. That isn't our job here.
By Mr. Kirby: Well, actually, it will go directly to the question of whether the books, as this fellow finished them up, charging them against Lubben, and Lubben's later position stayed the same.
By the Court: No, I will sustain the objection.
3657 By Mr. Kirby: In that event, would it be the Court's feeling that I could now make, as I do formally a motion to strike all of the questions and answers of Mr. Lockley to this witness about wasn't it perfectly proper for Mr. Lubben to charge the matter to himself?

By the Court: He merely asked if Mr. Meyer, as an auditor—whether or not those items satisfied him, when the explanation was given, as properly being reflected in the books. I don't think Mr. Meyer assumes to determine whether or not Mr. Lubben used that money for himself or used it for other purposes or what may have happened to it.

We are going into an entirely collateral issue, if we are going to try to thresh out Mr. Lubben's 1946 income tax.

I will deny his motion to strike.

By Mr. Kirby: I wanted the group of exhibits that relate to the twelve two thirty five.

3658 By the Court: If you could show that the income tax reflects that Lubben received this money for himself, that might be one thing.

By Mr. Kirby: Heaven forbid. He would never do that.

By the Court: But where you want to have us determine here in this lawsuit whether or not his income tax for the year is correct—

By Mr. Kirby: The testimony is that the man handled a million and a half in cash in the indictment years and I think it is material to show—

By the Court: And if you showed that he had a million and a half dollars income on his income tax, that might be of some probative value, that the money that he put in the name of David Lubben and the cash checks that he drew went into his own pocket. But your income tax doesn't show that and hence I say we would have to be threshing out an entirely collateral matter.

By Mr. Kirby: It goes to the man's motive and credibility and the less he puts on his return the more he 3659 wants to shove on somebody else.

By the Court: No, we can't try—

By Mr. Kirby: That's human nature.

By the Court: We have one lawsuit here and that is enough. We are not going to try another.

By Mr. Kirby: It is human nature. It goes to the motives of the man in wanting to load it on somebody else.

By the Court: No. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, Mr. Meyer, one of the matters in Exhibit 178 about which you were questioned—well, now, I am mistaken about that, it wasn't 178, it was in the 177 series, and that is an item on the first page—177-B, and it relates to a check for $12,235.00. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I remember the $12,235.00 item.

Q. And that is a check which is No. 122, Government's Exhibit, is it not?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, when you inquired about that check, was some explanation afforded you?

3660 A. The explanation is on the exhibit, Mr. Kirby.

Q. And what is that?

A. Purchases, warehouse shipment?

Q. And then there is a note?

A. Journal entry No. 104.

Q. Does that refer to a journal entry of yours, I mean?

A. That is a journal entry that I prepared.

Q. That you instructed them to prepare?

A. That I prepared.

Q. Where it says, "Purchases, warehouse shipments," what do you mean by that?

A. Of course, the warehouse shipment was a shipment either direct to a warehouse or via a warehouse.

Q. And you instructed that a journal entry be made to post that $12,235.00 as a purchase?

A. That's right.

Q. Had that purchase been recorded before that?

A. It was not recorded on the books until we made the entry.

Q. When would that have been?

A. That would have been in the second—in the July to October audit, in the second period, which would have been around November, the end of November or beginning of December.

3661 Q. And so it was posted as a theretofore unrecorded purchase on the books, is that right?

A. It was recorded in the November purchases book, General Confections, but we had given instructions as a journal entry to put that on the books as an August item.

Q. How can you tell that?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Meyer, are you testifying from something now which you have not shown the Government?

By the Witness: No. This was my actual—this is actually—

By Mr. Lockley: Do you know what is on that paper without referring to these (indicating)?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: I think, counsel, that—

By the Witness: That was my own explanation of how I traced some of these things.

By Mr. Kirby: (Continuing) —handle his own proof. If the Court please—

By Mr. Lockley: How was it prepared?

By the Witness: By examination of the work papers about a year ago.

3662 By Mr. Lockley: Then you are not testifying from the work sheets. You are testifying from this.

By the Witness: I look this up on the work papers when I have the sheet.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, can you tell us from the exhibit you have before you that it was charged to purchases?

A. The journal entry was made setting up the purchase when we made the journal entry but it actually should have been put on the General Confections books in August. I think your cash shows—

Q. Well—

A. That it was paid later but it actually was purchased at an early date, possibly, or your cash authorization shows October, as I understand it.

Q. Now I will show you what the Government said that $12,235.00 really related to. I show you an Exhibit 121-D and 121-E and you notice those are invoices from Shotwell?

A. That is right.

Q. And I show you an exhibit which is marked 122-A which Miss Feldman testified was a recap sheet. Now, 3663 do you notice that the first item on that recap sheet is the same as that first invoice?

A. It is the same, but I think the amounts differ.

Q. They do, but the shipment is the same, isn't it, the weight?

A. The weight is the same. It doesn't say anything about 125 bales on this sheet.

Q. Well, how about the next item then which is on that little recap sheet? Is that the same as the next invoice?

A. The poundage is the same. It does not give anything about the number of cases or anything, as far as I can see.

Q. The poundage is the same on both items?

A. That is right.

Q. Miss Feldman testified—let me ask you were those invoices posted directly to the books of General Confections?

A. I would have to check my records, but I assume that they are posted directly to the books as a purchase from Shotwell.

Q. Well, there is a posting stamp on there, isn't there, showing a charge to purchases?

A. It gives a page "Entered page 62, line 35."

3664 Q. And is there any reference to any journal entry on that?

A. None on these sheets.

Q. So those two were not posted as a result of a journal entry, were they?

A. So far as I know they would not be posted to a journal entry.

Q. Now the testimony of the witness Feldman was that $12,235.00 check was paid in connection with this recap sheet 122-A, on these two invoices which are marked 121-D and E, but so far as the records that you have are concerned, that was a posting of a purchase that—

A. Separate and apart.

Q. Separate and apart from this.

A. From what you have.

Q. Is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. In other words, the entry that was made at the time by you with respect to this check of $12,235.00 is different from the explanation represented by this group of exhibits put in by Miss Feldman, is that right?

A. That is right.

3665 Q. As a matter of fact, do you notice—what is the total on her recap sheet?

A. $13,078.00.
Q. $13,078.00?
A. Right.
Q. Now this check for $12,235.00, how does she get to that? Can you tell from that?
A. Yes. She has less $843.00 and she brings down the figure of $12,235.00 on her sheet.
Q. The recap sheet doesn't agree with the check at all, does it?
A. The typewritten—
By Mr. Lockley: It is a leading question, Mr. Kirby.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Well, does the recap sheet agree with the check?
A. The typewritten figures do not agree with the check but the penciled figures are in agreement with the check.
Q. After she struck $843.00?
A. That is right.
3666 Q. Is there any apparent reason for striking the $843.00 that you can see?
A. I don't know.
Q. She testified she didn't know either, but that is a different transaction than the one you have on your sheet, isn't it?
A. According to my journal entries it is a different transaction from this one.
Q. And it was treated differently at that time?
A. That is right.
Q. This is another of those checks endorsed by Urban?
A. That is right.
Q. Would it be true that these invoices that I just asked you about as having been posted to the purchases book, that the effect of your journal entry, if the transactions are the same, would be to charge twice for the same shipment or is that a nonsensical question?
Sometimes I ask them, Mr. Lockley.
A. It would be a duplication if the sheet there applied to the amount in question and then I put on $12,235.00 again.
Q. Yes. I am just talking about the physical goods.
3667 If the physical goods were already charged as having been already received as against these two invoices.
A. Right.

Q. You said it charged the physical goods, the total of $12,235.00 in again?

A. That would be the duplication, if only one shipment was received.

Q. So the only explanation you can give here that the check for $12,235.00 didn't apply to this at all on this purchase, I mean, your journal entry—

A. It would have been in error then, if that is the case.

Q. —it would have been in error, but what you did was base it upon what they told you at the time?

A. That is right.

Q. When they told you how to post this check for $12,235.00 did Miss Feldman come around and hand you a slip like that and subtract $834.00 and tell you to charge it?

By the Court: "A slip like that" doesn't mean anything in the record, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. A slip like this, 122-A, and tell you to charge it?

3668 A. I never saw this exhibit. I saw only cash authorizations as testified in my audit—in my testimony, I mean.

Q. In connection with that letter confirming the accounts receivable of Shotwell and the accounts payable of Shotwell, Mr. Lockley made quite a thing of the fact that it all balanced out if you assumed that the overages had all been paid by December 20th. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I remember.

Q. Well, if there had been no payments of overages at all at any time, you would get exactly the same results, wouldn't you?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

By the Court: Will your recross be just a question or two, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I have noted that the witness has been examining certain documents in his possession and during the period of his testimony and the government has not had an opportunity to look at those. If you desire to take a recess now, I would 3669 like to examine them.

By the Court: You have a right to look at it, if he has been using it.

By the Witness: I referred only—

By Mr. Kirby: I think he referred to—let us see what he was talking about. He referred to—which one were you looking at? Was it this one?

By The Witness: Where the $12,235.00 goes into—where I made an examination. If you will show it to me, I will explain it. It was part of another item. This was what I referred to (Indicating).

By Mr. Kirby: Will you give that sheet to Mr. Lockley, please?

By Mr. Lockley: No. He has been referring to this throughout the testimony. I think we are entitled to all of it.

By the Court: I think Mr. Lockley has a right to see what he used in giving his testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: We certainly don't want him to have all the sheets.

By the Court: I am sorry.

3670 By Mr. O'Brien: The man has referred to only one sheet and that was the time that was called to your Honor's attention.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, he said he was referring to this document during the time he gave his testimony.

By Mr. McConnell: The witness is under oath and he said he only referred to one sheet.

By Mr. Lockley: Let Mr. Meyer testify, Mr. McConnell. I think he is in better position to tell than you.

By the Witness: May I look at the sheets. I will tell you exactly which ones.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Meyer, tell us how many sheets you referred to and will you tell me when it was prepared?

A. I referred to the first sheet.

Q. When was it prepared?

A. I will tell you in just a moment. Let me look at the sheets, please. I referred to sheets 3 and 4.

3671 By the Court: He asked you when it was prepared.

By the Witness:

A. And it was prepared March 27th, 1953.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And who helped you?

A. I prepared it alone.

Q. Without the assistance of the defendants' accountants?

A. Without the assistance of anybody.

Q. Did you use any documents other than those that have been introduced in evidence here?

A. I only used these sheets that have been introduced in evidence.

Q. Well, with respect to the journal entry which you referred to will you show me on Exhibit 178, I believe—no. Show me Exhibit 177-B if there was anything said about a journal entry for that $12,235.00 and how you are able to tell me what that journal entry is from an examination of your sheet?

A. Because I checked that journal entry into my journal entry that I had.

Q. In other words, you are not testifying from examination of Exhibit 177-B but you are testifying from 3672 some other books and records that are not in evidence, is that so?

A. I testified in connection with the journal entries.

3673 Q. Where did you get the journal entries?

A. From the actual journal entries made back in 1947, 1948.

Q. That is not in evidence, is it?

A. That is not in evidence.

Q. You are testifying from this document which you prepared back in March of this year, isn't that so?

A. Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: But only page 3 and 4.

By the Witness: But only pages 3 and 4.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Where are the journal entries?

A. They are in my work papers.

Q. Where are your working papers?

A. In the office of the defense counsellors.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lockley, that journal entry 104 is referred to on Exhibit 177-B.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, may we take our recess at this time.

By the Court: Yes. We will take our recess.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain
3674 standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room?

This honorable court will recess for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Meyer, in connection with these two sheets, No. 5 and 6 of the memoranda you had before you while you were testifying, did you state that you prepared those yourself?

A. That is right.

Q. And when was that?

A. March 27, 1953.

Q. Did you type them yourself?

A. That is right.

Q. Where was that?

By Mr. O'Brien: What difference does it make?

By Mr. Lockley: It makes a lot of difference to me.

By the Court: Where did he type them?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, where did he type them.

By the Court: All right.

3675 By the Witness: In the office of Lynch & Company, the defendants' accountants.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you say you worked alone on them?

A. I worked alone on it.

Q. Who is John A. Lynch & Company?

A. The accountants for the defense.

Q. Mr. Lynch is over there at the counsel table?

A. That is right.

Q. This is his stationery, is it, bearing his name on the bottom?

A. That is right.

Q. And you didn't consult with them at the time you prepared it?

A. I prepared this from my working papers.

Q. From your working papers?

A. From my work papers and from all the audit work papers.

Q. Well, are all of the work papers that you referred to the work papers which are now in evidence?

A. No, they are not. The journal entry that I copied is not in evidence.

Q. Where is the journal entry?

A. With all the other papers in the office of 3676 Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. O'Brien has the original journal entry?

A. The entries.

Q. Which you prepared?

A. All of our working papers were subpoenaed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you use any portion of those in the preparation of this memoranda?

A. I used the cash sheets and also examination of certain purchase records we had.

Q. Which purchase records?

A. Of the audit record that were subpoenaed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Are those purchase records in evidence?

A. Those purchase records are not in evidence.

Q. And the journal entries, are they in evidence?

A. The journal entries are not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. The one book, I am certain, in here is the journal entry book of General Confections because I looked at it this morning. That isn't the same thing as his work papers but the General Confections book of journal entries that they did make is here.

3677 By the Witness: If they made that entry, you would be able to find it in the General Confections journal entry, if you can refer to it, and possibly we can locate that same entry in the General Confections journal entry book.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, is it common practice for an accountant's journal entries to remain on its work papers without recording them on the books?

A. It is common practice to place our journal entries on our working papers and then have a typed copy of the journal entries given to the accountant and they make the journal entries in accordance with our audit.

Q. And that type of journal entry book is a part of the books of account, isn't that so?

A. Those typed journal entries are usually used as a means of placing those journal entries in the books.

In other words, they may be copied in. If they were clipped into the book, then they would become part of the journal entry book in most cases.

Q. Do you know what happened in this case?

A. I don't know what happened in this case. I
3678 know the journal entries were given to the General Confections for insertion in the original book of entry—the journal book of entry, rather, and they were supposed to be placed on the books of General Confections.

Q. What other records do you have that would throw any light on the General Confections book besides cash purchase work sheets you referred to and the journal entry work sheets?

A. In connection with that, all the rest of the schedules are right here.

Q. What do you have under your arm in that envelope?

A. This is my correspondence and my subpoena.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I think the Government is entitled to see the work papers which were prepared by this accountant for the General Confections. They are work papers of the accountant and they belong either to him or to the General Confections Corporation and I think the Government is entitled to examine them. They are now in the possession of the defendants.

3679 By the Court: When you say the entries, do you mean the journal entries?

By Mr. Lockley: Whatever underlying data there is that were used in the preparation of this memoranda from which he testified and he has testified that the journal entries, the work papers relating to journal entries and the work papers relating to purchases were used in preparing these memoranda and they are not now in evidence.

By the Court: Well, what have counsel to say about it?

By Mr. McConnell: I understand he prepared this from the journal which is in evidence and it was introduced as a Government's Exhibit.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you testify that you prepared it from the journal or from the work sheets?

A. I prepared that from the purchase work sheets and from the journal entry work sheet.

Q. From the work sheets?

A. The purchase work sheets and the journal entry work sheet in Mr. Lynch's office.

Q. Are those records there now in possession of 3680 either Mr. Lynch or Mr. O'Brien? Is that so?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I ask that the Government be permitted to examine those papers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we can discuss that as the whole discussion should have been had, if the Court please, outside the presence of the jury.

By the Court: Well, that means you will have to hold Mr. Meyer here, I assume.

By Mr. Lockley: If it please your Honor—

By the Court: Do you mean we take a recess now?

By Mr. O'Brien: Whatever is agreeable to the Court.

By the Court: Have you any further questions of Mr. Meyer outside the matter you have now referred to?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I don't know what those work sheets show so I am at a loss to know whether I will have any further examination of Mr. Meyer. I would like to have him stay within the jurisdiction of this 3681 court so that he might be available for further cross examination after we have had an opportunity to examine those work papers and I would suggest in the meantime, if the defense desires to do so, they may call their next witness and we can take care of this after the session this evening.

By Mr. McConnell: I think that would be better and then we could move along with the case rather than interrupt for this. I think it is an excellent suggestion.

By The Court: We will defer further examination of Mr. Meyer until tomorrow morning and then I will give counsel an opportunity to be heard on this matter.

By Mr. McConnell: Can we have some expression whether he is through with this witness otherwise? Is he through with him except for this documentary matter?

By Mr. Lockley: I have other matters I would like to take up with him, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: Why doesn't he go ahead and proceed with that and then we can move ahead with the case?

3682 By Mr. Lockley: It is a little difficult for me to see how far I want to go until I see what those work sheets pertain to.

By the Court: Very well. You will be at recess now, Mr. Meyer, until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Witness withdrawn.)

DAVID DRUCKERMAN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination By Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. David Druckerman.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Druckerman?
A. 451 Wrightwood Avenue.
Q. In Chicago, Illinois?
A. That is right.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a sugar broker.
Q. How long have you been in that business?
A. Oh, roughly twenty years.
Q. In Chicago?
3683 A. In Chicago.
Q. And your business covers what territory, generally?
A. Principally Chicago.
Q. Did you know a David Lubben?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you do business with him in 1944 and 1945 and 1946?
A. I believe I did.
Q. You did?
A. I did.
Q. Do you know The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you do any business with them at any time?
A. I did business with them once, I believe.
By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Druckerman.
By the Witness: I did business with them once.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. And when was the once?
A. I do not remember when it was. See, 1945, 1946.

I don't remember, but I did business with him, one transaction.

3684 Q. Was that a transaction involving 535,000 pounds of turbinato sugar?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. What is turbinato sugar?

A. An unrefined, not highly polished, not highly refined.

Q. A poorer grade of sugar?

A. That is right, a poorer grade.

Q. Lumpy?

A. No, not necessarily lumpy, but it is yellow instead of white.

Q. That is the only time you ever sold any sugar to Shotwell at all, was it?

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. You had sold sugar to Lubben before that?

A. I don't recall. I might have.

Q. What?

A. I might have. I don't remember.

Q. Well, you did business with Lubben?

A. I did business with Lubben.

Q. Yes. Now did Lubben introduce the Shotwell people to you?

A. I don't remember whether it was Lubben or somebody else. I don't recall exactly. It could have been 3685 Lubben or it could have been somebody else.

Q. What is your best present memory?

A. I wouldn't know. It could have been Lubben. It could have been somebody else. I could have called on him myself.

Q. Did you call on him yourself?

A. Yes, I did call a number of times myself.

Q. You mean some years ago?

A. Some years ago and lately.

Q. Since, after the war?

A. After the war and before the war.

Q. This turbinato sugar deal for 535,000 odd pounds, describe what that deal was, Mr. Druckerman. Describe it.

A. I don't understand what you mean, describe it.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I think that is too general a question.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, all right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In those days was sugar under rationing points?

A. That is correct.

3686 Q. When you shipped this sugar to Shotwell, did you get the rationing points in advance?

A. I did not get them at once but I got them later on.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, may we have a foundation as to place and time?

By the Court: I think it should be made somewhat more definite than the record now reflects.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I will see if I can locate the specific invoices, Judge. We moved into this a little faster than I thought we were going to so I have to waste a little of your time.

Do you have the Druckerman invoices that were in the fall of 1946? Are the general books of account of Shotwell down here, Mr. Krane?

By Mr. Krane: Yes, they are on the fourth floor, whatever Mrs. Morrill brought.

By Mr. Kirby: The purchase book, that would show the purchase of this.

By Mr. Krane: From Shotwell.

3687 By Mr. Kirby: Shotwell bought it from Druckerman.

By Mr. Krane: I don't know if they are here.

By Mr. Kirby: Mrs. Morrill—everybody keeps pointing at me and saying they gave me the papers and I don't doubt that they did, but I don't seem to be able to find them.

Well, that is the trouble over here. This is particularly embarrassing, your Honor, because my mother is in the audience and she will bawl me out good tonight.

Would you mark these Exhibits 61, 62 and 63 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 61, 62 and 63 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you, Mr. Druckerman, Defendants' Exhibits 61, 62 and 63 and ask you if those are the invoices of some turbinato sugar to Shotwell?

A. Yes.

3688 By Mr. Kirby: I ask that they be admitted in evidence.

By the Court: Is there any objection? The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 61, 62 and 63.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Druckerman, the first exhibit is for 125,000 pounds of sugar and the second is 310,000 and the third is 100,000. That gives us 535,000 pounds, is that right?

A. I believe so.

Q. And I notice that the invoices are dated the 17th of December and the 18th of December, 1946. Does that help you remember when you invoiced those shipments?

A. They must have been invoiced on the 17th and 18th of the month.

Q. Now, Mr. Druckerman, do you know when you shipped that sugar?

A. I have no exact records of the same but it was shipped before that.

Q. It was shipped before it was invoiced?

3689 A. That is right.

Q. And when did you get the ration stamps, when it was shipped or when it was invoiced?

A. When it was invoiced, about the 15th of December, the 16th or 17th or 18th.

Q. So you had shipped the 535,000 pounds before you got your sugar rationing stamps. Do you recall, Mr. Druckerman, that you were paid for that in advance of the date of the invoice?

A. Advance money, not all of it. Advance on some money.

Q. They sent you—Shotwell, that is, sent you checks?

A. That is right.

Q. Before the invoices came to them?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that right?

A. That is right.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Druckerman.

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, you were paid for that sugar, were you?

A. Yes, I was paid for the sugar.

Q. The invoiced amount?

3690 A. The invoiced amount, yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other condition or agreement in connection with that sugar besides merely the payment of the invoice amount?

A. Shotwell sold me some candy which I bought and paid them for it.

By the Court: Shotwell sold you some candy?

By the Witness: Yes, sir, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. How much, do you know?

A. I believe 5,000 cases or whatever it was. There is a record of same. There was invoices and so forth.

Q. Now, how many bags of sugar are involved in that shipment of 535,000 pounds?

A. 535,000 pounds—5,350 bags, a bag having a hundred pounds.

Q. So you shipped them 5,350 bags of sugar and they shipped you 5,000 cases of candy?

A. I believe that to be correct.

Q. You sold them at ceiling?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they sold you at ceiling?

3691 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is this what was called in those days a trade deal?

A. That is right.

Q. And what you received what was called Coronet mix, is that it?

A. Many of the candy—I believe that is correct.

Q. Do you know or don't you know that at the same time Coronet mix was sent to Lubben? Do you know?

A. No, sir, I do not know.

Q. You didn't participate personally—

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. —in that deal?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: In what deal?

By Mr. Kirby: The Lubben side of the deal.

By Mr. Lockley: There has been no testimony, your Honor, that there was any such deal.

By the Court: I don't understand that there was any such testimony.

By Mr. Kirby: No. That is what I thought he just said he didn't participate in.

By the Court: The mere fact that he said he did 3692 not participate in it doesn't mean there was one.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, we will cover that one.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, to whom did you sell that Coronet mix?

A. I do not remember to whom. It was to several people.

By the Court: I don't hear Mr. Druckerman. Will you speak a little more slowly?

By the Witness:

A. I do not remember to whom I sold. There was quite a number of people.

By the Court: You say you do not remember?

By the Witness: I don't remember to whom I sold the candy.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Was one of the persons to whom you sold candy Confection Cabinet Company?

A. I believe so.

Q. Was another one to whom you sold this candy Lubben?

A. No, sir.

3693 Q. Do you know anybody else to whom you sold this candy besides Confection Cabinet?

A. I do not remember. I don't remember.

By Mr. Kirby: I think that is all.

I also would like to offer as exhibits the receiving tickets of Shotwell which are attached respectively to Exhibits 61, 62 and 63 and have been marked respectively in the alphabetical series. Is there any objection to that?

By Mr. Lockley: No objection, your Honor.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 61-A through 61-I; 62-A through 62-M; and 63-A.)

3694 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Druckerman, I understand you sold sugar to Shotwell Manufacturing Company and they paid you no premium?

A. No, sir.
Q. And they sold you candy?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you paid no premium?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did Mr. Lubben have anything whatsoever to do with that transaction?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did Mr. Lubben give you any money or any raw materials or anything else of value so that you would sell candy to Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, sir.
Q. Or sugar to Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. Positively not.
Q. Did Lubben get any of that candy?
A. No, sir. Lubben did not get that candy.
Q. Did you get a penny from anybody for that sugar other than what you got from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, sir.
3695 Q. All you got from Shotwell is what is shown on the invoices?
A. 5,000 cases of candy.
Q. 5,000 cases of candy and for the sugar for which you paid?
A. That is right.
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move to strike his testimony. I see that it has no relevancy to the issues in this case.
By the Court: It doesn't have any relevancy. Possibly counsel intends to connect it up. Standing alone it has no relevancy.
By Mr. Kirby: It will be connected up, your Honor.
By Mr. Kirby: Let me ask this question:

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Druckerman, we have had a number of exhibits here which related to Mr. Lubben's companies. They show a substantial amount of cash to a fellow by the name of Druckerman.
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is going beyond the scope of the direct examination. He is 3696 going into an entirely new matter.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. My question is, over the years you have had quite a few cash dealings with Lubben, in 1945 and 1946?

A. I can't hear you very well.

Q. You have had quite a few cash dealings here between 1945 and 1946, you and Lubben?

A. A lot of transactions.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all, Mr. Druckerman.

By the Court: I will take it under advisement and if it isn't connected up, I will strike the testimony because as yet, the relevancy doesn't appear.

(Witness excused.)

BERNARD BERCU, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

3697 Q. What is your name?

A. Bernard Bercu.

Q. And your profession?

A. Certified public accountant for the State of New York.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 25 West 81st Street, New York City.

By the Court: Will you raise your voice a little bit, Mr. Bercu.

By the Witness: Surely.

By the Court: Face the jury more than me.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is the name of your company?

A. Bernard Bercu & Company.

Q. And has that been—

By the Court: I can't hear you, Mr. Bercu. State it again.

By the Witness: Bernard Bercu & Company.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And did you and your company do the auditing for Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both the proprietorship and the partnership?

3698 A. The proprietorship up to the time that it became a partnership and the partnership from June 1, 1945 to January 31, 1946, as I recall the dates.

Q. Did you also do some auditing for General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was for a limited period of time?

A. That was for a period from March through June, 1946.

Q. Do you recall during the proprietorship era that there were some overage transactions in which Eatsum Food—which Eatsum Food Products had?

A. Yes, sir.

3699 Q. Did you instruct and direct Mr. Lubben and Miss Feldman as to the system to be employed in the recording of those transactions?

A. The system to be employed was discussed by the three of us it was agreed to use a certain method.

Q. That is what I wanted to get at, Mr. Bercu. Just tell the jury briefly what the method was.

A. When Mr. Lubben began business as a sole proprietorship in April, 1944, the method he used to carry on his purchases was that of accepting invoices from the vendors, people from whom he bought goods, at whatever prices they listed, and adding to the invoice the amount of overage which he had agreed to pay them, and then entering the total amount of the bill, the gross amount, in his purchase book.

When I say Mr. Lubben, of course, the bookkeeper would do that for him.

The payments would then consist of the amounts, one check drawn to the order of the company for the amount of the invoice, and a second check drawn to the order of cash, cashed by Mr. Lubben, but charged to the accounts payable account of the concern to whom he 3700 made the overage payments, according to the record.

Q. Will you pardon me at that point, Mr. Bercu. Was that simultaneous checks?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. What was stated at the time as to whether they would be simultaneous or not?

By the Witness: Will you please repeat that?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. The transactions in many instances—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am just asking about the system now, not what was done to comply with it. What was it that was agreed upon?

By Mr. Lockley: Is this the conversation, as I understand it, in April of 1944?

By the Witness: Early in 1944.

By the Witness:

A. The system, of course, was to pay the total amount which Mr. Lubben had agreed to pay for the merchandise. The actual carrying out of the system depended upon circumstances. In the one instance—

3701 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am not asking, if you please, at this point, Mr. Bercu, about how it was carried out. I am merely trying to determine the system as it was then stated.

A. If you please, I am trying to point out that the system agreed upon naturally would depend upon the circumstances in the individual cases.

If I may answer your question as to the theory, it was understood that the gross amount would be entered in the purchase book, that the total amount of the invoices would be paid to the vendors in this dual method, by a check to the vendor for the amount billed by the vendor and cash for the difference.

Q. That would be by means of a cash check?

A. Of a cash check. If I understood your question correctly as to system, obviously it was impossible to carry on that business as Mr. Lubben carried it on and pay cash invoice separately because in some instances he would receive scores of invoices for drop shipments at one time, where the vendor had actually shipped the goods for him. Mr. Lubben's bookkeeper would bill 3702 the individual customers of the Eatsum Food Products for those goods and then would enter the purchase bills from the vendor either individually or in total and then pay them in lump—in groups, rather than individually.

Q. Well, I must insist, I haven't interrupted you because I don't want to interfere too much—but is it not true that you are now talking about practice?

A. It is the practice with regard to the system installed.

Q. I am only trying to understand what the system was. Let me ask you—you gave your deposition in this case, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the deposition you said that the checks would be drawn simultaneously. Do you recall that?

A. No, sir.

3703 Q. It was at page 282—

By Mr. Lockley: Is counsel now trying to impeach his own witness?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I am not.

By the Court: I don't suppose you can examine a witness by referring to testimony that he gave in a deposition unless you claim surprise or want to impeach your own witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the witness now says that that was not the system, I certainly do claim surprise, because I have his written deposition, that is on file in the office of the clerk right here, which contains his precise answer as to the system. And that is all I am asking him about.

By the Court: Well, if you want to claim surprise and want the right to cross examine your own witness—is that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: On that point I should like to, Judge.

By the Court: Well, what have you to say about it, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't know that it is particularly important, your Honor. If Mr. O'Brien wants to 3704 cross examine him on that point I won't object.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. On your deposition, Mr. Bercu, at page 282, do you recall making this answer as to the question:

"There were purchases made by Lubben regularly in dual form. He would receive an invoice at a certain price—whether that was the ceiling price, I did not know, I know that he was billed at a certain price. Lubben would add to that billed price an amount—when I say Mr. Lubben, Mr. Lubben or his office—that is, someone in his office staff would add to that invoice an additional amount. The invoice would then be entered as a total amount, as adjusted. It would be entered in accounts payable. One check would be drawn to the order of the vendor for the amount of the invoice and posted to the debit of the accounts payable, another check would be drawn simultaneously to cash for the balance of this invoice and it would also be posted to accounts payable."

3705 Do you remember answering that?

A. I do. And as to many of the transactions, that was the system and the method. As to some accounts, however, that were on a continuous basis, that was wholly impractical.

Q. Well, you will appreciate, I am sure, Mr. Bereu, that I haven't yet come to the matter of practice and, as I indicated two or three times, I was talking merely of the theory which you discussed as you sat around the table at the inception, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, in actual practice, and still speaking of the proprietorship—

By the way—withdraw that—did you employ or seek to employ the same system during the partnership?

A. I tried to employ that same system.

Q. All right. And in the case of the proprietorship did you, as the accountant, give any supervision to the work to see whether the system was carried out?

By the Court: In the proprietorship?

By Mr. O'Brien: In the proprietorship.

By the Witness:

3706 A. Only in very general terms. I relied on my associates to check the details.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When I say "you" I mean you or your firm.

A. Oh, yes, the firm.

Q. You are really the C.P.A. and proprietor of that firm, are you not?

A. I had partners at that time.

Q. You had a partner, Mr. Weinert?

A. Right.

Q. And you had others on the staff and in the field?

A. Other partners and staff members.

Q. Yes, sir. And in some way or other, through your company, is it true that you endeavored to see that the system so agreed upon was pursued?

A. I personally was not so much interested in the—

Q. It is not a question of the degree of your interest, but did you or your firm, follow the matter enough to see to what extent the system was pursued?

A. So far as I know at the present time, in the proprietorship, that system was maintained right to the end of the proprietorship, the theory was maintained.

3707 Q. I didn't ask you the outcome of your investigation, I merely want to learn whether you or your firm took steps to see to what extent the system was complied with.

A. I did, yes.

Q. All right. And did you do the same in your endeaver to follow the system through the partnership?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did your firm?

A. In general, yes.

Q. And in the proprietorship did you follow the matter, or did your partner or associates follow it?

A. In the proprietorship I spent a great deal of time personally in following through to see that the purchases were fully recorded, either on the books or in our work sheets, every month.

Q. And by the full recordation of the purchases do you include a proper recordation of the payment for the acquisitions?

A. No.

Q. Then your inquiry in the matter did not carry you into the records on which the payments were to 3708 be recorded?

A. My personal inquiry did not. I am not speaking of my own personal work in the matter.

Q. To what extent then, if at all, are you able to tell us how closely the keeping of the records at the proprietorship conformed to the system which you have described?

A. Only from the monthly profit and loss statements which we prepared.

Q. You mean from the statements themselves?

A. From the statements themselves and the comparison of physical inventories taken at the end of every month with the book inventories of purchases—of opening inventory, plus purchases, less sales of that month.

Q. Is it true, Mr. Bercu, that your primary interest was in the inventories and in the inventory controls?

A. That is true.

Q. Now, what was the system which you set up to effect a merchandise control or an inventory control, whichever is the proper term?

A. The proprietorship had a stock record, looseleaf stock record, what the accountants call a perpetual 3709 inventory, listing the items purchased, and then from monthly analysis sheets deducting the sales of those purchased items, leaving a book balance of individual items to be accounted for.

The physical inventory was supposed to be in agreement with that book balance. If there were discrepancies I made it my personal duty to trace those discrepancies with Mr. Lubben every month.

Q. Yes, sir. Well, now, taking that, Mr. Bercu, during the course of your own personal attention to this phase of the auditing, you may state whether there were times at which you found such discrepancies in any substantial way?

A. Yes; every month I found very substantial discrepancies.

Q. Could you tell us briefly the nature of them, the problem which you encountered; not at length, but just briefly?

A. I would—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I think we ought to have a foundation as to which particular period of time, whether he is talking about '44 or '45, and some identification of the circumstances, or the time of 3710 each circumstance you refer to.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would be glad to do that, but this is just a preliminary question. When he tells me what they are, some of them I might be interested in, and we will put them in the period. I can ask now, if you prefer.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Whether you found them during the year 1945?

A. The sole proprietorship ended, technically, as of May 31, 1945. Actually, as I recall, the partnership control began sometime before May 31. But technically the sole proprietorship ended May 31. Up to that time we maintained this perpetual stock record and very generally—of course, I have no—I don't have the records before me, and these things occurred eight and nine years ago—

Q. I am speaking only in general.

A. My recollection is that I would find that a fairly substantial item was sold, an invoice was recorded for the sale of an item, and there was no purchase recorded. I would sit down with Mr. Lubben and go over each of these items and ask him, "Where did this come from?

3711 You billed it. Obviously you bought it."

He would explain that he had bought one item from one company, and had them ship that item to a second party, who, in turn, gave him other goods that he had sold to third parties.

In other words, I would find a purchase, or a record of a purchase of an item with no matching sale and I would find a sale with no matching purchase.

He was able, in practically all instances, to explain these discrepancies by digging into his memory of transactions, of these trade transactions, where he had had three-way swaps.

3712 Q. And where you found trade transactions of that sort, Mr. Bercu, after you had checked it out in your discussions, did you find that they were trades at ceilings?

A. I knew nothing at all about the question of ceilings. As an accountant—

Q. I see. But would you describe a little further what you mean by a trade?

A. Mr. Lubben would buy one type of goods from one manufacturer. It might have been—I am trying to think after eight or nine years, the individual items—

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I feel that I must object unless Mr. Bercu can relate in some specific transaction.

By the Court: Well, I am not sure whether these are just general questions—and you will come to something more specific, is that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, of course, Judge.

By the Court: Well, generally, he may state what a trade transaction was, as he understood it.

By the Witness:

3713 A. A trade transaction, as carried on by Mr. Lubben and quite a number of other traders in those days, consisted of buying one lot of one type of goods from one concern, having that concern ship that lot of goods to a second concern, who, in turn, would ship either to Mr. Lubben, or Mr. Lubben's account, a third type—a second type of goods.

Mr. Lubben would have a record of having made a payment to the first party for goods, for which he didn't make any sale. On the other hand, he would have a record of a sale, of a specific item, for which there was no purchase.

I could match those items only by conferring with Mr. Lubben as to what had actually occurred. And then I would learn about the intermediate transactions which were not recorded in any way.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Bercu, until you got that reconciliation satisfactorily done, the effect, as far as the books are concerned, is that they would be out of balance, would they not?

A. Not at all.

Q. What would be the effect, until you ascer-

3714 tained the facts?

A. As far as the books are concerned, if we didn't attempt to reconcile those physical inventories, there would be a purchase of a certain amount in dollars and there would be a sale of a certain amount in dollars. The analysis of the merchandise transactions was wholly outside of the books of accounts.

Q. I see. And when you got the items reconciled would that be reflected by any sort of posting to the books?

A. So far as I can recall, we tried to adjust those transactions.

Q. I see. Now, during the partnership was there a cash box maintained that came to your attention—I mean the proprietorship?

A. So far as I can recall, th re was no cash box of the kind that became rather notor ous under the partnership, until the new partners stepped in, some time in April of 1945. Prior to that time, to the best of my knowledge, there was no cash box.

Q. Well, that is your best recollection on time, Mr. Bercu?

A. That is my recollection now.

3715 Q. At any rate, you, as an auditor, did you have anything to do with the auditing of such a box?

A. I never audited any cash box.

3716 Q. Right.

A. At any time in the—in my connection with any of Lubben's enterprises.

Q. Are you able then to tell us whether the profit, if any, from such a cash box, was carried into the books of the company in any way?

A. Not as to the cash box. What I would get would be a summary from Mr. Lubben of cash transactions which he handled and, to the best of my recollection, we tried to—or we did enter in summary the net effect of those cash transactions.

Q. And where would you make those entries?

A. On the books of the proprietorship.

Q. And what book?

A. Journal entries.

Q. Journal entries. And in case of any profit from the transaction—do you remember the handling of any profit from those transactions?

A. I am referring to profits or losses. The net effect of the transactions.

Q. Well, to what would you charge them, what account?

A. Without seeing the records, if—I am trying to think back to some of those entries.

3717 Q. Well, do you presently remember what account?

A. My rather vague recollection is that profits were charged to—not profits so much as pending items were charged to David Lubben's personal account, until they could be cleared up.

Q. Mr. Bercu, I have a group of papers which I would like to exhibit to you, and in the interest of time have the Reporter afterwards mark. The first is a longhand sheet with a date—December, 1945—at the top.

Can you tell me, if you know, in whose handwriting that appears?

A. So far as I can judge now, this is in my handwriting.

Q. And a second such sheet, under the same heading December, 1945, is that in your handwriting, too?

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien, I didn't get the date.

By Mr. O'Brien: December, '45, is the heading.

By Mr. Lockley: Are they both December, '45?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, they are continuous sheets.

3718 By the Witness:

A. That is apparently in my handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I show you a sheet already marked Defendants' Exhibit 11 for identification and ask you to state if it bears your genuine signature and handwriting?

A. This was a balance sheet of Eatsum Food Products Company on our firm letterhead and signed by me as CPA, and also signed by Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien, might you ask him what the date is of that balance sheet, Exhibit 11?

By Mr. O'Brien: I have already identified it for you as Defendants' Exhibit 11 for identification.

By the Witness: April 30, 1945.

By Mr. O'Brien: But I am glad to give it to you. Yes, that is right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And I show you a typewritten sheet, with longhand figures, and ask you to state—indeed, there are three of them here. The one in your hand relates to December of 1944.

A. April 1 to December 31, 1945, Eatsum Food

3719 Products Company.

Q. Yes, sir.

By the Court: I am afraid that when you—I know that you have got to stand near the witness, but I am afraid the jury don't get much of the testimony, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I appreciate it, your Honor, but it is a mere matter of identification. I will go into it later. I don't mean to keep it from them.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were these prepared by your firm, Mr. Bercu?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the same true of the two sheets, headed Eatsum Food Products, 12-31-44, which I next hand you?

A. Yes, sir, these were prepared by my office. They are photostats of work sheets from our office. Those are '44, also.

3720 Q. Right. Now here is one, "Moneys disbursed by D. Lubben, cash disbursements, May, 1945," consisting of two sheets. Will you examine that and tell me if you have seen that before, or the original.

A. These sheets apparently are in my handwriting.

Q. And they are part of your work sheets in the matter of Eatsum Food Products Company for the period indicated?

A. I should judge so, although it is—

Q. And I show you four white sheets headed "Eatsum Food Products," the first, work sheet of 6-30-45, the next one of the same date, and the next a work sheet of journal adjustments of 6-30-45, and the final white sheet of this group headed "November, 1945 receipts", and ask you to state if they are in your handwriting.

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Pardon me. You appreciate, of course, that some of these are work sheets of the sole proprietorship and some of the partnership.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes, of course.

By the Court: I think it is adjournment time, 3721 counsel.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

By the Court: We will be in recess until toomrrow morning at ten o'clock.

I will hear counsel immediately after adjournment, regarding the question of the memorandum, if that is convenient to counsel.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark these Defendants' Exhibits 64-A to 64-H, inclusive, for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 64-A to 64-H, inclusive, for identification.)

(And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein outside the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By the Court: I will hear you now, Mr. O'Brien, on your objections to the use of the memorandum by 3722 Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't quite clear to me, Judge, and I didn't want to get into it even as much as was done before the jury, for obvious reasons. So I didn't inquire, but my present impression is that the witness—who, incidentally, was presented by and interrogated by Mr. Kirby—so that my recollections aren't as sharp as they otherwise would be, that the witness testified to various transactions, and he brought with him, as I understood it, the supporting papers on that, and on those items, down to the point at which he was discussing a journal entry of some $12,235.00, or whatever it was, and for the purpose he resorted to some sheets which he had with which to refresh his recollection. And it was then that Mr. Lockley inquired as to what those were. And at that recess those sheets to which the witness was thought to have referred were made available.

And then further questioning after the recess had to do with that journal entry.

Now, it is quite clear to me, in view of that, that there can't be the slightest objection on our part to bringing in the journal entry in question rather than that 3723 document.

And that much I think we can pass without further comment.

By the Court: When you use the term "journal entries", you Mr. Meyer's work sheets?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Of journal entries.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is a fair refinement of it, because there does seem to be, I now recall, the two things, his work sheet journal entries and the book journal entries. I have never seen the books, but I am told that that book is here. From what was said on the stand, however, it does not necessarily follow, because the witness didn't know whether their suggestions about journalizing those on the books were carried out or not.

3724 So that I do refer to his work sheet journal entry and that is what is included in my statement, that it surely would be proper to bring that. Now, where the doubt arises, I do not know what if anything else is involved.

By the Court: Well, I take it what is involved is the entire memorandum. He apparently utilized a memoranda to refresh his recollection about a portion of his testimony, at least. Now, then, Mr. Lockley then inquired when he made it whether or not anyone assisted him, what the underlying data may have been for the preparation of the memoranda and he answered those questions.

Now, then, Mr. Lockley takes the position, as I understand it, that he should not be confined to just a few lines of a page which the witness says he referred to but the memoranda as a complete document that the witness prepared at one time or at least this one document, and that he should have a right to examine the entire record that the witness—the entire memorandum that the witness had before him. Is that about it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, your Honor.

By the Court: I want to clarify my own thinking and explain to Mr. O'Brien what I understand your posi-

3725 tion to be.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, is that what we are talking about?

By Mr. Lockley: We are talking about—we are talking in part about this six page memorandum which the witness prepared. I think that since he has been testifying as to matters which are not on that memorandum, I have an opportunity or should have an opportunity to examine it for the purpose of impeachment to see whether or not this testimony on the stand is any different from what is contained in that memorandum.

I would also like to point out in United States vs. Ricardi, which is just footnoted in Title 18 of the Code under Rule 26:

> "Where it is sought to impeach memory of a witness by a writing, a trial judge should in the first instance satisfy himself as to whether the witness testifies upon a record or from his own recollection so that if the witness is wholly dependent for the fact upon memorandum, proper steps may be taken to determine the accuracy of the memorandum and the judge may determine whether the device of refreshing 3726 his recollection is merely a subterfuge to properly suggest to the witness the testimony that is expected of him."

I don't know of the circumstances under which this particular memorandum was prepared. It may have been prepared under those circumstances. I think I am not only entitled to examine the memorandum as a whole, but I am also entitled to examine all of the work papers which are by no means privileged because they are not the work papers of the defendants. They belong, under accounting law, as I understand it, to the accountant who prepared it.

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien recognizes that the work papers which involve the suggested journal entries should be made available to you.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think we are entitled to any and all work papers which are in the hands of the defense.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I think I understand now, if the Court please—

By the Court: I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, if this is evidence in the case—

3727 By the Court: All work papers of Meyers?

By Mr. Lockley: All work papers of Meyers. They are not privileged. They reflect only matters which relate to the General Confections Corporation and not to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Those belong to one of two people, either to the accountant who prepared them or to Mr. Lubben, or the General Confection Corporation who paid for their preparation. The defense has no right to those whatsoever any more than the government has. If they were in the hands of the government, the defense would certainly be permitted to see them by this time. As a matter of fact, I believe that the subpoena was issued for those work papers and they were turned to the defense and not to the government and this is the first information that we have they were even in existence.

By the Court: You use the term "work papers" in a very general sense. I don't know that Mr. Meyer has testified to any work papers outside of those that he brought into the court room.

By Mr. O'Brien: He hasn't.

By the Court: Except the journal entries that constituted his work sheets.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, he also referred to purchase work papers, your Honor. He said he used those.

3728 By the Court: I have forgotten.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: You mean—

By Mr. Lockley: Work papers presumably relating—

By the Court: Which were obtained from certain purchase records?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, purchase records of the General Confections Corporation. I would assume them to be work papers. These are work papers taken off of the General Confections books, information placed on a work sheet which information originated on the books of General Confections. There is nothing in any way privileged about those documents.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we perhaps can progress if we take one thing at a time.

Now, there is a transcript of the proceedings. We have one on the morning session which was delivered to us at court and we have one on the afternoon session which we get along about 7:00 o'clock at night. I am quite sure—but it is subject to verification from the record—but I am quite sure the the witness in none of the interrogation, either on direct or on cross, referred to anything except the underlying fundamental work sheets, with this ex-

3729 ception, which arose today: That when he was interrogated about a specific item, he reached for this memoranda and the item was that $12,235.00.

Now, the journal entries pertaining to that item he did not have with him and that I am perfectly willing to supply. In short, I was unwilling to have the witness turn over more of his typewritten memoranda at the time because the fact is that that typewritten memoranda which he prepared, was prepared for the lawyers of the defense and at our request and working with us on the case and it didn't seem to me—I didn't know what the other pages related to, but it didn't seem to me that simply because the witness was turning to one place to try to refresh his recollection on the question that was involved, that counsel had the right to any other part of that extensive memoranda.

3730 So at the time there was given to counsel the sheets which the witness himself said that he was referring to on that matter. I am perfectly willing to bring in the journal work sheets on the same subject.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I dislike to be in the position of having to disagree with Mr. O'Brien, but yesterday on his direct examination, I noted that the witness was at that time referring to a white document which I now believe to be this memoranda, and frankly, I must admit it didn't occur to me at the time that that was what was going on.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, if that is so, then two other things are so. First, you didn't say it, so it didn't come to my attention.

By Mr. Lockley: I said I did not think of it, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Second, you didn't ask the witness that today, or if you did, he insisted he had not referred to any part but that.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked him for everything that he had used yesterday, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I will certainly say that the 3731 transcript itself will correctly, more correctly reflect what did occur.

By the Court: The transcript may not describe what took place in so far as the use of a memorandum is concerned.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, perhaps, your Honor, we might settle it by having Mr. O'Brien submit the memoranda to you so that you can examine it and determine—

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think that would settle it.

By Mr. Lockley: That is placing a burden on the Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think that would settle it. I think the only way you could settle it would be through the combined use of the transcript and the witness.

By the Court: I don't know exactly how to answer it. You are attempting to take off two sheets of this memoranda and say this is all the witness used. Well, maybe that is all that this witness used to refresh his recollection but you have a memoranda prepared. The balance of the memoranda may throw some light on the authenticity of the two sheets that the witness util-3732 ized. It may have some bearing on the time when the data was prepared. It would be just as if you had a written statement of a witness—as if he made a long written statement and he had it in his pocket and he took it out to refresh his recollection and he would say "I only read the first line of that statement." Then your position would be that the other side would only have the right to read that one line. Obviously, that just is not sound.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would agree with that.

By the Court: Counsel have a right to see that entire document in so far as it purports to be the memoranda he referred to, which he utilized to refresh his recollection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, what you say and what counsel says about memoranda in general and those used to refresh recollection, are those on which the testimony depends, it is quite true, but here the witness's testimony by and large is not related to any memoranda. The only instance where there is anything that can help him about the memoranda is when he merely reads from it. But his testimony does not depend on the memoranda. It 3733 depends on the underlying sheets. Those, I say, I will bring.

By the Court: That is not entirely accurate because he takes out of those sheets—he said he took these 28 checks and there are 81 checks drawn to cash as to which we have acquired an explanation. There were 28 of those checks as to some of which we didn't receive satisfactory explanation. Now—

By Mr. O'Brien: I brought sheets which showed the checks on them.

By the Court: Yes, but my recollection is that the sheets reflect the 81 checks that were subject to question. The sheet doesn't determine as to which chcks he received satisfactory explanation on and as to which checks he did not receive satisfactory explanation.

By Mr. O'Brien: But Judge, he did have two sheets. One was the total in question and then those that remained,—

By the Court: He has resorted to his memory. I am not criticizing it but I am saying it. He has resorted to his memory as to which checks he concludes satisfactory explanation has not been given.

3734 By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me, your Honor. If you will indulge me for a second: In that first period there were two separate exhibits. One had all 81 set out on it.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: And the other had 28 set out. It wasn't a question of memory at all. The 28 were set out and that is in evidence.

By the Court: Then he says after those 28 "On some of those we didn't receive satisfactory explanations". He has resorted to his memory with reference to that. Right?

By Mr. Kirby: The explanation for all 28 is right on that sheet.

By Mr. Lockley: He didn't so testify, Mr. Kirby, while I was examining him, because I asked him about each one of those work sheets and on each occasion he said that there was nothing on the sheet which would help him tell that, which one of those checks were questioned; that he was relying upon his recollection at the time he went over them last fall, when he was preparing for the testimony in this trial.

By the Court: That is my recollection.

3735 By Mr. Kirby: There is a separate sheet which is in evidence on those 28.

By Mr. Lockley: That isn't what he testified to, so you got him back on redirect.

By Mr. Kirby: It is true, Mr. Lockley, there was such a separate list.

By the Court: I think counsel has the right to receive the entire memoranda.

By Mr. Kirby: That memoranda was made for me personally.

By the Court: The journal work sheets that he has in his possession should also be turned over to Government's counsel.

3736 By Mr. O'Brien: The witness was talking about journal entry 104 on the $12,235.00.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: The witness was talking about journal entry 104 on the $12,235.00 check. That is the only thing on which he didn't have the original underlying data with him.

By the Court: Well, you contend there is something privileged in this sheet that constitutes this memoranda?

By Mr. O'Brien: Something privileged. I think any papers that come to counsel for defense in a criminal case are privileged, certainly.

By the Court: Counsel didn't prepare it. He prepared it. He said he had no help from anybody. How do you contend there is anything privileged about it?

By Mr. O'Brien: He prepared them for us. He prepared them at our request as part of the defense of the case.

By the Court: The fact that he prepared them for you doesn't make it privileged. I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it is. Under the cases, it would be a serious error to take any other position, if 3737 the Court please, at this late stage of the case.

By the Court: Well, I will so rule.

By Mr. Lockley: Did I understand your Honor's rule that we are entitled to examine the work sheets relating to the journals and the work sheets relating to the purchases?

By Mr. O'Brien: All the Court is talking about is the memoranda that the man has.

By Mr. Lockley: I want to go further than that, Mr. O'Brien.

By the Court: Well, you want the memoranda and you want the work sheets which reflect the setup of the suggested journal entries, right?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: What else do you want?

By Mr. Lockley: And he also testified he had some work sheets relating to purchases.

By the Court: Well, how does that bear upon his testimony?

By Mr. O'Brien: Not a bit.

By Mr. Lockley: He testified, your Honor, that he was able—I don't recall the exact testimony, except I do recall he said he had relied on those work sheets in part in preparing his memoranda; that he had not pre-3738 pared it entirely from the work sheets in evidence, but in preparing his memoranda, he had also used the work sheets on the journal entries and the work sheets on the purchases. To what extent he used them I am unable to say because I don't know what is in them.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, if I may suggest, granted that there was a right with which I do not agree—granted there is a right to look at the entire memoranda which the witness was using, then surely that could only be for the purpose of seeing whether the things that he had testified about were completely comprehended. By that I mean if I am looking at the memoranda and it were seen that only pages 3 and 4, for example, had to do with the business at hand and the remaining pages lent no assistance to the testimony that he had given, then I do not think it follows that they should reach out and go into all the remaining pages.

By the Court: Are you contending the government would not have the right to use any of the remainder of the memoranda as any offer of substantive evidence?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right. It would be a mere matter of checking the accuracy.

By the Court: I am inclined to think Mr. O'Brien's
3739 position is well taken in so far as the use of the memoranda is concerned; that you have a right to inquire regarding any entries on the memoranda which the witness may have resorted to in giving his testimony and you have a right to examine the memoranda in so far as it may bear on the authenticity of the entries therein as to which he testified and the time that he prepared the memoranda and whether or not he prepared it himself or whether it was prepared by someone else in his behalf.

I don't know that I encompass all of it. I don't know that I have encompassed the entire scope of your cross, but it would seem to me that there may be entries on there that may be entirely foreign to his direct testimony and as to that, he wouldn't have a right to inquire.

By Mr. Lockley: I quite agree, your Honor.

By the Court: Now, then, I am not too clear. You say that in addition to the work sheets which set forth the suggested journal entries that there are certain purchase sheets or that there are notes made up from the purchase sheet, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: I understand that these are work sheets which he prepared back in 1946 or 1947 relating to the purchase book of the General Confections 3740 Company.

By the Court: What objection, Mr. O'Brien, have you to the turning over of those work sheets which have relation to the purchase entries?

By Mr. Lockley: I think that we have an immediate subpoena for those documents right now, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: If you think you will serve the subpoena—

By the Court: They may have them in their possession.

By Mr. O'Brien: You serve the subpoena.

By the Court: On someone subject to subpoena.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't mind telling you if you do serve the subpoena we hope to quash it under Mr. Wigmore's rule. He says neither such a subpoena nor an order in a criminal case will lie.

By the Court: I am sorry. I did not hear you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let me read it.

By Mr. Lockley: You mean, Mr. O'Brien, that the defendant has a right to suppress evidence in a criminal case?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will read you what the man says. You talk about my getting orders for documents that you have. That is true. I am entitled to them under the rules but it doesn't follow the other way 3741 around that the government is entitled to subpoena from the defendants.

By Mr. Lockley: But these are third party documents.

3742 By the Court: After ruling, I qualified my statement by saying—

By Mr. O'Brien: I was talking to him, your Honor.

By the Court: You have a right to serve your subpoena on a person who is subject to a subpoena.

Mr. O'Brien: I appreciate that.

By the Court: Well, whatever Mr. Lockley may say in that regard, you will take it up with him. There is no use arguing before me. I don't care to hear it now.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do I correctly understand, Judge, at this time, that—

By Mr. McConnell: I will suggest this: I don't think it is proper to have an argument of this kind before the jury in the morning. I think it is very prejudicial to argue these questions before the jury. If he has anything to say, Mr. Lockley, he should say it now.

By Mr. Lockley: The jury is not here now.

By Mr. McConnell: But you are deferring the argument to tomorrow morning, from your attitude.

By the Court: I don't think he is deferring any-3743 thing to tomorrow morning. I have asked you and I don't think you have responded, what objection do you have to the production of Mr. Meyer's memoranda reflecting the so-called data on the purchase record.

By Mr. O'Brien: The only thing that I recall without reference to the transcript is the journal entry on a check of $12,235.00 and from what I do recall, I am satisfied that I should produce that journal. Either that or the man's testimony on the subject should be stricken, but on the purchase record, just because he said there was a purchase record or that there were such work sheets, does not mean I am to produce them where he has no testimony, no specific item that was in any way related to it.

By the Court: I must confess I don't have any recollection of Mr. Meyer referring to a so-called purchase record in his testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't either.

By Mr. Lockley: Right after recess, your Honor.

By the Court: How is that?

By Mr. Lockley: Right after recess, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley is right, to this ex-
3744 tent, Mr. Lockley asked him if he had any other work sheets which he didn't have with him and he said he had some purchase record work sheets. That is true. What I am trying to say is that there is no part of his testimony in which he testified to anything of that sort. It was merely the fact of the existence of it.

Now, it is different with the journal item. He was asked about that by both sides, journal entry 104, and when he didn't have it with him and he started to reach for this other memoranda, Mr. Lockley says, "If it wasn't on your sheet, what are you looking at there?" And he came to the memoranda. We had no objection. If we ever foresaw the thing, we would have had the sheet in the first place, and we are perfectly willing to bring it now but the purchase thing is something else.

By Mr. Lockley: You will recall, your Honor, the witness gave certain testimony to the effect that on one of the shipments it should have been entered in the purchase book for August and it was entered in October instead.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is correct. That is the $12,235.00 item that I am talking about.

3745 By Mr. Lockley: Well, this item is for $19,735.00.

By the Court: Well, you mean that the notes on the purchase books should be made available to you in so far as that item is concerned?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, at least that far, your Honor. I don't think there is anything privileged with reference to those records in any way whatsoever.

By the Court: Well, you must distinguish it, I take it.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is a journal entry.

By the Court: On the question of privilege and the question of what I should order in connection with this testimony, I suppose he can serve a subpoena on Meyer and call for any records he may have. I haven't any control over that now. I am merely trying to clarify the situation in so far as his testimony is concerned and what documents he did have by reason of his testimony which he has given here.

3746 By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lynch, the auditor, tells me, Judge, that the item Mr. Lockley just spoke of, the one that should be—the one that the auditor on the stand said should have been in August, is the same one I am talking about and it is shown by journal entry 104. But, he didn't have it with him, though I am perfectly willing to bring it in.

Incidentally, Judge, the whole journal entry we are talking about—not the original of it, but a copy of it, is in the sheets of the memoranda we have already given but I will bring in the original work sheets for Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, rather than introduce any possible error in the case, I am going to return to Mr. O'Brien now the two pages of the memoranda which the witness has previously given to me.

By the Court: Well, what do you mean by that gesture?

By Mr. Lockley: I am not going to cross examine the witness with respect to those memoranda and I am not going to examine him any further or have any further use for him.

By the Court: All right. Then there is nothing more for the Court to rule on.

3747 By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you very much.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will recess until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause to Tuesday, October 6, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 65-A to 65-X, both inclusive, for identification.)

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 66-A to 66-Y, both inclusive, for identification.)

By the Court: Well, we were delayed a few minutes this morning, members of the Jury, because they were marking exhibits and we thought we could expedite matters if the exhibits could be marked before we came into the proceedings this morning.

By Mr. O'Brien: Bernard Bercu.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, may I state at this time that I had asked permission to interrogate Mr. Meyer further this morning and I now wish to withdraw that permission—

By the Court: All right. Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: Or that request.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask if Mr. Meyer is released now? Is he free to go back to New York?

By Mr. Lockley: In so far as we are concerned, 3750 your Honor, yes.

BERNARD BERCU, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Bercu, I show you a sheet which has already been marked Defendants' Exhibit F for identification.

By the Court: F?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. No. I am sorry. That is a 7, Judge. It looks like F.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I will ask you to state if it is a photostatic copy of one of your work sheets or reports during the partnership period?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you an instrument marked at a prior hearing Defendants' Exhibit 43 for identification and ask you to state if you are familiar with the handwriting on that document?

A. No, sir.

3751 Q. I show you instruments marked this morning Defendants' Exhibits 64-J and 64-K, and ask you if the first of those is in your handwriting.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if it is one of the work sheets which you made for the period covered for Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit K and—

By the Court: K?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir, K.

By the Court: You mean 64-K?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry. I do. It is 64-K.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And tell me if that is a work sheet of Eatsum or a balance sheet as of December 31, 1945, made by your firm.

A. Yes, sir. In the first instance, it was a work sheet of the sole proprietorship as modified by partnership transactions in April and May of 1945 and in the second instance, it was all partnership.

Q. I now show you documents heretofore marked,
3752 that is, at a prior hearing, Defendants' Exhibit 64-L for identification and ask you to state if those are work papers from your files or copies of work papers from your files on Eatsum Food Products for the period mentioned in those papers.

A. I identified these yesterday.

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Bercu.

By the Witness: I believe I identified these yesterday and so testified that they were in my handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, that is true, is it not? Your answer to my question is yes?

A. Surely.

Q. Sometimes we may get them mixed up, Mr. Bercu. I am sorry. I now show you Defendants' Exhibit 64-M for identification and ask you to state if that is one of your work sheets for October, 1945, the partnership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Exhibit 64-N, is that also one of your work sheets for November, 1945, in the partnership?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Incidentally, Judge, that Exhibit
3753 64-L that the witness identified consists of two sheets. The second sheet is not marked.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I now show you Defendants' Exhibit 64-T, T as in Tom, for identification, and ask you to state if the top sheet is a balance sheet prepared by your firm for the partnership as at October 31, 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the attached sheets, Mr. Bercu—

A. Are—

Q. —are how many in number?

A. There are three attached sheets.

Q. Are they a part of the same—

A. They are all—they are photostatic copies of a report, of a monthly report which we rendered to the partnership.

Q. All right.

A. All on our firm stationery.

By Mr. O'Brien: The three attached sheets are not separately marked, Judge, so the exhibit consists of four sheets.

By Mr. O'Brien:

3754 Q. I show you also Defendants' Exhibit 64-U for identification, and ask you if that is a copy of a balance sheet prepared by your firm for the partnership as of November 30, 1945. I was referring to the top sheet, Mr. Bercu.

A. Oh, I am sorry. Yes, it is a photostatic copy of a report prepared by our office.

Q. And would you be kind enough to tell us what the attached three sheets are?

A. They are parts of the same report.

Q. That again is a monthly report?

A. A monthly report of the recorded transactions of Eatsum Food Products Company, the partnership.

Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit 64-V for identification and ask you to state if that is a balance sheet prepared as of January 31, 1946.

A. It is a balance sheet as of January 31, 1946, without inventory.

Q. I see. And is the Exhibit 64-W a statement of profit and loss for the period June 1, 1945 to January 31, 1946, also of the partnership?

A. Yes. This is a statement of income, profit and loss of the partnership from June 1, 1945 to January 31, 1946 without any closing inventory.

3755 Q. And the document attached?

A. Are expense schedules analyzed.

3756 Q. Of which there is one document attached to this exhibit and it does not bear the separate exhibit number.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Bercu, were 64-U and 64-W prepared by you?

By the Witness: May I see them again?

By Mr. O'Brien: U?

By Mr. Lockley: V.

By Mr. O'Brien: Did I say anything about W? I guess I did.

By Mr. Lockley: 64-V and 64-W.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness: It is difficult for me to say who prepared it because I find that this is not on the—on our stationery, printed stationery.

By Mr. Lockley: Which is that? Is that 64-V?

By the Witness: This is 64-V and it is prepared in the form that we used at that time. Assuming that—well, without seeing the original work sheet, I couldn't say whether it was actually prepared by our office.

3757 By Mr. Lockley: Is the same thing true also of all the other documents Mr. O'Brien has been showing you?

By the Witness: No. The other documents were photostats of reports submitted by our office on our printed stationery.

By Mr. Lockley: That one right there you cannot identify?

By the Witness: This one I cannot identify without seeing the original work sheet.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you know where the original work sheets are?

By the Witness: Everything that was in my files was turned over.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I think that is—

By the Witness: I think some thousands of sheets of work sheets were turned over to the government for photostating and I understood, it seems obvious that you had access—that you got these. Let me think. Just a moment. This is on the partnership.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think we have already been into that, Judge, about the partnership.

3758 By the Witness: No. There is a question there.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I object to the question there, if the Court please.

By the Court: If it pertains to whether or not—

By Mr. O'Brien: It is the partnership.

By the Court: —it constitutes his work papers, I suppose he may state what the question was.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was that last question? The reason I object, Judge, that is a matter which we took up in advance of the trial.

By Mr. Lockley: I am afraid not, Mr. O'Brien. I don't think this discussion should be carried on in the presence of the jury, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is all I mean. I understood it had been, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, then, I am afraid we had a different understanding, Mr. O'Brien. We will have to thresh it out later.

3759 By Mr. O'Brien: I am not taking it up. You are the one that is taking it up.

By the Witness: There is a question about these partnership balance sheets prepared which I identified as having recognized, as having been prepared by our office, because of the—because of our firm name.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Imprinted on each of the sheets. It now comes to my mind that when I was asked about the work sheets of the partnership, I recall that I did not turn over work sheets of the partnership to the government.

Q. There is no question pending, Mr. Bercu.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would ask the Court to so instruct the witness.

By the Court: Well, I thought he was going to give some explanation of 64-V.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I don't think so.

By the Witness: If your Honor please, that is exactly what I intended to do.

By Mr. O'Brien:

3760 Q. All right, then, go ahead.

A. I recall now that I did not turn over any work sheets of the partnership in response to your subpoena a year ago because those work sheets had been destroyed, the original work sheets had been destroyed in my office under conditions that were—that I tried to make clear in the deposition.

Q. Yes.

A. However, before those work sheets and copies of our reports were destroyed, I had those particular reports photostated so that these photostats I assume are the photostats which I turned over to the government some years ago in connection with another case involving the partnership. They are not part of the papers so far as I know which were turned over in response to your subp of a year ago.

Q. That was on the deposition?

A. That is right.

By the Court: Proceed with your examination.

By Mr. Lockley: Have you identified those? Pardon me, your Honor. I didn't mean to interrupt you.

By the Court: I said to Mr. O'Brien, you may 3761 proceed with your examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what I am trying to do,

By Mr. Lockley: I want to find out from Mr. Bercu if those photostats are the photostatic copies that he prepared.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am about to ask him that, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you, Mr. O'Brien.
3762 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, the exhibits, 64-V and W, speaking of those again, Mr. Bercu, although they do not bear either your handwriting, since they are typewritten, or the printed name of your firm, would you say that those are copies, do you recognize them as copies of reports or statements prepared by your office at the time?

A. I recognize them as being in the form of the statements, but I say in the absence of the original work sheets, in the absence of the use of our printed stationery, I can't identify them positively as having been prepared either by me or by my office.

Q. Is there anything in the content of them which in any way would further your recollection?

A. I can only say that this report appears to be in the form in which prior reports had been prepared, and I assume that it was prepared by our office. But I understand that I am not supposed to make assumptions, in the absence of original documents or other papers that would show—that would refresh my recollection definitely.

Q. Now, I show you a series of positive prints, photostatic prints, respectively numbered 64-X, Y, Z, AA, BB, CC and DD, and ask you to state if these are copies of purchase analyses made by your firm for November, 1945?

A. I don't recognize the handwriting. We used—at that time we used work sheets which had our firm imprint on them and none of these have our firm imprint on them and so far as I can judge these are summaries or, rather, accumulations of purchase invoices in the month of November, 1945, which was the partnership period, but there is nothing on these sheets to indicate that they were part of our work sheets, nor is there any notation that I can see in my handwriting anywhere to indicate that I used these work sheets in any way.

3764 Q. They are not in your handwritng?

A. There isn't—I don't recognize—not only not in my handwriting, but I don't even recognize one of my scrawly check marks to indicate that I had worked on them.

Q. You had other people working on the records, too, did you not?

A. Probably eight or ten different people working on them. But the reason that I express doubt about these papers is because the work sheets themselves don't bear our firm imprint.

Q. You said that, Mr. Bercu, but now I woud like to ask you whether you recognize the writing as being that of any of your associates or partners?

A. I studied it carefully for that reason.

By the Court: I didn't hear that.

By the Witness:

A. I studied the writing quite carefully to see whether I could recall this writing as that of any of my associates, or even assistants of that period, and I don't recognize the handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, passing that last group of exhibits for the moment, and passing, also,

3765 64-V and W, I offer in evidence the documents identified yesterday by the witness as 64-A, B, D—really C and D—D, consisting of two sheets, E, F—

By the Court: Have you a D?

By Mr. O'Brien: 64-E.

By the Court: Have you D?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir; D consisted of two sheets, Judge.

Now, we have 64-E, F, G, and H in that series.

I also offer a document marked at a prior hearing Defendants' Exhibit 11, and further verified by the witness yesterday.

And I offer all of the documents identified by the witness this morning, with the exceptions that I noted a moment ago. The additional ones that I am offering are 64-U, consisting of four sheets; 64-T—T as in Tom—consisting of four sheets; 64-N, 64-M—M as in Mary—64-L, consisting of two sheets; 64-K—better make it
J and K; and an exhibit marked Defendants' Exhibit
3766 7 for identification at a prior hearing and identified today by this witness.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. O'Brien, here is another one that is on his work sheet. It is 21-A. Maybe he could identify that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will wait till Mr. Lockley looks at those.

By Mr. Lockley: Go ahead, if you want, and we will look over these.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I show you, Mr. Bereu, an instrument marked 21-A, and ask you to state if that is in your handwriting?

A. It is not in my handwriting. However, it is on our firm stationery. The stamp in the upper lefthand corner indicates that it was prepared by one of our assistants, giving his initials and the date that he prepared this schedule.

Q. That has to do with the loans and exchanges account as at November 30, 1945?

A. Of the Eatsum Food Products partnership.

Q. Right.

A. I believe that was one of the loan and exchange
3767 accounts on the books.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right.

I shall offer that, too, your Honor, Defendants' 21-A.

3768 By Mr. Lockley: May I have your indulgence a moment, your Honor? We have not seen these papers before and did not have an opportunity to make our objections as the defendants had an opportunity to see ours.

Initially, your Honor, I object to 64-C because it relates to the period April 1 to December 31, 1944; also that it is a photostat and that there has been no proper foundation laid for the absence of the original.

By the Court: Which exhibit is that, please?

By Mr. Lockley: No. 64-C.

By the Court: T as in Tom?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir; C as in Charles.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, Mr. Lockley, if I may respond to that, so we don't get mixed up, the originals of Mr. Bercu's work sheets during the proprietorship period are on file in the case here as part of his deposition.

By Mr. Lockley: That would satisfy me as to that objection then. But I object to it on the ground that 3769 it relates to the year 1944.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, on that part, if the Court please, there is already testimony at the prior hearings as to the inception of these companies and the condition of the companies from time to time. Some of those exhibits are already in. Some remain for further identification.

I should like, while the witness is here, and not to have him come again, to have the exhibit at least received subject to the objection and the Court's ultimate ruling.

In other words, the bare fact that it is a month outside of the indictment period, that fact alone does not preclude it as evidence.

By the Court: Does it throw any light, however, on the situation in 1945?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think so. It shows—indeed I know so—a part of the end history of the proprietorship.

By the Court: What is 64-C? I haven't been told.

3770 By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry, Judge. It is a statement of income, profit and loss, for the period April 1 to December 31, 1944.

I may say, if it will be any aid to the Court, we are having a list of our exhibits made, with the descriptive matter.

By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley, you are merely objecting to the exhibit because you contend it is immaterial?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: You are not objecting to the foundation?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Hoonr. I understand that these are in Mr. Bercu's handwriting, they are on Mr. Bercu's stationery, and he has identified them.

Is that correct, Mr. Bercu?

By the Witness: I am afraid I would have to look at them.

3771 By Mr. Lockley: This is 64-C.

By the Witness: That's correct. When they are on the stationery, there is no question about them.

By Mr. Lockley: But I do object on the grounds that it is immaterial.

I object to No. 64-D on the same ground, that it relates to the period from April 10, 1944, to December 31, 1944.

Will you tell me what this is, Mr. Bercu?

By the Witness: These are—

By Mr. Lockley: Speak up, please.

By the Witness: These are work sheets of the sole proprietorship of David Lubben from the inception of his own concern on April 10, 1944, to the close of business, December 31, 1944.

By the Court: That is 64-D?

By Mr. O'Brien: 64-D.

By the Court: D as in Donald?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Bercu, are 64-A and B in your handwriting?

3772 By the Witness: I have so identified them. So far as I can judge, they are in my handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

Mr. Bercu, did you identify No. 64-N as being in your handwriting? That's N as in Nancy.

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

3773 By Mr. Lockley: Will you tell me if No. 64-L is in your handwriting?

By the Witness: It appeared to be and I so identified it.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, thank you. If your Honor please, I object to the admission of these documents on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for the absence of the originals. They are documents or work papers of the partnership period which are not at this time in the custody of the clerk of the court.

As I understand, those documents are solely in the proprietorship period. There has been no foundation laid for the absence of the originals of these particular documents which are Exhibits Nos. 64-L, No. 64-J, No. 64-K, No. 64-N, 64-M, 64-U, 64-H.

By the Court: H?

By Mr. Lockley: H, yes, your Honor. 21-A, 64-E, 64-F. 64-G, 64-T, 11, 7 and 64-A and B.

By Mr. O'Brien: They are papers, if the Court please, from the partnership era as to which it is my recol-3774 lection that we have an agreement and statement made at the beginning of the trial as to secondary evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think that we should discuss it in front of the jury, your Honor, but I believe we ought to be—

By Mr. O'Brien: I will be glad to do it outside the presence of the jury. That will be fine.

By Mr. Lockley: I think we should examine the record and I believe you will find that that had to do solely with the testimony of one particular individual and the books and records of the Eatsum partnership. There was no stipulation entered into relating in any way to any accountants' work papers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if you want to take that up, then I suggest we should do it while the witness is here and on that point, your Honor, since it touches so intimately on the other point, it seems to me that is a collateral matter on which we might take his testimony briefly.

By the Court: Well, where are the originals of 3775 these papers?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is what I want to take up collaterally with this witness.

By the Court: Well, take it up now.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think that should be done and

I think that is the purport of what has been said by Mr. Lockley. It is all on the same subject, on the matter on which there was an agreement about secondary evidence. I mean, I am perfectly willing to go into it, Judge, but I think it should be taken up with you.

By the Court: Do you want to take a short recess at this time? Is that your suggestion?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, and we can take up this collateral matter with the witness. It will be very brief. We can take the recess at this time and do that and then we can reconvene.

By the Court: Well, I don't know. What suggestions have you, Mr. Lockley, on this point?

By Mr. Lockley: I agree that a recess would be preferable at this time and perhaps we can proceed 3776 without the jury to determine whether or not there is a foundation which can be laid for the absence of the originals.

By the Court: Well, the jury may be excused then, subject to call by the marshal.

By the Marshal: This honorable court will recess.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken outside the presence and hearing of the jury, in open court:)

By Mr. O'Brien: Shall I proceed, your Honor?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Bercu, you gave your deposition.

3777 By the Court: I think the defendants should be in the court room during this proceeding. This is obviously a part of the trial.

All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Bercu, do you have the originals of the partnership accounting work papers which you have identified on the stand here?

A. I do not.

Q. It is true, is it not, that I took your deposition in this case last year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In New York City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the conclusion of the hearing, of the first hearing, I requested you and Mr. Cohen to make a search for your original work sheets on all three entities, the proprietorship, the partnership and General Confections, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make that search?

A. I did.

Q. Did you afterwards produce in evidence on that 3778 deposition the original work sheets of the proprietorship and those which you had of General Confections?

A. I did.

Q. You were unable to produce the work sheets of the partnership?

A. I was unable to produce the complete set of work sheets of the partnership.

By the Court: The what?

By the Witness: The complete set of work sheets, of the work sheets.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you produce any?

A. I am sure the impression that some merchandise analyses were available and had been produced.

Q. And aside from those?

A. But as to the major work papers covering the monthly audit, such as trial balances, schedules of expenses, schedules of accounts and so on, practically all of those papers, I believe, had been destroyed in my office.

Q. Now, at the time of the deposition you told me that all of your partnership work sheets and all of the partnership books and records were taken by or turned over to William Giglio?

3779 A. I don't remember ever having made any such statement that I had any partnership books and records to be turned over. I did—

Q. Maybe I am in error on the books and records. You were talking about—

A. All work sheets.

Q. Only of your work sheets and reports?

A. Of the work sheets and reports in our office.

By the Court: What about them?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And then those, you testified—

Well, you ask him, Judge.

By the Court: I think he finished his answer. You say the work sheets in your office—what did you do with them?

By the Witness: Those were destroyed.

By the Court: Are you now speaking of the partnership?

By the Witness: The partnership records from the period from June 1, 1945, to January 31, 1946.

By Mr. Lockley: What do you mean, records?

By the Witness: No, no. I mean only our work papers.

3780 By Mr. Lockley: That is what you said.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, he didn't.

By the Witness: No records of the partnership were in our office. If I recall correctly, we were never permitted to remove a record of any kind from the office of the partnership.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. So there is no misunderstanding about it, you are talking about your work sheets and your reports?

A. As I understand it, I believe there is a very serious misunderstanding about that.

3781 Q. Do you mean misunderstanding in the sense that my first question included the records?

A. Exactly.

Q. I withdraw the statement of the records, as I have already done, stating that I was evidently mistaken in my recollection. Now with that removed, is there any misunderstanding which remains?

A. I don't think so, counsellor.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I renew the offer.

By Mr. Lockley: May I ask a question or two, your Honor?

By the Court: Yes.

Cross Examination By Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Berch, you told me, or you told Mr. O'Brien that all of the partnership work sheets were destroyed, is that correct?

A. Well, when I said all, it appears that some of them escaped destruction. I did not make a complete inventory of the many thousands of papers which I turned over in answer to the subpoena.

Q. And did you see any of those destroyed?

A. I have seen—I beg your pardon?

3782 Q. Did you see them destroyed in your office?

A. They were destroyed in a separate room under the supervision of one of my associates while I was in my private office with Mr. Giglio.

Q. Do you know whether they were destroyed or moved from your office?

A. It would seem that—my associate didn't do a very good job because so many of them have turned up now in photostat form in court here.

Q. And to whom were they turned over in your office for either destruction or removal?

A. To Mr. Louis Roth, the accountant, Mr. Giglio's accountant.

Q. And who was present at that time?

A. Mr. Roth, my then associate, Mr. Weinert were in one room. I believe that Mr. Roth had an assistant of his to handle the physical part of the tearing up of the papers and I think that we had an assistant also.

Q. Did you see some of the papers after they had been torn?

A. No. I saw bags being removed from the office because I think there must have been several files full of those papers.

3783 Q. So far as you know, it was possible for the papers to have been removed from your office without destruction?

A. It not only seems possible but apparently probable and some of the papers, I think, I can say frankly, inadvertently, because the agreement had been made that all of the original work papers would be destroyed, but some of the merchandise analyses apparently have not been destroyed because it is my recollection now that a year ago in our search to honor Mr. O'Brien's subpoena, we located those papers and turned them over to the Government for purposes of this trial.

Q. Well, are the documents which we have referred to this morning any of those documents which you subsequently located and turned over to the Government?

A. I don't recall. None of the photostats shown me here seem to include any of those papers.

Q. So far as you know, those photostats were photostats of papers which were turned over to Mr. Roth for destruction or removal, is that correct?

A. With this exception—

3784 By the Court: With what?

By the Witness: With this exception, your Honor.

A. I had not made it clear in my deposition a year ago that I honored the agreement technically to turn over to Mr. Giglio or his associates all of our work sheets with regard to the partnership.

However, before turning them over, I had had photostated the papers which I regarded as most important not only for the proceedings and I say advisedly that I had in mind the probability that there would be a Government investigation of the partnership transactions—so I had had photostated the—so far as I can recall now—the trial balance papers for a number of months, copies of our audit reports which apparently are now in court. I had photostated copies of our work sheets concerning loan and exchange accounts and it was my—it is my impression now that I had photostated our audit notes concerning the explanations by Mr. Lubben as to the disposition of the cash checks that were charged to the loan and exchange account.

However, I haven't seen any photostats of those audit notes.

3785 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, the photostats which you have been shown this morning, are they the photostats which you had taken of your work papers before they were destroyed?

A. I have no way of judging that.

Q. You don't know whether these were the photostats you had taken or whether they are subsequent photostats of those same papers?

A. It seems to me those are photostats I had turned over to the government, it seems to me, about three or four years ago, probably nearer to four years ago in connection with the—with another case against the—concerning the partnership, and—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor—

By the Court: Well, did you turn over any photostats to the defendants by way of subpoena?

By the Witness: No, I did not because I did not have any of them. They had all been turned over to the government several years earlier.

By the Court: Then you didn't turn any papers over to the defense?

3786 By the Witness: No photostats. No, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the defendants have seen the photostats which were in the possession of the government and they do not include the photostats which have been identified here this morning.

By Mr. O'Brien: What has that to do with it?

By Mr. Lockley: It has this to do with it: You didn't get it from the government.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, he says the papers were turned over to Giglio.

By Mr. Lockley: He said Roth.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, Roth was working for Giglio. He turned them over to him. I told you at the outset that we had an understanding in this record as to secondary evidence relating to partnership papers which Giglio refused to produce. Now, here is a man and I would like to ask him a few more questions.

By the Court: All right.

3787 Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Didn't you testify, Mr. Bercu, on your deposition that Lubben pleaded with you to destroy your work sheets as part of the dissolution agreement of the partnership which he was trying to make with Giglio?

A. I don't want to be technical but—may I answer that in substance that you have stated it correctly, but it was not part of the dissolution agreement. It was a prerequisite.

Q. A condition preceding?

A. A condition preceding to the dissolution.

Q. And did you not—

A. Pardon me. Again, it is not a question of dissolution. The practice, the actual dissolution had taken place as of March 8th, I think, or 9th of 1946. Mr. Lubben, despite the reports, the monthly reports which I had given the partnership—Mr. Lubben got one copy and Mr. Giglio got another copy of these reports which—some of which have been presented in evidence. Those reports, especially the one of January, 1936—January 31, 1946, indicated a very, very large operating profit for the 3788 partnership.

Q. I am not interested in what they indicated. I am just trying to find out about these physical papers. Now, I asked you on the deposition what had happened to them and you said that Lubben pleaded with you to permit their destruction, did you not?

A. I am trying to give you—

Q. Well, didn't you say that? That's all I want to know.

A. So far as I recall, I did say that.

Q. All right. And you were under oath at the time were you not?

A. Surely.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Lubben on his deposition said that if you said those papers were destroyed you were a liar. Do you recall that?

A. Papers or records?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't believe he said that, Mr. O'Brien. He said that anyone who said he pleaded with him to have them destroyed is a liar. I think you are making a play on words.

3789 By Mr. O'Brien: I did not mean to make any play on words. I will read your Honor the deposition in that respect and we will be precise.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't see what materiality that has.

By the Court: Well, what is the materiality?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it is material on this collateral hearing.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Then I asked you, did I not:

"Q. Is that true also of the audit reports for the the partnership that were in your possession?"

and your answer:

"A. Every scrap of paper is in our file concerning the partnership transactions."

Did you make that answer?

A. If you have it—if you are reading from the deposition, I made that answer.

3790 Q. You said on your deposition at page 302 that the papers were destroyed in your office in the presence of one of your assistants, I believe Mr. Weinert. Weinert was your partner, wasn't he?

A. Did I say assistant or associate?

Q. You said assistant. And "some assistant from the staff who brought the records in from the files and saw Mr. Roth go over them and tear them up and send them out in bundles, in waste baskets to the elevator." Do you remember that?

A. I don't remember it, but,—

Q. You don't even remember that?

A. I don't remember the exact wording.

Q. I don't mean the exact words, Mr. Witness. I mean the thought and the substance.

A. I certainly recall having testified with regard to that transaction.

Q. And did you not say that to your recollection you did not retain any copy of those documents?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. You don't recall it?

A. No, sir. If I so stated, I was completely in error.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if the Court please, if he 3791 so stated he was completely in error—it is entirely collateral, what I am doing now, but if that testimony is persisted in, I want to take up the deposition in which I pursued this for pages about copies. I implored him and beseeched him to tell me about any copies, that surely he must have made some copies and all up and down the line, and he denied that he made any copies. That is a collateral matter. I should like to have those two pieces of testimony inquired into at a proper time.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. But now, in substance, that is what you said in your deposition, that the work sheets were not available to you, that you destroyed them, and you now say you cannot remember whether you made the answer that to your recollection you did not retain any copies, is that right?

A. My recollection at that time.

Q. That was your then recollection?

A. That was my then recollection, that I had not retained any copies.

3792 Q. But you are sure that you did not retain the originals?

A. I so stated.

Q. All right. Yes or no?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are sure that the papers which you identified here are copies of those work papers, or some of them?

A. There is no question as to those which are on our firm's stationery.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I submit, if the Court please, on the witness's own statement, and quite aside from the other things that I am interested in about it, that the originals—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. By the way, one other question. Do you remember, Mr. Bercu, that on my subpoena on the deposition I asked you to bring all the books and records of the partnership, do you recall that? The books and records, now.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also of the other two entities, do you remember?

3793 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not have those and then I asked you about the work sheets and you said that the work sheets were not the property of the partnership, did you not?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you said that under numerous rulings those belonged to you?

A. That's correct.

Q. And did I not ask you, and Mr. Cohen, your lawyer, nevertheless, to get them and bring them in, is that right, and you did bring in the stack that is on file in the office of the Clerk of this Court?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, your Honor—

By the Court: Bring in what?

By Mr. O'Brien: Such work sheets as he had.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. O'Brien: He claimed that the work sheets belonged to the auditing firm and were not part of the books and records of the partnership and that, there-3794 fore, he had not produced them on the subpoena.

I asked him, nevertheless, and Mr. Cohen, his lawyer, agreed to go get them, and he did. And at a subsequent hearing he brought in everything he had, and they returned here. But they do not include the original work sheets for the partnership which Mr. Bercu says were destroyed.

By the Court: You don't consider that there is any duty on you to show when and how you obtained those photostats which you now are offering in evidence?

The only thing I had in mind was this, if you obtained photostats of some documents, which would indicate that they haven't been destroyed, that is one thing; if you obtained the photostats before they were allegedly destroyed, that is another situation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if the Court please, I haven't the slightest objection to making that showing. The photostats which I had, I assert to your Honor, and will put on proof, if you wish—the photostats which I 3795 have I obtained from Mr. Giglio, in August and September of 1952, after this period that the witness is talking about.

3796 By the Court: Well, then, your statement would indicate that these work sheets were not destroyed.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right, and are in the possession of Giglio.

By the Court: And this statement of Mr. Bercu that they went out to the inner office and tore them up, whatever was torn up, apparently didn't include the originals of those photostats, right?

By Mr. O'Brien: They seem to be relatively few.

I take it that the work sheets for the partnership period must have been a very substantial heap, just as those of the proprietorship, and I think in that respect that Mr. Bercu is probably correct, that there were, and must necessarily have been, some which were not physically destroyed.

By the Witness: Your Honor, may I point out the possibility of the reconciliation of this apparent discrepancy?

By the Court: Well, if you have anything, of 3797 your own knowledge, that will throw any light on the matter that we are now considering, you may state it.

By the Witness: I have already testified that I furnished copies of these reports to both Mr. Giglio and to Mr. Lubben, and I assume that Mr. Giglio had retained those copies of our monthly reports.

As to those papers, there seems to be no mystery, as to how they came into Mr. O'Brien's possession.

By the Court: You mean that Mr. Giglio may have turned over to Mr. O'Brien photostats of the copies of your work papers which you delivered to him from time to time during the course of your audit, is that right?

By the Witness: Exactly.

By Mr. O'Brien: I may say, if you remember, Judge, I subpoenaed—that both I and the government subpoenaed Giglio here. It was not merely their subpoena involved. I wanted his papers. Mr. Stryker would not, in view of the proceedings down there at that time, 3798 let us have the papers.

By the Court: Was the subpoena served on Giglio broad enough to include these work papers?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Do you recognize that, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I believe that is so, your Honor. I don't know what the defendants' subpoena was. I haven't seen any of their subpoenas.

By the Court: I mean the government subpoena.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe the government subpoena would have been broad enough to include it.

By Mr O'Brien: Sure.

By the Court: Would he have a right to stand on his constitutional rights, in so far as these working papers are concerned?

By Mr. Lockley: You mean Giglio?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: They are not Mr. Giglio's work papers. As I understand it—

3799 By the Court: It doesn't make any difference whether they are his work papers or whether they belonged to the auditor. They might incriminate him, notwithstanding.

By Mr. O'Brien: Why, sure. I will read you Mr. Wigmore. That takes the precise position your Honor states.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Well, Mr. Bercu, did you turn those papers over to Mr. Giglio, or did you turn them over to Mr. Roth?

A. I thought I had turned them over to Mr. Weinert at my office, to go over them with Mr. Roth and see that they were physically destroyed.

Q. So that the last you knew of them they were in Roth's hands, is that correct?

A. Right.

3800 Q. How about the copies that you made, where you made two copies, one to Lubben and one to Giglio, who did you give the extra copy to?

A. I have personally delivered them and handed them, one to Mr. Lubben and one to Mr. Giglio, each month, each successive month.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, it appears clear that if these were Mr. Giglio's papers there would be no further foundation necessary. But if they were Mr. Roth's, I believe Mr. Roth would be the appropriate person to testify as to the absence of the originals, because they were last in his possession. All that Mr. Bercu can testify, with respect to those papers which he didn't make copies of and give to Mr. Giglio, is that when he last saw them they were in Roth's possession. Mr. Roth has no privilege against self-incrimination.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have him under subpoena, too. He is indicted in the same proceedings as Mr. Giglio.

By the Court: Have you taken his deposition?

3801 By Mr. O'Brien: No. Of course, neither Stryker, nor Roth's attorney, will let them testify, with an indictment pending down there, and in the Court of Appeals, where Judge Goddard's order may be reversed and the matter sent back for trial. I made a special trip to New York, and he would not permit—

By the Court: Was Roth involved in that New York trial?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, Roth, too.

By the Court: He is one of the defendants with Giglio?

By Mr. O'Brien: Indeed he is, as the government knows.

By Mr. Kane: Yes, that is so.

By the Court: Supposing they are in Roth's possession. Wouldn't he be able to take the same position as Giglio, so far as the production of the documents is concerned?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, it appears to me that Mr. Giglio—or Roth here are claiming the immunity as far as the government is concerned, but waives 3802 it in so far as the defense is concerned. I don't know why the government should waive its right to have the original production of these documents. And if Roth and Giglio are willing to turn them over to the defense it seems to me they have waived whatever privilege they had and should now come and testify as to the authenticity of them.

By Mr: O'Brien: I don't think that you could persuade Judge Nordbye that what a defendant does at another time and place, whether before the Grand Jury, or on a deposition, or anything else, precludes the privilege.

By the Court: I don't think he waives the right to claim the privilege thereafter. If he wants to, I suppose he can at one time talk, or at one time deliver documents and then the next time claim his constitutional privilege.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to say to your Honor, in all seriousness and sincerity, that I have made an extreme—and I don't know when I have ever worked so hard 3803 as I have trying to get all the papers in this case from every particular avenue. In August of 1952, in New York, we got these copies from Giglio before there was any indictment, before there was any indictment at all. And whether he gave me all he had, I do not know. I never felt entirely assured that he did. Whether he had any more to give me, I don't know, in view of what Mr. Bercu said later on the deposition and what he says now. All I know is that I have followed the proprietorship papers, and got those and the work sheets; I followed the partnership everywhere I could go and came up with just these few things; I followed the General Confections to the receiver, and everywhere else, and I submit that we have made, whether you view it one way or the other, as Giglio or Mr. Bercu—I have made far more than the ordinary showing on the unavailability of the originals of these papers and that they should be received.

3804 By Mr. Lockley: I might correct Mr. O'Brien on one matter, although technically he is right, that the indictment wasn't returned until later, there was an information which had been filed and had been pending against Giglio for over a year at the time he turned over those papers.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true. And I do not think that either Giglio or Roth, or Lawn, who were all defendants, and with whom I pursued the matter of the papers, I do not think that Giglio had any concern with the matter of the information, but that once the indictment was returned—and the information had to do with a relatively minor thing, and I think even a misdemeanor—but when that indictment was returned, we got nothing from Mr. Giglio, or anybody else, and Mr. Stryker and Mr. Wolfam, his partner, who were here at least three times—and Mr. Rosenblum, Samuel Rosenblum, who used to be in the District Attorney's office, and who was a partner of Mr. Rogers, represented 3805 Roth, and both of them refused to let those men testify. I have served Roth, paid him the money, served Giglio and paid him the money, and we cannot get their testimony.

By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley, I understand your objection is only to the foundation.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, sir, I would like to add to that also the question as to the relevancy of them. What the Eatsum work papers show apparently is not going to have too great a relevancy upon whether David Lubben paid any money over to the General Confections—I mean to Shotwell, rather.

By the Court: I am not able to pass on that now very well. That may be a rather long procedure.

By Mr. Lockley: And as to the 1944 papers, I object to those on the grounds that they are also beyond the period of the indictment, Mr. O'Brien.

By the Court: I think I will reserve my ruling on the 1944 papers. I will receive the other exhibits in evidence.

If it should appear that they are not relevant or 3806 material I will entertain a motion to strike. That's as far as I can go now.

I think that there is sufficient showing to justify the Court in saying that a foundation has been laid for them.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just to be coherent, your Honor—or in the interests of coherence, I would like to say, for the record here as to the objection to those papers which are late in 1944, and therefore outside of the indictment period, technically, I wish to remind your Honor that Mr. Lockley put in evidence of late '44 and there were what he called carry-over transactions which were not paid for, he said, until early in '45. Obviously there are places in the case where the Court or the jury will not be bound by the bare boundaries of the indictment period. There is a certain overlapping and it was on that basis that your Honor let his evidence in. And it is for the same reason that we put this late period in, included amongst the papers offered.

3807 By the Court: Well, let's see now, what exhibits have you offered, and let's have it clear which exhibits I am receiving.

By Mr. O'Brien: Shall I read them, Judge, or do you prefer to?

By the Court: Let me read them.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Defendants' Exhibit 64-J. There was no objection to that, as I understand it, right?

By Mr. Lockley: It was offered. I made objection to all of those, your Honor, but—

By the Court: Well, I will receive 64-J, 64-K, 64-L, 64-M, 64-N, 64-T, 64-U, 64—Well, V and W, as I understand it, this witness has said that he cannot identify them.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.

By the Court: Therefore, I don't understand that they have been offered.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't offer them, Judge.

By the Court: No. All right. Then 64-X, have you offered that?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Y?

3808 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, if 64-X is offered I object on the grounds that the witness was unable to identify it.

By the Court: Yes, that's true. I don't think you offered X, Y, Z, AA—

By Mr. O'Brien: That's true.

By the Court: All right. That takes us to 64-A, 64-B, 64-C, 64-D. I don't know what 64-E is.

By Mr. O'Brien: E, F—

By the Court: You haven't identified them in the record and I don't know what they are.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, Judge.

By the Court: You had the witness identify them yesterday, but the difficulty was that you didn't refer to them by exhibit numbers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let's see, we have A, B—

By the Court: A, B, C, D—

By Mr. O'Brien: Does your Honor have 7 and 11?

By the Court: I will come to that.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. T you have covered. Here is H, 64-H.

3809 By the Court: Tell me briefly what 64-H is.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will, Judge. I think there are three sheets here. 64-F, G and H are sheets in the witness's handwriting.

By the Court: Work sheets.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

Now, what is that? Is that F?

By Mr. Lockley: That is H. H relates to November.

By Mr. O'Brien: November, '45.

3810 By Mr. Lockley: '45 receipts. F relates to work sheet, June 30, '45.

By the Court: F relates to what?

By Mr. Lockley: It is the work sheet for June 30, '45.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: And G is a work sheet for—it has two dates, June 30 and July 31. That's 64-G.

By the Court: What is 64-E?

By Mr. O'Brien: I haven't come to it yet, Judge.

64-E is a work sheet for June 30, '45.

By the Court: All right. Now, then, the other exhibits are 21-A, which is a loan and exchange account of the Eatsum partnership.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of November 30, '45.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence. And Exhibit 7 is Eatsum profit and loss of June, '45, right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Right.

By the Court: I will receive it.

3811 By Mr. O'Brien: That's June 1 to December 31, '45.

By the Court: And Exhibit 11 is a photostat of Eatsum balance sheet of April 30, '45?

By Mr. O'Brien: Correct.

By the Court: I understand that all of these have been identified by Mr. Bercu.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 7, 11, 21-A, 64-A, 64-B, 64-C, 64-D, 64-E, 64-F, 64-G, 64-H, 64-J, 64-K, 64-L, 64-M, 64-N, 64-T and 64-U.)

By the Court: We will take a ten minute recess and then you can call in the jury.

By the Marshall: This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

3812 (And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Bercu, you stated that you began working for Mr. Lubben in early 1944, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you done any work for him before that?

A. I had never met or heard of Mr. Lubben until March or April of 1944.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I interrupt just a moment, Mr. Lockley, to state that the exhibits which were offered are received.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Except those that the witness could not identify.

By the Court: The record so reflects my ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

3813 Q. Was the Eatsum sole proprietorship in existence at the time you met him?

A. It is a difficult question to answer, technically. I set up a set of books for the Eatsum sole proprietorship as of April 10, 1944, as the exhibit indicates. However, he had been operating as the Eatsum Food Products Company, theoretically a sole proprietorship, in the early months of '44. Actually, he was working on a basis of 10 per cent of the net profits and was paying 90 per cent of the net profits up to April, '44, as a financing charge.

Q. To Burry Biscuit Company.

A. To Burry Biscuit Company.

3814 Q. So you set up the books in April, at which time he took over 100 per cent of the business, is that correct?

A. Unfortunately even that, technically, is not altogether true, because in April, and I believe in the month of May, he thought he was running again a sole proprietorship, technically, but that he was going to give half the profits—not 90 per cent, but half the profits, this time not to Burry Biscuit Company, but to Mrs. Burry—by June 1st, if I recall correctly, all complications had been cleared and he had become both technically and practically a sole proprietor.

Q. And were any of the profits ever turned over, to your knowledge, to Mrs. Burry?

A. Nothing was ever turned over to Mrs. Burry, to my knowledge.

Q. Now, when you set up this set of books, did you at that time also set up the system for handling cash checks?

A. To make it brief, I did. Actually, it was the result of quite a number of conferences between Mr. Lubben and myself.

Q. And this system of having cash authorization 3815 slips signed before a check was issued, was that your suggestion?

A. Again it was the result of discussions, and if—I don't know whether I can honestly say this is recollection, or whether it is merely I believe I would have told him at the time—that he would be better off to have something in writing, even though it is only his own paper, what you attorneys call a self-serving paper. I was concerned—in setting up that system I was very much concerned with the question of his being able to prove to the Revenue Department, in the case of an examination, that he had actually paid out these amounts and hadn't merely pocketed them. That was my sole concern in asking him to prepare these authorizations.

Q. And did you find that Mr. Lubben was familiar with bookkeeping systems?

A. Far from it. If I recall correctly, back in the early months, I think—it seems to me he made the outright statement that he had never seen a financial statement before I gave him our first monthly statement.

3816 Q. Now, you made up these—you set up the system of handling checks to cash. Was there also any arrangement made for handling cash receipts on the books?

A. I tried to point out to him at the time that in view of the fact that he was handling all of these cash disbursements that he ought to be certain that every transaction which he entered into was recorded on the books, and so far as I can recall, in the first year of operations he accounted—well, I would, to put it rather personally—he accounted to me personally for every transaction and as far as he could recall it and as I explained or started to explain yesterday afternoon, the reason for that accounting was that from the very first day he started his sole proprietorship, when we opened the books, I tried to match up every individual purchase and sale of merchandise and reconcile those transactions against the closing physical inventory.

Necessarily, in making those matchings, he had to account for all of these three-way transactions and for any cash sales that he might have made, because if a cash 3817 sale were made, the merchandise would be short.

Q. Did you find that Mr. Lubben objected to your suggestion that all of his cash receipts be included in his books?

A. He not only didn't object but he cooperated with me in every way in that—again I say, in that first year.

Q. Did he tell you that he wanted to have a correct set of books?

A. He made that very emphatic. His idea of correctness was to account to the Government for every dollar that he took in and every dollar that he paid out.

Q. Did he so tell you?

A. He not only told me, but all on his own volition, without any request on my part. He maintained, or rather, prepared a detailed accounting of every dime that he spent for traveling and for entertainment every week.

Q. So that he was able to satisfy you that all of the receipts and all of the expenditures shown on his books were actually received or spent?

A. Exactly.

Q. Now, do you know Miss Feldman?

3818 A. I do.

Q. Did you have anything to do with hiring her?

A. I did.

Q. And what was that?

A. I engaged her as bookkeeper, I believe, within three months after Mr. Lubben started on his own.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben have anything to do with her selection?

A. Only to the extent of approving my selection.

Q. In other words, he left it entirely up to you?

A. He had left it entirely to me to hire the bookkeeper.

Q. Did you prepare Mr. Lubben's 1945 return, his individual return?

A. As I recall it, I did.

Q. If Mr. Sproull testified that he prepared the 1945 return, would he be wrong?

A. Presumably, since two of us couldn't have prepared the same return and my recollection is that I prepared it since I was his accountant in March, 1946, in opening General Confections.

Q. Do you know when Mr. Sproull became his accountant?

A. After I left in July, 1946.

3819 Q. And when was Mr. Lubben's 1945 return filed?

A. To the best of my recollection, some time before March 15, 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I doubt very much that it is any part of the direct.

By the Court: I think you are exceeding the scope of the direct examination of this witness:

3820 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, the partnership became effective you said, June 1st, but that the partners were in for some time prior to that. What did you mean by that?

A. The books of the sole proprietorship were closed as of May 31, 1946, but the new partners had taken effective control of the operations on the transactions sometime in April of 1945.

Q. It was after that time, you say, that a cash box came into existence, to your knowledge?

A. So far as I can recall, these cash transactions mushroomed to very substantial proportions after these people came in.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the answer, your Honor. He asked him about the time and now he is telling us about the extent.

By the Court: I think he testified on the very same phase of his testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, I have no objection to the subject. It is merely the—

By the Court: What is it you object to?

By Mr. O'Brien: He is asking about the time when 3821 the cash box first came into existence and—

By the Court: Well, the answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, you also stated that you kept some records on the valuation of the inventory, is that correct?

A. Complete—records as complete as we could possibly make them and—

Q. And did you find that there was any relationship between the purchases and sales during the period of the sole proprietorship, percentagewise?

A. I did.

Q. And what was that?

A. In our analysis of merchandise, we treated the gross amount, gross cost of an item—by that I mean—

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I don't mind any account of the method but if the results of the analysis during the proprietorship is involved, I think the books and records which are available would be the best evidence.

By the Court: Yes, I think that is true.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, Mr. Bercu, you are a certified public 3822 accountant, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are an expert in your field. How long have you been a certified public accountant?

A. Since 1924.

Q. Are you familiar with the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. I was with the books and records and I believe all transactions of the Eatsum Food Products up to the time of the partnership.

Q. And did you find that there was any relationship then between the purchases and sales during that period?

A. I did.

Q. What was the relationship?

A. I found that the—

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, your Honor, that that is beyond the scope of the direct. If he wants him as his witness, I think he is subpoenaed as a government witness, and why, that would be proper, but he certainly couldn't get into such a subject. I interrogated him about the 3823 system. I interrogated him about the cash box and the rest had to do with the exhibits which he identified.

By the Court: Well, I think you did ask him about the question of the inventory.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, I did. That is true, about the inventory, whether he kept one.

By the Court: Well, he may answer the question.
3824 By the Witness: In connection with our merchandise analysis work which in a sense is a step beyond the usual books and records of a concern, as I had explained yesterday or started to, we had occasion to—when I say "we" in this instance, I, personally, would check with Mr. Lubben as to the actual cost of every item, every individual purchase, regardless of what the bill showed, and I would also check the selling price of that individual item and I found that Mr. Lubben's express desire to earn 20 per cent gross profit over all in his transactions was well carried out, as shown by the results of the analysis, monthly analysis of his purchases and sales as affected by his inventories, and that included all overages which he paid in cash.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And all overages which he received?

A. Which he might have received in cash.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the overages paid in cash. He wasn't there. He doesn't know what Mr. Lubben did.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell us from your knowledge of the 3825 books and records, Mr. Bercu?

By the Court: Of course, if you are going into the books and records, I think that would constitute the best evidence in that regard.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike the witness's statement about overages.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike, your Honor, the witness's statement about overages that were paid.

By the Court: I think he testified about overages when Mr. O'Brien examined him. That isn't anything he injected into the case now. Mr. O'Brien asked him about overages and how overages were noted on the books.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, he went further than that. He wasn't testifying about a bookkeeping statement. He testified he had seen overages paid. That is what I am objecting to. He couldn't possibly have seen it.

By the Court: If you are speaking of overages, I think the only knowledge you have of overages is in so far 3826 as they were reflected on the books and records?

By the Witness: That is correct.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now you referred likewise to the cash box and you stated that you would get a summary of the cash transactions from Mr. Lubben. What was the nature of this summary that he gave you?

A. Am I—I hate to presume on the Court's time to be so technical, but when you speak of cash box,—while Mr. Lubben was a sole proprietor I never saw any cash box—I don't know whether—other than petty cash. Of course under the partnership I had reason to know or suspect that there were actual cash boxes with large sums in them.

Mr. Lubben handled cash transactions. He tried to account for those to me in connection with our analysis of merchandise, but I never knew of the existence of any cash box in the sense that apparently is being used here now until, I suppose, in April or May of 1945. The amounts involved were so large that they must have been using, literally, a cash box, in the transactions.

Q. That was after the partners came in?

3827 A. After the new people took control.

Q. Did I understand that this summary you received would show the amount of cash received from a customer and the amount of cash paid out to the supplier and the difference?

A. My recollection of Lubben's transactions in the years, in 1944 and early in 1945, was that he very rarely made a sale for cash, or let me put it this way: He rarely made a sale which was not recorded. Whether he received currency or not, he would record the amount of the sale and put through a bill for it. Sometimes they would be marked "cash sale", without the name of the customer, but he would deposit the cash in the regular course of business and I am speaking from recollection of matters going back eight or nine years now, but in those early months, I recall distinctly our discussions with Mr. Lubben about that and his statement that he didn't have to worry about receiving cash or it was just because his ceiling was just about what he chose to make it. He was a newcomer in business and he could always justify any price that he charged a customer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that.

3828 By the Court: I don't think the answer is—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the dissertation.

By the Court: —in response to your question. You asked him about cash and the way that was handled in the partnership.

By the Witness: In the partnership. I beg your pardon.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you get a summary of cash transactions from Mr. Lubben either in the sole proprietorship after the partners came in in April or somewhere in there, or in the partnership?

A. I did.

Q. What was the nature of that summary?

By the Court: Well, during which period, now?

3829 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you get different types of summaries in the two different periods?

A. Well, they would be different in this respect, that this—

Q. Speak first of the one in that period at the close of the sole proprietorship but while the partners were still in control.

A. At the close of the sole proprietorship, I received —it would seem now from the photostat which was presented to me that I must have received some sheet listing the transactions because they were fairly numerous and that I made a transcript of that sheet in my own handwriting.

Q. And that sheet would list the amounts which were paid out in cash, would it?

A. Amounts paid out in cash and amounts received in cash.

Q. And the difference?

A. The difference would be a cash balance on hand.

Q. What did you do with the cash balance on hand, accountingwise, I mean?

A. I honestly couldn't say now what I had actually done. My recollection is that I had either given 3830 orders or had made—

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I think the record will speak for itself on the partnership and proprietorship. That would be the best evidence of that. We don't like to have the rest of his recollection except where he is speaking in general terms.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, let me ask you this question, Mr. Bercu: Was the difference between the cash paid out and the cash received, if it resulted in a profit to Mr. Lubben, was that entered in the income of his business in any way?

A. Again I am speaking from recollection that what he did on a number of occasions—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the recollection when we have got the books and the work sheets here.

By the Court: Have you got the books here to show the transactions?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, but this is the partnership. You are speaking of the partnership?

A. I am not speaking of the partnership. I am 3831 speaking of the—I understood your question was with reference to the sole proprietorship.

By the Court: Let us have the question read.

(Question read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, will you just give me the answer as it reflected the partnership books?

A. The partnership books?

Q. Yes.

A. Nothing at all was done about it.

Q. You don't know what happened in there?

A. I do not.

Q. Now, do you know what happened in the proprietorship books?

A. Yes. As I recall—

By Mr. McConnell: We have the proprietorship books here, Judge, and I object to this.

By the Court: Yes, I think that the books would be the best evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That's all, then, your Honor. Thank you, Mr. Bercu.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask one question.

3832 By the Court: All right.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. You referred to these cash authorization slips which you suggested that Mr. Lubben prepare. Do you recall in your cross examination you stated that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had nothing more than his word on the cash authorization slips, did you?

A. His word plus these merchandise analysis which indicated that there was a gross profit margin which he tried to realize on his merchandising transactions.

3833 Q. Well, you had no receipt for anybody for the money, did you?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. All you had was his word that he paid the money, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And it is true you said it was self-serving didn't you?

A. Yes. I pointed it out to him when we first set up the system.

Q. It was self-serving and it was Mr. Lubben's self-serving statement?

A. No question about that.

By Mr. McConnell: That's all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.
By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Bercu.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I think we have time, Judge, for that witness Starr who I spoke to you about. He would like to get away. He is rather short.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Starr.

3834 SAMUEL STARR, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Starr?
A. Samuel Starr, S-t-a-r-r.
Q. You live in New York City?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you are an accountant?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your certificate in New York State?
A. Public accountant.

By the Court. A little louder, Mr. Starr.

By the Witness:

A. Public accountant.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Talk to the jury. I know what you are going to say, but—
A. Yes. Public accountant.
Q. In the year 1945, did you do any work on the books and records of Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. I did.
Q. When did you commence, about?
3835 A. It was some time during the month of June or July of 1945 that I started.
Q. How long did you stay?
A. At that time I only worked about three or four months for Eatsum Food Products.
Q. You say at that time. Did you later come back?
A. I came back later, yes.
Q. When did you come back?

A. Well, I came back when it was under a different ownership. David Lubben wasn't connected with Eatsum Food Products when I came back.

Q. I see. Well, during Mr. Lubben's connection with the company you worked for a period of months, as you have just described?

A. That is right.

Q. For whom did you work?

A. Louis J. Roth.

Q. And Mr. Roth was one of the auditors separate from Mr. Bercu who just testified here?

A. That is right.

Q. And in the course of your work on the books of the partnership, did you have occasion personally to prepare certain work sheets?

A. I don't think so, not at that time, no.

3836 Q. Did you later?

A. I did, yes.

Q. From the partnership books and records?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have the original work sheets which you prepared?

A. I haven't any work sheets.

Q. What did you do with them?

A. As soon as I prepared any work sheets, I turned them over to Mr. Roth.

By Mr. Lockley: May I ask when these were prepared? You have found out it was later, but we don't know when.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, all right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you prepare work sheets on your first engagement?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Then when was it that you prepared them?

A. It must have been about a year later. I prepared the work sheets for closings to prepare for the tax return, and the tax return was filed about six to nine months late.

3837 Q. Did you prepare some work sheets in the month of September of 1945?

A. Well, it all depends on what you call the work sheet. I mean, what type of work sheet are you referring to?

Q. Well, any type, any kind.

A. Well, I might have made out some work sheet analyses on purchases or something like that.

Q. Yes, but by work sheet I didn't mean to be technical, Mr. Starr. By work sheet I simply mean the working papers of an accountant pertaining to whatever it is he is doing with a set of books or some part of them.

A. Well, a work sheet is usually prepared by an accountant for preparation—to prepare a tax return or statements. A work sheet—an analyzing account would not be called a work sheet.

Q. What?

A. That is what I—

Q. All right, that is fine. Then on definition I mean any paper that you had occasion to prepare from the books and records, I am referring to as a work sheet.

A. I see.

Q. Understand?

3838 A. Then I might have prepared some work sheets from the very beginning, during the first part of my engagement.

3839 Q. Now, when you turned the papers over to Mr. Roth did you retain copies yourself?

A. Never prepared any copies.

Q. You gave—

A. The originals.

Q. —the originals to him. Now, will you look at the documents which I now show you, marked Defendants' Exhibits 65-A through 65—excuse me.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you enumerate them again, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will. They are 65-A through 65-X, inclusive, and also 66-W.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you look at those sheets and tell us whether they are in your handwriting and whether they pertain to work which you did on the books of the partnership?

A. This is not mine.

By the Court: A little louder.

By the Witness:

A. This is not mine.

By Mr. Lockley: Which one is it?

By the Witness:

A. This is not mine.

By Mr. O'Brien:

3840 Q. Is the handwriting in the lefthand column yours?

A. I don't think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am speaking of A now, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 64-I.

By Mr. O'Brien: Where did you get the I so fast?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. It is I. Is it in your handwriting?

A. I don't think so, no.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Starr. I can't hear you.

By the Witness:

A. I am sorry, your Honor. I don't think it is. I don't recognize it. Unless I copied it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, I was calling your attention to the writing in the lefthand column. Let's pass it a minute and I will come back to it.

Now, look at these sheets which are identified as 65-A to 65-X, inclusive. Tell me whether those are in your handwriting.

A. This is mine. 65-A is mine.

Q. Well, look them over and tell us if there is 3841 any one that is not in your writing?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I prefer, Mr. O'Brien, that he go through them one at a time and tell which ones are in his handwriting so we will know which he is looking at.

3842 By the Witness:

A. 65-A and B is mine. 65-C is mine. 65-D doesn't look like mine. 65-E is mine. 65-F is mine. 65-G is not mine.

By Mr. Lockley: That is G as in George?

By the Witness:

A. G. 65-H is not mine. 65-I is not mine. 65-J is mine. 65-K is mine. 65-L is mine. 65-M is not mine. 65-O is mine. 65-N is mine. 65-P is mine. 65-Q is mine. 65-R is mine. 65-S is mine. 65-T is mine. 65-U is mine. 65-V is mine. 65-W is mine. 65-X is mine.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, going back to 65-D, Mr. Starr, is that not the second page of the schedule started on 65-C, which you have identified as yours?

A. It is, yes. 65-D is mine, too.

Q. I call your attention to 65-M. Do you know whose handwriting it is in?

A. Well, it is not in my handwriting.

Q. You said that.

A. It could either be one of two people.

Q. Who?

A. Either Mr. Roth or Mr. Hausman.

3843 Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Roth's handwriting?

A. Well, I was. I don't know if I can recall it now.

By Mr. O'Brien: Give me one of the Hausman sheets, will you?

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to this, your Honor. This witness is not an expert on handwriting and I think that this is an improper way of refreshing his recollection. If he doesn't know the handwriting, he doesn't know it.

By the Court: Well, I don't know what counsel is going to show him.

By Mr. Lockley: I have a fair idea.

By the Court: If it isn't in evidence, I don't suppose you have a right to state it is Roth's handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't even know if that is in Hausman's handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendant's Exhibit B for identification, as of today.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit B for identification.)

3844 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Have you seen Mr. Hausman's handwriting before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And you are familiar with his handwriting?

A. Well, I was. I mean, this is going back eight years.

Q. Will you look at the instrument marked B for identification and tell me in whose handwriting it appears to be?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object on the ground that this is not a known exemplar of Mr. Hausman's handwriting, it hasn't been identified in any way by Hausman, or anyone else, and this is an improper way of trying to refresh this witness's recollection as to what Mr. Hausman's handwriting looks like, and he is not an expert witness on handwriting matters.

By Mr. O'Brien: I submit there is nothing improper about it, Counsel.

By the Court: I think he has a right to state whether or not, in his opinion, the handwriting is one known to him.

3845 By Mr. O'Brien: That is all I am asking him, Judge.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I don't remember the handwriting, but I do remember Mr. Hausman made up statemtnts of this sort, he drew his lines without a ruler. I always use a ruler. I think that would be Hausman's handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Speaking of B. How about Exhibit 65-M, are you able to state whether that is in the handwriting of Mr. Roth? I mean Louie Roth, the man you worked for?

A. Yes. It is hard for me to say. I don't think so, personally.

By the Court: We will take our recess now until 2:00 o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day, Tuesday, October 6, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois
Tuesday, October 6, 1953,
2:00 o'clock p. m.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now resume its session.

3847 SAMUEL STARR, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 66-W and tell me if that is in your handwriting?

A. It is.

Q. Is this a sheet on which you made entry from the partnership books?

A. When you say partnership, are you referring to the partnership when Lubben was in?

Q. Yes.

A. May I see that a minute?

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I did not hear you.

By the Witness: I just asked to see the paper. May I hear that question again, please.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I don't hear you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read the ques-
3848 tion.

By the Witness: Just read the question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Well; this sheet was made after David Lubben was out.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And when?

A. I couldn't give you the exact date because—

Q. What was the period of your employment after Lubben went out?

A. Well, I still worked for Mr. Roth on the same basis. I think Mr. Hausman at that time was no longer connected with Mr. Roth and I had to take over and prepare work sheets and these were some of the exceptions that I had listed on the paper.

Q. And for how long did you stay?

A. Well, I worked with Mr. Roth until 1948, 1949.

Q. In the same partnership?

A. Well, if they were still in existence by then, yes.

Q. Well, I am asking you about the partnership, Mr. Starr.

A. But this notation was done afterwards. I
3849 mean, Mr. Lubben was not connected any longer with them.

Q. Well, regardless of who was connected with them, was it taken from the Eatsum Food Products partnership books?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know to what period your comments relating to it were applied?

A. I couldn't honestly tell you. I don't remember.

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me just a moment, Jack, do you have the loans and exchanges account?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 65-I for identification and tell us if you know the handwriting.

A. No, I don't.

Q. Look at Defendants' Exhibit 65-G and H and M, M as in Mary, and tell me—you have seen these before. You have seen these before today, Mr. Starr, but tell me whether you do or do not recognize the handwriting.

A. On 65-G and H I do not know the handwriting. On 65-M, I can't identify the handwriting.

3850 Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Roth's handwriting?

A. Well, I have seen his handwriting. He signed checks for me.

Q. Can you state whether or not 65-M is in Mr. Roth's handwriting?

A. I couldn't definitely state that.

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By the Witness: I couldn't definitely state that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. 65-I, you saw that before, this morning. Will you look at it again and tell me whether you recognize any of the handwriting?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhiibt 64-O, P, Q, R and S, and tell me whether that is the loan, the same loans and exchange account as the notes on 66-M referred to?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien, will you correct me if I am wrong, but my records show Exhibit 64-O, P, Q, R and S are not in evidence. Is that what you have handed to the witness?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I was under the impression 3851 that they are in evidence, as I recall it. Of course, I do not have the transcript before me, but as I recall it, the Court admitted Defendants' Exhibit 64-A, B, C, D, E, F and so on.

By Mr. Lockley: G, H.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right all the way to V and W.

By Mr. Lockley: No. No, sir, Mr. O'Brien.

By the Court: You didn't identify P, Q, R and S, according to my notes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry, Judge, but nevertheless I will show—

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: —the witness the document so marked for identification rather than being in evidence and ask him to state if the loans and exchange accounts referred to in those sheets is the same account as he was commenting upon in 66-W for identification.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object on the grounds that none of those exhibts are in evidence and none of them have been identified including—3852 By the Court: I assume he is trying to lay a foundation.

By the Witness: Shall I answer?

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. The figure that I have there of $113,000.00 was not taken from any of these sheets.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I thought perhaps it was.

A. Those sheets, if your Honor please, were made out by Bernard Bercu and never—I never worked for him and I never used his paper.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if I haven't offered these, Judge—

By the Court: I don't think they have been identified by anybody, so far as any records show.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, I think they are identified by Mr.—

By the Court: Well, they may be, but if you don't refer to exhibits I can't make any note of it. If you just show the witness a paper, I have no notation of it being even identified.

3853 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, my records show Mr. O'Brien skipped from 64-N to 64-T, leaving out O, P, Q, R and S.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I will not take the time now. I will check the record on that, Judge, and see what 3854 the fact is. For the purpose of cross examination of this witness, if the Court please, I offer—

By the Court: What do you mean, for the purpose of cross examination?

By Mr. O'Brien: For the purpose of any cross examination that counsel may desire—

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. O'Brien: —I offer into evidence at this time, so that they will be available to him, the documents marked 65-A and B, which are an accounts payable schedule for September of 1945; 65-C and D, accounts payable schedules for October of '45; 65-E and F, accounts payable schedule for November of 1945, 65-J, covering notes on purchases for May 31, 1945; 65-K, working papers, May 31, 1946, covering June 1, 1945, to May 21, 1946; 65-L, a continuation—well, I don't know whether it is a continuation or not, but they are working papers, May 31, 1946; 65-O, May 31, 1945, notes of purchases; 65-N, the same notation, purchases, May 31, 1945; 65-P, the same; 65-Q, the same; 65-R, more of the same; 65-S, 3855 more of the same; also 65-T, and 65-U and V— Uand V, those are purchases, May, 1945; 65-W are notes on purchases, July, 1945; and 65-X, notes on purchases, June, 1945.

And you may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: At the outset, I object to those documents on the ground that there has been no proper foundation laid for the absence of the originals; that there has been no foundation laid that they were prepared in the ordinary course of business, or the circumstances under which they were prepared; that there has been no foundation as to their accuracy or as to the accuracy of the books and records from which they were prepared.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I may ask some further questions of this witness, although I will have other connecting testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien:

3856 Q. But these items which I have shown you, Mr. Starr, and which you have identified, were they made in the course of your employment by Mr. Roth from the records of the Eatsum Food Products partnership?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Roth was one of the accountants having the accounting work at that firm?

A. That's true.

3857 Q. Do you recall that these schedules and sheets and notes which I have shown you are true and correct, according to what you learned from the books and records, at the time you made them?

A. That's right.

Q. And when you finished, as I understand it, you delivered the original sheets to Mr. Roth?

A. Either to Mr. Roth or to Mr. Hausman.

Q. To one or the other?

A. That's right.

Q. And you did not retain copies?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you do not now have either the originals or a copy?

A. No, sir.

Q. Of any one or either of these sheets?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is as far as I can go with this witness, Judge.

By the Court: Well, I will make the same ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am only trying to—

By the Court: I understand.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not disputing the ruling in 3858 any way, your Honor, but I am trying to say that I have gone as far as I can with this witness in that part of my proof. The rest of my proof I will adduce through other witnesses.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: But if there be any questions which counsel desires to ask on these exhibits I am tendering the witness. Otherwise I am through with him.

By Mr. Lockley: Did you re-offer them, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, I will re-offer them on the basis—but the Court says its ruling would be the same.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, no cross examination then, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am correct in that, am I not?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: That your ruling is the same as of this time?

By the Court: Yes.

But you understand, Mr. Lockley, that counsel
3859 intends to lay additional foundation and then to re-offer. You understand, he hasn't abandoned the exhibits.

By Mr. Lockley: Then I would like to ask a couple questions.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Starr, you said you worked at Eatsum Food Products Company partnership for about four months from June or July of 1945, is that correct?

A. Four or five months; yes, sir.

Q. That would take you until about September?

A. A little later than that. About October or November.

Q. And did you ever work on the books and records themselves, making any entries in the original books and records?

A. You mean writing in the books?

Q. Yes.

A. Or do you mean check marks?

Q. I meant writing in them.

A. No, sir.

3860 Q. You made check marks in them in the process of preparing these work sheets, I presume?

A. That's right.

Q. You went over them?

A. Right.

Q. Who instructed you to prepare these work sheets?

A. Mr. Roth.

Q. And when was that?

A. Well—

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Starr.

By the Witness:

A. When he sent me out on my assignment, he told me what he wanted done. It might have been the day before I got there, it might have been a week before. I mean, he just told me what he needed or what he wanted.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was this after Mr. Lubben left the partnership?

A. No, those records were before. Some of them were, anyway.

Q. Will you show me which of these records were prepared by you after Mr. Lubben left the partnership and will you please call off the exhibit numbers on those particular records?

3861 A. Well, I don't recall the exact day that he left.

Q. Well, you said that you worked there for two periods, one during the summer of 1945, and then you came back, as I understand it, in 1947, after Mr. Hausman had left, is that correct?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, no.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was it '46?

A. '46.

Q. After Mr. Hausman left?

A. Actually I never had left. What I meant was, I didn't exactly work on the Eatsum partnership. I was still working for Roth.

Q. You were working for Roth?

A. That's right.

Q. But on some other account that Mr. Roth also serviced at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. So you didn't have any connection with the Eatsum Food Products books from the time you left about September, '45, until what time in 1946?

A. Well, I might have been called in for a day or two in between. I don't recall. I mean, I might 3862 have been.

Q. Were any of those books prepared during that period of time?

By Mr. O'Brien: You mean the sheets.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Any of those sheets—sorry—yes.

A. Well, I still would have to know the time Lubben actually left, so I can tell you the exact date, whether I made it out before or after.

Q. Were they prepared after March 8th, 1946, any of those records, any of those work sheets?

A. Exhibit 65-K, which is a work sheet, was prepared after Mr. Lubben had left.

By the Court: A?

By Mr. Lockley: K, I believe it is.

By the Witness: K.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And this is dated May 31, 1946.

A. And 65-L as in Leonard, which is a continuation.

3863 Those two are the only exhibits that were prepared later on.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And the balance of them were prepared during your four-month stay in 1945?

A. Right.

Q. Now, from what basic books and records were the 1945 work sheets prepared?

A. Well, I was working on the purchase book and accounts payable.

Q. Just the purchase book and the accounts payable book?

A. Right.

Q. Did you ever work on the cash disbursements book?

A. I may have helped out Mr. Hausman one or two times.

Q. Do any of these work sheets relate to the cash disbursements book?

A. No. He prepared the work sheets on those books.

Q. These are just on the amount of purchases on the accounts payable?

A. Right.

Q. You were working entirely under the direction
3864 of Mr. Roth at that time, is that so?

A. That is right.

Q. And did Mr. Roth tell you or give you instructions in the preparation of these work sheets?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who gave you instructions?

A. I didn't need any instructions. He just gave me instructions on what kind of work sheets he wanted.

Q. Oh, I see. Did he tell you what they were for?

A. No.

Q. What was Mr. Roth's policy with reference to telling you what he was doing or what you were supposed to do?

A. Well, any time I asked any questions of Mr. Roth he told me to mind my own business, he knew what he was doing.

Q. Do you know whether the books and records from which these work sheets were prepared were true and correct?

A. The part that I had—

Q. Of your own knowledge?

A. The part that I checked, I believe was true and correct. I mean, as far as the accounting procedure.

3865 By Mr. McConnell: There is no showing this witness kept any books and record at all. How could he testify to that?

By the Court: I don't know. He can state whether or not he knows.

By the Witness: I mean, the part of the books that I checked was just from the bills into the purchase book itself and furthermore into the accounts payable ledger.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know whether the Eatsum partnership books and records were ever closed?

A. No. I mean by that they were never closed, so far as I know.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a couple of questions.

By the Witness: All right.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Those Exhibits K and L, 65-K and L, although they were made after Lubben left, they covered the period from June 1, 1945 to May 31, 1946; did they not?

3866 A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that's all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Pardon me, Mr. Starr. Just one question. Do you know Exhibits 65-H and L also contain some material which relates to the period after March 8th or 9th of 1946 when Mr. Lubben was no longer there; isn't that so?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you have that partnership—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. When the books were completely under the control of Mr. Roth and Mr. Giglio?

A. Right.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you have that partnership—

By Mr. O'Brien: And Miss Feldman.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you know where that Eatsum general ledger is, the one with the paper cover? It isn't in this:

I want to ask Mr. Starr about something which he has said is in his handwriting and he said he couldn't fix 3867 the period.

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. That is 66-W, isn't it, Mr. Starr?

A. That is right.

Q. And I show you a sheet which has already been marked Exhibit 36 for identification, and that appears to be the loans and exchange account of Eatsum, doesn't it?

A. That is right.

3868 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, Mr. Starr, could you take a look at that loans and exchanges ledger that you have in your hand there and see whether you can find the date with the amount of the balance is the same as the amount of the balance on that sheet that I handed you which is 66-W?

A. April 30, 1946.

Q. Now, Mr. Starr, now that you have taken a look at that and taken a look again at your own handwriting on Exhibit 66-W, does that fix in your mind about when that was made?

A. Well, it was made—well, it would appear to have been made sometime in May of 1946.

Q. In 1946?

A. In 1946.

Q. There is no question but what it is your handwriting, Mr. Starr?

A. On the sheet?

Q. Yes.

A. That is right.

Q. And you made it in accordance with your work that you were doing there at the time?

A. Well, that is a question, now. Now this nota-3869tion—I usually make a notation like this when I am closing the books and it might have been made May, 1946, and then again it might have been made much later. I couldn't tell you exactly.

Q. Yes, but the question was it was made in connection with your work on the books?

A. Yes.

Q. Oh, yes, and it ties into the account that you hold in your hand in that bound book?

A. That is right.

Q. All right, fine. And in it you were asking questions about how to allocate certain items, is that the fact?

A. I was asking a question on how to allocate the total.

Q. Yes, all right.

By Mr. Kirby: And now, if the Court please, the witness has keyed this particular exhibit to one of the books, the time and everything like that. Now, the only question remaining would be that it is a photostat rather than an original and it is within the partnership period.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object
3870 to it.

By the Court: Any questions he may ask do not constitute admissible evidence any way.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it becomes quite an important question and if I was—

By the Court: That may be, but still it isn't admissible into evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: The work papers, I mean, on this account.

By the Court: I assume that there are some questions that the auditor has.

By Mr. Kirby: It relates to a specific transaction which is of importance, your Honor.

By the Court: Are you offering it into evidence?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Well, I will sustain the objection. What is that exhibit number again, please.

By Mr. Kirby: 66-W, your Honor, and it relates to exceptions on the audit with respect to loans and ex-3871 changes. That's all.

By the Court: I think he stated 66-W is in whose handwriting?

By Mr. Kirby: It is in his own handwriting, Judge, and he made it in connection with that book.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all, Mr. Starr.

(Witness excused.)

ARTHUR M. ROBINSON, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Arthur M. Robinson.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Robinson?

A. Keokuk, Iowa.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am the vice president in charge of sales for the Hubbinger Company who manufactures corn syrup 3872 and starches.

By the Court: Robinson or Robertson?

By the Witness: Robinson.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And how long have you been with the Hubbinger Company?

A. Since December 1, 1939.

3873 Q. In what capacities?

A. I went there as assistant sales manager. The sales manager had an accident, I believe, in about 1942 and in about 1944 I was made acting sales manager and about a year later, sales manager, and in about 1947, vice president in charge of sales.

Q. Now during the years 1945 and 1946, you were in sales then?

A. That is right.

Q. And was one of the company's accounts in those days The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It was.

Q. You knew the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Now Mr. Robinson, how many corn refiners are there in the United States?

A. Well, there are practically eight major ones. There are some that process other grains that are sometimes considered in the class, but actually there are eight.

Q. Well, which are the eight that process most of the corn in this country?

A. Corn Products Refining Company, A. E. Staley, 3874 in Decatur, the Clinton Company, at Clinton, Iowa, American Maize Products Company in New York, the Hubinger Company at Keokuk, Anheuser Busch in St. Louis, Union Starch Refining Company at Granite City. Their general office is at Columbus, Indiana. National Starch, New York.

Q. During the war, Mr. Robinson, were there some restrictions on the grinding of corn by refiners, generally?

A. Yes, there were Government restrictions on our grind.

Q. I don't really want to go into all the details of it, but just describe, will you, the corn syrup supply situation during the war years and on up into and including 1946, will you please?

A. Well, starting in about 1942, the industry had a very unusual demand for corn syrup because of the shortage of sugar primarily, and there were a lot of—

Q. Is corn syrup usable in place of sugar?

A. It can be used as a sugar replacement, although it is not as sweet as sugar.

It is generally considered to be about sixty per cent as sweet as sugar. There were a lot of manufacturers 3875 who previous to the war had no use for corn syrup or who didn't use it who wanted to use some kind of sweetener when they were short of sugar. They were primarily bottlers and some of the bakery trade and the ice cream manufacturers who before the war had not used corn syrup. When the sugar became short, they began to use it to the point where our production went up to full capacity as soon as we could get it up there and of course everybody, both in the industry we had been serving and all these new industries had been after us for corn syrup right from the beginning of 1942, through and beyond the end of the war, beyond the end of the actual war.

Q. Now sugar, of course, was rationed?

A. That is right.

Q. But was corn syrup rationed?

A. No, it was not rationed.

Q. You had to get rationing points to get sweetening in the form of sugar, did you?

A. That is right.

Q. Now to get sweetening in the form of corn syrup did you have to get rationing points?

A. No.

Q. That was just a question of supply and demand?

3876 A. Yes, it was. And the manufacturer set his own allotments to his trade.

Q. And is corn syrup used in the confectionery industry?

A. Yes. If I am not mistaken, it is the largest single customer of the corn refining industry, the candy manufacturing trade.

Q. Well, go ahead then. These other people started to come on. The other people that hadn't used it came in, and then what happened?

A. Well, it got to the point where we, as manufacturers of corn syrup, had to arrive at some kind of allocation basis for our customers, and we made an attempt to guarantee all of the customers with whom we had done business before the war that we would give them an amount of syrup equaling to what they had in the year 1941 and if our production increased, we made an attempt to give them part of the increase of our production.

Q. Is there some Federal restriction upon the amount of corn you could grind?

A. There was at one time, but it was late in the war and I don't remember exactly the year, but if I 3877 am not mistaken, it was about in 1945.

Up until that time we had been able to buy all the corn that we could process in our plant and then the black market developed in corn to the point where we weren't able to buy all that we needed to keep our production going and if I am not mistaken, it must have been about late 1945 or early 1946 that the Government set a restriction. I believe it was based on 80 per cent of the previous year's grind. In other words, we were not allowed to grind more than 80 per cent of corn than the amount we had ground in the previous year.

3878 Q. What was the shortage in corn or availability, at least?

A. Well, I didn't have anything to do with the buying of corn myself. It is a separate department in our company, but I did know something about our acquiring corn and we bought, unlike most of the others—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he is testifying of his own knowledge.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, he knows it.

By Mr. Lockley: He just said he didn't know anything about it.

By the Court: Well, he can tell what he knew about it.

By the Witness:

A. We, differently than other manufacturers in our industry, we bought most of our corn out at country elevators rather than at terminal markets like Chicago, and we were dealing with country elevators and it developed that the price of corn—that corn was more valuable to the farmer, actually, for feeding the hogs than it was for selling as regular corn. In other words if corn was 3879 selling at $1.22 it was entirely possible that that same corn fed to a hog would be worth $3.00 a bushel. That made it very difficult to get corn, in addition to the fact that when the farmers decided to feed more of their corn to hogs and animals, it shortened up the supply further so that we couldn't buy the quantity we were allowed under government allotment of 80 per cent, to use.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And then what developed in the market?

A. Well, actually there were sales being made of corn out in the country on the basis of a seller—from the elevator operators out there and the farmers—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, please, I would like to have the time and the place and the circumstances, if you please.

By the Court: I don't believe that this generalizing is going to be helpful. It must be limited to certain specific instances concerning the defendants that we are dealing with.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, we are initially concerned with the conditions that existed in the market.

3880 By the Court: Yes, generally.

By Mr. Kirby: I don't mean to have Mr. Robinson go into detail.

By the Court: But what other people may have done and what they may have primarily engineered is not a part of this lawsuit.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, this difficulty in getting corn, that affected your company?

A. Yes, it caused us to reduce production considerably and it made it impossible for us to take care of any of the regular customers that we had been selling for years and then we were approached by some of our customers who told us they could get corn if we were—

By Mr. Lockley: I object again to the general nature of the testimony, your Honor.

The Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let me go to something else. Do you have any records with respect to Shotwell for any of this period?

3881 A. Yes. Back through 1946 we have records of shipments of corn made in the name of Shotwell to the Hubbinger Company and we have sales records and invoices for 1946 but no invoices prior to that time because the company had a habit, a practice of destroying invoices and other records that were more than five years old.

Q. But do you have the invoices for 1946 from your company to Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. We subpoenaed them. May I see them, please?

(Witness hands documents to counsel.)

Q. Have you handed me all of the 1946 invoices from your company to Shotwell?

A. I am sure they are all there.

By Mr. Kirby: I will get all of these marked in a series as Exhibit No. 67, with the sub letters beneath it and ask that they be admitted in evidence. I do want to question the witness with respect to some writing that is upon them, your Honor. These are retained invoices, their invoices to Shotwell for 1946.

9 (Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibit 67 with sub letters for identification.)

3882 By Mr. Lockley: Your indulgence for just a moment, your Honor, while we are comparing them. May I ask Mr. Robinson a question about these?

By Mr. Kirby: Surely.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Robinson, do you know when these were prepared?

A. When those invoices were prepared?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Our general procedure is to prepare them immediately after shipment, which is probably the day following shipment.

Q. Will you tell me what High Sweet is?

A. It is a special grade of corn syrup. There are three different types.

Q. And what is "O. K. thin boiling starch"?

A. It is a thin boiling starch used in the manufacture of certain candies.

Q. Is it also a sweetening?

A. No, it is not.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to those. Let 3883 me see. I don't see what starch has to do with it.

3884 By Mr. Kirby: I will ask him.

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Robinson, starch is a product of corn?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And was there the same difficulty with respect to the supply of starch as there was with respect to the supply of anything else made from corn?

A. Yes, because they both come from corn, the same process.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection, your Honor.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 67-A to 67-W, inclusive.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. On Exhibit 67-B, I notice this entry, "Our records only. Charge against corn purchases." Did you note that on that exhibit?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain that?

A. It was done in our office to keep track of the shipments we had made against corn received from customers.

We had many customers who were not sending corn 3885 to us and we were trying to ship them regularly.

We had other customers who shipped corn to us and we got this notation on the invoice to identify cars of syrup and starch that had been sent to customers who had furnished corn to us to keep our plant operating.

Q. Well, now, on Shotwell—I notice as I go through these invoices that that same entry appears repeatedly on these carloads of corn syrup. You notice that yourself.

A. Yes.

Q. Well, now, tell us, please, what is this "corn purchased by Shotwell" that you refer to there; explain that, will you please?

A. Well, at the time we were unable to get corn in the market as we normally did through the regular course of going out on the market to buy it. Some of our customers offered to furnish corn to us, if we would process it.

By Mr. Lockley: Again, your Honor, I object to the general nature of the testimony.

By the Court: We are talking about Shotwell.

3886 By Mr. Lockley: —unless he has some definite information relating to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Witness:

A. Shotwell offered to furnish corn to us if we would process it and return part of our production from that corn in the form of corn syrup or starch. And that we agreed to do. And these notations on these invoices were put on here to show that this corn syrup, or the starch that was shipped on some of those other invoices, was shipped against the corn that Shotwell had furnished to us.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And when Shotwell furnished the corn to you, at what price was it furnished?

A. We bought the corn at the regular ceiling price.

Q. At OPA—

A. OPA ceiling prices.

Q. The corn that Shotwell made available to you?

A. That's right.

Q. Why didn't you buy that corn yourself in the open market at OPA prices?

A. Because, as I mentioned before, we couldn't 3887 buy it in the open market. With the OPA ceiling price of corn, it was much more valuable to the farmers as feed for cattle and hogs.

In addition to that it was being sold in the black market to other people who needed corn for one purpose or another.

Q. At that time there was no corn moving into your plant at all from the regular market, was there?

A. I wouldn't say no corn. Very little.

Q. And, Mr. Robinson, was there a man at your office, now dead, who kept some little memoranda with respect to these corn deals?

A. Yes, L. G. Evers, our corn—grain buyer at the time.

3888 Q. As I understand it, he is dead?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you got the sheet from his memo book that relates to Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. For a part of the period at least?

A. That's right here.

Q. Now, what kind of a document are you referring to?

A. Well, this is a day book showing purchases of corn by this grain buyer, and it has—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, until such time as the book has been properly identified.

By the Court: Generally he may state what it purports to be, but without going into any contents.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What do you say it purports to be?

A. Well, it is a record of the amount of corn that we bought on each day, and the price we paid for it, and from whom it was bought, the shipper and all.

By Mr. Kirby: Would you mark that Defendants'
3889 Exhibit No. 68 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 68 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Besides this book, which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 68 for identification, was there some other memorandum of corn deals?

A. Yes, we have a sheet which was kept in the sales department. That was a purchasing—grain purchasing department record there.

Q. You mean Exhibit 68?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What was kept in the sales department?

A. We also kept in the sales department a figure that we got from the grain buying department, showing th number of bushels of corn that was shipped to us by any customer, and then showing the dates and the amounts of shipments of corn syrup or starch against those corn shipments.

Q. And you have some records of that type that relate to Shotwell?

A. I have such a record here for Shotwell, yes.

3890 Q. And is that the record which I have marked Defendants' Exhibit 69?

A. Yes, that's it.

Q. And in whose handwriting is that?

A. It is in the handwriting of Mr. John Fanning, who at the time was an assistant in the sales department.

Q. Assistant to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I notice that there are some references on it to A. M. R. Who is A. M. R.?

A. That refers to me.

Q. And you are the one that gave the orders with respect to those kind of things?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, was that a memoranda which was kept in the regular course of the business of your company?

A. After it was once begun, it was kept regularly and daily.

Q. Well, after you did get started with it, it was so kept?

A. That's right.

Q. And what does it purport to cover for the period involved in it?

3891 A. Well, the purpose of our keeping it was to know how many bushels of corn we had received from Shotwell, and showing a total number of bushels received, and the amount of corn syrup that was due Shotwell, based on so many bushels, and on the bottom of their sheet it shows the shipments of corn syrup and starch against the corn that was received.

Q. And does that accurately reflect the period which it purports to cover, so far as the records of the company are concerned?

A. It does.

Q. Relating to Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you shown me all the records that you have with respect to any corn purchase deals with Shotwell, Mr. Robinson?

A. Yes, I have.

3892 By Mr. Kirby: I now offer in evidence the red book, which is 68, and the memo, which is 69.

By the Court: Well, I think counsel should see them.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Is this Exhibit 68, Mr. Robinson, in your handwriting?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Or any part of it?

A. No, that was in the handwriting of Mr. Evers, who was our corn buyer at the time.

Q. Did you have any part to do in keeping that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know whether the entries in it are true and correct?

A. Only that I believe that all the records of the company are true and correct. And that is just another one of the many that we have.

Q. Where did you obtain the record?

A. It has been kept in the offices as a record of our corn purchases during that period. It came 3893 out of our general office, and as an officer of the company I believe I have access to it.

Q. Has it been your practice to keep this sort of a record?

A. It is still being kept.

Q. Just like this?

A. I wouldn't say just like that, no. Although it is very similar.

Q. Were any of the entries contained in this book ever transcribed to any of the other records of the company?

A. That other exhibit is the one record where figures were transferred. That happens to be the record of corn that we received for the individual company, for Shotwell in this case, and our shipments of corn syrup and starch against the corn received. The corn on that second exhibit came out of that red book.

Q. You mean on Exhibit No. 69, that is a transcription of the Shotwell entries on Exhibit 68?

A. That's right.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Where is the original book from which Ex-
3894 hibit 69 was taken?

A. It is at Keokuk. It has no other information on Shotwell in it.

Q. It has information as to other customers, is that it?

A. That's right.

Q. And was this made under your supervision and direction, this particular record?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: We have no objection, your Honor.
By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 68 and 69.)

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Robinson, would you read the entries with respect to corn supplied by Shotwell that appear in that book, 68.

A. Under date of Wednesday, February 6, 1946, "Cargill at Cedar Rapids, 15 cars of No. 2,"—meaning 3895 No. 2 yellow corn— "ceiling plus 27,"— ceiling plus two and a half, it is—"2-½ merchandising, and ½ brokerage", I believe.

And another entry is the name of Shotwell Candy Company. There is a pencil notation showing 23123, which was probably our corn purchase number.

Q. Now, that's 15 carloads of corn that that talks about?

A. That's right.

Q. Keyed to Shotwell Company?

A. That's right.

Q. And what does that mean, 15 carloads of corn keyed to Shotwell, what does that mean?

A. It means that Shotwell had arranged to have those cars of corn shipped to us from Cargill Grain at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They were bought on February 6, 1946 and sent to our plant. And we were to process them and give Shotwell a portion of the production of syrup and starch from that corn.

3896 Q. Now, how many pounds would you get of product out of the bushel?

A. 38 pounds—35 pounds of corn syrup and approximately 38 pounds of starch, because of the difference in dry substance.

Q. 37 pounds of corn—

A. 35 corn syrup, 38 starch.

Q. Now, looking at Exhibit 69—did I give that back to you?

A. No.

By the Court: What do you mean, out of one bushel of corn?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. You don't get both amounts. You get one or the other. You don't get both syrup and starch out of the same bushel. You get either 35 pounds of corn syrup or 38 pounds of starch. You don't get both.

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Looking at Exhibit 69, Mr. Robinson, can you tell how many pounds of corn syrup were to be sent to Shotwell out of the 35 pounds you would get per bushel?

3897 A. 15 pounds.

Q. Who kept the other 20 pounds?

A. It was used by us to service our other trade.

Q. So that from any bushel of corn that Shotwell bought in the black market and sent to you they would have the right—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the form of the question. There has been no evidence that Shotwell bought any corn in the black market.

By the Court: There is no evidence that they bought in the black market.

By Mr. Kirby:

Do you know where they bought the corn?

A. From these, it shows that 15 cars came from Cargill.

By Mr. Lockley: Was Cargill in the black market?

By the Witness: I can't say that.

By Mr. Kirby: Cargill was simply a broker.

By the Court: We don't know that. You have to prove that. You are assuming things that are not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, Mr. Robinson, your company tried to buy

3898 corn at ceiling?

A. That's right.

Q. Were you able to?

A. No.

Q. Now, this 15 cars of corn that you speak of would entitle Shotwell to get, at ceiling, a certain amount of corn syrup from your company, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And that was on the ratio of 15 pounds of corn syrup out of each 35 pounds of corn syrup, or out of each bushel of corn they supplied?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, would you look on the next day and see whether again there was some corn shipped by Shotwell.

A. Yes, on Thursday, February 7, 1946, one car from Cargill, Incorporated, Cedar Rapids. It is marked Area A, 2 Y,—which means two yellow— ceiling, plus two and a half merchandising, plus one half brokerage, Shotwell Candy Company.

Q. And then that was on a Thursday, and on the following Saturday, February 9, did you get some more corn supplied through Shotwell?

3899 A. Yes, on Saturday, February 9 there is an entry, Daniel F. Rice & Company, Chicago, one car of 2 Yellow, at a dollar and twelve and three-eighths, Minneapolis, plus two and a half cents merchandising, Keokuk weights and grades, Shotwell Candy.

3900 Q. Then the following Monday did you get some more corn supplied by Shotwell?

A. Yes, on Monday, February 11, there was an entry, Cargill, Incorporated, Cedar Rapids, 14 cars No. 2 Yellow, Area A, ceiling, as soon as possible, plus two and a half cents merchandising, plus one half brokerage, Shotwell Candy Company.

Q. Now, in answer to one of Mr. Lockley's questions you said that the material from that red book—

By the way, have I covered with you as many entries as exist in that book with respect to Shotwell?

A. Yes, I believe you have.

Q. Now, in answer to one of Mr. Lockley's questions about the red book there you said that the material from the red book was carried forward into this little memorandum, which is Exhibit 69, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, does that show—Exhibit 69,—how many bushels were involved in the shipments in that five-day period?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. How many bushels did Shotwell make available

3901 in that five-day period?

A. 48,754.

Q. Now, for that 48,754—is that the corn purchase deals which are referred to on the invoices, Mr. obinson?

A. It is.

Q. And was corn syrup shipped under that corn purchase deal?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And how much corn syrup was shipped in connection with the purchase by Shotwell of that corn in that five-day period?

A. In that five-day period?

Q. Yes.

A. You mean shipments in that five-day period?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't tell you that. I have to refer to the invoices.

Q. I don't mean how much corn syrup you shipped in the five days, but you have told us about these 48,000 some bushels of corn that Shotwell made available.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, can you tell me from Exhibit 69
3902 how much corn syrup was shipped in connection with that corn that was supplied?

A. 816,000 pounds.

By the Court: Eight hundred what?

By the Witness: 816,000 pounds.

3903 By the Court: All syrup?

By the Witness: No, there was one car of sixty thousand pounds of starch.

By the Court: Sixty thousand?

By the Witness: Sixty thousand pounds of starch, and the rest of syrup.

By the Court: Isn't it sixteen thousand pounds of syrup?

By the Witness: No. The sixty thousand pounds of starch is to be deducted from that figure.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. It is 816,000 pounds of product, of which all but 60,000 was syrup, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, Mr. Robinson, I show you these exhibits again, in the 67 series, and ask you whether you will give the dates which are charged to the corn deal, reading the dates from these exhibits in that series.

A. The dates on these shipments?

Q. That are tied to the corn deal.

A. They are all out of order here now.

Q. I am sorry.

3904 A. I will start with this top one. It is January 29, 1946; February 9, 1946; February 15, 1946; March 5, 1946. There were 2100 pounds of starch which were not included in that figure, I see here, on March 4th. A tank car on March 8th.

Q. By the way, is that tank car on March 8th the first one that is picked up as the special charges on memo 69?

A. No, all those that I have read been on there, but some of them have been scratched off.

Q. And charged to some kind of an earlier—

A. Yes, apparently.

Q. All right.

A. The ones that are not scratched off of this memo are the only ones charged to this 1946 corn deal and these earlier shipments were not charged to that corn deal, probably because they had reference to some other—

Q. Let's stop right there. How much on Exhibit 69 is scratched off?

A. Well, there is 569,000 pounds.

Q. Of product?

A. Yes, that's right. About 570,000 pounds.

3905 Q. And that 570,000 pounds, that represents product shipped to Shotwell over and above the 816,000 pounds?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, that is an added shipment.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. That is shipment of product tied to a corn deal?

A. That's right.

Q. But that is some earlier corn deal.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, are you testifying? I just wondered.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What is that related to, Mr. Robinson?

A. Well, since it was not charged to this 1946 corn deal, it apparently—this record, Exhibit 69—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, unless the witness knows.

By the Court: He is asking for your own knowledge, Mr. Robinson.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Robinson, does it indicate on whose instructions that was crossed off?

3906 A. It was crossed off on my own.

Q. That indicates that right on the piece of paper?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, explain what that was, Mr. Robinson; give us your best memory on it, at least.

A. My best memory is that it was taken off the 1946 record because it had no reference to shipments made—corn shipments made in 1946, and for that reason was not chargeable to that corn in '46. But all the other cars that—cars of syrup and starch shipped were chargeable to '46 corn.

If my memory is correct, those ones scratched off came from a previous transaction.

Q. Do you have any record on that or is that the '45 material you said didn't exist?

A. That's right. Those records we don't have. However, we do show our sales, our total sales to Shotwell in that particular year, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: I think we will take our recess. We will take a ten-minute recess now.

3907 By the Marshal: Will the audience kindly remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess for ten minutes.

3908 By the Marshal: This honorable court will resume its session.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Robinson, is the shipment of March 8th of '1947, which is Exhibit 67-G the first car of syrup charged against that four houndred and some thousand bushels?

A. Yes, the car of March 8th, 1946.

Q. And then is the next one the shipment on the 12th of April, 1946?

A. That is right. That apparently was a car of starch.

Q. I will tell you what. Why don't you just do this, Mr. Robinson. Why don't you just start with that shipment of March 8, 1946, and read off to the jury what you did ship Shotwell against that corn deal?

A. On March 8th of 1946 a tank car of corn syrup.

Q. How much did that weigh?

A. That car weighed 94,680 pounds. On the invoice is a car of starch which is charged to that corn— is that here? There is an invoice short, a shipment of a 60,000 pound shipment of corn starch on April 12th, which is not in here. The next car—3909 Q. You mean it is mixed up or it isn't there at all?

A. I don't see it here at all. Here it is down here (indicating).

Q. And how much starch was shipped?

A. That was a sixty thousand pound shipment of corn starch on April 12th, and then a tank car of corn syrup on April 28th.

Q. How much did that weigh?

A. That car weighed 94,900 pounds.

There was another car shipped on May 7th weighing 94,000 pounds even. There was a car shipped on May 27th weighing 94,360 pounds and there was a carload of barrels of corn syrup weighing 47,915 pounds shipped on June 8th, and another carload of barrels, 69 barrels, weighing 47,158 pounds on June 12th, and a tank car of corn syrup on July 26th weighing 94,780 pounds.

There was a car on June 24th, a tank car of syrup weighing 94,300 pounds and a tank car on July 21st weighing 94,080 pounds. That's all.

Q. Now the invoices after July 26, 1946, they show that the corn was shipped—I mean that the corn syrup was shipped without corn deals, is that right?

3910 A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when the OPA went off on corn?

A. I don't know the date. It was in the middle of 1946.

Q. Does June 30, 1946—

A. That was probably it.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, unless the witness knows what the date was. There is better evidence that can be obtained than his guess.

By the Court: Well, it may stand.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Robinson, was the deal which was made with Shotwell to supply corn for corn syrup in any way unusual or different than deals made with other candy companies at the same time?

A. No, it was not different.

Q. And how widespread was the practice among you—I mean, between you and the customers in the candy business?

A. Well, it went on generally, I would say.

Q. Generally?

A. Not only with us but with other manufacturers in our business.

3911 By Mr. Kirby: That's all. Thank you.

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. There were books in 1945 but those are destroyed under the normal record destruction program of your company?

A. That is right.

Q. The only things you have been able to produce here are the 1946 records?

A. The 1946 records, that's right.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Robinson, you mentioned that Shotwell offered to buy corn for Hubinger. When was that conversation? When did that conversation take place?

A. I don't know the exact date, but it was in 1945.

Q. Were you present?

A. I was the one that handled it on the telephone.

Q. And to whom did you talk?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Mr. Frank Huebner?

A. That is right.

3912 Q. That was sometime in 1945?

A. That is right.

Q. Shotwell had a quota for corn syrup, did it not, with the Hubbinger Company?

A. It had an allocation. We set up an allocation system for dividing our production among all of our regular customers.

Q. And exclusive of this period of time when the government restricted you to 80 per cent of your normal grind, your quota was based on 100 per cent of the grinds you had had back in the base period of 1941, wasn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. So that under normal circumstances, exclusive of this short period of shortages, you were able to supply your customers with the same quantity of corn syrup that you had supplied them back in 1941?

A. Yes, but Shotwell was not a customer of our company in 1941.

Q. So they hadn't—they didn't have any quota with you in 1941?

A. They didn't. We set one up for them upon the base period figuring we would try to build up good will with a good base customer that would do busi-3913 ness with us when we were a free seller of syrup and starch.

Q. When did you set up the quota?

A. We set up that quota for Shotwell in 1942. However, we set it up for all other customers as we went along, based on their 1941 purchases.

Q. Do you recall how much of an allocation Shotwell Manufacturing Company had on the basis of that quota?

A. It was originally set up on the basis of a limit of two tank cars a month, depending on what our ability was to ship.

Q. Two tank cars a month, and a tank car runs about 94,000 pounds or 96,000 pounds?

A. That is right, 93,000 or 94,000 is about it.

Q. Now, with reference to this period when there was a shortage of corn, can you give us the dates?

A. No, I can't. My memory doesn't go back that far, but we had corn shipped to us by one customer as far back as 1943, but my own recollection—that is according to the recollection of one of the other members of our organization—my own recollection only goes back to 1945 and I can't remember dates in 1945.

Q. But it was for a period of several months?

3914 A. Yes, it was.

Q. And the date extended over to 1946?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Now, you said there were arrangements made whereby Shotwell sold you corn. Is that completely accurate? Did you ever buy any corn from Shotwell?

A. No, we didn't. Shotwell arranged to have corn sent to us by a dealer in grains, a normal grain dealer.

Q. You bought the corn from Cargill and from Rice?
A. That is right.
Q. Did you pay any premium for it?
A. We paid the ceiling price.
Q. And when you sold the portion of the corn syrup which went to Shotwell, did they pay you any premium for it?
A. They paid the ceiling price.
Q. Now, do you know of your own knowledge whether Shotwell paid one dollar to either Rice or Cargill for the purpose of purchasing that corn or arranging the sale of it to Hubbinger?
A. I have no way of knowing that.
Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Shotwell paid one dollar to anybody in connection 3915 with the sale of corn syrup by Hubbinger to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No.
Q. So, as far as you know, Shotwell was not required to pay any premium or anything above the ceiling price for the corn syrup?
A. I don't know that they did.
Q. You don't know that they paid any premium or other inducement to the grain dealer to get him to sell the corn to Hubbinger?
A. I don't know that. My memory—
Q. But it could have been done?
A. Yes, it could have been done and it was generally done.
Q. Do you have any knowledge of it being done in this case?
A. Not in this case, no.
Q. Now, you say there were 31 cars of corn bought from the Cargill and Daniel F. Rice Company in 1946. During that same year you sold 30 cars of corn—21 cars of corn syrup to Shotwell?
A. That is right.
Q. And eight of those cars then were on the corn deal?
3916 A. That is right.
Q. And the balance of them, the remaining 13 were without any consideration whatsoever other than the payment of the invoice amount?
A. Well, now—

Q. Just on the basis of the allocation?

A. I might explain that from Exhibit 69 here. This exhibit shows—it does not show all the shipments in the year 1946. It only shows shipments to July 26th of 1946 and the exhibit also shows that only 816,000 bushels of these shipments were chargeable to the corn deal.

By the Court: Pounds?

By the Witness: Pardon me, pounds, that is right, 816,000 pounds.

By the Court: You said bushels.

By the Witness: Oh, I am sorry.

3917 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any records—

A. And you will notice—

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, let him finish his answer, please.

By the Witness:

A. —on the top of that exhibit there is a memorandum put there by the same Mr. Fanning, per A.M.R. in 1946, showing one free and one charge a month.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is one free and one charge? What does that mean?

A. That means we were to charge one car of the syrup that we shipped to Shotwell against the car and we were to give a second car without a charge against the corn that they had shipped in to us.

Q. In other words, they would get one car a month on their quota?

A. That is right.

Q. And one car a month on the basis of the corn which they arranged for Hubbinger to buy?

A. That is right, but the shipments didn't go out on that basis because we cleaned up the entire corn 3918 deal as fast as we could and charged every car as it was shipped against the corn deal with the intention of shipping the free cars later.

Q. So—

A. The ones bought July 26th are the ones that they got on the free basis.

Q. So they were entitled, according to that, to about 24 cars in the year?

A. That is right.

Q. And they actually got 21 so the balance of them were all free, that is, against their regular quota?

A. Well, now. We weren't operating on a regular quota at that time because we did not have enough corn to keep up with the quotas. We couldn't maintain our allocations when we were short of corn.

Q. I see. That is why there were—

By Mr. McConnell: Let him finish that answer. Just let the man finish the answer. He is going to give a good explanation.

By Mr. Lockley: I am perfectly willing to have any explanation he has to offer. I am quite interested in this thing. Go ahead.

3919 By the Witness:

A. Well, we had many customers who were trying to get corn syrup and many of them who couldn't ship corn to us. Of course, they were in danger of shutting down their plants without corn.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you talking about Shotwell now?

A. It has reference to the same thing, since we couldn't possibly take care of Shotwell up to two tank cars a month and I say the same thing applied to all of the others.

Q. In any event, you don't know what if anything Shotwell did in connection with Hubbinger's purchase of those 31 cars of corn in February of 1946?

A. No, I don't.

Q. And you don't know whether they ever paid a dollar premium to anybody in order to get it?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Either to a farmer?

A. No.

Q. To a grain elevator?

A. I don't know.

Q. To a grain salesman?

A. I don't know.

3920 Q. Anybody in your organization?

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That's all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. When Mr. Lockley was talking about your knowledge —you gave one answer talking about this market in those days and whether Shotwell did or didn't pay premium and you said you knew of what was generally being done. What did you mean by that answer?

A. Well, we had some experience right in our own office where as you probably know some of these people who were getting into the market to buy grain—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, I object to some of these people, and what they did, unless you relate it to your transactions in the Shotwell case.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: He is trying to—

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I think it is 3921 material and relevant to show the condition of the market.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't merely the market that comes into play in this proof.

By the Court: He is going to refer him to some other incident. That isn't the market.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't mean an incident, but the man in the trade who is carrying on with the commodity has a chance and he is the only one who has the chance to know what the market is and what is being done and that is beyond hearsay exception and for that purpose, he has a right to testify.

3922 By Mr. Lockley: I don't think what somebody else did has any relationship to whether David Lubben paid any premiums to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. You are getting too far afield.

By Mr. O'Brien: It has a great deal to do with the question.

By the Court: I think he has a right to state, as he has already, that there was a shortage of corn and that the farmers were using it to feed the hogs rather than selling the corn. That, I take it, is from his knowledge which comes to him from the corn refiners, but you are relating to incidents that are totally unrelated to Shotwell dealings. I don't think that constitutes the market and that is the reason I sustained the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. Let us go to this then, your Honor: He said he knows about the shortage in the corn market, the inability to procure it, the OPA price, that the farmers found it much more profitable to feed the hogs than to sell and now let us ask what he knows 3923 of how corn was procured in that market.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What do you know of that?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object again unless he relates it to something—

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to ask a couple of questions that I forgot to ask on direct.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You know a David Lubben?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your company have some corn deals with Lubben in 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. What his company did with David Lubben is entirely immaterial to what the company did with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. It is irrelevant and immaterial.

By the Court: It may stand.

3924 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did your company ship to Lubben in the fall of 1946 any corn syrup?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any further questioning along that line on the grounds—

By the Court: It may be preliminary. The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley: I did not object to that answer. I am just objecting to the general line of questioning.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And at what price—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that on the ground that it is entirely immaterial and irrelevant.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, you will have in mind that one of the issues in the case is whether Mr. Lubben paid us 13 cents a pound in the fall of 1946 for corn syrup, and therefore I would like to go into the question of the availability of corn syrup to Mr. Lub-

3925 ben at that time at a price which this witness will indicate, which bears upon the question of whether it is conceivable to believe the occurrence Mr. Lubben described did take place.

By Mr. Lockley: What Mr. Lubben may have paid—

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lubben, incidentally, in his own cross examination with respect to that—Mr. Lubben admitted that he had some 500,000 pounds of corn syrup and he described it as coming from Hubinger at the ceiling, so I think that bears directly into the questions we have at issue.

By the Court: Well, when was the shipment made that we are dealing with, from Lubben to Shotwell, with reference to this syrup?

By Mr. Kirby: In October of 1946.

By the Court: And you now want to show that Lubben was able to buy corn syrup on the market at what time?

By Mr. Kirby: In the fall of 1946.

By the Court: Well, what time in the fall? Well, let us find out.

By Mr. Kirby: Let us find out.

3926 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When did you ship Lubben syrup in the fall of 1946, Mr. Robinson?

A. I am not sure that I have all the invoices here but I have an invoice for July 8th, June 2nd, June 18th, May 21st, for shipment of tank cars of corn syrup to General Confections Company in the Bronx, which was being operated at the time by Mr. Lubben. I am sure there are some invoices missing there because I have a copy of our sales record kept in the office in Keokuk, Iowa, and the total sales—

By Mr. Lockley: Never mind the total sales.

By the Witness: For the year—

By Mr. Lockley: Just give use the dates you have.

By the Witness: I don't have the dates. I have the total sales for the years of 1945, 1946 and 1947 to Lubben's companies General Confections and Eatsum Food Products Company. I don't have dates on them.

In other words, the invoices are not available.

3927 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Were there some shipments other than the ones you have referred to that you can identify or is that the only material you have with you on Lubben?

A. It is the only invoices I have. There were other shipments shown on our total shipments to his companies.

Q. You mean later in the year or both later and earlier, which?

A. Yes.

Q. Both later and earlier?

A. That is right.

Q. And at ceiling prices?
A. At ceiling prices.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.
By the Court: Well, is that a corn deal?
By the Witness: Lubben's was a corn deal, yes.
By the Court: Well, then, Lubben went out and bought corn some place and arranged for you to obtain the corn and you allocated to him a certain percentage of the syrup just like you did the Shotwell Company?
By the Witness: That is right, yes.

3928 Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Robinson, Mr. Lockley asked you whether the corn shortage period extended into 1946, do you recall?
A. Well, now, are you talking about the corn shortage or are you talking about corn or corn syrup?
Q. I am talking corn now.
A. Yes, the corn shortage did extend into 1946.
Q. Do you recall it just went over the line or how far into 1946 did it extend?
A. Well, I am not positive about that. I think that it expired before the OPA ceiling went off.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

Direct Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Just a minute. You have a record there, don't you, of the price of corn in June, June 30th of 1946?
A. In this book here?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. Will you turn to that and see what the price of 3929 corn was immediately after June 30th?
A. Well, here is July 5th, Friday, July 5th, 1946, three cars—this happened to come from another grain dealer on the basis of $1.44 a bushel.
Q. What was the price prior to June 30th?
A. Well, it's—it is apparent that we were paying right around $1.37 to $1.43 in June and it was in—I can't remember—
Q. Well, can't you tell—
A. —definitely whether that was a government ceiling on corn or not.
Q. You testified you paid the ceiling price, as I understood your testimony?

A. That is right. And if—

Q. Can you tell from examining that record when the ceiling went off? Can you tell when the price of corn went up?

A. No, I can't. I am not too familiar with this grain record. However, it apparently did go off just about that time because of the fact that the price of corn on Tuesday, July 25th was $1.40 a bushel and on August 8th it was $1.85 a bushel which was a jump of 45 cents a bushel in a very short period of time.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

3930 By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By the Court: Any further questions?

By Mr. Lockley: About two, your Honor.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. The shortage of corn syrup was related not only to the shortage of corn, was it, Mr. Robinson—it was related also to the shortage of sugar, cane sugar?

A. That is right.

Q. So that as long as cane sugar remained rationed, corn syrup was short because it was in greater demand, isn't that so?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It is argumentative.

By Mr. Lockley: I am asking him a question on cross examination. I see nothing argumentative about it.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By the Witness: Will you ask the question again, please?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Yes. I said, as long as cane sugar was under 3931 rationing and was therefore short, there would be a greater demand for corn syrup, isn't that so?

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Lubben had to sue the Hubbinger Company to get his corn syrup, didn't he?

A. Yes, he did. Can I explain that?

Q. No, you needn't.

By Mr. McConnell: What was the explanation? Why did Mr. Lubben sue you?

By the Witness: Mr. Lubben agreed that he would not deal with the black market on our corn syrup because we were worried about the effect it would have on our other customers and when we had this arrangement with him to ship him so much corn syrup, I had a customer come in from Pittsburgh who said, "We can buy your corn syrup on the black market but we can't buy it directly from you." At the time, our price was $3.09. This customer said he bought it at $3.09. And I asked the customer if he could give some identifying—

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the price of that?

3932 I didn't hear what you said about the price.

By the Witness: The price was $3.09 a hundredweight and this customer said he paid twelve for it and he gave me the barrel numbers and I called Keokuk immediately and we diverted the car in transit and found out it was going to some organization that was under Lubben's control and he had guaranteed he wouldn't sell any of it on the black market, so for that reason I told him that since we found this syrup on the black market, we are going to refuse to fill the rest of the contract regardless of how much corn syrup he shipped us.

I said, "You agreed it wouldn't get on the black market and here is one of our own customers—"

By Mr. O'Brien: Was it corn syrup?

By the Witness: He sent us in corn and we processed it.

By Mr. O'Brien: And you said regardless of how much Mr. Lubben shipped you—

3933 Will the Reporter please read that answer?

(Answer read.)

By the Witness: I said corn and not corn syrup.

3934 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. How much was Mr. Lubben selling it for, do you know?

A. The cost to us was twelve cents a pound.

Q. Do you know when it was?

A. I don't know the dates from memory, but I can tell at the time from our records where we stopped making shipments to Lubben.

Q. Will you do that?

A. Yes. I have a record here showing shipment of corn syrup to David Lubben and Eatsum Food Products in New York against corn which Lubben had sent in to our plant, and there is a memorandum in this record showing that on March 25, 1946, we shipped a carload of barrels amounting to 41,182 pounds to—I don't have the name of the consignee, but it was directed to Lubben. It is charged to his corn deal and when this customer called and told us about it, gave us the barrel numbers, our traffic department diverted the car in transit to our own warehouse in New York.

Q. That was in March, 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. He wasn't able to buy the corn syrup from 3935 you after that date?

A. He was.

Q. Oh, he did buy it?

A. What happened, he came to Keokuk at that time and we had a balance due him of some—right close to about twelve cars and he again—he came to Keokuk and talked to our management and said he would positively guarantee again there was no danger of our syrup getting into the black market, that he needed it for his candy business, both General Confections and Eatsum Food Products and that there were other people involved in this with him and he stood to lose a lot of money.

At the time we said, "All right. Now, if that is the end of it, we will ship, but we will ship only half of what you have coming."

He said, "That is agreed. That will help me out that much."

Q. So you shipped the six tank cars?

A. So we shipped the six tank cars.

Q. All right.

A. And then he came back to us again. Apparently none of the syrup got into the black market and we didn't find any of it in the black market and he wanted some 3936 more and we shipped him another tank car and a barrel car. He had a balance of six tank cars which we did not ship to him.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you very much.

By Mr. McConnell: I have one more question.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. After the ceiling went off on corn in 1946, there was no point to that corn deal, was there? You didn't need corn shipped to you after that, did you?

A. No, that is right.

Q. You could buy it on the open market?
A. That is right.
Q. So that any corn balance you are referring to so far as Mr. Lubben was concerned, would mean nothing in the amount of corn syrup available, would it?
A. No.
Q. Now Mr. Lockley referred to cane sugar. Did you require your clients or your customers to furnish or 3937 supply cane sugar to you in order to furnish corn syrup?
A. No, we didn't.
Q. It was only corn, wasn't it?
A. That is right.
By Mr. Lockley: I didn't insinuate they did.
By Mr. McConnell: That's all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

(Witness excused.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Robinson, don't walk off with the exhibits.
By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, counsel.
By Mr. Kirby: You can lay those down on the table.

JOHN B. KELLY, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name, John Kelly?
A. John B. Kelly, yes, sir.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Kelly?
3938 A. I live in St. Petersburg, Florida.
Q. And you used to work for Shotwell?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When?
By the Court: Keep your voice up, Mr. Kelly.
By the Witness:
A. In the years 1943, 1944, 1945 and until August of 1946.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Did you have something to do with some negotiations of army contracts for food being produced at Shotwell?
A. Yes. I negotiated the contracts for pudding powder and also the Hi-Mac candy bar.

Q. And the pudding power went to whom in the army?
A. Well, it was delivered to the United States Quartermaster Depot and redistributed. It went out for the soldiers. It was food for the soldiers.
By Mr. Kirby: Will you please mark these Exhibits 70 and 71, Defendants' Exhibits 70 and 71 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibits 70 and 71 for identification.)

3939 By Mr. Kirby:
Q. I hand you two documents which are marked Defendants' Exhibits 70 and 71 and ask you if you have ever seen them before.
A. Yes. This No. 70 is a copy of a letter that I wrote May 31, 1945.
Q. To the army?
A. It was written to the army service forces.
Q. What is Exhibit 70?
A. That also is a letter to the army service forces, June 27, 1945.
Q. Did you write those in connection with some contracts that were then in existence between the army and Shotwell?
A. Yes, I did.
3940 Q. Did you send the original of that letter?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. That is, Shotwell's retained copy?
A. That is right.
By Mr. Kirby: I ask that that be admitted in evidence and I will show them to counsel.

(Handing documents to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell: Mr. Lockley—if I may interrupt counsel, counsel for Hubbinger wants to know if we can agree to have photostatic copies substituted for those Hubbinger exhibits. He wants to take the original records home.
By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to your reference to the invoices.
By Mr. Robinson: The corn book, principally.
By Mr. Lockley: I think we ought to retain the original red book for the time being, your Honor. I have no objection to the invoices being photostated.

By Mr. Robinson: I don't want to go to the expense of photostating an entire red book.

3941 By Mr. Kirby: I will take it up with you. I appreciate your situation. We will talk to counsel about it.

By the Court: Is there any objection?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 70 and 71.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Kelly, now both of those letters refer to the contract for pudding, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they—well, read the two letters, will you, please?

A. Yes. This No. 70 is written to Army Service Forces, Chicago Quartermaster Depot, Chicago, Illinois. Attention: Warrant Officer Reese.

Q. What is the date?

A. May 31, 1946. I don't recall the man, but the letter says this:

"Gentlemen:

"We are enclosing herewith copies of our order No.

3942 4592 and No. 4647 which we have been unable to place with the American Maize Products Co. and A. E. Staley Mfg. Co.

"On order No. 4592 calling for 200,000 pounds of 7⅓% Redried Starch, the Staley Mfg. Co. have accepted only 80,000 pounds.

"We would appreciate very much your assistance in getting these two orders placed as we are going to be badly in need of these raw materials in order to complete Contract No. W-11-009 QM-48398 within the specified time."

That was letter No. 70. And 71—

Q. Let me ask you there, the pudding used a corn product, is that it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you couldn't get the corn product?

A. That is right.

Q. And you needed it for the Army contract?

A. Yes. The Army was pressing us for delivery of this pudding powder. It seemed to be in dire need of it.

3943 Q. Were you able in May, 1945, to get the corn product that you needed to fill that Army order?

A. Oh, no. This letter indicates that we couldn't get it. The American Maize wouldn't accept the order. They wouldn't make delivery to us.

Q. Did they explain to you why they wouldn't make delivery to you?

A. They said they didn't have it, if I recall.

Q. All right. What is the next letter you wrote the Army about getting those corn products? When was that?

A. That was June 7th, 1945.

Q. Read that.

A. That is Attention of A. W. Nygren, who was the procurement officer. It says:

"Gentlemen:

"With reference to Contract No. W11-009-qm-48398 covering Starch Dessert Powder.

"Owing to the fact that it is necessary for us to substitute 100,000 pounds beet sugar in place of corn sugar in order to complete above contract, we will require additional sugar certificates covering 100,000

3944 pounds sugar.

"Would appreciate it if you would forward these ration points to us at once."

Q. Now, that was another problem in connection with the same contract, securing of corn products, is that right?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you talk to Nygren of the Army about whether the Army could give you any assistance in corn products?

A. Oh, yes. I think that Nygren suggested that I write this letter to the Warrant Officer Reese, but I am not positive, though.

Q. But did the Army produce anything for you?

A. They gave us sugar points but they didn't get us the sugar, if you know what I mean.

Q. How about the corn products, the starch? Did they do anything for you on that?

A. I don't recall whether they did or not.

3945 Q. Did you report to any of your superiors in Shotwell about the difficulty in May and June of being able to get corn products?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And did you personally thereafter go out to buy any corn, or did you personally have anything to do with how they got the corn?

A. No, sir.

Q. All you know about it is that at that time you were having the difficulty set out in the letter?

A. That's right.

Q. And what about the existence or the absence of an existence of a black market in corn, was that discussed with the army quartermaster people?

A. Well, yes, I think it was. I think it was common knowledge then that in the industry—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless we have a time and place, the people who were present—

By the Court: You have answered the question.

By Mr. Lockley: —there is no foundation.

3946 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And you discussed that with the army people?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did they tell you, Mr. Kelly, that it was up to Shotwell to procure the materials to complete the contracts?

A. Yes, sir. They said they wanted deliveries.

By Mr. Lockley: I object—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Wanted what?

A. Deliveries.

By Mr. Lockley: —to the nature of your questions.

By the Court: You are getting into bad habits again now.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What did they tell you; what did the army tell you?

A. That they were not concerned how we got the sugar, they just wanted deliveries on time of these contracts.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That is all.

3947 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Kelly, on Government contracts didn't The Shotwell Manufacturing Company get sugar ration points ex-quota from the Government?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It wasn't a part of the ordinary sugar quota that was used by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the manufacture of its regular products for commercial use?

A. No, sir.

Q. This sugar quota was entirely separate and apart and in addition to the ordinary quota?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, in March, 1945, didn't the Government cancel a contract or contracts with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for which they had advanced about 500,000 sugar ration points?

A. I don't recall.

Q. 500,000 pounds.

A. I don't recall that incident, no, sir.

Q. Isn't it a fact that Shotwell Manufacturing Company never returned those 500,000 pounds of sugar ration points to the army?

3948 By Mr. O'Brien: I object.

By the Witness:

A. I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no evidence on that. It is an assumption.

By the Court: It is cross examination. He can ask if he knows.

By Mr. O'Brien: He asks him if it isn't a fact and then he states facts which are not in the record.

By Mr. Lockley: I am learning that very quickly, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what the Judge referred to as a bad habit.

By the Court: It is different on cross examination than on direct. I take it on cross examination he can ask leading questions or suggestive questions.

By Mr. McConnell: But he can't lay a basis—

By Mr. O'Brien: Such as the question to Mr. Ericson.

By the Court: One at a time, please. I am sorry.

3949 By Mr. O'Brien: Such as the questions to Mr. Ericson on direct.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Didn't you handle the Government contract with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Mr. Ericson?

A. My name is Kelly.

3950 Q. Pardon me, Mr. Kelly. I am sorry. I am confused.

A. I negotiated and secured the contracts, but I had nothing to do with the sugar points, or anything of that kind. That was taken care of all by our purchasing department.

Q. Well, are you familiar with the cancellation of that contract?

A. I don't recall the cancellation; no, sir.

Q. Were you familiar with the price that the government was paying for this pudding which is referred to in Exhibit 70 or 71?

A. I can't recall offhand what the price was; no, sir.

Q. Now, these are dated May and June, 1945. You say that there was a shortage in the corn market in corn products at that time of the year, in May and June of 1945?

A. There must have been. When I wrote that letter there was a decided shortage, because we couldn't get it.

Q. So that it wasn't just a shortage after October of 1945?

A. Oh, I don't recall when the shortage started.

3951 That's a long time ago, sir.

Q. But you knew there was a shortage in May and June?

A. At the time I wrote those letters, yes, sir, there was a shortage.

By Mr. Lockley: In 1945.

That is all. Thank you very much, Mr. Kelly.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Kelly, I got talking about sugar, when I meant to be talking largely about starch. The first letter talks about 200,000 pounds of 7½ per cent redried starch, and then another order that doesn't mention the amount. Now, so far as starch was concerned, there were no ration points for that, were there?

A. No.

Q. And the government didn't supply any ration points for that?

A. No, only for sugar.

Q. The sugar. And the sugar, that is what is mentioned in the second letter?

3952 A. Yes. In the manufacture of that pudding product there was only starch and sugar and flavor.

Q. Yes. And the second letter says that you need to substitute beet sugar in place of corn sugar; isn't that what it says?

A. That's right.

Q. So ration points or no, the problem was getting the corn product?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. And what you wanted to do was to use a sugar not made from corn rather than one made from corn?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. The letters are more accurate, indeed, than I am.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You mean that you had enough sugar to sell Lubben, but you didn't have enough sugar to sell to the Army, is that it?

A. No, I don't mean that.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't know that there are any sugar purchases in that period of time in the evi-3953 dence. I move to strike that as improper cross examination.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I might put it this way:

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You had enough sugar to manufacture candy to sell to Mr. Lubben—and corn syrup—but you didn't have enough to manufacture things to sell to the Army?

A. I don't know. All I know is that we didn't have enough sugar to manufacture the pudding product.

Q. Was it a separate division that handled Mr. Lubben's transactions for Shotwell?

A. Yes, I had no business dealings with Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you.

By the Court: Apparently that is all, Mr. Kelly.

(Witness excused.)

3954 ARTHUR HAUSMAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Arthur Hausman.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 151-41 27th Avenue, Flushing, New York.
Q. And what is your business?
A. I am a certified public accountant.
Q. Did you ever do any work in connection with the Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. Will you please identify the company, because there were several entities that went under the name of Eatsum Food Products Company.
Q. Well, when did you first do any work for any of Lubben's companies?
A. I worked for Louie J. Roth, who was an accountant, as his assistant. At his direction I examined certain of the records of David Lubben.
Q. Starting when?
By Mr. O'Brien: Of David Lubben?
3955 By the Witness: Eatsum Food Products Company.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Starting when?
A. Approximately March or April of 1945.
Q. Was it a proprietorship then, a sole proprietorship or a partnership?
A. It was a sole proprietorship.
Q. So did you then do some work for the Eatsum Company which became a partnership later in that year?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long did you do any work in connection with the partnership?
A. Until the partnership was dissolved, I believe, March 9, 1946.
Q. And did you do any more work for any of Lubben's companies after that?
A. Well, actually I worked for Louie Roth until about the middle of May of 1946, and at that time I worked for David Lubben, who had organized General Confections, Inc.

Q. I have a number of sheets that I wish to show you. No one of them covers the General Confections pe-3956 riod, they cover the period of the partnership. I believe there may be one or two that cover the proprietorship, but mostly the partnership. When I speak of work papers, I mean sheets that accountants make up in connection with their work. And what did you do with the work papers you made up during the period you have testified about?

A. Are you speaking of the work papers that you have there?

Q. Yes.

A. And may I understand your question correctly? You are asking me now what did I do physically with them?

Q. Yes.

A. May I see the work papers you have reference to?

Q. Well, I have a whole big long list of them and I don't know that we can get at them right now. I will ask you a general question, Mr. Hausman.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you keep the work papers that you did in the partnership period yourself, or did you leave them with Mr. Roth, or just what did you do with them?

3957 A. I gave them to Mr. Roth. Of course, he was my boss.

Q. To Louie Roth?

A. That is correct.

Q. And was Louie Roth an accountant that had been retained by Mr. Lubben and then later by the partnership?

A. I think at the beginning Mr. Roth's interest was as an accountant retained by the Giglio interests to examine the books and records of David Lubben, doing business as Eatsum Food Products Company, with a view to determining whether the purchase of a fifty per cent interest of that business would be practical and money making, would be worth while, in that sense.

3958 Q. All right. Then in the period after Giglio did become a partner was Roth an accountant more or less working for the Giglio interests?

A. I believe so.

Q. And these papers that I generally described—now, I don't mean to pin you to the individual ones, because I will show you each one, Mr. Hausman.

A. All right.

Q. But generally the papers that you had, that you had called work papers, you left with Roth?

A. That's correct.

Q. And do you know where they are now; that is, the originals?

A. The originals of these?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, that is a very general question. I wouldn't know offhand, unless—if you are asking me specifically where the originals of specific papers that I see here, I may be able to answer the question better.

By the Court: All right. We probably better take that up tomorrow.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: We will be in recess until 10:00 3959 o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing until the jury and the Court leave the court room, please.

This Honorable Court will recess until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until 10:00 o'clock A. M., Wednesday, October 7, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Wednesday, October 7, 1953,
10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

3961 ARTHUR HAUSMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Hausman, is the document which is marked 37 for identification in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And could you give us a short name for that document, just so we can identify it is all?

A. This appears to be a work sheet indicating an analysis or description of merchandise inventories on hand at Eatsum Food Products Company, May 31, 1945.

Q. The next document is No. 22 and is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does that relate to the currency income for April and May, 1945, generally?

A. It appears to relate to currency account disbursements—excuse me—currency account income.

Q. Income, yes.

A. Yes.

3962 Q. In April and May, 1945?

A. Well, it is difficult to say, because the first entry is marked March 31 and then there are a number of entries that are undated and the next date is May 17th.

Q. Well, they are in the year 1945, aren't they?

A. 1945, I would assume, although there is no—yes, there is a date. May, 1945.

Q. Is the next document which you have, No. 31, a duplicate of 23 and is it also in your handwriting?

A. It is in my handwriting. It is a duplicate, yes, of Exhibit No. 31.

By Mr. Kirby: 23 and 31 have already been marked, your Honor. They appear to be duplicates.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. 66-B is the next document. And is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, it is in my handwriting.

Q. And could we describe that generally as currency disbursements for April and May, 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the next document, 66-D, in your handwriting?

A. It is in my handwriting, yes.

3963 Q. And could we describe it as currency disbursements, May, 1945?

By the Court: Currency or current?

By Mr. Kirby: Currency.

By the Witness:

A. It appears to be a summary of receipts and disbursements for May, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is the next sheet, which is document 66-D—

By the Court: B?

By Mr. Kirby: D.

By Mr. Lockley: I thought the last one was D.

By the Witness: The last one was D.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I am running one behind the field. I am sorry.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. 66-E as in Evelyn.

A. You skipped 66-C. Is that intentional?

Q. Well, no, that is the one that you and I perhaps got confused on. What is 66-C?

A. 66-C is an analysis of currency transactions for the month of May, particularly relating to disbursements.

3964 Q. All right. That is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And 66-D, that is—

A. We just discussed that.

Q. —a summary of currency transactions in May, 1945.

A. We just discussed that.

Q. Is 66-E in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And can that generally be described as showing the currency balance on May 1, 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the next sheet, 66-F, can that be described as relating to currency receipts in May of 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-G, can that be described as currency receipts and disbursements in August and September of 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 66-H, is that currency received in August of 1945?

3965 A. It appears to be part of such a transaction.

Q. And is it in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have 66-I there?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that relate to currency receipts in June of 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-J, does that relate to currency receipts in July of 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-K, does that relate to payments to Her-Bert Company—spelled H-e-r hyphen B-e-r-t Company— in July, 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-L, does that relate to currency receipts in January, 1946?

A. Yes.

3966 Q. And is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-M, is that also relating to currency receipts in January of 1946?

A. This appears to be merely a work sheet that was used for an analysis of the cash receipts book, general column, or sundries column, for the month of January;

1946. It would not be currency. It would be an analysis of the actual cash book column labeled sundries.

Q. And it is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-N, does that relate to currency receipts in July of 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-O, does that relate to currency receipts in August and September, 1945?

A. 66-O appears to relate to currency receipts for the month of August only. I believe your question was August and September.

Q. 66-P, that relates to currency receipts and disbursements for what period in '45?

A. It relates to cash received—currency receipts during the month of August, 1945, and cash paid out 3967 from August 3, 1945 through September 7, 1945.

Q. And it is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-Q, does that relate to currency disbursements in August of '45?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the same thing true of 66-R?

A. Yes.

Q. They are both in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit 27, does that relate to currency received and disbursed in August and September of 1945?

By Mr. Lockley: Is this 27?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. This relates to cash received and paid out for the month of August through September 8, 1945.

3968 Q. And it is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-S, is that a cash box No. 2 reconciliation on October 10, 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit 21-B. Well, I will tell you—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you locate that?

A. Yes, I have it.

Q. Can that be described as relating to the loans and exchanges account for November of 1945?

A. It is an analysis of the loans and exchanges and it is marked November but there is no year. I would assume that it was 1945.

Q. 21-C, does that also relate to the loans and exchanges account and is it as of December 31, 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. 21-D, does that relate to the same account as of the same December 31, 1945, date?

A. Yes.

Q. 21-E, does that relate to the loans and exchanges account with respect to a date which is February 28th, 1946?

3969

A. Yes.

Q. 22, does that relate to the loans and exchanges account for a date which is March 9th, 1946?

A. I don't have 22.

Q. Do you have 66-U?

A. No.

Q. Those that you do have with respect to loans and exchanges then are 21-B?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. C, D and E?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they all in your handwriitng?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you a document which has already been marked Defendants' Exhibit 36 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. This appears to be the Eatsum—the general ledger of the Eatsum Food Products Company for the period beginning June 1, 1945.

Q. Mr. Hausman, I call your attention to that one particular page. The government had the book marked in its entirety, but I want you—

A. I wanted to identify the page in conjunction with the entire document that it is a part of.

3970

Q. Yes. That is a partnership book?

A. There is merely marked loans and exchanges account No. 15 with no other means of identification.

Q. The partnership.

A. If you want me to identify it as loans and exchanges account No. 15, I can identify it that way, if you wish.

By the Court: Is that Defendants' Exhibit 36?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, Judge. The book as a whole is the only book of the partnership.

By the Court: I am only trying to get the exhibit straight. Is it Government's Exhibit 36?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: You say the government had it marked?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. The government had the book marked as Government's Exhibit 9-A.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. Kirby: And inside of Government's Ex-
3971 hibit 9-A is a particular page which is Defendants' Exhibit 36.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And Mr. Hausman, this is a partnership period?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is some of the handwriting that appears on that exhibit 36 yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which? Is it all yours?

A. No.

3972 Q. Well, you see some pencil monthly sub totals there on that loans and exchanges account?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they in your handwriting?

A. Some of them are and some of them aren't.

Q. Well, read the dollar amount of the numbers which are in your handwriting, will you, please?

A. Yes, sir. Do you wish me to read just the balance in the account that is in my handwriting or all of the amounts that are in my handwriting?

Q. Well, I think, so we can be plain about it, there are some sub totals which are in your handwriting.

A. Yes.

Q. Will you first, Mr. Hausman, give the date and the amount of the sub total which is in your handwriting. I don't think it would be proper for you to read, or at least, I am not asking you to read what is in somebody else's handwriting. I have no objection to all of it going in.

A. That was not my intention. I just wanted to clarify those figures you wanted me to read.

Q. The sub totals in your handwriting, will you read them?

3973 A. February 28, 1946, debit total $429,529.07. March 9, 1946, debit sub total $437,876.85.

April 30th, debit sub total $502,676.65. April 30th debit sub total $502,678.01, and that is all on the debit side.

On the credit side they were: Sub total, $323,667.36. That is at March 9, 1946. April 30, credit sub total $389,527.84. Now, of the balances that are indicated as debit balances in the account—

Q. Yes. You mean the net of the debit?

A. The net of the debit, and they were totals as of these various dates. March 9, 1946, $114,209.49. April 30, $113,148.81. April 30, $113,150.17. That is all.

Q. Those were all in your handwriting?

A. Yes, those are in my handwriting.

Q. Made contemporaneously with the dates that you have given us?

A. Approximately, yes.

Q. In the regular course of the partnership business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There were a couple of long sheets that I 3974 didn't finish with.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you be good enough to pick up 66-V?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe that as a sheet showing certain differences in the currency account or questions in the currency account in August of 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. 66-X. Do you have that?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that—

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me. Just a moment. Would you mind, Mr. Kirby—you lost me on 66-D. Was that the last one?

By Mr. Kirby: No, that was 66-V, as in verity. The next one is 66-X. And could we describe 66-X as relating to a journal entry, April 30, 1945, as to assets not recorded?

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir.

3975 Q. That is in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 66-Y, is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it describable as an inventory summary on July 31, 1945?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: George, I am not plain about Exhibits 22 and 66. Do you remember where those two are? I don't think I remember them, myself.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now Mr. Hausman, in case I forgot to ask you about any of the exhibits that you have had in your hand there, they are all in your handwriting except that only a part of that ledger sheet is in your handwriting, is that right?

A. That is correct.

3976 Q. Otherwise, all the writing is yours?

A. (Witness nods in the affirmative.)

Q. You nodded your head yes?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have the originals of the papers which I have shown you?

A. No, I don't.

Q. When you were on the stand yesterday I asked you some general questions subject to handing you the papers this morning?

A. Yes.

Q. And not to lead the witness, but summarizing it—am I correct in saying that you said the papers, the work papers that you had written up, you had left with Mr. Roth?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you have looked at these papers, you are certain of that, Mr. Hausman?

A. As nearly as I recall, that was my general procedure, to leave papers with Mr. Roth.

Q. Yes.

A. Let me make this one other clarification, though—

Q. Yes.

3977 A. So that we can get ourselves squared away on one thing. During the period that I worked for Mr. Roth, which was up to approximately the middle or the end of May, 1946, all papers, all work papers were his property, he being the gentleman in charge of all of these accounting matters.

After May 27, 1946, I went to work on a per diem basis with General Confections, Inc., and as such, I was more or less on my own and those work papers would have been in my possession to whatever extent that it was necessary.

Q. I don't believe that any of those papers relate to the period after you went to work for General Confections.

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. They relate to the prior period.

A. That is right.

Q. When you turned them over to Roth, for whom you worked?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: I offer in evidence Defendants' Exhibits 37, 23, 66-B, 66-C, 66-D, 66-E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R; Defendants' Exhibit 27, 66-S.

3978 By the Court: F, F or S?

By Mr. Kirby: S. Like in Sam. I offer Exhibit 21-B, C, D, and E, 66-V like in verity, X and Y and 36.

I do not offer 31 because it is, by this witness's testimony, a duplicate of 23. Nor do I offer 22, nor 66-U, which I do not seem to have, and call to the Court's attention that these are all photostats in the partnership period.

You may cross examine.

3979 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, it might expedite matters if I were permitted to examine these papers and determine at the noon hour whethr I have any objection to them. I think perhaps some of them are photostats and documents which the government itself has made available to the defense. I don't know exactly what is in here and rather than take the Court's time at this time, might I reserve my cross examination until this afternoon and after I have had this opportunity?

By the Court: I assume there will be no objection to that arrangement.

By Mr. Kirby: No, I have none at all.

By the Court: Then we can excuse this witness until 2:00 o'clock.

By Mr. Kirby: It is perfectly all right with me, your Honor.

By the Court: Is that what you had in mind?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

3980 SIDNEY RUBINSON, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. Sidney Rubinson.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 6 Twelfth Street in Fair Lawn, New Jersey.
By the Court: Where?
By the Witness: Fair Lawn, New Jersey.
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Rubinson, please.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. What is your business?
A. My business right now is the power transmission business.
Q. In 1945 and 1946 what was your business?
A. I was selling candy at that time.
Q. What was the name of your company?
A. I did business in my own name.
Q. In New Jersey?
A. In New Jersey.
3981 Q. Where?
A. In Paterson.
Q. Did you have any dealings with Sidney Kurtz?
By the Court: With whom?
By Mr. O'Brien: Sidney Kurtz, K-u-r-t-z.
By the Witness:
A. No, I didn't have any direct dealings with Sidney Kurtz.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Did you know Sidney Kurtz?
A. He was a very good friend of mine. I knew him very well.
Q. And with whom was he connected?
A. He was in business for himself.
Q. What was the nature of his business?
A. He was in the corn sugar business.
Q. Was he a broker?
A. I think that is what he was.
Q. And for what company, if you know?
A. One of the corn refineries. Which one it was, I don't know.

Q. Was it Corn Products Refining?
A. I think that may be the name.
Q. Did you meet David Lubben?
A. Yes, I met David Lubben.
3982 Q. When was the first time?
A. I couldn't recall the exact time, but—
Q. Approximately.
A. I would say around 1945.
Q. And through whom did you meet him?
A. I met him through Sidney Kurtz.
By the Court: Through whom?
By the Witness: Through Mr. Sidney Kurtz.
By the Court: How do you spell his last name?
By the Witness: K-u-r-t-z.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Did you buy any Shotwell candies?
A. Yes.
Q. From Mr. Lubben?
A. Yes.
Q. Or his companies?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Which company?
A. I wouldn't know the name of the company, exactly.
Q. When did you start to buy the candy?
A. I would say somewhere in 1945. To the best of my recollection, somewhere in 1945.
3983 Q. Refreshing your recollection, would you say that the company was Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. I don't—
Q. Mr. Lubben's company?
A. I don't know if the name of the company was mentioned to me.
Q. Were all of your purchases of Shotwell candy made in 1945?
A. I would say thereabouts, in that vicinity of 1945.
Q. Would you say that any were made in the year 1946?
A. It's a possibility. I just don't recall it. Possibly in the area of 1945 or 1946.
Q. Is it also possible that those purchases extended into March or April of 1946?
A. I think they could.

Q. Now, on the Shotwell candies which you so purchased, did you receive invoices of Lubben or his companies?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Were the shipments made?

A. As I recall, the shipments were made to a warehouse and I received a warehouse slip for the candy.

3984 Q. Were you retailing candy at the time?

A. No, I would say I would be more of a wholesale business.

Q. Yes, sir. And did you pay for the candies so received?

A. Yes, I did.

3985 Q. Whom did you pay?

A. I paid either David Lubben or Ronald Stone.

Q. Were those payments by check or in currency?

By the Court: A little louder. I have to strain my ears to hear you.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am afraid that is so. I am afraid I am a little tired this morning.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were the payments by check or in currency?

A. The payments were in cash.

Q. Did you make the payments?

A. Yes, I made the payments.

Q. At some time to Stone and other times to Lubben?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to your introduction to Lubben by Kurtz, had you ever done business with Lubben before?

A. Not that I recall.

By Mr. O'Brien: It may not make much sense to the jury, if the Court please, but we do have a Kurtz deposition which we shall have to read later, because Mr. Kurtz is incapacitated, and we have been sent a doctor's 3986 certificate, and this small part is connected with the subject-matter of that deposition.

You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike the testimony, your Honor, on the ground that it has no relevance to the issues at trial.

By the Court: Well, Mr. O'Brien informs me that there is a deposition to be read which may throw some light on it. I am not in a position at this time to determine its relevancy.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

MORRIS DUCORSKY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. Morris Ducorsky.

By the Court: What is your first name?

3987 By the Witness: Morris.

By Mr. O'Brien: M-o-r-r-i-s is his name.

By the Court: Morris Ducorsky?

By the Witness: Right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Ducorsky?

A. In New York.

By the Court: You will have to raise your voice, Mr. Ducorsky, if the jury is going to hear you.

By the Witness: O. K. New York.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was your business in the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I was a jobber, as a packer of candy.

Q. Did you have some companies?

A. Yes, my name of company was Sweet Tooth Product.

Q. Company?

A. Corporation.

Q. And you had another company, didn't you?

A. No.

Q. How about Princess Sweets?

A. Not mine.

Q. That was not a company?

3988 A. It was after that. We were partners with them.

Q. After what?

A. After resigning of Sweet Tooth.

Q. Did you have a Princess Sweets Company in the year 1945 or '46?

A. It was—I think it was in 1947.

By a Juror: We can't hear.

By the Witness:

A. And '47.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am a little confused by the answer.

A. It means it was—

Q. Wait a minute, now. Was Princess Sweets in existence in the year 1946?

A. That's right, it was. But I wasn't in partnership there yet.

3989 Q. You had no interest in it—

A. I had no interest in that business.

Q. —until 1947?

A. Until 1947, right.

Q. Who did run Princess Sweets?

A. Heller.

Q. Louis Heller?

A. Louis Heller and Klein.

Q. Are you interested in Concord Confections?

A. Now, yes.

Q. When did that company start doing business?

A. 1948, I think.

Q. In the year 1948 did you have occasion to buy some raw corn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you buy it?

A. Up to Des Moines, Iowa.

Q. Des Moines, Iowa?

A. Right.

Q. And did you afterwards have a transaction with General Confections and Mr. Lubben concerning the corn?

A. The transaction, I was partners with Mr. Heller in buying the corn?

3990 Q. Yes, sir.

A. The transaction—

By the Court: Raise your voice a little bit, Mr. Ducorsky.

By the Witness: All right, I will, Judge.

By the Witness:

A. After a while—I don't much remember what happened that—I will say that, that when I bought the corn I bought it partners with Mr. Heller. After we had to take that corn to make some corn syrup out of it, and happened that it was too late already, that the companies of Penick & Ford, of the refinery people, they couldn't take it.

Q. You wanted Penick & Ford—

A. Anyone.

Q. Some refinery.

A. Any one of the refineries to grind the corn, but it was too late already, because on account of the price, so giving—so Mr. Heller introduced Mr.—made a deal with Mr.—what is his name—Dave Lubben—to get the corn in production, in producing of corn syrup.

3991 Q. And was it ground?

A. It was ground, yes.

Q. Through what refinery?

A. I think—I couldn't tell you to what refinery. I don't remember that.

Q. What did you get, dextrose or syrup from the corn?

A. We didn't get anything.

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me. Just a moment, Mr. Ducorsky. I object on the ground that I fail to see any relevance to what Mr. Ducorsky's transactions with Mr. Lubben were to what transactions the Shotwell people may have had. I don't see any connection to it up to now. I think it is immaterial, irrelevant.

By the Court: I didn't understand, Mr. O'Brien, as to what connection he says Mr. Lubben did have with this transaction. Will you state what he said?

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't too clear to me, to tell the truth, Judge.

By the Court: Let's clear that up.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let me go back.

3992 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You were introduced to Mr. Lubben by Heller?

A. I was introduced—no, I wasn't introduced, no. As a matter of fact,—

By the Marshal: The jury can't hear.

By Mr. O'Brien: You talk down there, Mr. Ducorsky, so the people at the end can hear you. You talk to them, where the Marshal is.

By the Witness:

A. I wasn't introduced to Mr. Lubben. I was given to—Mr. Heller took everything—whatever—and my partner did everything, whatever was to be done in the producing of the grinding of the corn.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you receive the corn products from the corn?

By the Court: We haven't yet straightened out just what Mr. Lubben had to do with this deal, if anything.

By Mr. O'Brien: I see.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did Mr. Lubben have to do with the transaction, Mr. Ducorsky?

3993 A. I don't know much about that. One thing I know, that I got my profit, and that is all what I did.

Q. From whom did you get it?

A. From Dave Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: Get what?

By the Court: Read it.

By the Witness: The profit, whatever was—

By the Court: Just keep quiet. Read it, Mr. Reporter.

(Record read.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike the testimony, your Honor. I fail to see its relevance.

By the Court: It may be stricken as immaterial.

That is all.

(Witness excused.)

3994 DAVE KUPFER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Dave Kupfer.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Kupfer?

A. 733 South Cornell Avenue, Villa Park, Illinois.

Q. And what is your business or occupation?
A. At this time?
Q. Yes, what is it now?
A. I am selling windows.
Q. What was your business or occupation in the year 1945?
A. I was with Walgreen Company as candy buyer.
Q. At that time, or during your employment there did you meet a Mr. David Lubben?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the occasion for meeting Mr. Lubben?
A. Well, I had met Mr. Lubben prior—somewhere in '45 at various places. I don't recall whether he came in to sell me anything or whether I just met him 3995 down at the hotels at conventions or something like that.
Q. Did you have some conversation with him on the subject matter of acquiring a candy company?
A. Yes.
Q. And when was that?
A. I believe that was in '45.
Q. And who was present; where did it take place?
A. In the Walgreen office building.
Q. And who was present?
A. I believe a Mr. Druckenmiller was with Dave Lubben. I am not certain, but I am pretty sure he was.
Q. Can you fix the time approximately?
A. The time of the day or the date?
Q. No, I mean the date, the approximate time of the year.
A. I couldn't tell you that. I don't remember.
Q. All right. Now, tell us what was said.
A. Well, he asked me if I knew of any place—any candy factory that might be for sale.
Q. And what did you tell him?
A. And I told him that I had heard of one. And he asked me what the name was. And I told him 3996 I wasn't at liberty to tell, because it was not for—it was handled on the quiet because the people didn't want it known that it was for sale.
Q. Is that all the conversation?
A. And I was asked to get some information on it, which I did.

Q. Who asked you to get the information on it?
A. Dave Lubben.
Q. And that was part of that conversation?
A. That's right.
Q Now, is that all the conversation at that time?
A. That's all.
Q. Now, what did you do, if anything, after having that conversation with Mr. Lubben?
A. I contacted the individual that had mentioned to me that that plant was available.
Q. And who was that?
A. Paul Hershey.
By the Court: Who?
By the Witness: Paul Hershey.
By the Court: Can't you speak a little louder?
By the Witness: Paul Hershey.
By the Court: H-e-r-s—
3997 By the Witness: —h-e-y.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. And after contacing Mr. Hershey did you have some further conversation with Mr. Lubben?
A. Yes.
3998 A. I think that was just over the phone. I don't recall, but it was not in Walgreen's office. I don't remember just where it was.
Q. Well, you did have a conversation with Mr. Lubben?
A. I had a conversation with him, yes.
Q. Now, tell us what was said?
A. The price of the business was mentioned.
Q. Tell us as near as you can what was said. Don't try to summarize it. If you can't give us the exact words, give us the substance.
A. I can't tell you the exact words.
Q. Well, give us the substance.
A. Well, the sum and substance was, "What is the price on the business?" And "What are the quotas"
Q. Now, who said that?
A. Dave Lubben.
Q. He asked you that?
A. That is right.
Q. What did you tell him?
A. I told him, I says, "I still will have to find that out," and I found it out and I told him.

Q. Wait a minute. Let us finish with the conversation. Was that all the conversation at that time?

3999 A. Well, I would say that is about all.

Q. All right. Now, did you do anything after that conversation?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do?

A. I made an appointment. Well, I told—Dave Lubben told me that if the quotas were going to be good, it would be worth something to my advantage.

Q. That was in that telephone conversation that he told you that, is that right?

A. It might have been the telephone conversation.

Q. All right. What did you do with reference to it?

A. Well, we settled on a commission arrangement.

Q. Now, was that some conversation you had with Lubben?

A. That is right.

Q. Where was that?

A. I don't recall exactly where that took place but I can tell you what was said.

Q. All right. Can you tell us what was said between you?

A. I told him that it would be—it would cost him quite a little money to get that business.

4000 I said, "The price is $35,000.00 and $10,000.00 for Paul Hershey and $10,000.00 for me", because he said it was well worth it.

Q. Who said it?

A. Dave Lubben.

Q. Did you tell him the name of the company?

A. No, not at that time.

Q. All right. What did you do after that conversation? Did you have any further conversation with Mr. Lubben about it?

A. Yes. The arrangements were made to see the plant and I was to pick him up at a certain place to take him out there.

Q. Did you do that?

A. I did that.

Q. Did you tell him at that time what the name of the company was?

A. On the way out I said, "Dave, we have a deal of $10,000.00 for Paul Hershey and myself" and he said, "Yes."

And I said, "Are you sincere about it?"

He said, "Yes."

I said, "Would you sign an agreement to that?"

4001 And he said, "Yes." And he did, and then I took him out there.

Q. Did you tell him the name of the company?

A. After he had signed that agreement.

Q. And what was it that you told him?

A. Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. All right. What did you do? Did you and Lubben go to the plant?

A. We went to the plant.

Q. And what occurred after that, of your knowledge?

A. Well, he conferred first with the principals and later on the deal was made and shortly after that I was contacted to come down and collect my $10,000.00.

Q. Who contacted you?

A. Dave Lubben.

Q. And where did you go?

A. The Close Candy Company.

Q. And what happened there?

A. Well, Paul Hershey and I were together and Dave Lubben offered to pay us in cash.

Q. Yes.

A. I refused the cash and so did Mr. Hershey. I told him, "I will take a check."

4002 Q. Did you get the check?

A. I got two checks, one for $5,000.00 from Dave Lubben and one from Ed Urban of the Close Candy Company.

Q. Did you cash the checks?

A. I took one of them—I don't know which one, to Merrill Lynch and deposited it to my stock account. The other one, I don't recall whether I took that to another broker or whether I—

Q. You got the cash?

A. Sir?

Q. You got the credit to your account?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Is that all you had to do with the transaction?

A. That's all.

By Mr. McConnell: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move to strike on the ground that it has absolutely no relevancy to the issues in this case as to whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company evaded these income taxes.

4003 By Mr. McConnell: Mr. Lockley, Mr. Lubben testified on his direct examination he had no interest in the Haberkorn Candy Company. This shows he was paying commissions on it and making a deal.

By Mr. Lockley: It doesn't show Mr. Lubben's interest, if your Honor please.

By the Court: I don't remember. My recollection is, however, that the Haberkorn Candy Company was in somebody's else's name. It wasn't in Lubben's name.

By Mr. McConnell: That is what he said. He said he had no interest in it. I am showing now he did have an interest in it, by this witness. It goes to the whole background, with the final wind-up of the Haberkorn Candy Company and whether he had it and whether he go it, and whether he paid the money.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, Mr. Lubben said on the stand he paid this man $10,000.00. He recited practically the identical details this man told us on the stand. It is in no sense impeachment of Mr. Lub-4004 ben's testimony.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley: No cross examination.

By the Court: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

WILBERT J. MILLER, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Wilbert J. Miller.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Miller?

A. Bronxville, New York.

Q. Now, Mr. Miller, will you talk in a loud voice so that it is possible for everybody to hear. The acoustics are not very good in this court room.

What is your present business, Mr. Miller?

A. I am a management consultant.
Q. With what company?
A. With George H. Elliot & Company.
Q. In New York?
A. In New York City.
4005 Q. Did you, at one time, work with the American Maize Company?
A. I did.
Q. Tell us about that. When were you with them and what post did you occupy?
A. I was with American Maize from October, 1941, until November, 1949. My position there was a sales manager and later manager of sales administration. And as—in that capacity, it was my duty to see that the company's policies were properly carried out. I had charge of allocations of merchandise because everything was on allocation. And in that way I got into handling any corn that had to be bought during the corn deal period.
4006 Q. And now the corn deal. What years are you referring to, Mr. Miller?
A. That was 1945, 1946, in that period.
Q. And in those periods, you say you were in charge for the company of their overall allocation and product?
A. I was.
Q. Is your company, or the company that you were with then, Mr. Miller, one of the largest producers of corn products in the United States?
A. We were the fourth in grind.
Q. The fourth largest?
A. The fourth largest.
Q. And one of their products was corn syrup?
A. It was.
Q. Was your company a large purchaser of corn?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, will you describe briefly, Mr. Miller, in the war years the supply situation with respect to corn syrup?
A. Well, we started to allocate syrup on the basis—of course the demand was terrific, beyond our ability to supply them. Then we established quotas for each customer on the basis of their 1941 purchases in an 4007 attempt to be equitable to all of our customers.
Q. Did the government have some restrictions on the amount of corn you could grind?

A. No, there was no restriction on the amount of corn we could grind but there was a restriction on ceiling prices on corn and then a period developed in 1945 where it became more profitable for farmers to feed corn to hogs than to sell it through the regular channels.

Our factory was located here in the Chicago area and all of the corn that we purchased, came through the Chicago Board of Trade. Even during the corn deals, everything came through the Board of Trade where it was graded and we paid ceiling prices for corn, but there was no corn coming into the free market at one time.

Q. What do you mean by that, there was no corn coming into the free market?

A. Well, the Board—this is a term of the market where the farmers—their corn and ceiling prices were set on the Chicago—on the basis of Chicago prices for No. 2 yellow and then it was graded down for whether it had more moisture in it—you made adjustments
4008 from the base ceiling price for the corn and that was all graded by the Board of Trade, so when there was a shortage of corn, our customers went out or made available corn to us to grind.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, unless we get down to the particularities.

By the Court: I don't understand, but I think we should not go into the general practices any further.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Was Shotwell a customer of American Maize?

A. It was, or they were, rather.

Q. And now in the period of the corn deals, as you know them, was it possible for your company to buy corn on the open market at ceiling?

A. It was not. There was none available for a long period of time.

Q. Well, during that period, could you live up and did you live up to your 1941 allotments?

A. We did not. We couldn't possibly.

Q. Well, how did you allocate the corn syrup then?

A. We allocated the corn syrup on a percentage basis of what we had available.

4009 In other words, we had to give a certain percentage of the grind to the customers that made the corn available and what was left, we allocated to the balance of our quotas.

Q. And so that put the 1941 quota out the window during the corn deal period, is that right?

A. Well, it only served as a basis. We had to reduce it to sometimes 70 per cent of 1941 purchases. Sometimes we had to go even lower than that because we only had the excess over what we had to pay for the corn deals to allot to our regular trade.

4010 Q. Now in your company was somebody—let me put it this way: In your company, in the New York office, that is the head office, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. And that is where you were?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the bookkeepers of the company in New York keep records as part of the company records of these corn deals in New York?

A. We had to keep records to know who to ship our obligation to or to make corn available. We had to keep records, surely.

Q. What was the form of that?

A. Well, it was—all we did was we got a carload of corn in and it was assigned to us by a customer.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, again unless we get down to the situation.

By the Court: Well, I assume he is laying a foundation for some particular transaction.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By the Witness:

4011 A. (Continued) We had to keep a record of our obligation to the customer who made the corn available. Now, once that obligation was fulfilled, we had no further need for the record.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And what did you do with it?

A. Well, they kept them there as long as I was with the company. What was done with them since I left, I don't have any idea.

Q. They were just memoranda records?

A. They were just memoranda records, definitely.

Q. Was one of the people they supplied corn to on the corn deal Shotwell?

A. I cannot swear to that. I cannot testify that they did. However—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any "howevers", your Honor.

By the Court: Well, you have answered the question.

By the Witness: I have not. Your Honor, I would like to explain something in that connection.

By the Court: Well, perhaps he can put another question.

4012 By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What knowledge do you have about Shotwell securing the corn syrup?

A. Well, I know that they got shipments in corn in excess of their 1941 quota.

Q. They got shipments of corn or—

A. Corn syrup, in excess of their 1941 purchases and the only way that I can possibly conceivably consider it is they must have supplied corn. I do not have any specific records available.

Q. Well, how many years since you have been with the company?

A. Just about four years.

Q. Mr. Miller, was that requirement of the furnishing of corn applied just to Shotwell or to other companies?

A. It applied to practically all of our customers.

Q. Including—

A. That is, a great many of them, yes.

Q. In the confectionery field?

A. Confectionery, ice cream, bakery deals.

Q. And you were dealing with the principal companies in those fields in the United States?

4013 A. That is correct.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Miller, you say that whatever records you may have had with reference to the purchase of corn by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for grinding at American Maize Products have now been destroyed?

A. I did not say that.

Q. Well, you don't know where they are?

A. I do not know where they are because I am not with the company any longer.

Q. At least they are not available?

A. I haven't got them available because I am not with the company.

Q. Did you keep any such records?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you handle any transactions relating to the purchase of corn for use by the American Maize and grind it, from which corn syrup would then be sent to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I had the complete authority to decide—

Q. Well, I asked you if you handled any such transactions.

A. Would you re-state the question, please?

4014 Q. Did you handle any transactions or arrangements with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company whereby American Maize Products received corn and in turn ground it, made corn syrup and sent that corn syrup to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I authorized all corn—

By the Court: Just answer the question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you make such arrangements in connection with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I can't remember precisely each particular customer.

Q. Then you don't remember any such arrangement having been made?

A. Not specifically, no, because after all, we had an awful lot of customers and I couldn't possibly remember every customer.

Q. So that you are testifying entirely from what you believe might have happened?

A. I am quite sure—

Q. You have no present recollection that such an arrangement was ever made with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I have every reason to believe—

4015 Q. I say, do you have any present recollection?

A. I can't say that I can specifically recall right now, no.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike his testimony, your Honor. I think it is immaterial and irrelevant and it is hearsay.

By the Court: It may stand. Is that all the cross examination?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I might ask him another question while he is on there.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid one dollar premium to American Maize Products Company or any employee of American Maize Products Company for the purpose of getting syrup?

A. I am very confident that they did not.

Q. Do you know whether they paid one dollar to any grain broker for the purpose of getting corn for shipment to American Maize Products?

A. That was completely out of my jurisdiction.

Q. Do you know if they paid one dollar to anybody for either corn or corn syrup over and above the 4016 ceiling price?

A. Everything I know about that is purely hearsay.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, that's all.

By the Court: That is all?

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Miller, was your company able to buy corn at the ceiling price?

A. It was absolutely impossible to get any corn because it was just not available, so the corn had to come from someplace.

Q. Do you know of anybody in the whole country that was able to buy corn other than in the black market in that period?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. The answer would obviously be hearsay.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, you asked him generally about his knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked him of his knowledge with respect to Shotwell and not his knowledge with respect to everybody else in the country.

4017 By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. There was no corn available. All of the corn refiners—and I was closely connected with all of them and knew all their problems—there was no corn available except it was made available by customers. Obviously, it was in the black market because there was no regular market for corn, none whatsoever.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That is all.

By the Court: We will take our recess now for ten minutes.

By Mr. Lockley: Don't go yet.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room. This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

By Mr. Lockley: I just want to ask you one question.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did the Shotwell Manufacturing Company
4018 have a quota with American Maize Products Company?

A. They did.

Q. For 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Mr. Miller.

(Witness excused.)

LEROY D. GODFREY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Leroy D. Godfrey, G-o-d-f-r-e-y.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Godfrey?

A. My home address? Chicago. Do you want the street address?

Q. Yes.

A. 5008 North Mozart Street, Chicago 25.

Q. What has been your training in life, Mr. Godfrey?

4019 A. Well, since I left the regular Army 23 years old I have been in the grain business.

Q. In the grain business?
A. Yes.
Q. For some many years?
A. It will be 50 years in August.
4020 Q. Would you be good enough—you do have a voice that carries well, but the acoustics are poor in this room, Mr. Godfrey, so speak up clearly. Would you kindly do that?
A. Yes.
Q. Now in the fifty years—by the way, were you ever in the grain business in Minneapolis?
A. Yes, for twenty years.
Q. With what company?
A. Van Dusen Harrington Company.
Q. And did you come to Chicago?
A. No, I went to Winnipeg.
Q. And you were in the grain business there?
A. Yes, for thirteen years.
Q. When did you come to Chicago?
A. March, 1937.
Q. Did you then work on the Chicago Board of Trade?
A. Yes.
Q. In what capacities?
A. Manager of the grain department of the Corn Products Refining Company from March, 1937, until the first week in May, 1946.
Q. Is the Corn Products Refining Company the 4021 largest corn processor in the United States?
A. Yes.
Q. Well, probably in the whole world, I guess?
A. Oh, yes, certainly.
Q. And when you say you were manager of their grain department on the Board of Trade, what does that mean?
A. It means that you are responsible for the procuring of corn and for its distribution at the proper time.
Q. Did you have men that worked on the floor under you?
A. Yes, I had three assistants.
Q. And they were the ones that actually would be on the floor buying those?
A. In Chicago, yes.
Q. And in this crew that you had, Mr. Godfrey, were they the largest of the buyers of corn in the Chicago market for processors?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. By far the largest, were they?

A. Yes. I don't know the exact ratio, but overwhelmingly so.

Q. Now, Mr. Godfrey, will you tell me, during 4022 the war years,—or let me strike that.

Mr. Godfrey, were you on a national committee that had to do with the corn and grain supply and price situation?

A. I was on several informal committees that were just for the time being, but I became chairman later on of a newly created committee known as The Corn Industry Advisory Committee to the OPA.

Q. There was an OPA?

A. Yes. The OPA started operating in corn in January, 1943.

Q. And when did OPA control on corn end?

A. It ended on midnight of the 30th of June, 1946.

Q. And did it ever go back on corn after June 30, 1946?

A. No.

Q. Describe just generally and briefly, Mr. Godfrey, the course of prices of corn in Chicago through the war years and then after OPA went off.

A. Well, the war years of course started in the latter—in December, 1941, but the controls, as I have just said, didn't go on to corn until January, 1943. Dur-4023 that interim, corn gradually worked up in price until it reached a level of $1.02, Chicago, for the top price in about the middle of January, 19—that was all prior to controls.

Q. And under controls what price did OPA set in 1944, 1945, and 1946, roughly?

A. Well, in 1943 when they started out, it was $1.02 and that price was continued for—well, I don't recall just the dates until it was raised to $1.08, a six-cent advance, and then they raised it again to, I think, it was $1.16 and then it was raised to $1.24 or almost exactly that, and then some time late in May or after the 10th of May—

Q. Of what year?

A. In 1946, after I had left, they raised it 25 cents a bushel overnight, $1.44. I think the $1.44 was the ultimate. That would be—no, it was $1.19 instead of $1.24, and then they raised it to $1.44.

Q. And is $1.44 a bushel the highest corn was priced under the OPA?

A. $1.44 basis, Chicago, yes.

Q. What did the price go down to when OPA dropped?

A. It worked up to—if my memory serves me
4024 right, within a cent of it, anyway—to $2.25 a bushel.

Q. On the Chicago market?

A. That is right.

Q. Now in 1945, what happened to the availability of corn on the open market?

A. Well, it kept—during 1945, it kept increasingly difficult to buy corn and then the situation was aggravated in the fall of 1945 by several weeks of almost continuous rain so that it made corn very difficult to obtain.

4025 Q. What would that do? What effect would that have?

A. Well, of course, it would create a shortage, a scarcity, and of course it increases the anxiety of the processor or consumer to buy corn or secure corn.

Q. And that was late in 1945?

A. Yes, affecting the 1945 corn crop.

Q. Then how long did the shortage continue? Did it continue? I mean, did the shortage get worse or did it lighten? What was the course of it then?

A. Well, from what I could observe, I don't—I think it got so tight that there was no corn sold at the ceiling price or practically none after about the 1st of January, 1946, for the life of the OPA, the six months' life and I don't think any corn was sold at the ceiling price without some inducement that may have been given to somebody, yes.

Q. What do you mean inducement?

A. Well, I don't know myself but we were buying the corn. We bought at the ceiling price.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any hearsay, if your Honor please, unless he knows what was done with respect to the sales.

4026 By the Court: He said he didn't know.

By the Witness: I said I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley: I move his answer be stricken.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Godfrey, so far as Corn Products Refining Company is concerned, that company did not, on the Board of Trade, offer anything above the ceiling price, did it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was Corn Products able to buy on the open market at ceiling prices?

A. There were purchases that were made almost daily.

Q. And did suppliers of Corn Products—I mean, did customers of Corn Products make that corn available to them at ceiling price?

A. No. When you say customers of Corn Products?

Q. That is, people—the corn deals. Did you handle the corn deals or was there another department that handled it?

A. Oh, the purchasing of corn?

Q. Yes.

4027 A. The purchasing of corn was done by my assistants on the floor. I wasn't there personally.

Q. If there was a corn deal made with Corn Products when the corn came out to the market, it was earmarked to go to Corn Products, was that the situation?

By Mr. Lockley: If you please, Mr. Kirby, will you ask the questions. I object, your Honor, to Mr. Kirby leading the witness and testifying.

By the Court: Yes.

4028 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you have, personally, Mr. Godfrey, anything to do with the so-called corn deals?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was handled by some other department of Corn Products?

By Mr. Lockley: We haven't established that there were any yet, if your Honor please. I object to the nature of the question.

By the Court: Yes, sustained.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, we will have other witnesses from Corn Products, documentary material and all that sort of stuff.

By Mr. Lockley: Fine. Let's wait till we get that.

By Mr. Kirby: I wanted to cover with this gentleman that he personally did not.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You were trying to buy corn—you fellows were trying to buy corn on the open market?

A. We wouldn't buy it unless it was offered to us at ceiling price?

Q. The open market was practically devoid of 4029 corn at ceiling price; is that true?

By Mr. Lockley: I object again, if your Honor please, to Mr. Kirby's testimony and to his leading the witness.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. There was no corn. So far as I know, there was no corn offered on the market, unless—except when the man came to my assistants, the salesman, to offer the corn, he would state that this is for the credit of some buyer, somebody outside of the grain business.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Strings to it?

A. Certainly, strings to it.

Q. All right. Now, are there any daily figures issued with respect to the volume of trading on the Chicago Board of Trade?

A. The Chicago Exchange Authority issues every forenoon a statement showing the volume of trade in grain futures, contracts, of the previous day, and the net result of what was left open, in the matter of open trades. That is published every day, following the 4030 trading day. That's on grain futures.

Q. And is there also a publication with relation to spot sales?

A. There is.

Q. And where is that?

A. It is a matter of record with the Chicago Board of Trade. It is kept—a daily record—it is reported to the reporters of the Chicago Board of Trade, and they make a complete record of it. And that is handed out to any publication that may wish to publish it. But the Wall Street Journal now and what was formerly the Chicago Journal of Commerce, publish those figures in full each day.

Q. So that the daily figures which are published, with respect to the Board of Trade, in the Wall Street Journal, as it is now called, or the Journal of Commerce, they are the ones that come from the Board of Trade?

A. That's right.

Q. And are they accepted and relied on in the trade?

A. Certainly they are.

Q. In the regular course of the market?

4031 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is true both as to the spot figures and futures figures?

A. Well, the futures figures—

Q. They print them both, don't they?

A. Well, yes, but they can't print them the next morning, following the markets, not the futures figures.

Q. No. Does the Chicago Board of Trade put out an annual volume which accumulates some figures of business on the Board of Trade?

A. Yes.

Q. And do they in that volume accumulate the figures as to the futures trading?

A. Well, the futures trading is a matter of record with the Commodities Exchange Authority, and they publish every year, the record for the year. But the Board of Trade simply receives the report from the Commodities Exchange Authority and through their statistical department make it available to anyone who wants to pick up a copy.

Q. And they publish a book once a year?

A. Yes.

Q. And those figures are relied on in the market

4032 and in the industry?

A. Certainly, the year book is correct.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all, Mr. Godfrey. These gentlemen may have some questions.

4033 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Godfrey, you state that you had nothing to do yourself with the actual purchase of corn on the Board of Trade, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. You stated, however, that during this period that you were referring to, 1945 and 1946, the only way corn was sold by someone coming to one of your subordinates and offering to sell it for the account of somebody else, is that correct?

A. I would say that that was—is almost a hundred per cent correct for the period from January 1, 1946 on. Prior to that it wasn't always true.

Q. Did you ever handle any such deals yourself?

A. I have no recollection of ever handling such deals.

Q. So all you know about it is hearsay?

A. No, the reports were turned in to my office every day.

Q. You mean you were told by other people?

A. My reports.

Q. You didn't handle any of them yourself?

A. The reports were brought in to me every day
4034 from the floor.

Q. But you didn't handle them yourself?

A. I didn't handle the purchases, no.

Q. That's what I mean. Now, did you know, of your own knowledge, of any purchases made by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in that manner?

A. I do not recall that name.

Q. Or for the account of Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No, I do not recall that name.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

4035 Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. These fellows that did turn in these reports to you, they were your subordinates?

A. Yes.

Q. You had trained them?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Trained them well?

A. I hope so.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you very much, Mr. Godfrey.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lowney.

WILLIAM LOWNEY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. William Lowney.
By the Court: Again, please?
4036 By the Witness: Lowney, L-o-w-n-e-y.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Where do you live?
A. Pardon me?
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Lowney?
A. 3130 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.
Q. And what is your business?
A. I am a researcher and writer for a firm of education and training consultants.
Q. And is that a statistical firm here in Chicago that does statistical research?
A. We do some statistical research, yes.
Q. And you have clients in industry generally?
A. Yes.
Q. Name some of the representative clients of your company.
A. Elgin National Watch Company, the Pure Oil Company, Sears Roebuck, Uarco, many others.
Q. National business concerns for whom your company does business?
A. That's correct.
Q. And you know my name is Kirby and I talked to you about some matters I wanted your company to research, is that true?
4037 A. That's true.
Q. And they relate to the corn market, the Chicago Board of Trade?
A. Yes, that's true.
Q. Specifically, did I ask you to do some work in connection with the volume of futures trading on the Chirago Board of Trade?
A. Yes, you did.
Q. And what source material did you refer to?
A. I used the Chicago Board of Trade year book for the futures.

Q. And does the Chicago Board of Trade year book contain figures on the volume of futures trading?

A. It does.

Q. And is that given by years and by months?

A. It is given by years and by months, yes.

Q. When you had the Chicago Board of Trade figures, from their book, what did you do with those figures, at my request?

A. Our company made up a chart, a visual chart, which visually represents these figures and shows exactly what the situation was for those years.

Q. Keep your voice up, and loud, Bill.

A. O. K.

4038 Q. And is the chart drawn to some scale?

A. Yes, it is drawn to an exact scale.

4039 Q. Just describe how you do a thing like that, to the Court and jury, will you.

A. The futures corn is given in, as I recall, thousands of bushels, so we would indicate in exact scale the thousands of bushels on the left hand side of the chart. And plotted against that at the bottom of the chart there would be the months of the years we wish to show.

Therefore, by looking at the lines on the chart you can tell exactly how much corn in thousands of bushels was sold on the Chicago Board of Trade for any months during the years plotted.

Q. Do you then get a visual picture of the volume of futures trading?

A. That is exactly what you get, yes.

Q. Now, is that visual picture distorted in any way?

A. In no possible way.

Q. And did you check the chart to make sure it was mathematically and graphically completely accurate?

A. We did.

Q. Is this a type of a chart which your company 4040 has made with respect to other types of things through the years?

A. It is.

Q. And is it a type of chart which is commonly used in business?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Would the reporter mark this chart here Defendants' Exhibit No. 72 for identification.

(Said instrument was marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 72 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is this chart, which is marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 72, the chart to which you have just been referring?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And just as you look at the chart, it represents what?

A. It represents—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I object to any further questioning on this line on the grounds that it is immaterial, it is irrelevant, it is incompetent, 4041 it is outside the issues of the case. It has no bearing whatsoever on whether the Shotwell Company evaded its income tax or whether David Lubben paid them any money. I fail to see that it has any relevance whatsoever.

By the Court: I take it counsel is attempting to lay a foundation now for the chart. You may proceed.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, indeed, if we spent money—

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. Kirby: Indeed, if we spent money to procure raw materials, that is a proper credit against any possible income tax.

By Mr. Lockley: The way to prove it is to bring in the people you spent the money with, not to bring in what was sold on the Chicago Board of Trade.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I have the most fond regard for you, but I am not going to accept your instructions as to how to prove this.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Kirby: They don't even believe we spent a dollar.

4042 By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I move, if the Court please—so that we reach that issue at once—for the admission of Defendants' Exhibit 72. And do I understand that it may be received?

By Mr. Lockley: I object on the ground that it is immaterial, it is irrelevant, it is beyond the issues of the case.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said instrument was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 72.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lowney, will you come down here, please, and take a pencil and just explain to the Court and to the jury precisely what that shows.

A. This shows the total volume of futures trading in corn on the Chicago Board of Trade for the years 1945, 1946 and 1947.

On the far side of the chart, plotted upward, you have your numbers of bushels of corn that were sold on the Chicago Board of Trade on future trading in thou-4043 sands of bushels. Therefore, you have a hundred thousand thousand bushels across this line, and so on up. And down here ten thousand thousand bushels.

4044 Down here you have your January, February, March, April, May, June, July, and your sales for your months of 1945, 1946 and 1947.

Therefore, you can tell at any particular month of the year exactly how much corn was sold that month on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Q. And have I informed you that OPA went off corn in the middle of—I mean the last day of July of 1946?

A. I'm sorry. I can't answer that.

Q. Well,—

A. I don't remember.

Q. Would you locate—in any event, the last witness just said it did—but would you locate on that chart July 1, 1946?

A. That would be right at this point, right here (Indicating).

Q. And after that point, describe the contour of the chart?

A. From July 1, 1946, it is easy to see that the contour of the chart climbs somewhat like a mountain till it reaches a point up here of 500,000 thousand bushels at approximately May of 1947.

Q. How many bushels is 500,000 thousand bushels?

4045 A. 500,000,000, I believe.

Q. Now, during the period just prior to the expiration of the OPA, will you indicate that, please, on the chart?

A. That would be right at this month of June, right here (Indicating).

Q. And going backwards.

A. Going backwards, yes, into—June, May, April, March, February, January, right through there.

Q. Now, will you locate on that chart where October, 1945, is?

A. October, 1945, is this point, right here (Indicating).

Q. And you have indicated that the trading in futures after OPA reached 500,000 thousand bushels. What was the trading in futures from October, 1945, on through 1946?

A. Well, it dropped as low as 490,000 bushels. At October it was 20,871 thousand bushels.

Q. And so far as the visual record is concerned, so small that it almost went off the chart?

A. True.

Q. Now, Mr. Lowney, is there anything else on the chart that you would care to call our attention to?

4046 A. I don't believe so.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you take the stand again, please?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lowney, in the course of your research were there any other figures as to the volume of trading in corn available?

A. There were. There were the spot sales of corn on the Chicago Board of Trade.

4047 Q. And where were they published?

A. They were published in the records of what was then the Chicago Journal of Commerce and what is now the Wall Street Edition—or the Chicago Edition of the Wall Street Journal.

Q. And what did you do in order to obtain those records?

A. I went to the files of the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Q. At their office?

A. At their office, got those files out and took the figures from their back copies of their paper.

Q. The daily sales of spot corn on the Chicago Board of Trade?

A. That is correct. I took the daily sales and totaled them to monthly sales.

Q. And so that you then arrived at a cumulative total of spot sales per month?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what did you do with those figures, Mr. Lowney?

A. We again charted them in the same manner that we charted the other—the futures, except these are 4048 not in thonsands of bushels now, but I believe in carloads.

Q. How were they reported by the Board of Trade?

A. In carloads.

Q. In each case, in each chart you adopt the same system of reporting which the Board of Trade used?

A. Would you rephrase that question, please?

Q. Well, in connection with the futures you used the thonsand bushels?

A. That is correct. We used the same medium that the source document used.

Q. So you followed your source, whatever that was?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you didn't change that?

A. No.

Q. And spot sales are reported in carloads?

A. That is correct.

Q. But you cumulated those by months?

A. We did.

Q. Now, what type of a chart did you make to show the availability of corn on the spot or cash market?

A. The same type of chart, except that your left hand side—your vertical side, going up on the left, now 4049 shows your volume in carloads rather than in thousands of bushels.

Q. And was it plotted mathematically?

A. It was.

Q. Not as an artist, it isn't a freehand job?

A. No, it is not a freehand job. It was done mathematically.

Q. Visually, does it in any way distort the figures?

A. It does not.

Q. It represents them accurately?

A. It represents them accurately.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark this chart Defendants' Exhibit No. 73 for identification.

(Said instrument was marked Defendants' Exhibit 73 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is Defendants' Exhibit 73 the chart with respect to spot or cash corn?

A. It is.

Q. Now, what do the different parts of that chart represent, Mr. Lowney? Would you come down to the chart and show them, please.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you intend to offer it at this time?

4050 By Mr. Kirby: I am sorry. I truly should have made that offer, and I apologize. I do offer Defendants' Exhibit 73.

By Mr. Lockley: In that event I object on the ground that it is immaterial, it is irrelevant, it is beyond the issues of the case. It is not the best evidence.

The Court: It may be received.

(Said instrument was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 73.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Will you explain the chart, Mr. Lowney.

A. This is the total reported spot sales of corn on the Chicago Board of Trade, 1945, 1946, and 1947.

On the left hand side of the chart, over here, you have the number of carloads of corn that were sold on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Down here, as on the other chart, you have your months and your years.

Q. Now, on the carloads on the left, what scale is that?

A. This is 500 carloads, a thousand carloads, be-4051 low that it works down till you have 25 carloads, 50, 75, 100 carloads.

Q. Now, your figures across the bottom, what do they represent?

A. These figures represent the number of carloads sold for any particular month.

Q. Explain now, by referring to the chart, how a person could tell as to any month how much spot or cash corn was available on the open market.

A. You simply go to your month, which is June. You come up here and read across, which will show you how many carloads. Or you can just read this figure down here, which is the accurate figure for the month.

Q. All right. Now why don't you start over there at the left, and what is the first month you have in '45?

A. January of 1945.

Q. Now, read your chart as you come across it, Mr. Lowney, to indicate the total number of cars of corn sold on the open market.

A. Will you repeat that?

Q. Month by month.

A. The entire way across?

A. All right.

Q. What is the first month you have?

A. We have January of 1945.

Q. How many cars sold on the spot market in January 1945?

A. 1,019.

Q. The next month?

A. The next month is February, 857.

Q. Why don't you point out visually what it is.

A. All right. Here is your 1,019. Here is your 857.

Q. Then go through now.

A. March is 718. April is 770. May is 587. June is 169. July is--

Q. Now wait a minute. In other words, in the month of June of 1945, there were only 169 cars sold on the Board of Trade on the spot market?

A. According to the Chicago Journal of Commerce records.

Q. That is an average of some five a day.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, go ahead and give us the months after June.

4053 A. Well, we come at July to a case where the Government sold some corn and that is listed in white. To follow down as to what was sold in the regular manner on the Chicago Board of Trade, you have for August, 225. September, 95.

Q. In September now the average was down to about three cars a day being sold on the market?

A. That's correct. October it was 37.

Q. In October the average is a little better than one car a day available on the open market?

A. That's right. In November, 85. December, 60. Shall I go on?

Q. Yes.

A. January of 1946 there were 25. In February of 1946 there were four cars sold.

Q. Well, then, in those two months, January and February of 1946, the corn was practically off the market?

A. There were 29 carloads in those two months.

Q. 29 carloads in two months?

A. That's right.

4054 Q. On the whole Board of Trade?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Will you go ahead.

A. March, 22. In April there was one. In May, 5. In June there was one. In July there were 221. That's July of 1946.

Q. All right. Now, July 1, 1946, the OPA went off. And show visually what happened after the OPA went off.

A. Again it went to 221 carloads, 267 carloads, 225 carloads, shot way up to 884 carloads, up to 1308 carloads, and eventually over here went clear up to—I believe 1,627 carloads is the top figure, in the middle of 1947.

Q. Now, the white section there in 1945, in the middle of '45, did the government enter the market then?

A. Those are 113 carloads sold by the C.C.C., 47 carloads sold by the C.C.C. I think that was Commodities Credit. I believe that's government selling.

Q. They were pouring some corn into the market then?

A. Yes.

4055 Q. But, as a matter of fact, the corn they put in was almost half as much as went in the market in those months?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to this testimony.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. It is visually there and I may be inaccurate about it. It may be a third.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, is there anything else, Mr. Lowney, with respect to that chart?

A. No, I believe that covers the chart completely.

Q. Now, the period that we have been particularly talking about here is from late '45 until June and July of 1946. And that is the period which I now cover by the sweep of my pencil?

A. That's true.

Q. Referring now to the earlier exhibit, which is Exhibit 72, the period we have been particularly talking about here is from the middle of '45 until July of '46. And is that the period which I am now covering by the sweep of my pencil?

A. Approximately, yes.

By Mr. Kirby: You may cross examine.

4056 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Does your chart reflect purchases of corn from country elevators?

A. My chart reflects purchases of corn made on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Q. It doesn't reflect the purchases of corn made on the Omaha Board of Trade?

A. On the Chicago Board of Trade.

Q. Not on the Denver Board of Trade?

A. On the Chicago Board of Trade.

Q. Not on the St. Louis Board of Trade?

A. The same answer.

Q. Or Kansas City?

A. No.

Q. It doesn't reflect any purchases made at country elevators?

A. It refers to purchase made on the Chicago Board of Trade.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, at this time I move to strike the testimony on the ground that it has no relevance to the issues in this case. It is only testimony with respect to purchases on the Chicago Board of 4057 Trade. It is limited to the—Mr. Godfrey, of the Corn Products Refining Company, testified they exclusively bought on the Chicago Board of Trade, but other witnesses testified that they made purchases at other places. It has no relevancy to the issues.

By the Court: Your objection goes to the weight of it rather than to the relevancy. I will deny the motion.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Mr. Lowney.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Kirby: That is the year book of the Board of Trade. I don't know whether Mr. Lockley wanted to look at that or not.

By Mr. Lockley: I certainly don't.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, you don't want to ignore things that happen out in the world, Mr. Lockley.

4058 ROBERT R. ADAM, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Robert R. Adam.

Q. And where do you live?

A. 3260 Lake Shore Drive.

Q. In Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Adam, we do have a little trouble with the acoustics in this room and if you could speak up it would help us all.

A. All right.

Q. I talk a little louder maybe than I need to, but it does help, I think.

Are you with the Corn Products Refining Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the company that Mr. Godfrey was with until his retirement after some fifty years in the grain business?

A. Yes, sir.

4059 Q. Now, what has been your work with Corn Products Refining Company?

A. I am the central division sales manager for the Corn Products Sales Company.

Q. And what type of products do you have charge of, Mr. Adam?

A. All the products that my company manufactures.

Q. And is your company a manufacturer of corn syrup?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of starch?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And of corn sugar?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what trade name does your company use?
A. Globe brand corn syrup, unmixed. Cerolose brand dextrose sugar. And Buffalo brands and Globe brands of starch.
4060 Q. And is it Adam or Adams?
A. Adam.
Q. Mr. Adam. Well, Mr. Adam, is it true that your company is the largest refiner of corn syrup in the country?
A. It is reputed to be.
Q. And the territory in which you had charge is the middle west territory here?
A. That's correct.
Q. That included the Shotwell account?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. They were purchasers of corn syrup from your company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, Mr. Adam, in early 1945 did you have some difficulty in your company in the procuring of products for your customers?
A. In the procuring of products for our customers?
Q. In filling the demand?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the demand situation in '45?
A. Well, it was—the demand at that time was beyond our ability to produce.
Q. And was there any situation with respect to the 4061 ability to procure corn that you were aware of?
A. There was a shortage of corn, reputedly, at that time.
Q. Did you personally send some of your men out to try to buy corn?
A. Yes.
Q. What men were they—I don't mean by name, but what type of men did you send out?
A. They were our bulk salesmen, principally.
Q. People usually engaged in selling the product?
A. Selling the end product, that's right.

Q. What did you do with these men who normally sell the end product and when did you do it?

A. We did that—we started that in January, 1946.

Q. What did you try to do?

A. We tried to find corn for our company.

Q. And were they able to get it?

A. No.

Q. What did the company do with respect to the securing of corn?

A. Well, they appealed to anybody that might have had corn to send it to us, among them our regular customers.

Q. Was one of the customers that was asked to 4062 supply corn, if they could, Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you know a man by the name of Alger?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is he?

A. He is the head of our accounting department in Chicago.

Q. And did he maintain some records about customers who supplied corn?

A. Yes.

Q. You don't have those personally?

A. No.

Q. That wasn't part of your job?

A. That's correct.

Q. That is that other fellow's?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us now, apart from the records which Alger is the fellow that handles, what do you know about the corn deals, if any, that were made by your company with customers?

A. Well, my—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please—

By the Court: Yes.

4063 By Mr. Lockley: I must object to the form of the question as being too general in nature.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Were there any corn deals made with Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you handle those personally or did somebody else?

A. I handled them through my office.
Q. And what do you mean, your office?
A. Through my organization.
Q. You were head of the sales organization?
A. That's right.
Q. And do you remember what the deal was with Shotwell?

By Mr. Lockley: Let's have a foundation, as to time and place, please.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Do you know the time?
A. Well, it was sometime, as I recall, between the end of November and possibly the end of June of '46, the end of November, '45, and to June, '46.
4064 Q. And what was the deal?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a moment, please. Who was there, what was said?
By the Court: Yes.
By Mr. Kirby: Yes.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Who handled it, do you know; who made the arrangements?
A. Well, with respect to the purchase of the corn itself?
Q. No, that had to take place outside. Who made the arrangements between Shotwell and Corn Products for there to be a so-called corn deal?
A. Well, when this shortage of corn developed, my company sent out a general advice to the customers telling them that they might be able to procure for us and in return for that corn we gave them product—end product.
Q. What had happened to any quota system?
A. Well, we had established a quota prior to—the late—end of '45, based on 1941 sales to customers.
And that quota was set up because we didn't have 4065 ample corn to supply the demand that the customers—that was evident from the customers.
4066 Q. And were you able to maintain that quota when the corn shortage became acute?
A. No.
Q. What was it then?
A. Well, that varied, dependent on how much corn we had to grind.
Q. What was your source of corn to grind?

A. Mostly from that which customers procured for us.

Q. Now, to go to the Shotwell deal particularly, did you personally talk to anybody from Shotwell about their making corn available?

A. No.

Q. That was handled by somebody else in your department?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Adam, would you describe how in your company any track at all was kept of a corn deal?

A. Well, when a customer—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless there is some relationship to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company or unless he knows of the records himself. He has stated he didn't keep the records.

4067 By the Court: Let us first find out what he knows about the records.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to show the pattern by which they kept track.

By the Court: Let us find out whether he had anything to do with the keeping of the records.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know the system that was used to keep track of these corn deals?

A. I do.

Q. And did you have anything to do with it?

A. As I say, my office did, and I was in charge of that office.

Q. Fine and dandy. In a big organization, I don't expect you to do everything personally. Of course, it isn't up to me say that. I am not the president of the company. But, in any event, how was it done, Mr. Adam?

A. Well, when a customer advised either one of our salesmen or our branch office, whether it was in Chicago or any of our other branches, that they could make corn available, we were so advised in the sales depart-

4068 ment and we told the customer who might have corn available to contact their grain department in the Board of Trade and if they had corn available, the sale of that corn was negotiated through our grain department in the Board of Trade. The corn was purchased by our

It was then reported to me that the corn—when the corn grain bar at the then ceiling price.

arrived and had been purchased by our grain department, the grain department advised my office that the corn was then owned by my company and we set up a product credit for that corn. We kept those records until we completed our obligation on product, on end product.

Q. And after you had delivered the corn syrup, to which the corn had become entitled, the sales department didn't worry about that further?

A. We completed our obligation.

Q. Yes. Now, with respect to all of your customers, were they all treated the same way or were they especially singled out, one or the other?

By Mr. Lockley: In what way?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, with respect to—

By Mr. Lockley: I think it is too broad.

4069 By Mr. Kirby: With respect to furnishing corn syrup.

By the Witness: Our furnishing corn syrup?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes.

A. We endeavored at all times to confine the so-called corn deals to customers of record. We discouraged any negotiations or transactions with people with whom we had never before done business. I can't say definitely whether they were all customers of record but, by and large, we tried to confine those transactions to customers of record and obviously we treated everybody the same.

In other words, we didn't give anybody any more finished product for a car of corn than we did the other fellow.

Q. Did you give anybody a finished product in that critical period unless they did furnish the corn?

A. If they had a quota, yes.

Q. What had happened to the quota in the critical period?

A. It was dependent, as I say, on our corn supplies and we were obligated to give preference to those who supplied corn to us first.

4070 Q. Yes.

A. They got the preference. If there was anything left, we divided it equally, based upon customers of record in 1941 and on the quota that was established on the amount of corn that we still had available, or finished product.

Q. These customers then with whom these deals were made were your regular long-standing customers?

A. By and large, yes.

Q. In the fields that do require the use of corn syrup and starches?

A. I would say yes.

Q. And they included some of the biggest and finest companies in the United States?

A. I consider them such.

Q. And they were all treated in the same way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

4071 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Adam, did the Corn Products Sales Company—I think that is your corporation, isn't it?

A. That is our selling corporation, yes, sir.

Q. That is a subsidiary of the Corn Products Refining Company?

A. That is right.

Q. Did the Corn Products Sales have a salesman, sort of a customers' man, who handled the Shotwell account?

A. Yes.

Q. One particular man who handled it all the time, is that correct?

A. Yes. Usually we assign our salesmen to customers and they confine themselves to the customers to whom they are assigned.

Q. Do you know who that was in 1945?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was it?

A. Arthur N. Anderson.

Q. Arthur Anderson. And how about in 1946?

A. Anderson, the same.

Q. Would anybody else have sold the Shotwell ac-
4072 count during that period of time?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Now you stated that when a customer arranged for the purchase of corn on one of these corn deals, he got a percentage of the grind or the end product, is that correct?

A. He got a certain number of pounds of end product for each car of corn that he obtained or procured for us, that is correct.

Q. As I understand it, it is 34 pounds to a bushel?
A. 56 pounds to a bushel.
Q. I am sorry. I mean 34 pounds of corn syrup is what you get out of a bushel, is that about right?
A. Well, that would vary a little bit. It is around that figure.
Q. And how much of that 34 pounds of corn syrup would go to the customer who helped find the corn?
A. May I put it another way?
Q. Yes, certainly.
A. It is generally acknowledged that a carload of 1500 bushels of corn will produce about 40,000 pounds of finished, refined product outside of the feed that is produced, which goes back to the farm.
4073 Now, based on tht availability of corn during that period, the amount of end product that we gave our customers varied. At times we gave 20,000 pounds of end product for a car of corn. At times we gave fifteen, as I recall, and when corn was in better supply, it went down to 10,000 pounds per car of corn of finished product.
Q. I am afraid you lost me somewhere on the figures. Will you start over again. How much does a car of corn weigh?
A. I said it weighed—I said a car of corn contained 1500 bushels.
Q. That is where you got me. And the 1500 bushels of corn—
A. That is right.
Q. It produced 4500—
By Mr. O'Brien: Forty thousand.
By the Witness:
A. It produced 40,000 pounds, approximately 40,000 pounds of finished product, refined product.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. And did you get 40,000 pounds?
4074 A. 40,000 pounds.
Q. That is exclusive of the feed?
A. That is exclusive of the feed.
Q. That is 40,000 pounds that we have to distribute?
A. That is right.
Q. How much did you say—sometimes as low as 10,000 went to a customer?
A. For each car of corn.

Q. For each car of corn?

A. Sometimes fifteen; sometimes ten.

Q. Did it ever go as high as twenty?

A. I don't recall that it did.

Q. That means you had at times 30,000 pounds left over of the end product which was not allocated to the customer who found the corn?

A. That is true.

Q. What did you do with that?

A. We had an obligation to the consumers of this country. We also manufacture proprietary brands that are well known, Karo syrup, which is used for infant feeding. We had an obligation there to supply that demand. The consumer didn't supply corn for us to get the end product.

4075 We had packaged starches known as Argo brand, Linit, Mazola salad oils. We used part of that corn to keep our products in distribution in the retail channel so that the housewife could continue to buy.

Q. Well, did any part of the 30,000 or 20,000 balance get back into the wholesale market to such customers as Shotwell Manufacturing Company on your allocation basis?

A. Yes. I can't say definitely whether it did or how much, but I assume that it would, because they were customers of record in 1941 and were entitled to a percentage based on their purchases as of that period.

Q. So that accompanied with a quota, who also obtained your corn would benefit not only on the basis of the ten or twenty thousand pounds would also get a percentage of the balance of its regular quota, is that right?

A. That is right, if there was such amount available.

Q. Do you know—

By Mr. O'Brien: What was that? If there was such amount available?

4076 By the Witness: If there was such amount available.

By Mr. Lockley: If there was anything left over.

By Mr. O'Brien: Was there anything left over after you got through using it, is that what you meant?

By the Witness: After we had completed our obligations on corn buying on the amount of corn that the customer had provided.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know what if anything The Shotwell Manufacturing Company did to effect the sale of corn to the Corn Products Refining Company?

A. Will you ask that question again?

Q. Do you know what if anything The Shotwell Manufacturing Company did to arrange the sale of corn to the Corn Products Refining Company?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any of its officers paid any money to any of the salesmen of Corn Products Refining Company for the purchase or the arrangement of the purchase of corn syrup?

4077 A. No.

Q. Do you know whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid any money to anyone so as to arrange the purchase of corn by The Corn Products Refining Company?

A. No.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all. Thank you.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Was your company able to buy corn outside the black market?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please—

By the Court: I don't think he bought—I don't think anyone contends that Corn Products bought corn on the black market. They contend they bought corn for the ceiling price.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to illustrate that it was impossible for Shotwell to get it any place except on the black market.

By the Court: Except as he has indicated, where they would buy it when the customer was able to procure corn, and then they would turn it over to a refiner in order 4078 to get a certain amount of the end product. Is that what you mean?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know where Shotwell went to get this corn?

A. No.

Q. You didn't have anything to do with that personally?

A. No.

Q. But you heard?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please—

By Mr. Kirby: I guess I shouldn't ask that question. I will withdraw it.

By the Court: We will be at recess until two o'clock.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing until the Judge and the jury leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

4081 ARTHUR HAUSMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Mr. Hausman, who was on direct examination this morning, is back on the stand for cross examination, but at the outset, your Honor, I wish to object to the admission in evidence of the documents which have been offered by the defense, namely, Exhibits 37, 23, 66-B, C, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, V, X, Y; 27, 21-B, C, D and E.

I have no objection to Exhibit No. 36.

If I have overlooked any, I wish my objection to stand as to the balance of them, with the exception of Exhibit 36. And I object that there has been no proper foundation laid for the absence of the originals, that there has been no foundation laid that they were prepared in the ordinary course of business, or the circumstances under which 4082 they were prepared, that there has been no foundation laid as to their accuracy, or as to the accuracy of the books and records from which they were prepared, and that we don't know how many books and records may have been kept during the period of the partnership, that these books and records—or these particular work sheets were taken off by an employee of Mr. Roth, who was not the regular accountant of the Eatsum Food Products Company partnership, and that they were done at the behest of Mr. Giglio and not of Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: Well, I don't think there has been any showing made for the absence of the originals.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the witness testified that he does not have the originals.

By the Court: That isn't sufficient foundation.

By Mr. Kirby: That he gave them to Roth. Now, your Honor will recall that these are partnership papers 4083 and we did discuss with your Honor the situation with respect to Mr. Roth and his papers. It is identically the same as the situation with respect to Mr. Giglio and his papers.

By the Court: Well, I don't know—Mr. Roth hasn't been called or hasn't explained the existence of the originals or any other disposition.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if I may address myself to the question:

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. At the time that you made these out, referring now to all of them, Mr. Hausman, you did them in the normal course of your auditing work?

By the Witness: May I see the documents that you have there, please?

(Documents handed to the witness.)

By the Court: In other words, Mr. Kirby, it doesn't appear that Mr. Giglio ever had possession of these papers, so they can't come within the scope of any stipulation.

By Mr. Kirby: That is true with respect to Giglio. But the situation with respect to Roth—4084 By the Court: I don't know anything about that.

By Mr. Lockley: So far as we know, there has been no subpoena served on Roth. So we have no way of knowing how he would react to it.

By the Court: Well, go ahead.

4085 By Mr. Kirby: There is a question pending.

By the Witness: Are you ready for my answer?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. Let me say this, in general I haven't examined these records specifically. I am going to just testify generally as to the records.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the question is, did you make them in the course of your work as an auditor.

By the Witness: As an employe of Mr. Roth.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. And as you wrote them down did they correctly transcribe, so far as you were informed, the transactions to which they relate?

By the Witness: As nearly as I can recall at this time, yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. All right. I just wanted to make that bit of proof as to the regularity of them.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, Judge, that it remains for us to make the connection with you indicated. The man is under subpoena. And in view of this we have to have 4086 him come in, that's all. But it takes the two together to justify the evidence.

By the Court: Sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: It takes the two things together to justify the evidence and we have finished with this part of it.

By the Court: Well, we will return to that when you introduce further evidence.

I will sustain the objection at this time. Exhibit 36, however, may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 36.)

By Mr. O'Brien: And that is subject to our connecting it up.

By the Court: Yes, it is subject to a re-offer again in the event you have further foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Mr. Hausman, I call your attention to Defendants' Exhibit No. 36, which is a loans and exchanges account in the general ledger of the Eatsum partnership. Are 4087 you familiar with the entry on that ledger from the work papers which you previously have identified here?

A. I don't follow you, Mr. Lockley.

Q. Well, does your handwriting appear on that ledger sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did work on it?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you post any entries to that sheet from the books of original entry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from the work papers which you prepared?

A. Well, I think that possibly the sequence would have been from the ledger to the work papers, rather than the other way around.

Q. I see. During the period of the Eatsum partnership, was it not the practice, accounting-wise, to charge the loans and exchanges account with checks which were issued to cash?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I want to object to that, because I asked this witness simply to identify his handwriting on that document. He did identify it. I did not question him at all with respect to how it was made 4088 up, or one thing or another.

Now, if the Government wants to call Mr. Hausman as their witness with respect to that, I have no objection. But it is completely beyond, if the Court will recall, what I asked this witness.

By the Court: Does it have any relation to the work papers which he has identified?

By Mr. Lockley: Not necessarily, your Honor, no. He can testify from that exhibit. And the exhibit is in evidence. It was offered by the defendants themselves. All I am asking now is for him to explain—

By the Court: My query is whether or not your examination is within the scope of the direct.

By Mr. Lockley: It is within the scope of the direct examination in so far as it relates to the loans and exchanges account, which is one of the items of evidence which they have offered and which I have excepted from my objection.

By the Court: Did Mr. Hausman identify it this 4089 morning further?

By Mr. Lockley: He identified it as being partially in his handwriting.

By the Court: In so far as your query relates to that sheet, I think it is a proper question. I confess I am not too fully cognizant of just what all these exhibits indicate and it is a little difficult for me to know whether or not his question is within the direct.

4090 By Mr. Kirby: Well, my point is this, I asked this witness to identify the record and tell me what part of it he made up. And he made plain that he did not make it all up, but he made some part of it up.

Now, Mr. Lockley is inquiring as to the method, what the loans and exchanges is. He is going into the bookkeeping matters.

Now, if he wants Mr. Hausman as his witness for that purpose, that is completely agreeable. But he is beyond my scope on the direct. I did not use this witness for anything other than identification.

By the Court: Well, I rather think there is substance to Mr. Kirby's position.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, he offered that particular item of evidence. And all I am trying to do now is have it explained.

Now, I don't know what possible purpose he can have in offering it, unless the person who has some knowl-4091 edge concerning it is able to explain it.

Now, it may be that he intends to bring in an expert witness who will attempt to explain from his expert knowledge, in general, what this sort of an entry means. What I want to show through this witness is what those particular entries on that particular record means. And this is the best witness who can give us that information.

By the Court: Let's find out. Is Exhibit 36 the document that you are now inquiring about?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. And it is in evidence, offered by the defense and not objected to by me.

By the Court: And that sheet was partially identified by Mr. Hausman.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, bearing partially, or some of the notations he testified this morning are in his handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge Nordbye, may I suggest that we have made a practice of offering exhibits, so iden-4092 tified, so that there might be a cross examination on the foundation.

If we identify an exhibit and take it back to the table, as I sought to do, for the purpose of using it later, then your Honor has ruled that it may be used and we ought to put it in evidence so as to enable counsel to interrogate him about the foundation.

Now, that is why we did it. But as to the substance of what is in those documents, we have brought forward no proof. And it remains to do that with other people. And the testimony that Mr. Lockley wants would then be rebuttal or would be brought forward through Mr. Hausman directly.

By the Court: Well, I think, Mr. Lockley, your questions at least must be confined to the entries entered in there by Mr. Hausman.

4093 Q. Mr. Hausman, are any of the postings to the debit account in Exhibit No. 36 in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now from examination of those postings, can you tell us whether they reflect the issuance of checks to cash?

By Mr. Kirby: I object.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I can't tell from this record.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection as to whether any of the postings contained on that account reflect checks to cash at the time you made them?

By Mr. McConnell: The books would be the best evidence of that.

By Mr. Lockley: He said he couldn't testify and we don't have the books. Now, I am trying to search his recollection.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. From my audit of these records and there was an audit made each month, the purpose of this particular account was to provide a means of clearing certain 4094 cash checks that were used for the purchase of merchandise.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That account is headed—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object to that and ask that it be stricken. Now, you see, he seeks to go into matters in chief in rebuttal, perhaps through the use of the witness who was merely asked to identify certain documents. He is getting into questions about how they conducted their business generally, which, if he wants—

By the Court: He is inquiring about the sheet which the witness identified and which he partly made out.

By Mr. Kirby: Then he has got us in this position, Judge—

By the Court: I think it is a proper question.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, will you please bear with me a moment. The documents which, if we were to go forward to ask about the methods, are these which he has objected to. We can't read from them or do anything about it. 4095 Now, then, the history of it he is asking this gentleman. You see the situation we are in, Judge. He is going beyond the scope of the examination, as we see it, and I do ask that he be restricted.

By the Court: Well, I will overrule the objection. The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Mr. Hausman, according to that ledger sheet, there is a debit balance, is there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that debit balance appear to reflect?

A. Are you referring to any specific date, Mr. Lockley?

Q. Let us just take the end balance as of the end of the accounting period shown on the sheet.

A. The last balance as of May 31, 1946—

By Mr. O'Brien: What sheet are we looking at now?
By the Court: Exhibit 36.
By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 36.
By the Witness:

A. The last balance on May 31, 1946, indicates a 4096 debit balance of $113,750.17.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And a debit balance in a loans and exchanges account of that amount would normally mean that somebody owed the corporation or rather the partnership that much money, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know whether that is the true situation, whether anybody owed the partnership that much money as shown on the loans and exchanges account?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that question.
By the Court: He may answer.
By Mr. Kirby: Well, he is asking him—I should have made my objection a little plainer. He is asking him to go beyond that.

By the Court: Well, you partially identified the foundation for this exhibit through this witness. I don't think that I should limit the Government to just the very question you asked. The verity of the exhibit, its authenticity and what it purports to teach has been partially established by this witness, and I think counsel has a right 4097 to go into the various figures there as to what they mean through one who had the responsibility of making out the exhibit at the time it was made out.

By Mr. Kirby: The particular question I am objecting to is after the witness says this is what it normally means, now he is saying does it really mean something else and that is speculation.

By Mr. Lockley: Exactly, your Honor, and I am showing those records are not correct.

By the Court: That is a question for an accountant who should know from his familiarity with the sheet.

By Mr. Kirby: Did I understand that you want to show that the only book of the partnership that you have produced is incorrect?

By Mr. Lockley: I am not attempting to do anything of the sort. You have brought out this loans and exchanges acccount. I want to have it explained through this witness.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. I think we were at the point, Mr. Lockley, 4098 where you asked whether this—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Debit balance—

A. Let me have the question asked again.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please read the question again.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. This money, the $113,750.17 debit balance on the loans and exchanges account as of May 31, 1946, did not indicate that moneys were owing to the company by anyone but rather was a repository account and at the end of each month, it is my recollection that work sheet entries were made, accountants' work sheet entries were made distributing the balance at the end of each particular month and the cost of goods sold for purchases and possibly some other expenses that might have been paid in cash.

4099 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. In other words, that loans and exchanges account was merely temporary, it was merely a temporary clearing account, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the checks that were charged to it were not actually loans, either made or received?

A. That is—

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that. You don't have the checks.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know if the checks actually charged to that loans and exchanges account were used for either purchases or overages?

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I object to that.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it also, your Honor. It is certainly beyond the scope of the direct and it is not proper evidence of the fact.

By the Court: It may have a bearing on the 4100 verity of the sheet which you introduced. I think it is proper.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as hearsay. He has no knowledge of what was done with these transactions and doesn't have any showing—

By the Court: If he doesn't have any knowledge, he should say so.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, I object.

By the Court: He was allocated—or rather, he was charged with the responsibility of making up all the subtotals for these partnerships. Go ahead.

By the Witness: May I have the question again, please?

By Mr. Lockley: Will you read the question back?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes. I do.

By the Court: I didn't hear you, Mr. Hausman.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, I do.

4101 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right.

By Mr. Kirby: May we impose on the Court to ask him what is the source of his knowledge? Is it hearsay? Please.

By the Court: Well, I suppose you may inquire further when you take the witness on redirect examination.

By Mr. Kirby: But I object to the question until a foundation for the witness's knowledge is laid.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Hausman, will you explain your answer a little bit more fully? You said yes, but I don't quite understand what you meant.

A. Well, may I inquire of you, Mr. Lockley, whether it would be possible for me at this time to explain the background of some of this work so that you would have some idea of what the situation was?

Q. I certainly have no objection, Mr. Hausman. I don't know what the gentlemen at the other table will have to say about it.

By Mr. O'Brien: If he wants this witness to des-4102 cribe the background and all of that, I suggest he make him his own witness.

By the Court: I think you better propound a question, Mr. Lockley. That will avoid any confusion.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know at whose instructions the loans and exchange account was set up in this fashion?

A. Mr. Roth.

Q. And was Mr. Roth working for Mr. Lubben?

A. No.

Q. Or he was working for Mr. Giglio?

A. Well, there was—yes, in that—it's a very difficult question to answer because there was a peculiar relationship there. It was more than the mere fact that Mr. Roth was or wasn't working for Mr. Giglio. I would say he represented Mr. Giglio's interests, yes, but whether it was an employer-employee relationship that, I can't say.

Q. Well, do you know Mr. Bercu?

A. Yes.

Q. And he was the accountant who represented Mr. Lubben's interests, wasn't he?

4103 A. That is correct.

Q. Did he agree with the method of handling this loans and exchanges account as a clearing house?

A. Well, there were—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to this witness testifying as to what somebody else thought.

By the Court: It goes out of the scope of the direct. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That is all, Mr. Hausman.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. You said that one of these items had to do with overages and purchases. Did you see any transactions of that kind yourself?

A. Will you explain that a little bit further.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the general nature of the question, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, the witness has asked him to explain it further.

By Mr. McConnell:

4104 Q. Are you testifying of your own knowledge or transactions of what you learned from the bookkeeping entries?

A. I still don't follow you.

Q. Well, are you testifying to anything other than just what you learned as bookkeeping entries?

A. Well, I am testifying as to the nature of the transactions that came to my attention from one source of documents or another. If you are asking me did I see Mr. Lubben or anyone else engage in transactions in cash, that I must answer no.

Q. You had no personal knowledge of that at all?

A. Of my own—

Q. Of your own knowledge?

A. No.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By the Court: Anything further of this witness?

By Mr. Kirby: No.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You saw the bookkeeping evidence of those transactions, didn't you, Mr. Hausman?

4105 A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You saw bills of lading?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to.

By Mr. Lockley: Why is it you object to it?

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no showing of lack of documents on the matter, if your Honor please.

By the Court: I take it an accountant has a right to resort to the information he gets from books and records explaining certain documents. He merely purports to explain what he learned as an accountant and not from any other standpoint.

4106 By Mr. O'Brien: Even so, he should support it with the books and records he is talking about or with some competent substantive evidence for them and not his recollection.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: I will take a further point, that Mr. Lockley's question called for the contents of books and records. The best evidence would be the books and records.

By the Court: Is there any further examination of this witness?

By Mr. Lockley: No further examination, your Honor.

By the Court: That's all, Mr. Hausman, then.

By the Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

EARL J. PRATT was called as a witness on behalf of the Government, and having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

4107 Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby:

Q. What is your name?

A. Earl J. Pratt, P-r-a-t-t-.

By the Court: You have a bigger voice than that, I am sure.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Pratt?

A. Bellwood, Illinois.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am a broker at the Chicago Board of Trade.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Pratt, you are going to have to speak louder than that. I can't hear you.

By the Witness: I am a broker at the Chicago Board of Trade.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. How long have you been a broker?

A. Twenty years or more.

Q. Now during the war years, what did you do?

A. I was commodity price specialist for the Office of Price Administration in the Chicago Regional Office.

Q. You were with the OPA?

A. Right.

4108 Q. What commodity—in what commodity were you OPA specialist?

A. All grades, feeds and agricultural chemicals.

Q. For what territory?

A. Seven states, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota,

North and South Dakota, and Nebraska.

Q. Where were your offices?

A. Chicago, Illinois.

Q. Was corn one of the products involved?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you the chief specialist for the OPA on corn in this area?

A. Right.

Q. There were price controls, were there?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you know about the corn market in 1944, 1945, and 1946? What opportunity did you have to learn?

A. Well, my job was to find out what was going on in all these various commodities and report violations as they occurred and where they occurred to Washington and to the enforcement section for action.

4109 We had fifteen branch offices in the states and each one of the states had a counterpart of myself whose job was to go in his area and acquire information and I did a lot on my own. I traveled all around those places and visited the markets where grain was handled to find out what was going on.

Q. Did the fifteen—who did they report to?

A. Me.

Q. And you in turn reported to—

A. To Washington.

Q. So that the Government's machinery with respect to corn, that was in your hands in this territory?

A. Yes.

Q. And such information as came, it came through your hands?

A. That is right.

Q. Now will you describe the corn market in 1945 and 1946, Mr. Pratt?

A. Well, shortly after the corn was harvested in the fall of 1945, the loose corn disappeared from the market almost immediately and people interested in buying corn at any price, went out into the country and purchased it wherever they could, and there were—there was 4110 not only one interest, there were several varied interests out trying to acquire corn, the truckers buying it for feeders in deficit areas, corn processors, feed manufacturers.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any recitation of hearsay on the part of this witness unless he has some particular personal knowledge of those transactions.

By the Court: Well, I assume, he is testifying from his personal knowledge.

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Go ahead with your description, Mr. Pratt.

By the Witness:

A. And as the season wore on and the country elevators were loaded with corn, it wouldn't keep too long, they sold that in the earlier days, back in late 1945, at small premiums over the future—over the ceiling price, but as the next year came on and that corn disappeared, the fellows that were lucky enough that had driers and had dry corn, they really held them up and charged all the way up—well, the corn sold during that period from five to forty or fifty cents over.

4111 Q. Did the OPA, during 1946, hold fast its price on corn?

A. I can't answer that offhand because there was a price increase either in 1945 or 1946.

Q. Do you recall in 1946 being advised by your Washington office about a corn purchase program that the Government was going to embark on?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us about that.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. I fail to see what relevancy it has to any issues in the case.

By the Court: Yes. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 74 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 74 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I hand you a document marked Defendants' Exhibit 74 and ask you to please read it, not out loud, but just to yourself, and look at it.

Have you read it?

A. Yes, sir.

4112 Q. Now let me inquire whether there was a time in April of 1946 when you learned of a Government corn purchase program where the price was in excess of the OPA ceiling. Did you learn of that?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I have another objection to the relevancy of the inquiry.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: And also to Mr. Kirby's testimony.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to make an offer of a certified copy from the archives of the United States of a directive of the Office of Economic Stabilization with respect to that program. It is certified by the—

By the Court: A certified copy of what?

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, excuse me, Judge. It is a certified copy from the archives of the United States of a directive.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to the foundation.

4113 By Mr. Kirby: Under the statute, it is a sufficient certification.

By the Court: Any manipulations of the Government in the corn market, if there were any, is wholly immaterial to this lawsuit.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to the foundation of the document, your Honor, but I do object to its materiality.

By Mr. Kirby: Let the Judge read what it is the Government did.

(Handing document to the Court.)

By the Court: Well, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: Judge, let me point out that there is a price mentioned. Now, one of the elements in this case is what it was costing to get corn and that is material on that issue.

By the Court: Well, when that evidence comes, why, I will consider the re-offer, if you want to connect that re-offer with it.

By Mr. Kirby: But this was the man who was the head of the Government's—

By the Court: There is no objection to the foundation.

4114 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did the OPA, Mr. Pratt, as such, have anything to do with corn purchases on behalf of the Government?

A. No.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground it is immaterial.

By the Court: Well, I think it is wholly immaterial.

4115 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, on or about April of 1946, will you describe the market and the dealings in corn as you learned them personally in your work for the government?

A. Well, that was the time when corn really began to get scarce.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I object again on the ground that what the government did has no relevancy.

By the Court: If you are asking what the government did, I will sustain the objection. If you want to have Mr. Pratt amplify as to what he stated as to the shortage of corn—I allowed that to come in because it may have some bearing as to whether or not it is reasonable that over-ceiling prices may have been paid by a candy manufacturer, but that is the only materiality of it, and what the government did or whether the government by reason of certain emergencies took it upon itself to pay more than the ceiling price, is wholly 4116 immaterial in this lawsuit.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, in the law of supply and demand, if they take it away, it makes it worse.

By the Court: Well, we are going into all these ramifications of the corn market and if we do that, we will be trying too many collateral issues. I have given you a broad field to show that there was a shortage of corn in 1944, 1945 and 1946, that the refineries couldn't get the corn through the ordinary channels and that many concerns that needed the corn syrup would get a hold of corn in some way and take it to the refineries.

Now, we are not going to broaden the field and go into the purchases made by the government or whether the government by reason of certain emergencies paid over the ceiling price for corn.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I don't want to broaden the field too far. If your Honor would open the door far enough to let me prove specifically what they did have—4117 By the Court: I don't think I am going to open the door any more that I have.

By Mr. Kirby: In a tax case, if you will indulge me for just a second, the intent as to why people might handle these, if they did wilfully intend to defraud the government of income tax, they wouldn't make—

By the Court: Let us not get into an argument about it. I will sustain the objection and that is what I am going to do.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Having in mind, Mr. Pratt, I am not asking you what the government did in April, 1946, but I now want you to tell me what was the market like in 1946, April of 1946?

A. It was a market in which people who wanted supplies went out and paid over the ceiling price at any price that they could get.

Q. And did you report that to Washington?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby:

4118 Q. Oh, by the way, the OPA went off June 30, 1946?

A. Correct.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. Thank you.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Pratt, do you know whether the Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid over-ceiling prices for the purchase of corn?

A. No, I do not.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I move to strike his testimony on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant and beyond the scope of the issues of this lawsuit.

By the Court: It is admitted for the purposes I have already indicated.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Pratt, you spoke of 40 or 50 cents over the ceiling on the raw corn. Is that per bushel?

A. Per bushel.

Q. How many bushels in a car, if you know?

4119 By Mr. Lockley: Is this redirect examination, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Who said it is redirect examination?

By Mr. Lockley: I just wondered how many cracks you got at him, your own witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is not my witness.

By Mr. Lockley: He certainly is your witness. He is not the government's witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: If you have any misapprehension as to my right to cross examine any witness that I don't put on, you might as well get rid of it.

By the Court: Hasn't that point been brought out by other witnesses?

By Mr. O'Brien: Sir?

By the Court: Hasn't that point been brought out by other witnesses?

By Mr. O'Brien: If so, I don't agree with what they said.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. How many bushels in a car?

A. Approximately 2,000.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

4120 ROBERT J. ALGER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Robert J. Alger.

Q. And what is your address, Mr. Alger?

A. 834 Gardiner Road, Flossmoor, Illinois.

Q. And for whom do you work?

A. Corn Products Refining Company.

Q. How long have you worked for them?

A. Over a period of 15 years, including service in the armed forces.

Q. What do you do for them?

A. I am manager of the Chicago accounting department.

Q. Were you there in '45 and '46?

A. I returned from the service in March of '46.

Q. Are the records of '45 and '46 presently under your control?

A. That's right.

Q. And did we subpoena your company to pro-
4121 duce records with respect to some corn deals with Shotwell?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, were any kind of records of any type kept of corn deals by your company?

A. Well, the only records that we have are contracts with various commission houses which indicate names of companies that the corn was supplied through their influence.

Q. And what did those records look like?

A. I have them here in my possession. They are memoranda contracts with commission houses which stipulate the number of cars or bushels contracted for, price and delivery date, and in pencil are indicated on these particular contracts the name of Shotwell Candy Company.

Q. Do you know whether those records are complete for '45 and 46?

A. To the best of my knowledge, they are.

Q. And did you bring as many of them as you could find with Shotwell's name on them?

A. I have all of them that have Shotwell's name on them.

Q. Yes. Now, would you let me see those, please?

4122 (Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: Now, mark these sheets in the 75 series, will you?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 75-A through 75-Z, inclusive, and 75-AA for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby: Instead of taking the time to number each one, I will refer to them as exhibits in the 75 series and I will ask the witness when he is referring to one of them to give the date on it and that will be enough indication, I am sure, for everybody.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, I hand you a document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 75-A, and which bears the date of January 28, 1946, and is that one of the documents you are talking about?

A. That is correct.

Q. And from what department was the information secured to put Shotwell's name on that?

A. That was, to the best of my knowledge, either supplied by the sales department or our grain pur-4123 chasing department. My records do not clearly indicate where this information came from.

Q. But it is on there in pencil, on these different sheets, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Were there some letters of authorization in connection with corn deals sent by the sales department to the grain department?

A. I have letters in my possession here, from the sales department to our department, which is the accounting department, listing contracts, number of cars, the commission house which the purchase was to be through, and to whom credit should be given as supplying it.

Q. Those relate to corn deals?

A. They relate to, to me, a notification that these contracts were supplied, that grain was supplied through the efforts of these particular people. Now, by corn deals, I do not know what you mean.

Q. Well, by corn deal I mean a deal where one of your customers make corn available to you and you, in exchange, make syrup available to them.

Now, is that what these documents purport to be tied into?

A. Yes.

4124 Q. Now, do you have any of such types of letters that relate to Shotwell?

A. I do.

By Mr. Kirby: May I have those?

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark these in the 76 series.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 76-A to 76-H, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, I show you this document which is marked 76-A and ask if that is the advice of customers making corn available to your company?

A. That's right.

Q. And what is the date of 76-A?

A. This particular letter is dated January 29, 1946.

Q. Now, 75-A is dated what date?

A. January 28, 1946.

Q. Is there any connection between the two?

A. The letter shows a purchase of five cars through Daniel F. Rice & Company. And this particular memorandum contract I have here is one of the five cars sup-4125 plied through Daniel F. Rice & Company.

Q. 76-A, that tells you that you are going to get some corn through Shotwell's efforts, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then does 75-A represent a corn purchase by your company on which you have written Shotwell's name in pencil?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Alger, would that relation follow throughout between the letters in the 76 series and the corn purchase memos in the 75 series?

A. It does, to a certain extent. They don't absolutely match. Our record is not too accurate and they are hard to tie in. But, generally speaking, they do.

Q. Is it also true that your records for the corn purchases are not complete, that there is some missing material?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to Kirby's testimony, and the leading nature of the questions.

By the Court: Perhaps you better change the form
4126 of your question.

By Mr. Lockley: The witness has already testified that they were complete.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What about the completeness of your records on these corn deals?

A. Are you referring to the letters?

Q. Well, do you have anything else?

A. Well, the letters are not all numerically numbered, so it is not possible for me to say whether they are all there or not. To the best of my knowledge, they are there. I have no accurate check on them.

Q. When was the earliest of the corn purchase letters?

A. I would have to examine the files in order to answer that question. I do not have that information with me.

Q. It was some time in '45, wasn't it?

A. It was during that period.

By Mr. Kirby: I will offer in evidence all of these documents in the 75 series, being respectively 75-A through 75-Z, and 75-AA. Some of them, your Honor, have 4127 a number of sheets within them, but I offer all of those.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection, your Honor, to the exhibits in the 75 series.

4128 By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 75-A through 75-Z and 75-AA.)

By Mr. Kirby: I will now offer Exhibits 76-A through 76-H, inclusive. And each one of them has quite a large number of pages attached.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to Exhibits 76-A to 76-H because they relate to a great many other transactions.

By the Court: They relate to what?

By Mr. Lockley: A great many other companies, and names, and transactions are apparently contained on them. I have no objection to the portion of each exhibit which relates only to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, if a transcript of that could be taken off. I would have no objection to just that material being submitted, and the individual letters which relate to the Shotwell Manu-4129 facturing Company.

By the Court: Well, are there letters that relate to other companies?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I don't think that is a competent record on those.

By Mr. Lockley: On this there is only one that relates to Shotwell.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me make it plain, I didn't make that record. And it has got on one page Shotwell and a lot of others. I don't know how else to offer it.

By the Court: Well, let me see.

By Mr. Lockley: You could take the other letters off.

By Mr. Kirby: But this gentleman, they are his records. I don't know what to do. With one fellow you say—

In answer to his specific objection, your Honor, that is the form in which they were kept and therefore I think they are competent in that form.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to all portions of them that have any relation to anything but the Shotwell Manu-
4130 facturing Company. If the outside portions of the so-called company letter can be blocked off in some manner so that just the Shotwell Manufacturing Company entry appears thereon, that is satisfactory. Or if counsel wishes to have just a transcript made of those entries relating to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company—

By the Court: I think that could be done. A transcript can be made of the transactions which relate to Shotwell and that will eliminate reference to any other transactions which are not of any concern here.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I don't seek to prove anything with respect to the other people, Judge, but this is the form in which they came. I could do this, your Honor—

By the Court: Well, it is just immaterial. The other transactions are immaterial. That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: But this is the original record.
4131 By the Court: Be that as it may, you may have original records that are not competent in this lawsuit, because they contain transactions that are irrelevant. And it is not an insurmountable job or task to make a transcript of the transactions that relate to Shotwell.

By the Kirby: Well, I offer them in the form in which the witness gave them to me, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, as to that, I will sustain the objection, with the right, of course, to—

By Mr. Kirby: I now offer, without prolonging the matter further, these letters with the names of everybody else blocked out, except Shotwell, which I will have to undertake to do by a photostating process. Would that be agreeable?

By the Court: Well, I am sure that any way of merely copying the transactions, without photostating, will be acceptable, if you think that is too burdensome.
4132 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I don't require him to photostat them. If he just wants to make another page and copy each individual line, giving the appropriate information on it, that would be satisfactory to me, a summary.

By Mr. Kirby: Would the Court look at the specific language that is up there? That actually is part of the exhibit itself.

By the Court: Well, I think you have a right to have all of that—company letter, Chicago, dated—letter No. 50, Elmer Buss, "Our customers were issued a memorandum obtaining corn for us as follows:"

You simply eliminate those with which we are not concerned. We are only concerned with the Shotwell Company. And you have it signed by—or a facsimile or a photostat of the signature.

Here you have a letter that goes to a Mr. Schmidt. It hasn't anything to do with Shotwell. Here is another 4133 letter, Illinois Grain Company. Here is a letter from a man by the name of Adam. That is probably for you—not for you.

By Mr. Kirby: Adam was the sales manager.

By the Court: Boulevard Candy Company, John Hill Company. Obviously we are not concerned with those transactions.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, then, your Honor, there are attached in the later documents—wait till I ask the witness.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. These later documents, Mr. Alger, that follow the 76-A series, those represent receiving reports, as to when the grain was received?

A. Well, as I recall, without reading them, they are notifications to our sales department of the fulfillment of these contracts, which they were instrumental in obtaining for us. And they definitely state, contract number, and company involved. In this case, Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now, you look through that 76-A there and see if any of those attachments relate to Shotwell, will 4134 you?

A. There is one here for three cars, contract 303 and 306, Daniel F. Rice.

Here is another letter for two cars, and contract No. 307, Daniel F. Rice, which I believe completes this. It does. Five cars.

By Mr. Kirby: So that there is more than just the one line in that document that does relate to Shotwell.

By the Court: That may be. I didn't mean to intimate that that was the only relevant portion of your exhibit. Anything that refers to Shotwell, whether it is a letter, or a listing, or any other record that indicates deals with Shotwell should be received.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to the letters which are attached to this exhibit, in so far as they relate to Shotwell. My sole objection is to the letters which relate to other people and which are immaterial.

4135 By Mr. Kirby: I don't think they are immaterial. They show the nature of the transactions. They show the nature of the market. They show who is in it.

By Mr. Lockley: It's what somebody else did.

By Mr. Kirby: On the question of whether it was with malicious intent to violate the tax law.

By the Court: Nobody's intent is arrived at with reference to the corn purchases. I didn't understand that that question is at issue. The question of these corn purchases is the only thing we are interested in. Were they made? At least that is the first step.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, Mr. Alger—I shouldn't put that burden on you. We will attempt to sort these out.

And, as I understand it, your Honor, I should take the entire caption and the ending, leave everybody else's name off but ours, and then patch the things at the end—everybody else, leave them out, and just put ours on—and 4136 if I do that, should I re-offer them or does it go in without further discussion?

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to examine them. But I am sure if you do that I will have no objection.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Looking at this 76-A, who was Mr. Elmer Buss?

A. He was at the time in charge of our grain section.

Q. In what office?

A. Chicago.

Q. And then there is a Marion Normile, who is identified as secretary to Mr. Adam. Who is Mr. Adam?

A. Mr. Adam is the sales manager.

Q. The man who testified here earlier today?

A. That's correct.

Q. Then I notice that the copies of these letters in the 76 series are to be sent to Mr. E. W. Schmidt in New York. Who was that?

A. He is another sales man. What his connection is with those, I do not know.

4137 Q. He was vice president of the company in its New York office, wasn't he?

A. That's correct.

Q. In charge of sales?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know whether the company, in Mr. Schmidt's office in New York, did maintain a file with respect to these corn transactions?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know whether they maintained a set of books with respect to the corn transactions?

A. In New York?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know that, either.

Q. So you don't know anything about whether those records any longer exist?

A. That's right.

4138 By Mr. Lockley: What records, Mr. Kirby? There has been no testimony that there have been any records.

By Mr. Kirby: They had some in New York that had been destroyed.

By Mr. Lockley: There has been no testimony of any records in New York that were destroyed.

By the Court: He doesn't know anything about them.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. We subpoenaed you for all the records you have?

A. That's right.

Q. And have you shown them to me?

A. With one exception.

Q. What is that?

A. A transcript of our accounts receivable ledger for the years of 1943 through 1947, inclusive, which was supplied to me by our New York office. I believe you have those—a copy of it in your possession now, though, however.

Q. Do they give the quantities of corn products sold to Shotwell in those years?

A. They didn't give the quantity of products. They 4139 gave the amount of money involved for each invoice.

Q. Could we tell from the documents what the poundage for the product was?

A. You could not.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, then, I don't think it is too material.

What we will do, your Honor, is to give a summary of the corn products purchases as shown by the Shotwell books in the case of each of these companies. We couldn't get that from the material he has.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Have you told me about all the other records that the company does have?

A. That's correct.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you very much, Mr. Alger.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, relating to these exhibits 76-A, B, et cetera, which contain all of the names, which under the Court's ruling are to be excluded, other than Shotwell's, although I am aware of the Court's 4140 ruling, I wish to make an offer of record.

By the Court: I think he has.

By Mr. O'Brien: I mean on behalf of my client.

By the Court: Well, I assume when Mr. Kirby is the only counsel who examines the witness that you gentlemen have agreed that he should examine him for all of you.

By Mr. O'Brien: True. But in this forum I wish to state to the Court my position, that I regard these names as material, not on the question of intent, but on the question of the necessity for dealing in this way.

That is, when it is Shotwell alone, there might well be in the mind of the jury on the issue of—is there a tax or isn't there a tax?—a question as to whether there was need for such expenditures or such deals, or a question as to the degree of necessity.

4141 By Mr. Lockley: May I suggest, your Honor, that any further offer of proof or argument of this nature be conducted out of the presence of the jury.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have no more, except to say that in that view of it I regard it as material that we be permitted to show the scope of those transactions, as it would appear through these exhibits.

By the Court: I will adhere to the same ruling.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Alger, do you have any personal knowledge of any arrangements made by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the purchase of corn for the Corn Products Refining Company?

A. I do not.

Q. Only what you have indicated in these records which you have brought forward, is that so?

A. That's correct.

Q. You weren't there even until—when was it?

A. March of '46.

4142 Q. March of 1946. Do you know whether the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, or any of the officials connected with it, paid any premiums over and above the invoice price?

A. I do not know.

By the Court: Well, he says he doesn't know anything about that, Mr. Lockley. He just identified certain records, because they are under his control. That is the scope of his examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I think you said that the contracts—those are informal contracts, are they; what did you call them?

A. This particular piece of paper we have submitted here is our accounting record, which is a copy of the contract submitted to the seller, and we merely list on here our payments to that seller and see that the contract is fully complied with.

Q. And that was every contract that you know of in which the Shotwell Manufacturing Company was in any way involved during the years 1945 and '46?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you state that that is a complete list of 4143 all of the contracts in your office. Well, I mean relating to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for 1945 and 1946.

A. That's correct.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: We will take our afternoon recess at this time.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Reporter, will you reserve Exhibit No. 77 for the summary?

(Defendants' Exhibit No. 77 reserved as requested.)

(Recess taken.)

JOHN B. DUNLAP, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants' having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

4144 Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. John B. Dunlap.
Q. And where do you reside, Mr. Dunlap?
A. Dallas, Texas.
By the Court: I am sorry. Where?
By the Witness: Dallas, Texas.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You were formerly Commissioner of Internal Revenue, were you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Of the United States of America?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I am putting Mr. Dunlap on rather abruptly, without some prior or preceding evidence that I intended to adduce, because of his engagements and because of my mis-timing the precise hour at which he would be needed. I think it better to do that and let him get away. But it comes apropos of nothing at this moment and is on a different subject.
4145 By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Would you state briefly for the jury, Mr. Dunlap, your experience in the Treasury Department?
A. From the beginning?
Q. Well, you state it as you will.
A. I entered the Internal Revenue service in 1933 as a deputy collector, served as Chief of the Field Division, Assistant Collector, Collector of Internal Revenue, for the north half of Texas, Internal Revenue Agent in Charge for the State of Texas, was in charge of the establishment of the nationwide racket drive and then became Commissioner of Internal Revenue.
Q. Was that about 1951?
A. August 1, 1951; yes, sir.
Q. Now, during your experience in the Treasury Department, Mr. Dunlap, did you become and are you familiar with the policy of the Treasury in respect of disclosure?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell the jury your best recollection as to when that policy first had its existence within the Treasury?

A. My first knowledge of it, of course, came after I went to work for the government, but my research 4146 on the subject revealed that it really came into effect in about 1919. And it was slowly developed over the years until it became rather concrete and intensified right after the war.

And that policy remained in effect—we called it the voluntary disclosure policy— until we abandoned it in January of '52.

Q. From 1919 down to 1947, or so, was that policy in any way promulgated or published to the public?

A. I don't know that it was. It was understood, and whether it was actually in writing I just don't know, sir. There had been many discussions on the subject, I know, but whether it was in writing I just don't recollect.

Q. But within the Treasury Department itself, that is, intra-Treasury and bureaus, it was known?

A. Yes. Oh, yes.

Q. And is it true that publicity was given to that policy somewhere, as you say, after the war?

A. I believe that widespread knowledge of it began in about 1945. I believe that is the year that the Treasury and its people began to publicize and hold out the voluntary disclosure policy pretty widely.

Q. In 1952 the policy was abandoned as to future
4147 matters, as I understand you. I don't think you said as to future matters, Mr. Dunlap, but you did say that it was abandoned in '52?

A. Yes, the—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. As I understand it, Mr. Dunlap was the Commissioner of Internal Revenue—

Were you Commissioner of Internal Revenue at that time, Mr. Dunlap?

By the Witness: I was.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Sorry, sir.

By the Witness:

A. We promulgated that decision, as I remember, about January 10th of '52.

4148 It was not retroactive. It was prospective of course.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And by prospective, you mean, I take it, that it did not—that it would no longer apply to future matters?

A. Yes. In other words, any cases that had already come in out of the old policy, we would handle under the old policy and any cases that came in from then on—

In other words, it was to be no voluntary disclosure policy on new cases after that.

Q. Can you state briefly of your own knowledge the reason for the abandonment of the policy?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I think that is immaterial.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you tell us, Mr. Dunlap, what the disclosure policy was?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor, on the ground that what the voluntary disclosure policy was has no relevance to the issues of this lawsuit. It is imma-4149 terial. What the defendants may have done with respect to voluntary disclosures is one thing but what the voluntary disclosure policy was in the minds of the government officials who were at that time enforcing it or administering it is entirely something else.

Furthermore, I believe Mr. Dunlap is incompetent to testify to that because he was not the Commissioner of Internal Revenue until 1951 and the policy which would have applied in this case was the policy that was applicable at such time as an attempted voluntary disclosure, if any, was made.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, just taking the last part—

By the Court: I think if you have any documents which you want to offer, it is for the Court to determine what the voluntary disclosure policy was so far as it may be relevant in this lawsuit. I don't know that it is within the scope of expert testimony or kindred testimony, I should say.

4150 By Mr. O'Brien: Now, Judge, I have three or four objections interposed and maybe I should address myself to them separately.

First, it makes no difference legally that the witness was not Commissioner throughout the entire period because there is nothing in the—

By the Court: Let me make myself clear.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: If the so-called voluntary disclosure policy in the lawsuit—if the so-called voluntary disclosure policy is in the lawsuit, it is in here only on the question of intent. We are not going to determine in this lawsuit now whether or not there was a voluntary disclosure. I have already made that effective.

4151 By Mr. O'Brien: I think that I understand what the Court is saying, but nevertheless, I submit that on the issue of intent in order that that factor of the evidence have intelligent consideration, it will be necessary that the jury know first, what the policy was and second, how it was defined and construed, and third, how it was administered, because, except for that background, well, it is not possible for anyone, either Court or jury, to give intelligent consideration to that.

By the Court: It can be assumed sufficiently practical to submit the question to me, or documents, and I know of no other way it can be handled except by such regulations or promulgations or statements that may have been made from time to time in Congress or elsewhere that the policy can be set forth or determined, rather.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I will approach it in that way, for a moment.

Will you mark this book Defendants' Exhibit 78 for identification.

4152 (Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 78 for identification.)

By the Court: Have you a No. 77?

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I asked the reporter to save 77 for my summary, for the rejected No. 76.

By the Court: Oh, all right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Dunlap, I show you Defendants' Exhibit 78 for identification and call your attention to the Wenchel statement commencing on page 144 and will ask you to state if you are familiar with the contents of that speech. I first ask you that.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that made at about the date that is indicated at the head of the article?

A. According to my memory, yes, sir.

Q. You are otherwise familiar with Mr. Wenchel's statement as made at that time, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that copy of Mr. Wenchel's address have to do with the disclosure policy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there ever a time, to your knowledge, Mr.
4153 Dunlap, that the Treasury Department—oh, withdraw that.

Now, I call your attention also to the mimeograph starting at the top of page 142 of Defendants' Exhibit 78 for identification signed by Mr. Halvering, Commissioner, and approved June 27, 1934, by Mr. Morgenthau, the Secretary of the Treasury, and ask you to state if that mimeograph also has to do with the disclosure policy to which you have referred.

A. It does, yes, sir.

Q. Now, is that the policy as embodied in that mimeograph which was in effect within the Treasury from 1934 and down until the time when the publicity was given, to which you have referred?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state of your own knowledge as to whether the mimeograph itself as shown at page 142 was ever published or made public in this form?

A. May I see it again, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Not to the public; just to the Bureau of employees.

4154 Q. Except for the mimeograph, so called, so labeled, year of 1934, was there, to your knowledge, any definitive statement of the disclosure policy within the Treasury of evidenced by any written document?

A. To my knowledge, the only thing that I personally ever had as a field officer in charge—and mind you, I am speaking only of the years from 1940 up until 1945 because I was in the army during that period and I naturally don't know what happened—the only thing else I have seen published was Mr. Wenchel's talk to which you referred a minute ago.

That was published and distributed to all Internal Revenue employees to whom it was of interest and of course, was released in public.

Q. Would you mind telling the jury who Mr. Wenchel was?

A. Mr. Wenchel was the general counsel for the Treasury Department of the United States.

Q. And his speech, the article which I first showed you—

A. Just a second. I am thinking back. I am wrong. I believe Mr. Wenchel was chief counsel for the 4155 Bureau of Internal Revenue at the time.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I got mixed up.

Q. And Mr. Wenchel's statement was made before an annual dinner of the Tax Executives Institute at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York, was it not?

A. I understand it was.

Q. I mean, it was a speech by which some publicity to the policy was given, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But Mr. Wenchel's statement was not a document within the Treasury itself, was it?

A. No, sir. It was a speech to a group of business men.

Q. I therefore repeat, Mr. Dunlap, my question as to whether to your knowledge there was within the Treasury itself any formal document on the subject other than this mimeograph of Mr. Halvering's which I show you at page 142?

A. There could well have been and I not have been familiar with them because—

Q. If there was anything additional, did you know about it?

4156 A. I didn't know about it because you see, before the reorganization, there were three segments of the Bureau and some received one set of instructions that others did not receive.

Q. Now during your experience, have you had occasion to observe or have there come to your attention cases which involved the voluntary disclosure policy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there, during the year 1948, any definitive article or mimeograph as to the terms on which a disclosure might be made other than this item at page 142?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object on the ground that it calls for a conclusion and opinion of this witness.

By the Court: Well, if he knows, he may state.

By the Witness:

A. I recall no explicit instructions in regard to it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did the Treasury, to your knowledge, make any attempt to define in writing and to publicize the 4157 factors which it would take into consideration in deciding whether or not a voluntary disclosure had been made?

A. It made several efforts. We never came out with a publication.

Q. Aside from the fact that you did not come out with a publication, did the Treasury ever succeed in reaching such a definitive item or set of procedures?

A. My own personal knowledge of it only comes from the committee upon which I sat while I was agent in charge and worked on that question and a set of rules was drawn up and submitted to all of us for approval, but we couldn't get together and it never was published.

Q. What experience did you have, if any, Mr. Dunlap, as to the differences of administration of the policy in different parts of the country? By that I mean, was—

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Object.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In that situation, Mr. Dunlap, was the policy,
4158 to your knowledge, administered according to the discretion and views of the particular agent or officer in charge?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is immaterial.

By the Court: As I have indicated, we are not going to try that issue out in this lawsuit. It is not on a material matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let me say I thoroughly agree with your ruling on it. I don't even intend to try it out in this lawsuit.

By the Court: Well, the way it may have been interpreted by various officials who had the authority is a matter that can have no bearing upon the limited issue that that phase of this lawsuit will encompass.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think even for a reason which I can state, I think that within your Honor's ruling there is an area of materiality because I shall have shown what was done on the issue which you mention.

By the Court: Well, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, then, Judge, I think for 4159 the record. I shall make an offer of proof.

By the Court: Yes, very good.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you mind, Mr. Dunlap, just stepping aside to the chair down there, the next chair there?

By the Court: Yes.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court before the bench, beyond the hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien: I offer to prove, if the Court please, through this witness—let me say it this way—I make the following offer of proof through this witness: That if he were asked on the stand to state whether there was any definite and absolute set of rules as to what constituted a disclosure, he would say there was none, as he has to some degree already; that if asked, he would say that in that situation, and for lack of the codified rule, each region of the country, in the actual administration of that policy, made up his own rules, not officially, but 4160 according to the policy and motion of the man charged with the administration.

If he was further asked on the stand whether any of such rules, administrative rules so devised for practical purposes, were ever communicated to the public, his answer would be that they were not, and that the public was unaware of any of the conditions which were given weight in the Bureau beyond those which appear in the items by which the policy was publicized, such as the Wenchel speech:

That any other or further conditions were not publicized to or known by the public.

By the Court: You contend that has some bearing on the question of intent on the part of Mr. Cain and the other defendants?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will tell you. To make it a little clearer with one more statement, while the subject matter is proper under the issue of intent, I think there is a further purpose and it is this, and I should make this part of my offer of proof:

4161 If this witness were asked whether during his experience in the Treasury when matters were recommended for prosecution and where there had been a disclosure, whether it is not true that the Department of Justice would, as a matter of practice, refuse to prosecute those cases on the ground that the facts of disclosure in addition to manifesting an intent, also raised an issue as to the good faith of the Government, which the jury is entitled to inquire into and on any system in the Department of Justice of determining or screening cases on the basis of cases on which they could prevail or cases on which they couldn't prevail—that the matter of disclosure, from that standpoint had a very important bearing. So much for the offer of proof. The reason behind that is it was felt at all times by the Department of Justice when it did have a screening policy that the fact of disclosure and the Government's repudiation of the disclosure, where the taxpayer had met the published conditions is a factor to be taken into consideration by 4162 the jury.

Now, I am rambling a little at that point on the more substantive point—

By the Court: Is this all your offer of proof, or are you arguing? It is hard for me to tell.

By Mr. O'Brien: I said back there that that was the end of the offer, Judge, and I was arguing this.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, in the first place, Mr. Dunlap is incompetent to testify as to any policies which the Department of Justice may have had. He was in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He doesn't know what policies may have existed in the Department of Justice. He would be required to have the Attorney General testify to that. There was a screening process in the Department of Justice as to tax cases. There was never any voluntary disclosure policy in the Department of Justice. The case which went from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice was assumed to have failed to comply with the Treasury's 4163 voluntary disclosure policy or they would never have sent it over, so that that portion, at least, of Mr.

O'Brien's statement is, I think, in error.

By the Court: Well, I am not clear. When I asked you as to whether or not you were contending when you made the offer it has some bearing on the question of intent, Mr. Cain's intent, then you digressed and talked about the good faith of the Government. We haven't that issue in this lawsuit, have we?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I think with the jury you have. I think so.

By the Court: I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: Here is the point I am making—

By the Court: Well, the first offer of proof, you had in mind to—

By Mr. O'Brien: I won't argue that one with you, Judge.

By the Court: You had in mind to have the witness disclose that there was no established policy throughout the country with reference to what constituted a 4164 disclosure and each division sort of decided for themselves as to whether or not that particular case came with the purview of the policy as they understood it, is that right.

4165 By Mr. O'Brien: By means of conditions which would not contain—

By the Court: How is that?

By Mr. O'Brien: By means of conditions, by the method of adding conditions which were not contained in the public policy.

By the Court: How does that have any bearing on Mr. Cain's intent when he made his disclosure? We are now concerned with intent in so far as it is an element to evade the United States tax laws. I don't know. I haven't given the matter a great deal of thought, I confess.

Now, I assume that any reference to Mr. Cain's disclosure going into the department would be material only in so far as it might bear on his good faith and his intent to not evade any taxes but merely by reason of a fear to disclose his records, if he failed to make a tax return in that it was inaccurate in that he didn't disclose all premiums and all payments he made for raw materials and he contended he did not owe any taxes—4166 he came to the government and said "I don't owe any taxes". If he said, "Whatever the situation is, I want to make a disclosure on the situation," that may have a bearing on intent. Isn't that about all?

By Mr. O'Brien: Unfortunately, Judge, you can see we have been on this corn subject, the refineries and all and I rather thought that tomorrow we would get into this material and I haven't had the time to think about that either.

By the Court: I haven't either, but Mr. Dunlap has been put on now.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, yes. I have to do that. I suppose I have this only question, as to whether there were any—

By the Court: The amount of the policy or any policy that was uniformly followed throughout the United States?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Go ahead on that.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

4167 By the Court: All right. Now, Mr. Dunlap, you may take the stand again, if you will, please.

Well, members of the jury, you understand that when counsel comes up to the bench, that we have some rather close questions of law and questions of evidence and they arise rather suddenly and I have to hear counsel and while I dislike to interrupt the trial, it is quite necessary at times to hear counsel privately in regard to those matters.

Go ahead.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the question, Miss Reporter?

By the Court: Why don't you reframe it. She would have to go back too far.

By Mr. O'Brien: She has it.

(Question read.)

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think I objected to the form of the question. It doesn't come within the scope of your Honor's ruling before the bench.

By Mr. O'Brien: I recognize it may not.

4168 By the Court: Frame another question, if you will.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will.

By the Court: I sustain the objection to that one, so the record will be clear.

By Mr. O'Brien: My offer of proof stands as to that one, but I will ask just this remaining question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was the disclosure policy, to your knowledge, Mr. Dunlap, administered uniformly, that is in a uniform fashion throughout the country by the different agents or agencies?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. You may state whether you mean that on the same state of facts there might be in the absence of these definitive provisions and codifications, there might be one ruling in one section and a different ruling in another.

A. May I put it this way? There are no two cases that arise under the Internal Revenue laws that are exactly similar or have been. There are no two agents or special agents in charge of collectors that ever saw eye to eye on anything and as a net result, the inter-4169 pretations placed on the so-called policy by certain people in certain areas varied from that placed on it,—and if I may say—the modus operandi of accepting the voluntary disclosure in other areas. That was very thoroughly dicussed in this committee I was talking about. We were trying to draw up the ground rules.

Q. There was no manual of codification of absolute instructions as to how they should proceed?

A. That is exactly the thing we never could agree on, we could never draw up.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all the questions I have.

By Mr. Lockley: Are you going to ask him any questions, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By Mr. Lockley: No cross examination, your Honor.

By the Court: I believe that is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you very much, Mr. Dunlap.

By the Witness: May I say that I am glad to have met you, Judge.

By the Court: All right. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

4170 BERT ROCK, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Will you state your name, please?
A. Bert Rock.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Rock?
A. 4121 42nd Street, Long Island City.
Q. What is your occupation or business?
A. At the present moment?
Q. Yes.
A. I am working for a steel importer on a broker's basis.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you speak up, Mr. Rock?

By the Witness:

A. Steel importer, brokers.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What was your business in 1945?
A. I was working for a whiskey outfit at the time and I also had a food brokerage business.

4171 By the Court: I am sorry, Mr. Rock. You dropped your voice. You had a whiskey—

By the Witness: No. I was working for a whiskey company.

By the Court: For a whiskey company and a food brokerage?

By the Witness: That is right, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What was the nature of the food brokerage business that you referred to?
A. Well, purchasing rations, almonds, fondant coating, anything in the food business.
Q. Did you know of a company known as the Eatsum Food Products Company, a co-partnership?
A. Yes, sir.

I know of the Eatsum Food Products Company, or corporation, or whatever it was.

Q. Well, did you have some transactions with the Eatsum Food Products Company in July of 1945?
A. I did, sir.
Q. Well, will you tell the Court and jury what those transactions were.

A. The Eatsum people called me in—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a minute, please.

4172 I object, your Honor, unless we get names, dates, places and events.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. All right. Who called you in, where was it, who was there, tell us what was said as near as you can remember.

A. Mr. Giglio, Mr. Loperfido and I don't remember offhand—I mean, there was two or three other ones there and they called me in and they told me—

Q. Did you know a Mr. David Lubben that was connected with that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now tell us what was said.

A. They told me—

By the Court: Are we sure who was there now?

By Mr. McConnell: Well, he said—he identified Mr. Gigio and Mr. Loperfido and two or three others.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, do you know who the two or three others were?

A. Offhand, I can't remember but there were two or three others. I think that Mr. Lubben was there.

4173 I really don't remember, sir.

Q. All right. Now tell us what was said and who said it, if you can remember.

A. Well, he told me that they were going into—

Q. Who told you?

A. Well, in the group. Individually, I don't remember who told me, but it come up in the conversation that they were going to purchase some corn, to produce and manufacture syrup or get corn syrup. At that time corn syrup was a scarcity and a commodity which we could sell so he told me that he would have to have moneys for it and that if they would give me—if I give them an invoice, they would give me—they would give me a check and I would secure the cash and retain it for the purpose of securing the corn to make the syrup with.

Q. I show you a document which has been marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 66-Y and ask you—

By the Court: 66 what?

By Mr. O'Brien: It looks like Y, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: That is the way it reads to 4174 me.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Which refers to certain invoices and I ask you to examine that document and will you state whether or not you sent those invoices or sent invoices to the Eatsum Food Products Company?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I would like to know whether the witness has ever seen this document before, whether he prepared it, whether it means anything to him, whether it would refresh his recollection if he did see it.

By the Court: I think counsel has a right to show him the document.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, he isn't laying a foundation then as to whether or not this document means anything to the witness.

By Mr. McConnell: How can I lay a foundation without showing him the document?

By the Court: Frame your question again, please.

By Mr. McConnell: Let us forget the document. Put it down, will you, please, counsel. I am afraid it might 4175 get away from us.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you send any invoices to Eatsum Food Products after you had that conversation?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. How many invoices did you send, do you remember?

A. I think about two but I also sold them merchandise at the same time.

Q. Well, now, these invoices that you speak of, do they cover any actual goods or the delivery of any actual goods to Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you know so, don't you?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, which invoices are you speaking of?

By Mr. McConnell: The two invoices he said.

By Mr. Lockley: Are those the two invoices you are referring to?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, that I am referring to.

By the Witness: Yes, but in the interim, I also sold them some material for which they paid.

4176 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I am not talking about the materials you sold them and got paid for. I am talking about two invoices which you sent them which covered no goods. Do you remember that transaction?

A. Yes.

Q. For those two invoices which covered no goods, did you receive any money?

A. The moneys that was taken off was for the charge—

Q. Did you receive any money, first?

A. That was the charge for cashing the checks at a check cashier's so I did not receive any funds for it.

Q. Well, you received some checks, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you cashed the checks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you give the money to?

A. I brought it up—I think Mr. Loperfido would come to see me or I would give it to him.

Q. Now let us see if we have this transaction now. You sent the two invoices which covered no goods for which you received checks which purported to cover 4177 the payment for those invoices, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

4178 Q. You went with those checks to the bank and had them cashed?

A. Well, I wasn't to the bank, sir; to the check casher's.

Q. All right. To the check cashier. But you had them cashed?

A. That is right.

Q. But you didn't keep the money but turned it back to Mr. Frank Loperfido of the Eatsum Food Products Company, is that right?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Did you get a commission for that?

A. If the two per cent I used for cashing the check could be called a commission, that is what I got.

Q. You got two per cent for cashing the check?

A. Which was the cost of cashing the check at the check casher's.

Q. And that transaction was about when?

A. I think in July of 1945.

4179 Q. And how much was the transaction in dollars?

A. Well, I think one was for $17,000.00 and one was for $8,000.00, something like that. I don't remember the different amounts.

Q. Was the one for $17,300.00 and the other for $5,445.00?

A. It might be possible, sir.

Q. Do you remember what those invoices were supposed to cover, what kind of goods?

A. I don't remember, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Rock, you stated that you also sold some merchandise to the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give them an invoice, a bill for that merchandise?

A. I am quite sure I did, sir.

Q. And were you paid by cash or by check?

A. I don't recall. I think it was by check, sir.

Q. By check. All right. Now, you stated that you took these two checks which you referred to to the check 4180 cashing agency, and paid them a two per cent commission to cash the check, and then you returned the money to Mr. Loperfido, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. How long had you known Mr. Loperfido ?

A. Not too long, but I did know Mr. Giglio since 1933.

Q. You have known Mr. Giglio since 1933?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Loperfido through Mr. Giglio?

A. I did, sir.

Q. And was that in connection with the Eatsum Food Products or had you met him prior to that time?

A. No, I think in connection with the Eatsum Food Products.

Q. And did you know Mr. Frank Livorsi?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet him through Mr. Giglio?

A. (No response.)

Q. You didn't know he was connected with Eatsum Food Products?

A. I don't think so.

4181 By Mr. McConnell: I don't think the court reporter is getting those shakes of the head.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, when did you meet Mr. Lubben?

A. Prior to—well, you see, it is very, very strange, but I don't know what was going on. The partnership—prior to the partnership I met him, probably a month or two before that.

Q. A month or two before this transaction in July, 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the first time you had met him?

A. It might be two or three months before that. I just can't recollect the exact month or day.

Q. So it was Mr. Giglio who was your friend in the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall whether it was Mr. Giglio who suggested to you that you give him invoices without the delivery of any materials and he would give you checks in exchange for those which could be cashed?

4182 A. The reason for that, sir, is because they asked —they told me they would give me corn syrup when it comes through.

Q. And did you get the corn syrup?

A. Well, not as much as I did want. I mean, not in sufficient quantities.

Q. Who told you that they would give you corn syrup?

A. At the time they called me in, that was Mr. Giglio, Mr. Loperfido and Mr. Lubben, the group that was there,

Q. Whoever else was present?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you get corn syrup?

A. I did.

Q. And were those two checks advances in any way?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, where did you have a bank account, Mr. Rock, in 1946—1945? I beg your pardon.

A. On Seventh Avenue and 32nd Street. I think it was the Corn Exchange Bank.

Q. The Corn Exchange Bank. Now, you said there was one check in the amount of approximately $5,445.00, on a little prompting by Mr. McConnell, that might have been one of the checks involved.

4183 A. I don't remember that, sir. I remember there was one—well, the first check was for approximately $17,000.00.

Q. I show you a check for $5,445.00, dated July 9, 1945, and ask you if that was deposited in the account of the Her-Bert Company?

A. Yes, sir.

4184 Q. Then that cannot have been the check which you referred to?

A. I wouldn't know, sir, as I haven't got the invoices in front of me.

Q. You stated the check that you referred to was cashed at a check cashing agency?

A. No, sir; I deposited the checks in my account, then drew checks, cashed them at an agency, or some at the bank, and presented them the money in return.

Q. You left that step out before.

A. I am sorry if I did.

Q. He gave you the check which you deposited in your own personal account?

A. The company account.

Q. Then you drew a check on your account?

A. That's correct.

Q. You took it to the check cashing agency and got money for it?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. You gave them two per cent commission?

A. Whatever the charges were.

Q. Is that the standard charge, if you know?

A. I think it was around two per cent. I don't recollect right now, sir.

4185 Q. Then you came back and you gave the cash money to Loperfido?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. In both instances did you give it to Loperfido?

A. To the best of my recollection, yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, that is all.

Mr. McConnell: I have one more question.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. What was the name of your company, Mr. Rock?

A. The Her-Bert Company.

Q. You had a company bank account, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You paid these checks out of the company bank account, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you did have business transactions with Eatsum Food Products before the partnership, didn't you?

By Mr. Lockley: If you please, Mr. McConnell, you have a witness on direct examination, not cross examination, and I object to the leading nature of the ques-4186 tions.

By Mr. McConnell: I beg your pardon. He is on redirect.

By Mr. Lockley: It makes no difference. You are still not permitted to lead.

By Mr. McConnell: It comes after your cross examination.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I ask you to instruct Mr. McConnell to cease leading the witness.

By the Court: He may answer the question.

By the Witness: Repeat that question, please.

By Mr. McConnell: Read the question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I think I did, sir, but I can't recollect.

By Mr. McConnell: All right. That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, Mr. Rock, thank you.

(Wtiness excused.)

By the Court: Well, it is about adjournment time.
4187 We will be in recess until 10:00 o'clock.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, may I make a motion to strike Mr. Rock's testimony while it is still fresh in my mind. It has no relevance to the issues in this case. It is immaterial.

By Mr. McConnell: It goes to the impeachment of the books and records.

By the Court: I am not in a position to say.

By Mr. Lockley: It doesn't impeach Lubben's books and records.

By Mr. McConnell: He was a partner at the time.

By the Court: We will take our recess until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge as well as the jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Court: May I see Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Lockley just a minute.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until Thursday, October 8, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A.M.)

Before Nordbye, J. and J.
Chicago, Illinois,
Thursday, October 8, 1953,
9:30 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the jury:

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I have some odds and ends, if you don't keep up with them they get lost in the case.

It occurred to me that the record would more plainly
4189 show the items we were talking about on the admission and exclusion of the disclosure hearing testimony if I had Roy Fuller make up a transcript, which is relatively small, which comprehends all of the pages that both sides mentioned, and he has done that.

By the Court: This isn't for the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. O'Brien: For the record, I would offer as Defendants' Exhibit C, if I can describe it, Judge, the pages 143 to 226, inclusive, of the transcript of the disclosure hearing of November 12, 1952, not generally, or for the use of the jury, but collaterally, to make more clear of record the transcript that we were speaking of, or the parts that we were speaking of at the time that the government moved to read into evidence certain portions of that transcript and at the time that I asked that other portions also be read.

Now, this was prepared by Mr. Fuller. There are other copies of it, but I have only one in my bag. It may go in subject to verification by counsel.

By Mr. Lockley: I understand that there were some pages of the transcript on which you had perhaps 4190 only one question and answer that you wanted read to the jury.

Is the complete page in that transcript?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, the complete page is here. They are all here, just bodily from the other transcript.

By Mr. Lockley: So it would be necessary to refer to the original record to determine which one of the questions you had reference to.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, it wouldn't. No, you can tell right here. This is complete in itself. It comprehends everything you talked about.

By Mr. Lockley: I understand that, but it also comprehends some additional questions and answers which you did not ask be read to the jury, doesn't it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, so as to bracket everything that either one of us requested be read to the jury.

By the Court: Wouldn't it be more practical for you, or the Reporter to make up a transcript of that which the government offered and that which you offered, so you would have it in a form of that kind and could use it without referring to any other transcript?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, we don't have to refer to 4191 any other transcript.

By the Court: Yes, because you are including portions in that exhibit that you didn't offer.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is true of Mr. Lockley's too. It skips around.

By the Court: It isn't Mr. Lockley's exhibit. You are offering the exhibit. I merely made the observation, wouldn't it be more feasible to make up an exhibit including that which Mr. Lockley offered and then the exact portions of the transcript that you offered, so there you would have it, in the event you made up a record, in concrete form and without reference to any other exhibit or transcript. It seems to me that would serve the purpose better than the plan you have now followed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it would be, Judge. It is just a matter of work at a time when we have so much to do.

4192 By the Court: I don't care. I haven't any particular views on it. I just made that observation.

By Mr. O'Brien: The pages are the same as in the other record, as you know. This would satisfy me. If your Honor wants me to do that, I will put someone on it.

By the Court: No, I haven't any suggestion in the matter. If you want to offer it in that form, why, very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I will do that.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have more than I can do.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection. It is just that I wanted to make it clear that there is more material in Exhibit C than you originally offered. I presume that the additional material merely tends to show the relevancy of the particular questions and answers that you had in mind.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is true only because this is physically lifted from the other record and is much more restricted in size than that entire record would be.

By the Court: Am I correct in understanding that 4193 the Government takes the same position with reference to the relevancy of the portions offered by Mr. O'Brien as to which I sustained your objection?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: On why I am offering it only after the event, Judge, not to gain anything new from it, but only to make the record clear.

By the Court: I see. All right.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, as aforesaid, and marked Defendants' Exhibit C.)

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, we have only a moment further and I would like to take up the matter of the subpoena duces tecum.

By Mr. O'Brien: Can I ask the Judge this short thing first, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: On the Cunningham affidavit, Judge, have you reached any determination?

By the Court: I am going to sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: The objection to its admission
4194 is sustained?

By the Court: I am quite clear that the memorandum that you submitted to me does not substantiate your position. You must bear in mind that Mr. Cunningham made this affidavit for the purpose of obtaining a continuance and he merely attempted to set forth the testimony to be given by Mr. Lubben, as he understood it, and at a time when he stated in open court that he had never even talked to Mr. Lubben.

Mr. Cunningham's only purpose in presenting this affidavit to the Court was to indicate the importance of Mr. Lubben as a witness and in no way was it presented to the Court as a binding statement of what Mr. Lubben was going to testify to.

The Court granted the continuance on this affidavit, it is true, but the continuance was granted because it was made to appear that Lubben was an indispensable witness.

4195 Even though it later develops that there may be some inaccuracies in Mr. Cunningham's statement, my view is that it would be just as if some motion—or even in an opening statement by counsel, if he stated that a doctor, for instance, was going to diagnose a case, as he understood it, as one involving a portion of the upper spine and it later developed that the doctor said, "No, it isn't in the upper spine at all, it is in the lower spine."

Well, it seems to me inconceivable that the opening statement in that way could constitute a binding admission and foreclose the doctor from stating the true facts. After all, if Mr. Cunningham was in error, and the true statement is given here by Mr. Lubben, who was the witness who was sworn in this case, the Court should strike out any other testimony that is contrary to the position taken by Mr. Cunningham.

I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't submit the affidavit, Judge, in support of any motion. I offered the affidavit in evidence, and I believe, for the record, that what the Court has said about it goes only to its weight.

4196 By the Court: Well, no, in the presentation to me, by your memorandum, you are seeking to strike the testimony of Heitmann.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry. Mr. Wattling must have prepared that. I did have a motion to strike his testimony, but I also introduced the affidavit in evidence, on the record, and that is what I am interested in.

By the Court: Well, my view is that it is not competent for any purpose.

By Mr. O'Brien: You see, I had it marked as an exhibit, Judge.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's Defendants' Exhibit 53 that we are talking about.

By Mr. Lockley: Would your Honor prefer to hear us later on the matter of the subpoena?

By the Court: I don't like to keep the jury waiting. I think it is rather unfair.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have, Mr. Lockley, a motion on the subpoena. I didn't want to interrupt when we got in yesterday. That is a motion to quash the subpoena.

By the Court: Have you considered the matter with a view to determine whether you have any support for your position that Mr. O'Brien is subject to a sub-4197 poena?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, the position that I would take in the matter is that the material which is in Mr. O'Brien's hand is in no way privileged. They are not documents belonging to the defendants, nor made up by the defendants, nor made up by the defendants' accountants. Even were they made up by the defendants' accountants, there is some question as to whether or not they would have any privilege.

But in this event they are actually documents prepared by third parties who have no interest in this case, except perhaps as witnesses.

By the Court: I ask that because I confess I haven't any views at this time whether your position is sound or not and I would like to have some support for your position.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By the Court: I don't know that I have ever had a situation where a defendants' counsel in a criminal case has been served with a subpoena to produce documents. It is an entirely new matter to me.

By Mr. O'Brien: I may say, Mr. Lockley, that I have never seen it. I doubt if Mr. Calihan has ever seen it.

And I know that Wigmore says that there just isn't 4198 any such animal. He says that process cannot be so used.

By the Court: I wish you would spend a little time on it so I may be advised.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

4199 (And thereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Clerk: No. 52-CR-143, United States vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

HOWARD ROESER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Roeser, you testified before?
By the Court: He has been on the stand before.
By the Witness: Yes, sir, I have.
By the Court: The first name, please, Mr. Roeser?
By the Witness: Howard Roeser.
By the Court: Roeser?
By the Witness: Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You have been sworn and you have testified in 4200 the case before on behalf of the Government and also on cross?
A. Yes.
By Mr. O'Brien: I am calling Mr. Roeser to testify as part of our case. He is comptroller of the company.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Mr. Roeser, were you familiar with—
By the Court: I wonder if you wouldn't—I am sure the jury may forget that he was at one time with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and you better go over some of the preliminary questions to call that to our mind.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You were comptroller of the company, were you not?
A. At one time, yes, sir.
Q. And I think you said that in February, 1946, February or March of 1946, you went to sales?
A. That is true.
Q. Prior to that time and some time in the latter part of 1945 you had something to do with the cash box which was maintained in the vault at the premises?
4201 A. Yes, sir.
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Roeser.
By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, as comptroller of the company are you able to tell us, Mr. Roeser, whether there was an account known as the miscellaneous officers and employees account?

A. Yes, sir, there was an account, an asset account of that nature.

Q. Do you recall whether early in 1946 there were transactions in that account by which money was withdrawn by the corporation and charged to that account?

A. In 1946, yes, there were some withdrawals, that is from the company's bank account.

Q. Yes, sir.

And charges, counter charges were to this employees and officers asset account.

Q. What was the total of those withdrawals?

A. Around fourteen thousand five hundred, or something like that.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, 4202 aren't the books of the corporation in evidence?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, they are here, but he knows.

By Mr. Lockley: I object on the ground that the books are the best evidence.

4203 By Mr. O'Brien: If the witness knows, he can say.

By the Court: No. Well, if the books are the best evidence, I take it that is the only way you can establish it, and I assume that they are. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, may I have that book—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Which ledger would that be in, Mr. Roeser?

A. That would be in the general ledger.

Q. Will you find that account, Mr. Roeser?

A. I found the account here, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Now, can you identify the withdrawal items to which you have referred?

A. No, sir. There are totals here from the cash books for the whole month, assuming that it would be in this period here (Indicating).

Q. Where would the breakdown on those be?

A. Well, the breakdown as to how much would be in the cash disbursements book, there should be—pardon me. I didn't look behind that sheet, Mr. O'Brien. 4204 Is there a sub-breakdown there? Either that or it would be in a subsidiary ledger. No, there would have to be a sub-ledger on this or the cash disbursements journal.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mrs. Morrill, do you know where that book is?

By Mrs. Morrill: I don't know whether it is here or not.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is really all I want to ask this witness about, your Honor. They have gone to get the subsidiary account or ledger and I just can't do any more until that is brought in, but it will be brought presently, I am sure.

By Mr. Lockley: It is satisfactory with me, Mr. O'Brien, if you want to withdraw him temporarily and take another witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I better wait a minute or so because Mr. Roeser has some engagements and I said I would put him on first. I didn't anticipate the book wouldn't be here.

By the Court: Well, supposing, Mr. Lockley, we accept the testimony subject to a motion to strike?

4205 That is, if it isn't confirmed by the book. Is that all right?

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is your recollection of the amount, Mr. Roeser, independently of the subsidiary ledger?

By Mr. Lockley: I must object, Mr. O'Brien. I don't understand what you mean by "your recollection of the amount." In other words, I don't understand the question and I must object to it.

By the Court: Amount of what?

By Mr. O'Brien: The amount of the withdrawals.

By the Court: From the bank account?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. Early in 1946, we are talking about, and I suppose I have to ask him.

By the Court: All right.

By the Witness: May I answer that one, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

4206 A. Fourteen to fifteen thousand dollars.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was done with that money?

A. That money, I believe that money was used for the purchase of corn grain.

Q. In the first instance, what was done with it?

A. Well, that, I believe, was held in the cash box.

By the Court: When was this, please?

By the Witness:

A. This was in the early part of 1946, probably February.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is your recollection as to whether that was in—

Oh, here is the book. Thank you. That has not been marked, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: No, Mr. O'Brien.

By the Court: None of the defendants' books have been marked. That has been dispensed with.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I call your attention to the initials O and E account book for the year 1946 of Shotwell Manufac-4207 turing Company and to the first sheet of the employees account and ask you to examine it and see if you can tell us more precisely what the withdrawals were.

A. There is an entry dated January 31st to various executives and it appears it is from the cash disbursements book for $4,000.00, one total. In February there is another entry under the 28th of February to the same setup—there are various executives for $10,550.00. I will repeat that, $10,550.00, that I believe are two entries.

By the Court: I didn't understand, when you say drawn, do you mean the check was drawn and payable to certain executives?

4208 By the Witness:

A. No. I don't know who the checks were drawn to, whether they were drawn—it is marked here "various executives."

By the Court: What does that mean.

By the Witness: Well, at that time—incidentally it was a policy to record an officer employee's name in this account directly. This one has not been segregated, the first amount of $4,000.00, to any specific person as a loan to him. It is just a lump sum to the executive group of Shotwell. Actually, it became a dumping ground.

By the Court: It was a loan to a certain executive, is that right?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. That is $4,000.00 and $10,550.00?

A. $10,550.00. I don't see any others here.

Q. Those are the withdrawals to which you refer?

A. Yes, sir. I believe those are the ones. There is nothing ahead there in April, May or June.

Q. Well, for the purpose of his Honor's ques-
4209 tion, let me ask you a couple more. Those were withdrawals of cash from the company's bank account, you said?

A. Yes, sir. They definitely are.

Q. And the cash was deposited in the box which you maintained?

A. I believe so.

Q. And in order to charge the withdrawals of cash, these entries were made to the officers and employees miscellaneous account?

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Roeser, when a debit is made to this employees account under the title "Various executives" that indicates that various executives owed the corporation that much money, is that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the money was received by the corporation to make the loans through checks on the corporate bank account, is that so?

A. Will you restate that? I didn't quite follow the wording.

4210 Q. Well, as I understood your testimony, you said that checks were drawn on the corporation bank account?

A. Correct.

Q. I presume those checks were cashed?

A. I presume they are too.

Q. And the money was given to various executives?

A. No. The money was not given to various executives.

Q. Well, that is what the record shows, that it was given to various executives?

A. Well, the various executives as a group, a dumping ground group, were charged and they did owe the corporation this money, but the money was not actually given to the executives. It was actually put aside. There was a reason for this withdrawal.

Q. Well, did you put it aside?

A. Yes. I was told to put it aside, yes.

Q. And where did you put it?

A. I believe I put it in the cash box.

Q. In this cash box?

A. That is right.

Q. That you have testified about earlier

4211 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know what happened to it?

A. Well, this was—it was melted in with the general money that ever went in there and then went out again when we directed to take it out.

Q. Was the money ever paid back to the corporation by the various executives to whom it was charged?

A. Mr. Lockley, I believe it was. However, I factually don't know. I have not seen a payment back myself. I haven't seen the books. Your books should disclose that.

4212 Q. Didn't you take money out of the box and give it to these various executives?

A. Not directly.

Q. So you don't know what happened to it after it went into the box?

By Mr. O'Brien: If I might interject something, your Honor—Mr. Lockley is asking him as to transactions, credit transactions after the time that the man ceased to be the comptroller. I don't think he is in a position to have knowledge but the books would show.

By the Court: Well, I think the question was a proper one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you say you didn't turn the money over to the various executives?

A. That I didn't?

Q. Yes.

A. Not to them as individuals in the sense that I believe you are asking the question.

Q. Well, I am asking it. Let me put it this way:
4213 Did you turn over any of this money from the cash box to Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan?

A. Directly?

Q. Personally.

A. Personally? Not as—from this money as a loan—

Q. What I want to know, Mr. Roeser, is this: Did you take money out of the cash box and give it to Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan or Mr. Huebner?

A. When I was directed to, yes.

Q. You did give them money?

A. Mr. Lockley, I would like—

Q. That's all I want you to tell me. You gave them money out of the cash box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You gave it to Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You gave it to Mr. Sullivan?

A. Mr. Lockley—

Q. And you gave it to Mr. Cain?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object. It is not proper cross examination on the single transaction in the box.

4214 By Mr. Lockley: He is stating how the money got into the box.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all he stated.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, this loans and exchanges account, or offices and employees account, I mean, is that an income account?

A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, no matter whether they are debits or credits, this is not one of the accounts which shows up on a tax return eventually?

A. Only as an asset account.

Q. As an asset account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has nothing to do with income, with profits or loss?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, Mr. Roeser.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask a question.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Did you know the purpose of this transaction,
4215 of taking the money out of the bank account and putting it in the box?

A. I knew some of the reasons for it, yes, sir.

Q. Well, what were they?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a moment, please. Mr. Roeser, do you know it of your own knowledge?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of course he knows it.

By Mr. Lockley: I am not asking as to what somebody told him. I want to know if he actually knows what happened to that money.

By Mr. McConnell: That isn't the question I asked him, your Honor.

By the Court: What is it?

By Mr. McConnell: That isn't the question I asked him, your Honor. I asked him if he knew the purpose for this transaction of taking it out.

By the Court: I suppose he would have to learn it from somebody.

By Mr. McConnell: He was a comptroller of the 4216 company and was in charge of the affairs.

By the Court: If he had anything to do with it himself and can speak for himself, I think it would be proper. I don't think he can state what somebody else told him the money was to be taken out for.

By Mr. McConnell: I asked him if he knew the purpose and that's all I asked him.

By the Court: Counsel was objecting as to the foundation laid before the question was answered.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You were the comptroller of the company at that time, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In charge of its moneys and assets and books and records at that time?

A. Yes, sir, during part of that time.

4217 Q. As part of your duty, you charged officers and employees accounts and took money out of the bank, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And put it in the box?
A. Yes.
Q. Why did you do it?
A. Because I was told to do it.
Q. Who told you?
A. Any one of many superiors. I don't know which one actually told me to do it. It may have been—
Q. Did they tell you why you should do that?
A. At the time they probably told me why or I knew beforehand why because of the previous conversations.
Q. Well, what do you know about it of your own knowledge?
A. Of my own knowledge I knew this happened: That the company needed funds to purchase grain corn at over-ceiling prices. I did know that.
Q. Well, that was the purpose of this transaction, wasn't it?
A. Yes, sir. The company didn't have any money other than going into their own bank account, and 4218 this was one way to develop some money in a hurry.
Q. Now what was done with the funds that remained in the cash box at the end of that corn shortage period, if you know?
A. I don't know.
By Mr. McConnell: That's all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Roeser, do you know of your own knowledge whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company ever bought one pound of corn?
A. Of my own knowledge?
Q. Yes.
A. The corporation was able to get corn syrup.
Q. Did it buy corn is what I am asking you.
A. Corn? I know of my own knowledge that on one transaction some car numbers were given to the company for grain.
Q. Did you ever know of your own knowledge whether the Shotwell corporation ever bought any corn?
A. On the basis of what I have just stated, that is the extent of my knowledge.
Q. Did you ever buy any corn on behalf of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

4219 A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody else who ever bought any corn on behalf of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Of my own knowledge?

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute.

By the Witness: I don't understand how he means that. Mr. Lockley, I believe that the company bought grain corn.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You believe it. You don't know it. Were you told it? Is that what you mean?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't have anything to do with the transaction yourself?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That's all.

By Mr. O'Brien: One question, Mr. Roeser. Oh, never mind.

By the Court: That's all, Mr. Roeser.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

4220 HOWARD A. HORAN, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. Howard A. Horan.

Q. H-o-r-a-n?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Horan?

A. Hartsdale, New York.

Q. Will you spell that for the Judge?

A. H-a-r-t-s-d-a-l-e.

Q. And you are with Penick & Ford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of New York City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the company have other offices?
A. Yes.
Q. Or places of business?
A. Yes.
Q. Where?
4221 A. We have offices at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, New Orleans, Dallas, Atlanta, Georgia.
Q. A little louder, Mr. Horan.
A. Cedar Rapids, New Orleans, Atlanta, Georgia, Burlington, Vermont. We have offices in Brooklyn in addition to New York City, Dallas, Texas. I think those are the principal offices and a few other sub offices.
Q. What is your position or title with that company?
A. General bulk sales manager.
By the Court: What was the name of that firm, Penick & Ford?
By the Witness: Penick, P-e-n-i-c-k & Ford, Ltd., Incorporated.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. And were you bulk sales manager in 1945 and 1946?
A. No. I was western bulk sales manager located at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where our corn grinding plant is located.
4222 Q. In your present position as bulk sales manager, do you have custody of the records of the company having to do with corn transactions?
A. Yes, such records as we have.
Q. Including those from the years 1945 and 1946?
A. Yes, such records as we have.
Q. I subpoenaed you to appear here to testify and and bring such records as you have for those years, did I not?
A. Yes, you did.
Q. Have you those pertaining to Shotwell Manufacturing Company and to General Confections, Inc. and Eatsum Food Products? Is that true?
A. Yes, I have brought such records as we were able to find in our office.
Q. Now, before turning to those records, let us take the system that was employed by the company—I will withdraw that.
By the Court: You haven't brought out as yet the business of Penick & Ford.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is the business of Penick & Ford?

A. We are manufacturers of products from corn and from cane, sugar cane products and corn products.

4223 Q. You have one of the—

A. Principal—

Q. —corn refinery businesses of the country?

A. Yes, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. That is our only corn plant. We have other types of plants at other locations.

Q. Was there any time in the year 1945 at which you found it difficult to obtain corn, raw corn?

A. Yes. Corn was not then available to us through normal channels.

Q. Did you then commence a practice of transactions whereby raw corn would be provided to the refinery and whereby you would grind it and supply a certain portion of the corn syrup—

A. Yes.

Q. —at ceiling?

A. Yes, we did, at ceiling, yes, sir.

Q. And the corn so provided, you bought at ceiling?

A. Only at ceiling as established by the government.

Q. Now, in relation to those transactions in which the corn was provided by others for grinding—

A. I didn't get your last expression.

4224 By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read it?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. For grinding, all right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. (Continuing) —did you enter into contracts of any sort, written contracts?

A. No, we did not enter into written contracts as such and as would ordinarily be understood. They were usually verbal contracts, that is, agreements over the telephone or in conversation.

Q. That is, you made no written contract with the person who provided the corn?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did you have written contracts with the folks to whom you paid the ceiling price for the corn?

A. That would be the grain elevators or a grain dealer, yes, and only with them.

Q. So that in the case of all corn which you acquired for grinding and refining, you had written contracts with the elevators or—

A. We issued contract confirmation of purchase to those elevators or grain dealers, yes.

4225 Q. Is it true that they would ship the corn to your elevator?

A. Yes, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to our plant at Cedar Rapids, that is right.

Q. And did you in the year 1945 maintain at that plant a record of the people who had procured the corn?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that done in the case of Eatsum Food Products Company for the year 1945?

A. Yes. Now we kept a record of the corn that was sold to us at ceiling prices by grain dealers and by corn elevators as to whose corn—as to whom that corn was to be credited on an exchange or barter or trade sales basis.

Q. Do you have with you one of those contracts and one of those records maintained at your elevator?

A. I have some parts, some of those papers that you have asked for. Now, you would like to see a contract, such a confirmation contract as we sent.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Horan, I am afraid you are going to have to speak up and not look down in the box. I can't hear you.

4226 By Mr. O'Brien: He is just talking to me, Mr. Lockley.

By the Witness: I understand that you would like to see a contract confirmation such as we issued to a corn elevator.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Our confirmation of a purchase of corn—that is one of those contracts.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 79.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 79 for identification.)

4227 By the Witness: May I see what I handed to you?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And one of the records there from the elevator, Mr. Horan?

A. From the elevator?

Q. For '45?

A. I don't know just what you mean by record from the elevator. We have no papers here that were issued to us by an elevator.

Q. Your own elevator.

A. Oh, by our own elevator. I have no papers from our own unloading department. I have some memoranda here from our grain department which sets forth the car number, the date of arrival, the contents, which was furnished by our corn elevator to our grain department as a record of the corn receipt and the corn unloading. Is that what you have reference to? That's the only basic record I have of that kind, as I understand your question.

Q. This is not the record I mean (indicating).

A. Here is a record which—

By the Court: If you carry on that conversation nobody can hear it and nobody gets the benefit of it. And 4228 unless you can get your records straightened out—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Perhaps this is it.

A. I think it is.

Q. Do you have amongst this group, Mr. Horan, a memorandum relating to the contract, Defendants' Exhibit 79 for identification?

By the Witness: Will you repeat that question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I do not see it here. I would have to take time to find it. I assume that it is in here.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Will you find it, please.

A. That might be any one of one or two hundred papers here. I do not see it here.

Q. All right. Let's pass it.

A. I do not see it, not that particular one. It would require some study to find it, or any one of those.

Q. You have the exhibit now, 79?

A. It is a single sheet.

4229 Q. Well, in 1945, speaking generally, Penick & Ford, at its Cedar Rapids office or plant—

A. Yes.

Q. —maintained memoranda showing the folks who were entitled to receive credit, as you say, for these barter or trade or corn deals.

A. That is so. Some sort of memoranda record.

Q. And the memoranda through which you were looking are such memoranda as you have been able to find for the year '45 in response to this subpoena?

A. The memoranda through which I was looking was a report of corn actually received and unloaded and marked for the credit of some concern that caused the corn to be shipped to us.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this sheet Defendants' Exhibit 80 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 80 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 80 for identification and tell us whether this is one of the elevator memoranda to which you have referred.

4230 A. This is a report made up by our grain department on the basis of a memorandum of some kind from our unloading department that this particular car was unloaded on this particular date, was shipped by a particular concern, and from a particular station.

And this particular memorandum is marked "Corn unloaded to date for Eatsum account."

Q. And it is so marked right at the top?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any evidence respecting the Eatsum account. It has no relevancy to what the transactions may have been with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Well, the exhibit hasn't been offered as yet.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will connect that.

By Mr. Lockley: I object then to his testifying from the exhibit until such time as it is offered in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is purely a preliminary matter. It has no significance in itself.

By Mr. O'Brien:

4231 Q. But whether it be Eatsum, or whoever else it was who procured the corn, this particular record, any such as Defendants' 80 for identification, would be headed with that name?

A. Yes. That was the mechanics of recording of the particular unloading for the particular account.

Q. Yes. Are these memoranda, such as 80 for identification, still available generally for the year 1945?

A. No, they are not.

Q. You have memoranda on Eatsum for the year 1945. Is there any special reason for that?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any testimony relating to Eatsum transactions with Penick & Ford.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not asking about transactions.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. To the best of my recollection, that comes about from the fact that somewhere late in the 1940's we received a letter inquiring about a payment of some kind which appeared to have a connection with the Eatsum
4232 Company.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was that a letter from the Revenue?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object—

By the Witness:

A. No, it was not.

By Mr. Lockley: —to the leading nature of the question.

By the Court: You are going outside the scope entirely.

By the Witness:

A. It was a letter from a concern that had bought some product from Eatsum, as I recall.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, maybe—

A. As a matter of payment, we were trying to identify the record.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any further answer from Mr. Horan.

Until the Court has ruled, please do not answer.

By the Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I move the answer be stricken.

4233 By Mr. O'Brien: I think it is great ado about nothing. I don't care about Eatsum, or those transactions.

By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. I just want to know, Mr. Horan, whether you had some special reason for retaining these Eatsum memoranda that did not exist as to such memoranda generally.

A. As I have attempted to explain, there was some correspondence late in 1945 that had to do with Eatsum when we got some records together and we happened to have kept there. We found them through happenstance.

4234 Q. Outside of that you don't have such memoranda for '45?

A. No, it was the general practice to destroy our records at the end of two or three years. We have always done that on our records, outside of ledger records.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is the only interest I have in the Eatsum memoranda, just to show what kind of record was kept.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, did you also keep the Eatsum contracts?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please—

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: if there is any reference to the Shotwell contracts—

By the Court: I don't see what you are driving at.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will develop it or it may be stricken.

By the Court: You haven't developed it as yet.

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't develop it all at once.

By the Witness:

4235 A. We had no contracts with Eatsum. We have corn contracts that had to do with corn that was shipped to us at the instigation of Eatsum. Is that what you refer to?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes. It is the only kind of contracts that I understand there are, and those are for the shipment of corn—

A. And those are contracts—

Q. Please, Mr. Horan, if you will listen to the question—where you pay the elevator for the corn.

A. Right.

Q. Now, when I say contracts, that is all I mean.

A. All right. That's right.

Q. And you have preserved your contracts generally?
A. Yes.
Q. Not only as to Eatsum, but everybody else?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, again by contract I mean such an instrument, of which 79 for identification is typical.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, for the year 1946 did the company maintain the same type of memoranda in respect of those entitled to the credit for procured corn?
4236 A. Yes.
Q. The same type as I have here in Exhibit 80?
A. Generally, the same type, or something that would serve exactly the same purpose.
Q. That's right. You had one which served the same purpose.
By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 81 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhiibt 81 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Mr. Horan, in 1946 the company maintained the same type of memoranda and information as it did in '45, according to this Exhibit 81 for identification?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you have those memoranda available?
A. No.
Q. For the year 1946?
A. No.
Q. And those are the memoranda again for that year which would show those who procured corn to be ground?
A. Yes.
4237 Q. And it would show—.
By the Court: Will you stand over a little? You stand right in front of counsel and he can't see the witness.
By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry, Judge. It is a very bad court room, but I am sorry.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit 81 for identification and ask you to state if this is a summary made of certain of the memoranda for the year 1946.

A. Yes. I assume that is marked 1946.
Q. I will show it to you.
(Document handed to the witness.)
A. Yes.
Q. And 81 purports to contain a heading General Confections, Inc., Bronx, New York, corn unloading account.
A. Yes.
Q. Again, was there a special reason for preserving this General Confections memorandum?
A. None other than what I have related in connection with some correspondence from the southwest in the late '40's. It may possibly have something to do 4238 with our transactions with that company.
Q. Have you preserved your memoranda relating to people generally who provided corn in the year '46?
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, you have brought with you all of the corn syrup invoices rendered to Eatsum and General Confections, have you not?
A. Yes, they all appear to be here.
Q. I show you again 79 for identification and ask you to state how you are enabled to connect that contract with Eatsum.
By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object to any testimony relating to the Eatsum Company.
By Mr. O'Brien: It is not testimony relating to Eatsum. It is a matter of the mechanics of these records.
By Mr. Lockley: If he doesn't have any records for Eatsum—
By the Court: What is the objection, to show the nature of the records that they did keep and to establish that outside of a few records they have destroyed the 4239 others, is that it?
By Mr. O'Brien: Not exactly, no. I am working with the records that the man has been able to find.
By the Court: I understand.
By Mr. O'Brien: He does not have those which I would like to show for us and I want to show how the system worked where he has the records here to exhibit to us. And then I will come specifically to the Shotwell situation. And that I promise.
By the Court: All right.

By the Witness:

A. May I explain that it was the customary practice to write across the face of this corn confirmation contract the name of the concern that instigated the sale of the corn.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I so understand. Now, that has not been done in the case of that document.

A. It is not on this document.

Q. How then did you select it as a contract which pertained to Eatsum?

A. I cannot with certainty answer that.

4240 Q. Would the Eatsum memoranda indicate what cars you had received for its account?

A. Are you referring to this type of memoranda?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir; that would show.

4241 Q. Now—

A. That would show in part. I have to qualify that for further explanation, if I am permitted to make it.

Q. Mr. Horan, if you will listen to my questions, please, sir. I asked you if the Eatsum memoranda would show the car numbers on the corn that was shipped in for Eatsum's account. Would they?

A. Yes, up to—up to the amount that we agreed to take from Eatsum on an exchange sale basis.

Q. Right.

A. Yes.

Q. I just wanted to know if it showed a car number.

A. That's right, up to that point.

Q. Now, 79 for identification also shows the car number, does it not?

A. It does.

Q. And the same is true of your other contracts with the elevators?

A. Yes. It shows or doesn't show it. That is what you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. There is a name on there or there isn't a name on there.

4242 Q. I am still talking about car numbers.

A. All right. That's right.

Q. Only car numbers.

A. That's right.

Q. And I want to know if the remaining sales contracts are typical or if this is typical of those in the fact that it shows the car number?

A. They all show the car number.

Q. That is all I want to know. Now, have you brought with you a recap of the invoices which you rendered Shotwell Manufacturing Company for corn syrup and corn products during the years 1941 to 1946, inclusive? I have it here, Mr. Horan.

A. I was going to say, we have it here.

Q. This is yours?

A. That's it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 82 for identification, consisting of three sheets.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 82 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And is Defendants' Exhibit 82 for identification
4243 the summary or recap of the Shotwell corn syrup invoices rendered by Penick & Ford for those years?

A. Yes.

Q. And does it also show the quantities and the amounts paid?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have with you, also, have you not, the original invoices which are therein recapped?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you looked also for the papers or records which would show the instances, if any, in which Shotwell procured corn?

A. Yes.

4244 By Mr. O'Brien: Will you let me see those?

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I will ask the Reporter to mark the documents which the witness just handed me respectively 83 to 87, inclusive, being contracts, your Honor, between Penick & Ford and the elevators for corn supplied by Shotwell.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. That is for corn to the credit of Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 83 to 87, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Are the instruments marked Defendants' Exhibits 83 to 87, inclusive, for identification, the contracts which you have so brought?

A. Yes, they are marked Shotwell.

Q. Well, I didn't ask you what they are marked. But are they the contracts?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, why did you select these and bring them
4245 in response to the subpoena?

A. Because that is what we found in our records.

Q. How were you enabled to find these?

A. By leafing through all of our corn confirmation contracts.

Q. And each of these is marked Shotwell, is it not?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Now, were you able to find and have you brought with you any memoranda, such as Defendants' Exhibit 80 or Defendants' Exhibit 81—

A. No.

Q. —showing what, if any, corn was procured by Shotwell or furnished to you for grinding?

A. No.

Q. Without such memoranda, Mr. Horan, are you able to state whether there may not have been further contracts, other than these, Defendants' 83 to 87, inclusive?

A. Well, as I said, we went through all of our corn contracts and that is all we found.

Q. I see. That doesn't quite answer my question. Would you read that last question?

(Question read.)

4246 By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, he has answered the question and I object to the leading nature of the question, in any event.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By the Witness: Read it again, please.

(Question read.)

A. I wouldn't have any way of knowing.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In the case of Defendants' Exhibit 79 for identification, there is nothing on the face of the contract to show that that was for the account of Eatsum, is there?

A. There is nothing on here to show for whose account it is.

Q. Do you have other such contracts amongst your Eatsum and General Confections group where it is not indicated on the face for whose account it is?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. And were you able to bring those with you by referring to the memorandum, Defendants' Exhibit 81, and your memoranda for the year 1945, relating to Eatsum?

4247 A. That or similar memoranda that our grain department had at one time.

Q. Well, you have brought with you, have you not, all of the memoranda and records and papers which you have on the subject, as called for by the subpoena?

A. Yes, as we were able to identify them.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will offer in evidence the documents marked 79, 80, the three pages marked 81, the three pages marked 82, and the elevator contracts, 83 to 87, inclusive.

I should like leave of court to be permitted to substitute photostats of the original documents, 80 and 81, so that those originals may be returned to the witness. If they should go in, your Honor, is it agreeable that the photostats rather than the originals be put in?

By the Court: All right.

I think we will take our morning recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury leaves the court room, and the Judge.

4248 This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

4249 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the government has no objection to Exhibits 82, 83, 84, 85, 86 and 87. I do object to Exhibits 79, 80 and 81 on the ground that they are immaterial, that they are irrelevant, that they relate to transactions with Eat-sum and General Confections and that they have no bearing on the issues in this case and I likewise move to strike the testimony of the witness relating to these particular exhibits 80, 81 and 82.

By Mr. O'Brien: I forgot what 82 is.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: I forgot what 82 is.

By Mr. Lockley: It is the yellow sheet.

By the Court: 82, there is no objection to 82. It is a summary of the invoices for Shotwell.

By Mr. O'Brien? I see. The objection is to 79, 80 and 81?

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct. If I misstated them, I am sorry. That is correct.

4250 By Mr. O'Brien: My response to the objection, your Honor, and perhaps you better look at them and then I will tell you—

By the Court: Well, let me look them over.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection as to 79, 80 and 81. 82 through 87 inclusive may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 82 through 87, inclusive.)

By Mr. O'Brien: May I state my position on this, if the Court please?

By the Court: I am sorry?

By Mr. O'Brien: May I state my position on those three?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I do not contend and neither did I offer 79, 80 and 81 for the purpose of showing transactions with Eatsum or General Confections as such.

I offer them for this reason: That they are the 4251 only documents available, the only ones preserved by the company which would show, your Honor, the pattern of recording and the mechanics of recording such transactions because they have destroyed or disposed of the similar memoranda and documents, that is, 80 and 81, for all other people.

Now, the relevancy and materiality, Judge, is this: I have asked Penick & Ford to bring in to the jury here the contracts for corn that were supplied by or through Shotwell. They have brought in some four five such contracts which they have selected only because the name Shotwell is written on them. There may also be other contracts just as 79. If your Honor will look at that No. 79 exhibit which is that one right there (indicating), that second one, you will see that there is no mark on it of Eatsum Food Products which would enable Penick & Ford to identify it as one on which it had furnished the corn.

But, Mr. Horan says that they were able to select 4252 and to bring it because it ties in with those memoranda. Now, my point is that just as in that case, so in Shotwell's case, if they had comparable memoranda, if they had saved them, then they may have been enabled to pull other contracts similar to 79 for Shotwell, which although they did not have the name Shotwell on them, would be tied in by those memoranda.

By the Court: Supposing we leave it this way—

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection without prejudice to renew the offer in the event it appears to be material. As yet, I don't see that it is material.

4253 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, his testimony as to the manner of bookkeeping, I have no objection to whatsoever, and this witness has so testified, but for the speculative nature of the evidence which Mr. O'Brien is trying to bring out, I think that those documents are entirely irrelevant. There also may not have been any additional contracts.

By the Court: It doesn't establish anything one way or the other. Mr. Horan said he couldn't tell one way or the other.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, that is quite true, but let me suggest to you that fundamentally in this testimony —I am talking now specifically of Shotwell transactions and I have asked the witness to bring such contracts as he could find as were identified, as were entitled to Shotwell.

By the Court: He stated there weren't any more transactions to Shotwell.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, but that there is this showing, if I may submit it: I have put in evidence 4254 all of the invoices of corn syrup of Shotwell which is greatly in excess of those contracts and I have asked the witness to bring me what he can.

Now, I wanted to show what is available. While it is true he doesn't know, it is also true by that, on that method, on that showing, that there could have been many other of those cars of syrup on which Shotwell supplied the corn. It is all an integrated, connected thing.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien has positive evidence why that should be brought out.

By Mr. O'Brien: I should also be permitted to—

By the Court: That is why I suggested that I defer or that I make a ruling without prejudice to a renewal. It may become competent later on and no objections have been made to the foundation.

By Mr. Lockley: None whatever, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wanted to fully state my position on it, Judge.

By the Court: I will adhere to my ruling.

4255 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Mr. Horan, you were the bulk sales manager for the Western Division of Penick & Ford at Cedar Rapids; is that all during 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Does the territory of the Western Division include Chicago, Illinois?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that any transactions with the Chicago concern would normally have come to your attention?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us what a bulk sales manager did as opposed to what other sales managers did you had in your organization?

A. Yes, we do have other sales departments. A bulk sales manager has charge of the administration of sales to food and industry.

Q. Now do you know whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had a quota with the Penick & Ford refinery based upon its purchases of corn syrup in 1944 or whatever base period you used?

A. Yes.

Q. It did have a quota?

A. Yes.

4256 Q. And in 1945 and in 1946, it would have been entitled to purchase a quantity of corn syrup based upon that quota, would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Irrespective of whether it had been instrumental in obtaining any corn for Penick & Ford?

A. Yes, sir, provided we could make it available or in ratio of what we could make available in a general way.

Q. Now, as I understand these contracts, there were fifteen cars of corn made available to Penick & Ford by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1946. Am I correct on that?

A. That is what those contracts showed.

Q. Do you know how many carloads of corn syrup Shotwell was entitled to buy from Penick & Ford as a result of the purchase of these fifteen cars of corn?

A. Yes.

Q. How many was it?

A. The records show the exchange sale was on the basis of two tank cars of corn syrup on the fifteen cars of corn.

Q. So that Shotwell got two cars, two tank cars 4257 of syrup as a result of that purchase of corn?

A. Yes.

Q. Now Shotwell actually bought in 1946 a total of twelve cars of syrup, did it not? Do you have the exhibit there?

A. In the year 1946 you state?

Q. Yes.

A. I have the duplicate.

Q. Is that the same?

A. This is the transcript of it. Twelve. Twelve did you state?

Q. Twelve.

A. Twelve shows on the record here, yes.

Q. So that only two of that twelve were obtained as a result of the corn purchase arrangement?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question, if the Court please.

By the Court: If he knows, he may state.

By Mr. O'Brien: Without a record—

By Mr. Lockley: He has already stated that two carloads were bought or sold as a result of the transaction involving fifteen cars of corn.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that isn't—

4258 By Mr. Lockley: There were a total of twelve cars, he said, that were bought in 1946 by Shotwell from Penick & Ford and it is a matter of simple arithmetic.

By the Court: You mean, from the records available?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state from those records how many were bought by Shotwell on its quota arrangement?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. On the quota, anything that we did not furnish against corn or the difference.

Q. That would be ten carloads, wouldn't it?

A. That would be two from twelve—ten.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have that on a record?

By the Witness: We show twelve tank cars.

By Mr. O'Brien: I know that, but do you have a record that shows what was furnished on quota?

4259 By the Witness: We have a record here somewhere that states we received the fifteen cars of corn and we sold in exchange two tank cars.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not talking about the corn. I am talking about the remainder over and above the two tank cars.

By the Witness: No, I have nothing.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what I mean.

By the Witness: I have nothing to show as regards the quota. We have something to show as regards the exchange quantities.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, as the western bulk sales manager in 1945 and 1946 would you have been the person to arrange the purchase of corn and the subsequent sale of corn syrup in the manner that you have testified to?

A. Well, the policy was fixed by our executive office at New York as to the number of pounds of product, feed, oil or corn syrup that we would sell in exchange for corn, so many pounds per bushel.

Q. Were you the person who carried out that policy?

A. So far as the western territory was concerned,
4260 I had charge so far as it affected sales transactions.

One would call us on the phone and say they had corn to sell and they needed corn syrup and if they could provide the corn, how much corn syrup could we sell and we would say a trading basis was seven, ten, fifteen, seventeen, whatever it might have been as of that day. We would say "If you have corn to sell, go to your grain dealer or your elevator and have him sell that corn to our grain department, call up our grain department and have the elevator say 'It is for your account' when the corn is received, we will set a certain poundage of syrup aside for delivery to you at the ceiling price. We will buy the corn at ceiling price and we will sell you the product, feed, oil, corn syrup—" whatever it might have been—"at the ceiling price."

Q. In accordance with that arrangement, Shotwell provided fifteen carloads of corn to Penick & Ford?

A. That is what the record shows.

Q. And they got in return two carloads of corn syrup?

A. That is what the record shows for this 4261 period.

Q. Do you know of any other corn deals, as they have been called here, other than the one that I have just mentioned?

A. You mean as related to Shotwell?

Q. With Shotwell.

A. What the records show is what we have here.

Q. Did you actually buy any corn direct from Shotwell?

A. No. We bought corn only from grain dealers or elevators, grain elevators. We did not buy corn from individuals.

Q. You paid the ceiling prices?

A. We paid the ceiling price according to the Government grade on feeder products.

Q. You sold the corn syrup in this case and at the ceiling price?

A. In this case it was corn syrup and at the ceiling price.

Q. Do you know then of your own knowledge whether Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any of its officers paid any premium of any sort to any grain elevator or dealer to arrange the purchase of corn by Penick & Ford and their account?

4262 A. No.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to, if the Court please. That is not proper cross examination. There is no such subject that came up on direct.

By the Court: I don't think he has so testified or intimated, one way or the other.

By the Witness: I would have no such knowledge, no.

4263 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know whether you yourself or anyone in your organization received any premium from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any of its officers for the sale of corn syrup—

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —as a result of this deal?

By Mr. O'Brien: Not only is it not proper cross examination but there is no evidence for any contention that any corn refiner received premiums.

By the Court: Me may answer.

By the Witness:

A. The inference is that I received the money or the company received money over and above ceiling prices? No.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, Mr. Horan. That's all, Mr. Horan. Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

By the Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

4264 SAM GERTZ, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Will you state your full name, please?
A. Sam Gertz.
Q. Is it Sam or Samuel?
A. Sam.
By the Court: Your last name is what?
By the Witness: G-e-r-t-z.
By the Court: Gertz?
By the Witness: Right.
By the Court: All right.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Gertz?
A. 414 Wellington Avenue, Chicago.
Q. Have you lived in Chicago all your life?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know a David Lubben?
A. Yes.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. I have known him since 1943.

4265 Q. Do you recall a conversation with him some time in the early part of 1948 at your home?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Who was there?
A. Nobody. Just myself.
Q. Was Mr. Lubben there?
A. Lubben and myself. I had a conversation with him so he must have been there.
Q. I think that is pretty clear. What was said?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object to any transaction that happened in 1948 between this witness and Mr. Lubben.
By the Court: I don't think you have laid any foundation for this by way of asking Mr. Lubben anything about this conversation.
By Mr. McConnell: I didn't want to lead him. I did lay a foundation with Mr. Lubben, yes.
By the Court: Did you?
By Mr. McConnell: I certainly did.

By the Court: I am just asking you. I didn't recollect it. The only way you can impeach, Mr. Lubben, of course, is to ask him about the conversation. Otherwise, the 4266 conversation is not immaterial. The only way you can bring it in is by way of impeachment.

By Mr. O'Connell: Well, I don't want to lead the witness. I don't want to be accused of leading the witness. I will be accused of it in a minute.

By the Court: Did you ask Mr. Lubben about this conversation?

By Mr. McConnell: I didn't ask him about the conversation, but I asked him about the transaction which is involved in the conversation, in which he made certain admissions.

By the Court: I confess I don't remember the transactions. I don't know what you are going to ask. Come up here.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken before the bench, beyond the hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. McConnell: This refers to the Haberkorn transaction about which I queried Mr. Lubben on cross examination as to whether or not he had forced Shotwell to buy the Haberkorn Company.

4267 By the Court: Whether he had what?

By Mr. McConnell: Forced the Shotwell Company to buy the Haberkorn Company. This conversation goes to certain admissions which Mr. Lubben denied on his cross examination.

By Mr. Lockley: He didn't mention anything to Mr. Lubben about any converrsation with Mr. Gertz.

By Mr. McConnell: But I asked him about the Haberkorn transaction.

By the Court: I think it may fairly come within the scope.

By Mr. Lockley: The proper foundation would have been to ask Mr. Lubben at the time whether he had such a conversation.

By Mr. McConnell: This is an admission that that was so. I wouldn't lay a foundation for a conversation—

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

4268 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now what was that conversation? What was said there?

A. Well, I owed Lubben—I owed the Haberkorn Candy Company—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what you owed. You asked me what was said there.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What did Mr. Lubben tell or say to you at that time?

A. Lubben said he came to Chicago to sell the Haberkorn Candy Company to the Shotwells, and he made a deal with them to take it over. That was about the entire—then I owed him some money and he tried—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to whether he owed him any money.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you relate all of the conversation?

A. That is about all.

Q. Was there any statement made to you at that time about the chicken farm?

4269 A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about it?

A. He mentioned the fact that he made the Shotwell Candy Company take over the cost, the mortgage, I believe he said—put a mortgage on the farm so he could get out of it.

Q. Did he mention how much money was involved?

A. He said $75,000.00.

Q. Did he say what he was going to do about it?

A. He didn't say anything else. He just mentioned the fact that the chicken farm—

Q. Have you exhausted your recollection now of that conversation?

A. I believe I have, but I remember those two things.

Q. Did he suggest to you that he was going to make Shotwell pay $75,00.00 for that?

A. I believe he said he had a mortgage and he was going to make Shotwell hold it.

By Mr. McConnell: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no cross examination.

By the Court: That's all, Mr. Gertz.

4270 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move that the testimony of Mr. Gertz be stricken on the ground it has no relevance to the issues in the case.

By the Court: Well, it may stand.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark these Defendants' Exhibits 88, 89, 90 and 91 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 88, 89, 90 and 91 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby: There is a witness in this room but these documents have nothing to do with him so I don't think he need be excluded while I make the offer.

I offer in evidence four documents each certified by the appropriate official of the Government and each representing records of the Government with respect to the nature of the market in corn in 1945 and 1946. The first of them is document 88, and it is a letter from Chester Bowles, who was the then director of the OPA.

4271 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to Mr. Kirby's reading from these documents. I haven't seen them.

By the Court: He is identifying them in so far as it may appear to the Court what they are.

By Mr. Kirby: As far as Mr. Lockley not having seen them, I tendered all of them to him and he said he intended to object to them without reading them. I didn't mean to deprive him of the opportunity which he refused.

Now, the next document which is marked Exhibit 89, is a memoranda to the Secretary of Agriculture on May 2, 1946, from Robert H. Shields, administrator specifically with respect to the corn situation.

The next document is Defendants' Exhibit 90 and it is a report from the Enforcement Division, particularly with respect to corn and it is a report dated April 4, 1946.

Documents 88, 89 and 90 are certified by the archi-

4272 vist of the United States as having come from the government's records.

Document 91 is a report of the Federal Trade Commission.

By the Court: Federal Trade Commission?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, your Honor. There are parts of the report that are kind of far, perhaps, from our particular interests but it reviews the situation on all of the corn markets throughout the country, and the pages that are particularly pertinent to our questions here are on pages 1, 19, and 26. The document is certified in its entirety but our interest is really limited to those pages which I specifically mean to state are competent.

I might say in general, describing these documents and not to presume to read them, that they represent the best description from an impartial source, the government itself, that we have been able to locate and we did get it from the government's archives. Particularly, they talk about confectioners in the black market, candy 4273 makers in the black market. That is why I think it is material.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object on the ground that they are immaterial and irrelevant. They have no relationship to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and its alleged tax evasion. They are entirely outside the scope of the issues in the case.

There is no witness who can testify as to their general relevance.

I have no objection to the foundation of the records as being official records.

By the Court: I will look them over. I will defer my ruling until I have had an opportunity to examine them.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. Mr. Stone, will you take the stand, please.

RONALD STONE, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

4274 A. Ronald Stone.

Q. Mr. Stone, the acoustics in this court room are poor. Will you please speak in a loud enough voice so that you can readily be heard?

A. I will.

Q. You have to do better than that response. Now, Mr. Stone, where do you live?

A. I live at 7 Book Avenue in Newark, New Jersey.

Q. And how long have you lived in Newark?

A. Approximately 27 years.

Q. Do you know a David Lubben?

A. I do.

Q. When did you first meet David Lubben?

A. In the summer of 1944.

Q. Where?

A. At the law office of one Herbert Fenzer in New York.

Q. Did you thereafter associate in any way with Mr. Lubben in business?

A. I did.

Q. And over what period of time?

A. From the summer of 1944 to approximately the middle of March, 1946.

Q. You have heard of an Eatsum Food Products
4275 Company which was a proprietorship?

A. I have heard of it.

Q. And you were associated with Lubben during his proprietorship period in part?

A. I was associated with him.

Q. During the period he was operating as a proprietor and by the way, when did that period end?

A. That period ended May 31, 1945.

Q. In 1945, what did you have to do with his business?

A. I was an assistant to Mr. Lubben in the general purchasing of all raw materials necessary for the operation of his business.

Q. How often were you at the office?

A. During 1945, during the proprietorship days of 1945 after the second week in January of that year I was there every day from 9:00 o'clock in the morning until 5:00, 6:00 or 7:00 in the evening.

Q. Did you have a desk?

A. I did.

Q. What was the setup, physically?

A. Well, now, Eatsum Food Products, that was the trade name of David Lubben—it had about, what pur-4276 ported to be enough space for six offices on the third floor of the building on Broadway and 60th Street. I don't recall the exact number.

Mr. Lubben's office, if I may describe it that way, was in that corner (indicating), and about 20 feet from his office was my office. I had a little office in the same suite.

Q. And who else was there in early 1945?

A. In early 1945—well, we had a Miss Norman there who was Mr. Lubben's secretary, and Miss Feldman who was the bookkeeper. We had Frieda somebody—I don't recall her second name, who was—

Q. Frieda Seiderer?

A. I believe that is her name, Seiderer, or something.

Q. She is married now and her married name is Strum, is that the same name?

A. I don't know, but I know there was a girl by the name of Frieda.

4277 Q. All right. Who else?

A. And then we had about four or five assistant bookkeepers and in the early—I would say about a month or two after the beginning of the year, a Mr. Roy Hankermyer, an uncle of Mr. Lubben's by marriage came along to occupy space and also work for the Eatsum Food Products and about the latter part of April or the early days of May, a Mr. Joseph Keenan also came along to work there.

Q. What did Keenan do?

A. To the best of my recollection, Keenan never did anything.

Q. What did Mr. Keenan do before he came there, do you know?

A. Yes, I do know.

Q. What d' . he do?

A. Mr. Keenan was administration head of the OPA in charge of sugar rationing for manufacturing purposes in the metropolitan New York area.

Q. During what period?

A. I don't know. It was prior to his coming to work for Eatsum.

Q. And how long did he stay with Lubben?

A. He stayed with Lubben until the dissolution of 4278 the partnership.

Q. That would be on until—

A. About March of 1946.

Q. And this fellow Keenan, in that period that you mention, up until March of 1946, did he do anything that you saw in that period?

A. To the best of my knowledge, he never did anythiing.

Q. Now, had you ever met Mr. Keenan—strike that.

In Mr. Lubben's testimony here, and I am referring now to page 980 and 981—

By Mr. Lockley: Will you tell me which volume?

By Mr. Kirby: It is Volume 8.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. He was asked whether he had had a cash box before the partnership and he answered: "There may have been one, sir, but I don't think there was very much or—if anything, in it. I can't remember."

Now, you were there before the partnership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a cash box there?

4279 A. There was a cash box from the first time I met Mr. Lubben and it continued until the time we ceased doing business.

Q. When is the first time, now?

A. I met Mr. Lubben in the summer of 1944.

Q. How do you know there was a cash box?

A. Because Mr. Lubben put his hand into the box and came up with $2300.00 to give me to buy 100 bags of sugar.

Q. What do you mean? What do you mean, buy a hundred bags of sugar?

A. Mr. Lubben needed 100 bags of sugar and the only way he could get that, in view if the fact that he didn't have a basic sugar quota—

By Mr. Lockley: When and where is this?

By the Witness: This took place in Mr. Lubben's office at Broadway—at Lexington Avenue and 43rd Street. It was—he had a little office. I don't recall the name of the building but it was on Lexington Avenue and 43rd Street.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So that when—

By Mr. Lockley: When?

4280 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When did you first see this cash box?

A. About either June or July of 1944, in that period.

Q. And describe now what you saw with respect to a cash box before the partnership?

A. Before the partnership?

Q. Before the partnership.

A. Oh, before the partnership.

Q. I have read you Mr. Lubben's testimony that there wasn't any or didn't amount to anything or he didn't remember.

Now, what did you see with respect to a cash box?

A. In his desk in his office he had somewhat—not a steel box, but it appeared to be a hard paper box. In it he had, well, several envelopes and from one of these envelopes he took out $2300.00 and gave it to me to buy the sugar for him.

By Mr. Lockley: When?

By the Witness: July, the latter part of June or July of 1944.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, describe during the remaining period of 4281 the proprietorship what you saw with respect to his running a cash box. Just what did you see?

A. From the time that I was there, every day beginning the first or second week of January, 1945, there was a tin cash box each day.

By the Court: Was that during the partnership?

By the Witness: No, sir. That was during the proprietorship, prior to the partnership, from approximately the first or second week of January, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: The Court will remember what Mr. Lubben's testimony was.

By the Court: I thought he said June, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: You would be exactly right then, January.

By the Witness: There were numerous transactions in cash.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, did you have anything to do with them? Do you know this of your own knowledge?

A. I do, because—

Q. What do you know about it?

4282 A. Because I purchased materials. I purchased for him corn sugar, cane sugar and beet sugar. I purchased with him and for him ration evidence which always was paid in cash.

Q. What do you mean "ration evidence"?

A. Evidence—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what he means by ration evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: I am asking the witness to describe his transactions, just what he knows of it.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. By ration evidence is meant the check—a check issued on a bank account ostensibly by some wholesale sugar dealer or sugar refiner made out to a wholesale grocer in so many thousand pounds and this check entitled you to go to a refinery or to a wholesale grocer and buy your sugar. Without this check, your money didn't mean anything. You had to have this ration evidence in order to procure the sugar.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. That is your points, isn't it?

4283 A. That is right. That is what it is, but in large amounts instead of putting it out in five pound lots like the little coupons, they merely permitted you to issue one big check of 20,000, 30,000, 50,000, whatever you wanted.

4284 Q. What was it you bought for cash, did you buy the sugar or did you buy the points?

A. There were times we bought sugar and there were other times we bought the ration evidence to give to someone else who would give us the sugar with our ration evidence.

When we didn't have the ration evidence we bought the sugar on the black market.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. It means where sugar was worth perhaps $8.20 a bag, we paid nineteen and twenty dollars a bag for it, without ration evidence.

Q. Without points?

A. That's correct, without points.

Q. So that these transactions with Lubben, with respect to the rationed sugar, were all in cash, you say?

A. Every one was in cash.

Q. Now, when you would buy the sugar you wouldn't give the points?

A. If we bought sugar on the black market we didn't give any points.

Q. And when you bought the points?

A. Then we paid the regular market price for the 4285 sugar.

Q. But did you pay separately for the points?

A. Yes, sir. We had to buy the evidence, the ration evidence.

Q. When Mr. Lubben was a witness he testified, with respect to the purchase of sugar certificates, and I now am going to refer to Volume 10, at page 1248, and in my cross examination I asked him whether he had ever purchased sugar certificates for cash. He asked me whether I meant whether he ever went out and bought them. I said yes. He said he never went out and bought them. Then I asked him if he ever paid for any that were brought in. And he said, "I think once, sir."

Now, were there more than one transaction in the purchase of these sugar certificates?

A. Why, of course.

Q. Don't argue with me. The question is: Were there?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: The question is whether Mr. Lubben had more than one transaction, not whether Stone had more than one. Mr. Lubben was asked whether he 4286 bought more than once.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The question is whether there were more than one transaction in which you personally participated with Lubben, involving the purchase of sugar certificates.

A. I don't want to be argumentative, but that question to me is a little ambiguous. Now, so far as I am concerned, I have made several—I made several purchases of ration checks for Mr. Lubben. And Mr. Lubben also made several purchases of ration evidence.

Q. I then showed—after Mr. Lubben's answer to me that there was only one—a document which is in evidence as Defendants' 1-A, B, C, and D, and I will hand it to you.

Do you know in whose handwriting that is?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose handwriting is that?

A. That is Dave Lubben's handwriting.

Q. Now, would you pick out the exhibit—and if you will turn to the back you can see the number—which is Exhibit 1-D.

By the Court: You see, when you say Exhibit 4287 1-D, the government may have a 1-D. You have got to identify whether it is the defendants or the government's. Otherwise the record becomes just confusing.

By Mr. Kirby: You are exactly right. And it is the Defendants. And it surely would get it mixed up. That's right, Judge.

4288 By the Witness: Will you repeat that question?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, pick out 1-D.

A. This is marked 1-D.

Q. Is your name on that any place?

A. Well, on the second line, my name is on it.

Q. What does it say?

A. It says "Ronnie Stone Dextrose, $3,058.62."

Q. Does that indicate money paid out or money paid in?

A. That is on money paid out.

Q. Dextrose, that is a type of sugar made from corn, is it?

A. That is correct. That's corn sugar.

Q. What kind of a deal is that in Lubben's handwriting there?

A. This was for the purchase of corn sugar.

Q. For cash?

A. For cash.

Q. Did that come out of the cash box?

A. It sure did.

Q. Now, is there any other reference to you on that sheet in Mr. Lubben's handwriting?

4289 A. No, sir.

Q. Do you see any references there to the purchases of sugar certificates?

A. Yes. Here is an item, "June 6, 91 bags"—no. Excuse me. That can't be. It says "91 bags, nine fifty." That must be for corn sugar.

By Mr. Lockley: What year, please? Never mind any further explanation.

By the Witness: It says May 28th. There is no year on here.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you know what year it is?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: What year is it?

By the Witness: 1945.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, how long in 1945, prior to that sheet in Mr. Lubben's handwriting had you participated in the purchase for cash of sugar ration certificates?

A. How long—
Will you repeat that, please.
(Question read.)
By Mr. Kirby:
4290 Q. Well, if the question isn't plain, I will rephrase it. That's in the middle of '45.
A. This begins May 18th of '45.
Q. All right. Now, my question is, had the same things been going on earlier than that?
A. It had been going on from approximately the middle of February of 1945.
Q. And always out of the cash box?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was that in the proprietorship period?
A. Yes, sir.
Oh, yes, my name is here again. I am sorry. I see it down there.
Q. What does that say?
A. "June 15, Stone, 1900"—
By the Court: Speak up.
By the Witness:
A. "Stone, 1979 bags, $494.75."
By Mr. Lockley: Read the rest of it, Mr. Stone.
By the Witness: C-o-m-m.
By Mr. Lockley: That's commission?
By the Witness: Commission on purchases.
By Mr. Lockley: And the rest.
By the Witness: That is all there is. Oh, before 4291 June 15th, is that what you wanted?
By Mr. Lockley: It reads, "Stone commission on purchases before June 15," isn't that what it reads?
By the Witness: That's right, sir. 1999 bags, $494.75.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. What was that about?
A. Apparently purchased for him 19—
By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Stone, do you know?
By the Witness: Right now I don't know.
By Mr. Lockley: Well, don't testify as to what you think might have happened.
By the Witness: I don't know, no.
By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I object to counsel admonishing the witness. I would suggest that he direct his remarks to the Court, and not tell the witness to—

By Mr. Lockley: I apologize to the Court.

By the Court: You defer your questions until the witness is turned over to you for cross examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

4292 Q. Mr. Stone, having looked at that memorandum that Mr. Lockley called your attention to, do you have any memory of any commission deals with Lubben?

A. With Lubben?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I had some commission deals with Mr. Lubben.

Q. What were those about?

A. For the purchase of sugar, corn sugar, or any raw materials. This took place prior to about the 15th—or perhaps March 1st of 1945. I wouldn't know the exact date.

By the Court: You let your voice drop, Mr. Stone. You must keep it up if you are going to be heard.

By the Witness:

A. There was a period before I became steadily employed with Lubben when I was working on a commission basis.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, then, have you Defendants' Exhibit 1-C? Will you pick that out, please.

A. I have that.

Q. And in whose handwriting is that?

4293 A. That is David Lubben's handwriting.

Q. Is your name on that any place?

A. Yes. It says, "June 21, Stone, doughnut mix, $1700.00."

Q. Do you remember what that was about?

A. I do.

Q. What was that?

A. That was for the purchase of some sugar that had a little vanilla extract added to it in order to take it out of the category of pure sugar. Some of the food processors would take sugar, add a little vanilla extract, and that would remove it from any connection with the OPA.

Now, I purchased for Mr. Lubben, apparently—I can't tell from this—so many bags of this doughnut mix.

Q. For cash?

A. It was cash, of course.

Q. Is your name on there any place else in Lubben's handwriting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, while you are there would you take a look at 1-B?

A. Yes, sir.

4294 Q. And do you see some references to some money received from a man by the name of Bert Rock?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And in whose handwriting is that reference?

A. That is Dave Lubben's handwriting.

Q. And did you know anything about the deals—well, I shouldn't be so general. How much money is shown there as having been received from Bert Rock?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. The record itself, in evidence, is the best evidence of that.

By the Court: Well, I assume it is a preliminary question. He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. There are three items totaling $17,000.00.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is that cash?

A. I have no idea. I have no knowledge of this transaction at all.

Q. Do you know what the deals were with Bert Rock?

A. I have no idea.

4295 Q. All right. I now want to go to another question of Mr. Lubben's testimony, and I am referring to Volume 8, at page 897, and we were talking about—I don't know whether I was asking him the questions or not, but he was being asked, in any event, about cash boxes, and he was being asked about candy sales, and the question was:

"Q. And you put cash receipts from candy sales in that candy box, didn't you?

"A. I don't recall any candy sales, sir, that were sold for cash."

Now, let me ask you, do you know anything about, during the period—let's take the proprietorship first, and then we will go to the partnership—do you know anything about candy sales for cash?

A. I do.

Q. And what do you know about it? Just tell me what you saw.

A. I know that—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I object on the ground that the cross examination of Mr. 4296 Lubben related entirely at that time to the co-partnership and that Mr. Kirby's examination of this witness should be likewise limited to any transactions during the co-partnership.

By the Court: If that is true, I think it should be limited to the partnership.

By Mr. Kirby: I think it is true, and I will go directly to the co-partnership, not to get into any confusion. But I do think it is true that he testified there was no cash box of any kind before, you see.

By Mr. Lockley: He testified that he didn't remember, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, all right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let's get to the partnership period, Mr. Stone. Do you remember anything about candy sales, whether cash was involved?

A. That would have to be subsequent to June 1st.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, there was one transaction to a fellow by the name of Rubinson. There was another transaction to 4297 a fellow by the name of Wachtel. There might have been two to Wachtel. And there was one to Imperial Candy Company of Ohio.

Those were cash transactions, in my presence.

Q. And what happened to the cash—first, were those cash candy transactions?

A. Those were candy transactions.

Q. And did the cash go into the candy cash box?

A. It went into the candy cash box.

Q. Did you know a fellow by the name of Ducor, D-u-c-o-r?

A. Yes, he has a refugee. Mr. Ducor, or some name similar to that.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please,—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Who was Mr. Ducor?

By Mr. Lockley: —he was only asked if he knew him.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right.

By the Witness:

A. He was a refugee dealing in candies, buying and selling candies.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And how did he deal, by check or by cash?

A. Only by—

4298 By Mr. Lockley: I object as to what Ducor did. It is certainly beyond the boundaries of this case.

By the Court: Yes, without more than that I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if the Court please, Mr. Lubben's answer was just as flat and specific as it can be, page 897, "I don't recall any candy sales, sir, that were sold for cash." He said that just as flat as he could say anything.

By the Court: Maybe I lost—

By Mr. Lockley: There is no reference in that transaction to Mr. Ducor.

By the Court: Maybe I lost the trend of your question. Are you asking him whether or not there were any cash deals between Lubben's companies and his man Ducor, is that it?

By Mr. Kirby: Of candy; yes, sir.

By the Court: He may answer. Or the answer may stand.

By Mr. Kirby: Then may that portion where he 4299 describes Ducor as a refugee stand? That was part of his answer.

By the Court: I haven't any objection.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, how did Ducor deal, by check or by cash?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object again. What Mr. Ducor did is entirely irrelevant. If he has reference to what Mr. Ducor did at one specific transaction with Mr. Lubben, that is something else. But he is asking what—

By the Court: I assume he asked, Counsel—and he said it had reference to a transaction with Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: He hasn't laid any foundation as to when, where or whether it was with Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: I think you will have to make it more definite.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Who did Ducor deal with?

A. With Mr. Lubben.

4300 Q. And what product was he dealing with him about?

A. About hard candies.

Q. And did they deal by check or by cash?

A. They dealt—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that he has not laid a proper foundation. We don't know whether he is talking about 1901 or 1951.

By the Court: Yes, the time and place.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When, Mr. Stone?

A. This took place prior to June 1, 1945.

Q. It took place during the proprietorship period?

A. (Witness nods.)

Q. Can you be any more definite than that?

A. Between February 15 and May 31 of 1945.

Q. Was there more than one transaction?

A. There must have been between ten and fifteen transactions.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, please. If your Honor please, I would like to have him discuss each transaction separately and not guess.

By the Court: Well, the answer may stand.

4301 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And were they always for cash?

A. They were for cash.

Q. Now I want to turn to another portion of Mr. Lubben's testimony—

By the Court: Well, we will take our noon recess now.

By the Marshall: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above-entitled cause to 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Thursday, October 8, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Thursday, October 8, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein in the presence and hearing of the jury:

By the Court: I see Mr. O'Brien isn't here yet.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. O'Brien asked if he might be excused for a few minutes. If it is all right I will just 4303 move along.

By the Court: All right.

RONALD STONE, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and was further examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Stone, at the recess I was going to come to another subject, and that relates to the partnership of Eatsum Food Products. You know about the start of that, don't you?

A. I do; yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben, in his testimony, in Volume 4, at page 410, in speaking of the partnership and of the partners, said:

"And on my side was a Ronald Stone and a Ro Hankermyer."

Now, were you a partner in the Lubben group?

A. Yes, sir; I was a limited partner in that group.

Q. And on the other side were Livorsi, Loperfido,
4304 Giglio and that group?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when did that partnership start?

A. Officially it came into existence on June 1, 1945.

Q. Had it some start unofficially before that?

A. There had been negotiations for approximately seven —about seven weeks prior to that. Perhaps more.

Q. And what did you have to do with the negotiations?

A. I was instrumental in arranging—through a mutual friend of both Mr. Giglio and myself—to have Mr. Giglio come down to the then proprietorship to discuss with Dave Lubben the possibility of a partnership.

Q. Were there such discussions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who participated in them?

A. The first discussion took place at Mr. Lubben's home, about the first week in April. It was on a week day night. I don't recall the day, but I know it was at night, at night time, in his apartment. This apartment was on Madison Avenue and 35th Street.

4305 Q. And who was there?

A. Dave Lubben, William Giglio, Louie Roth and myself.

Q. And who was Louie Roth?

A. Louie Roth was Mr. Giglio's accountant.

Q. And were there subsequent meetings?

A. There was a subsequent meeting several days after the first one, which took place on a Saturday afternoon, also in Mr. Lubben's apartment.

Q. And who was there then?

A. At that meeting there were other people besides those who were interested in the discussions about the partnership. But those people who were discussing the possibility of a partnership were Dave Lubben, George Burry, Louie Roth and myself.

4306 Q. And were there further discussions after that before the partnership was formed?

A. There were further discussions; yes, sir. There was one further discussion in which all the parties, excluding George Burry, met for the purpose of agreeing upon terms. But prior to that, the meeting I referred to before, of a Saturday afternoon, Giglio told Lubben that he was not interested in any partnership at that time.

Q. Well, after Giglio said he wasn't interested in a partnership, who made the next move?

A. Dave Lubben left for the coast on some business. Several days thereafter I received a telegram from Dave Lubben, from Los Angeles, to the effect that "Must have deal with Giglio. $5,000.00 in it for you if deal is consummated." Signed by Dave Lubben.

Several days, perhaps four or five days after that, when Lubben returned from the coast, he immediately called me into his office and asked me whether I was able to do anything about reviving the transaction. I said yes, I had arranged a telephone call to Mr. Giglio, who told me that it is not in his hands, that if Louis 4307 Roth is satisfied as to the financial condition of the Eatsum proprietorship, then he, Bill Giglio, would enter into such a partnership.

Q. And they finally did?

A. They did agree on the terms.

Q. Now, in Mr. Lubben's testimony at page 410 he said:

"I am very sure that my people didn't have any interest in it. It was mine."

Now, did you—who is identified as one of his people—did you make any investment?

A. I did make an investment.

Q. And did you have an interest in the partnership?

A. I did have an interest in the parnership.

Q. What was your investment?

A. My investment was $10,000.00, $5,000.00 in cash of my own and $5,000.00 that I borrowed.

Q. Did you remain a partner throughout the life of the partnership; did you later assign your interest to Lubben?

A. On November 27, 1945, I gave Mr. Lubben an assignment of my limited partnership interest.

4308 Q. Did you continue about the premises and about the business after November of—

A. Yes, sir; I was there until the day the partnership dissolved

Q. And when did it dissolve?

A. March 8, 9, 10, somewheres around that date, of 1946.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben testified, with respect to the dissolution of the partnership, in Volume 9, and he testified particularly around page 1068 about going to a Mr.

Blumberg and asking his advice, and saying that he wanted to get away from there. Then he said:

"'I wanted to get out of here.' And the result is, sir, I left him the accounts receivable, I left them the money in the bank, I gave them all of the inventory—but mind you, sir, I was a fifty per cent partner in this thing—all of the inventory, and I gave them everything, with the exception of the desk I had when I came with them, plus the leasehold on the plant up in the Bronx, and the machinery that I had in the Bronx."

4309 Now, did you know personally what the facts were with respect to the dissolution?

A. Yes, sir; I do know those facts.

Q. And do you know what Mr. Lubben, upon the dissolution, did get?

A. Mr. Lubben received the factory, which was free and clear of any encumbrance, which Mr. Giglio valued at $200,000.00, but Mr. Lubben said it was worth only $125,000.00. So that figure of $125,000.00 was satisfactory to Mr. Giglio. Mr. Lubben also got credit for $150,000.00 which he himself said he drew and which he did not account for at that time.

Q. Well, what about this last item, what is that $150,000.00 item?

A. About December 24th or 25th of 1945, Lubben took a trip for the Christmas holidays and New Years holidays to Cuba. During the period that he was away Roth made a thorough check of the books of Eatsum Food Company partnership and found unexplained—

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me. Your Honor, I would like to have it known whether the witness is testify-4310 ing from his own knowledge, of whether he is testifying from hearsay.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness: My own knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley: If it is from his own knowledge, I would like to know how he came of such knowledge.

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is this something you know about it?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know about it?

A. Because I was there when Mr. Roth made the account—the audit and came in to Mr. Giglio and said, "There is about $200,000.00 worth of unexplained cash checks here."

Q. And was that taken up with Lubben?

A. When he returned Mr. Giglio took it up.

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me again. If your Honor please, I would like to know if the witness was present at this conversation or whether he is testifying from hearsay.

By Mr. Kirby:

4311 Q. Will you tell us?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Court: Were you present at the conversation?

By the Witness: I was present; yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And who else was present?

A. Mr. Roth, Mr. Giglio, Dave Lubben and myself.

Q. And the argument was about checks to cash?

A. The argument was about the checks which were unexplained.

Q. And to whom—who were the payees on those checks?

A. All the checks were made out to cash.

Q. Now, in Mr. Lubben's testimony here, in Volume 9 at page 1116, he was testifying about some arguments just prior to the dissolution of the partnership, and is that approximately the time you are now talking about?

A. There was no argument on this day of January 10th, or approximately that day, when he returned from Cuba, because Mr.—

Q. What was said?

A. Because Mr. Lubben said, "Whatever I drew I

4312 can explain." So he said, "I will have a statement within a few days showing just where the money went."

Q. So then what happened next?

A. I don't know whether it was a month later, three or four weeks, somewheres around that period, that Mr. Giglio again asked Lubben for the statement.

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Were you there?

A. At that one I was not there; no, sir.

Q. Just tell us about any conversations with Lubben about these cash checks when you were there?

A. The next time that there was a discussion took place—

By Mr. Lockley: May I have a foundation as to time and place?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Fix the time and place.

A. About March 8th or 9th of 1946.

4313 Q. And who was there?

A. Lou Roth, Giglio, Lubben and myself.

Q. And this is just before the dissolution?

A. This was on the day. This was the day of the dissolution.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified in his examination, at page 1116, talking about cash checks, he said:

"Yes, sir. We had constant arguments about it, Mr. Roth and myself."

Now, did you hear any of those arguments about these checks to cash?

A. Yes, there were arguments.

Q. Now, tell us specifically about this one at the break-up of the partnership; who said what and who was there?

A. I was in Mr. Lubben's room. We were seated together, near his desk, when Mr. Giglio walked in. And he said to Lubben, "Have you got that statement yet?"

Lubben said, "No."

Giglio said to Lubben, "Call up the factory right now and shut everything down. As of tonight there is no more Eatsum. Liquidate everything."

Q. What checks is he talking about, of what statement?

4314 A. About those same checks unaccounted for.

Q. And how much was it said that they amounted to?

A. Roth contended that they amounted to $200,000.00. However, at the split-up Lubben agreed that it was about a hundred and fifty thousand and took that in consideration as part of his split, the assets for which he was to get credit for.

4315 Q. What happened after this conference between Lubben?

A. It was agreed after Giglio said he wanted to set off everything, to charge proper people with whatever they took and then split the proceeds down the middle. Lubben suggested and asked Mr. Giglio in view of the fact that that was Lubben's business, that was his line, he said, "Let me have the factory."

Q. What was his line?

A. The candy factory. He says, "Don't sell that. Let me take the factory. You take the inventory. You take the accounts receivable and payable," which was satisfactory to Giglio and Roth and then Lubben said, "I will buy back from you the inventory."

And that is the way they arrived at a split.

Q. And did Lubben give notes for the inventory?

A. He gave notes for part of the inventory. At that time he gave no notes. There was jut a tentative agreement. "This is the way we are going to split."

Q. What happened after that?

4316 A. I don't know.

Q. Were you around there any more?

A. I was around, but I don't know what happened.

Q. When did you leave?

A. I think I remained around there for about another six or seven weeks.

Q. And did Lubben then start the General Confections?

A. The next day Lubben started General Confections.

Q. So you were there through the period of the proprietorship and through the partnership and up to about the start of General Confections?

A. No, I had nothing to do with General Confections.

Q. I see. Up until the start, you were there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, after you left, when did you next see Lubben?

Oh, by the way, while you were there, did you ever meet any of the defendants, Cain, Sullivan or Huebner?

A. I saw Mr. Huebner upon two or three occasions.

Q. Where?

A. At 19 Rutgers Street.

4317 Q. Is that the office of the company?

A. That was the office of the partnership.

Q. And what did you see when he was there?

A. I saw nothing so far as he is concerned.
Q. Were you introduced to him?
A. I was introduced to him, yes, sir.
Q. Was everybody else introduced to him?
A. Yes, he was introduced to Mr. Giglio. He was introduced to Mr. Roth and I believe Mr. Lubben took him around and introduced him.
Q. All right. Now, after you left there when did you see Lubben again?
A. I believe I saw Lubben perhaps three or four months after that.
Q. And—
A. Up at General Confections, up at his place.
Q. And was any business discussed at that time?
A. If I recall correctly, I loaned him $5,000.00.
Q. Well, when did you next see Lubben after that?
A. About October, 1948.
Q. Where?
A. At his place in Hillsdale.
Q. What do you mean at his place?
A. He had a farm or a combination farm and 4318 factory.
Q. And what was that about, who was there?
A. There were—it was on a Sunday afternoon and my wife and I were invited up to dinner there, but that wasn't the specific purpose of our visit.
Mr. Lubben had called me on the telephone to tell me that he had been down to the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department for an investigation of his tax matters and of Eatsum and he told me that he had given to one of the agents my name and he asked me to come down and he wanted to talk to me about it.
That Sunday afternoon I came to his home. He told me of his conversation with the Intelligence Unit investigator. He told me to corroborate his story. There was no corroboration and there was no—
By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me, wait. If your Honor please, what story?
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Yes, what story did he want you to say?
A. He wanted me to corroborate his story that we merely took everything away from him so that he got nothing.

4319 Q. What did you say?

A. I said "that is not true, definitely not true," with the result that we, my wife and I left.

Q. Have you seen—

A. After—

Q. Have you spoken to him?

A. Yes, I have—I have spoke to him perhaps a year or so later when I was packaging some chewing gum. The person who held the lien, warehouse lien on my merchandise wasn't satisfied with the way the merchandise was moving, so this person solicited Dave Lubben to sell them the gum for me and that was the last time I spoke to Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Kirby: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move to strike the testimony of this witness on the ground it is entirely immaterial and irrelevant. It is an attempt to impeach on a purely collateral issue brought about by the defendants on their own cross examination. It has no relevancy whatsoever to the real merits of this case.

The Court will recall that it had serious doubt at 4320 the time the defense was cross examining on some of these collateral issues as to whether or not it was relevant. The defense is now attempting to take certain isolated statements which are purely on collateral issues, on matters not touched upon on direct examination and begin a new trial on new and inconsequential matters and issues.

We are prepared, if necessary, to rebut and refute most of the statements which are made by this witness. If we are required to do that, as I said before, we will do it. If we take into consideration every immaterial and collateral matter we are going to be here far beyond the time that should be allotted for the trial of this case.

By the Court: Well, I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I have one question.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Are you the Ronald Stone who on May 10, 1948, in the United States District Court of New Jersey was convicted of perjury?

4321 A. Yes, I am.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What did that matter relate to?

A. That matter related to the fact that I signed an affidavit for the release of somebody on bail. I put up my property for the person's release. The equity in my property was not sufficient to satisfy the terms of the court and therefore that was considered perjury on a bail bond.

Q. Did you dispute the matter?

A. Did I dispute the matter? No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. By the way, Lubben knew about that when you associated with him?

A. Oh, of course.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You served time in jail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q And you were a lawyer?

4322 A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

By the Witness: May I—

By the Court: Oh, I think that's all.

By the Witness: Okay, sir.

By the Court: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

4323 FRIEDA STRUM, a witness herein called on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. Frieda Strum.

Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Strum?

A. 3521 DeKalb Avenue, New York.

By the Court: I don't think the jury heard that. Do you live in New York?

By the Witness: Yes.

By the Court: New York City?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You have to speak a little more loudly than you have, Mrs. Strum.

Were you formerly a bookkeeper at General Confections, Inc.?

A. Yes.

Q. And that company commenced to do business about March 8th of 1946?

A. I don't recall.

4324 Q. Were you the bookkeeper from the time the company began business?

A. No, I was not.

Q. When did you first come with the company?

A. I believe it was in 1944. It was in 1944.

Q. Was that General Confections?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Well, I am only talking about General Confections.

A. Oh, I see. Yes, I was with General Confections at its start.

Q. And at the start, was Miss Feldman there?

A. Yes, she was.

Q. At General Confections?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, maybe I misunderstand. I better go back to the beginning. Had you originally worked for the proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products?

A. That is right.

Q. And at that time, was Miss Feldman there?

A. At the time I was there—she came in shortly after I did.

Q. And after she came in, did she run the office?

A. That is correct.

4325 Q. And did you work under her?

A. That is right.

Q. And you stayed all during the proprietorship?

A. You mean the partnership?

Q. No. The proprietorship.

A. Yes.

Q. Down to the time of the partnership with Giglio and others?

A. I was through that.

Q. And you also worked through the partnership?

A. That is right.

Q. Until General Confections, Inc. was formed and started business?

A. Yes.

Q. Giglio had no connection with General Confections, did he?

A. I don't know anything about Mr. Giglio.

Q. Well, he wasn't around at General Confections, I mean?

A. Are you talking about the firm in the Bronx?

By the Court: No one contends he was, so why go into that?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. After you left the partnership, did Miss Feld-
4326 man stay on or did she come with you?

A. No. Miss Feldman stayed at the Rector Street address and I went with Mr. Lubben.

Q. And how long did Miss Feldman stay away?

A. I don't recall exactly but it must have been about four to six months, something on that order.

Q. And then she came over?

A. That is right.

Q. During the time she was away, were you the bookkeeper?

A. Yes.

Q. Who had responsibility for the books?

A. Well, when I went up to the Bronx, it was—there was quite a good deal of work and I couldn't handle the books, really, at that time.

Q. Were there some girls helping with the books?

A. There was one girl. There was a typist and she did a little bookkeeping but the accountants came in at that time, I believe, to do the books.

Q. Were the accountants Bercu and his associates?

A. I don't think so. I think they were Sproull-Scholz.

Q. Were the books kept up during that time, to 4327 your knowledge?

A. The books were very far behind at that point.

Q. Did they continue until Miss Feldman got back?

A. That is right. I think beyond that point, as well.

Q. During the time that you were there and before Miss Feldman got back, did you have anything to do with the keeping of any kind of a record on overages?

A. Yes.
Q. What record did you keep?
A. I kept a book and recorded each transaction. Exactly what company are you referring to when you say overages?
Q. General Confections.
A. When you say overages, for which concern?
Q. Well, suppose you tell me.
A. Well, not Shotwell, if that is what you mean.
Q. Well, then you had nothing to do with the recording of Shotwell overages?
A. Not that I recall, no.
Q. There were some other suppliers of candy, were there not?
A. Yes, there were.
4328 Q. You may state whether Two Star Confections or Gum Products were such suppliers?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I think that is immaterial.
By the Court: Yes. I think so. I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, perhaps it isn't entirely material at this point to know just who they were, although there is some evidence which I think makes it material.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You did keep a record of overages on some suppliers?
A. That is right.
Q. Will you look at Government's Exhibit No. 73-A and tell me if that memoranda was made by you? Tell me whether or not it was made by you.
A. Well, my handwriting isn't on it, so I wouldn't know.
Q. The hand notations which do appear on it are not yours?
A. No.
Q. Well, will you look at Government's Exhibit 153-A purporting to be a cash authorization slip and tell 4329 me if that is in your handwriting?
A. No, it is not. There is something here that looks like it..
By the Court: I don't hear you, Miss Strum.

By the Witness:

A. There is something here that looks like it might be, but I couldn't be sure.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. To what are you referring?

A. This date right here (Indicating). It might be Miss Feldman's handwriting.

4330 Q. Miss Feldman wrote—

A. It looks like it might be my date here. However, the rest of them look like Miss Feldman's so I assume the date might be hers.

Q. If there is anything on here that is your handwriting, it is the—

A. The date.

Q. The figures after the item date?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 55-A and tell us whether you did or did not type that instrument.

By Mr. Kirby: That is Government's Exhibit 55-A.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I mean Government's Exhibit 55-A.

A. There is nothing in writing here that would identify it as mine.

Q. Is the same true of 55-B?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is there anything about those items, is there anything else about those items which in any way refreshes your recollection so as to enable you to remember anything about them?

4331 A. Well, I recognize the name of the candy, if that is what you mean.

Q. I mean about the preparation of it.

A. No.

Q. 55-C?

A. No.

Q. Is that your handwriting?

A. No.

Q. Government's Exhibit 13.

By the Court: What number?

By Mr. O'Brien: 13.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is any of that in your handwriting?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Government's Exhibit 102. Do you know whether you did or did not type that document?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Is there anything on the document that would refresh your recollection as to whether you did or didn't write it?

A. No.

Q. Government's Exhibit 101, in whose handwriting generally is that document?

A. This is Mr. Lubben's handwriting, but I see 4332 some of my figures on there.

Q. That is what I was about to ask you. I asked you generally it is in his handwriting?

A. That is right.

Q. In the lower right hand corner there are figures 2, 4, 5, and a total?

A. That is correct.

Q. Which is in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us the occasion or circumstances for your putting that writing on this exhibit?

A. I don't remember the exact instrument, no.

Q. Do you remember anything about the circumstances as to the paper coming to you for that purpose or anything else?

A. I do not.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Are you through?

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a moment. That's all.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you have the exhibits? You put them back. Thank you, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Miss Strum, you were shown Exhibit No. 13 and you said it was not in your handwriting. Do you 4333 recognize whose handwriting that is?

A. Well, part of it is Mr. Lubben's.

Q. Is it all in Mr. Lubben's handwriting?

A. No, it isn't.

Q. What part isn't?

A. I believe this is not (indicating).

Q. The four entries on the top you think are not in his handwriting, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Exhibit 101 I think you already identified. The majority of those are in Mr. Lubben's handwriting and these figures alongside are yours?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know what those figures represent?

A. Looking at the statement I can see it is an extension of the figures there.

Q. You just did the multiplication?

A. That is right.

Q. I notice on the top it has the multiplication for all amounts by ten cents a pound. It is fairly simple matter to put over a decimal and get the right amount on the extension?

A. That is right.

Q. On the bottom it has the extensions at $2.25
4334 a. dozen. Do you recall, does that refresh your recollection as to why it was given to you for the extension to be made?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question.

By the Court: If she knows she may state.

By the Witness:

A. No, I do not recall.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know if Mr. Lubben was a very good mathematician?

A. I don't think--he may have been a good mathematician but I think he preferred not to add too much.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 112. Do you recall whether you typed that?

A. I don't know whether I typed it but there are two Julys here that are in my handwriting.

Q. Most of it is his writing except there are two places where the word "July" is written in in place of an actual date?

A. That is correct.

Q. And those are written in your handwriting?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall whether you would have written 4335 those in at the time the exhibit was originally prepared?

A. Would I have what? I am sorry.

Q. Would you have written those in at the time the exhibit was originally prepared?

A. Probably.
Q. Or was it written in at a later date?
A. I don't recall.
Q So far as you know, it was written in—
By Mr. O'Brien: I object. The witness said she didn't recall.
By the Court: Well, he hasn't completed his question. I don't know what the purport of it would be.
By Mr. Lockley: The purport of it was to ask if she wrote in the figures on or about the time of July, 1946, as shown by this document.
By the Court: She may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I wouldn't remember, but probably at the time the statement was made.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You were shown a number of other documents
4336 that you had no recollection about.
A. No.
Q. And your inability to help, Miss Strum, is merely that you don't remember, is that it? It isn't that you deny that those documents were ever prepared by you?
A. I can't deny it. My handwriting is on them. I don't recall them.
By Mr. Lockley: That's all. Thank you.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. You are talking about only those that you identified.
A. Those that I identified, that is right.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. How about the remainder of them, then, Miss Strum? How about Exhibits No. 73-A and No. 55-A and B and C?
A. Even those that have my handwriting, I am not sure I prepared them. I know I wrote exactly what is written in my handwriting and that is all.
Q. Did you also do typing for the company?
A. I did very little typing.
4337 Q. You didn't do very much typing?
A. No, I didn't.

Q. All right. Thank you, Miss Strum.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. Thank you very much.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, excuse me just a moment. I will proceed in a moment.

Mr. Lockley, is Mr. Schwartz available?

By Mr. Lockley: He is up on the fourth floor.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have more of his papers?

By Mr. Lockley: I have some.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to have Mr. Schwartz who is here from Washington, Judge. He has certain documents which I would like to refer to before I go on with the other witnesses. I told him that we would have him on call so we do have no interruption or delay.

By the Court: I am not sure—who are we waiting for? Who is he?

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Schwartz, Judge. This witness, I understand, is upstairs, and Mr. Twohig has gone
4338 to get him. He is a witness who is responding from Washington with some documents.

4339 By a Juror: Your Honor, what was your ruling on the objection of the defense—I mean the objection of the prosecution to Mr. Stone's testimony?

By the Court: I overruled the objection.

By the Juror: Thank you.

RICHARD C. SCHWARTZ, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry for the delay, your Honor. If it weren't that we skipped one witness I should have notified them about Mr. Schwartz.

By the Witness: I have been standing by upstairs. I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Schwartz?

A. Richard C. Schwartz.

Q. And where do you live?

A. I live in Silver Springs, Maryland.

4340 By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Schwartz.

By the Witness: I live in Silver Springs, Maryland.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And you are connected with the Treasury Department?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And in what capacity?

A. I am in the Enforcement Division of Chief Counsel's office, Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Q. And you appear here in response to a subpoena which I had served?

A. I did.

Q. Was the subpoena served upon you personally and you are here—there is a subpoena served upon you perally, is there not?

A. Yes, sir, there is one served on me personally.

Q. And also you are here in response to a subpoena served upon Mr. Humphrey?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. The Secretary of the Treasury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I have agreed with you and counsel for the 4341 government that you might appear instead of Mr. Humphrey?

A. I am so advised, sir.

Q. Do you have the subpoenas here?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. May I see the one to the Secretary? Don't pull them out. I will confine my attention to that.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

A. There are two subpoenas in the file.

Q. That's right. Have you brought with you the items mentioned in No. 2 of the subpoena, namely, all correspondence, memoranda, telegrams, et cetera, relating to the subject-matter of disclosure? Can you identify what I am talking about here?

A. I have brought with me all of the Treasury Department records in Washington called for by the subpoena. But I have no records from the Treasury in Washington, and we found none, respecting a disclosure in this particular case.

4342 Q. Let me ask, Mr. Schwartz, would you have custody in Washington, at the Treasury Department, of all papers relating to the income tax matters of this company, including any papers on disclosure?

A. Only in so far as such papers might relate to events which transpired in Washington before officials of the department in Washington, as to which there may have been a record prepared.

Q. I see. And to the extent that such events transpired in Chicago, at any of the agencies here, they would not be included within your record; is that my understanding?

A. They would not be included within the records kept in Washington. However, any documents bearing on the matter which were kept here in Chicago, I believe were gathered together by a special agent here in the Chicago area.

Q. Have those been furnished to you for response to subpoena?

A. This morning there was a package handed to me of documents which were gathered together here in the Chicago area from the offices of the Internal Revenue here.

Q. And those you have separately?

4343 A. Yes, sir; they are in a separate folder.

Q. Have you brought with you the press releases mentioned in section three of the same subpoena?

A. I have, sir.

Q. And are those accompanied by any documents or memoranda pertaining to the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or either of them, of the publication of those press releases?

A. They are, to the extent that a diligent search by a special agent in Washington located any papers bearing on the press releases.

Q. Going back to the files, or folders, whatever they may be, that were handed you by the Chicago officers for response to the subpoena, are there any papers amongst those which you object to producing?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I don't know if this witness is familiar with matters contained in that folder. He said they were handed to him very recently.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know.

By the Court: If we are going to take a great 4344 deal of time finding out what he has produced, couldn't you do that at some time other than the court hours? I thought it might expedite matters, that is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would be glad to attempt that, Judge. I don't see why it should take much time, though.

By the Court: All right. It seems to be rather ponderous right now.

By Mr. O'Brien: I can make it a lot snappier. I am just trying to recognize the man's right. He is here from the Secretary of the Treasury, a cabinet officer, and I can't ask him out of hand to produce—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Suppose you produce the press releases, Mr. Schwartz.

A. I have here the press release, as twenty-nine thirty, called for in your subpoena, which was issued on January 10, 1952.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object as to the materiality of any press release which may be—

By the Court: It isn't before me. I am in no posi-4345 tion to rule on it until an offer is made.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is that the only one that is available of those called for?

A. I produce a press release dated May 25, 1947, called for by your subpoenas.

Q. Are there any further ones, Mr. Schwartz?

A. In addition I produce press release of October 5, 1945, called for by your subpoena.

Those, sir, are the three press releases in your subpoena.

Q. And the mimeographs.

A., I produce mimeograph—a certified copy of a mimeograph dated September 8, 1919, called for in your subpoena.

Q. And the one from 1934?

A. I also produce a certified copy of the 1934 mimeograph called for by your subpoena.

Q. Yes, sir. And are there authorizations pertaining to those, or do you still have one, Mr. Schwartz?

A. Also in your subpoena, in that particular paragraph, you called for a copy of a speech by a former 4346 chief counsel—

Q. Yes, sir.

A. —Mr. Wenchel. I produce a mimeograph copy of that speech.

4347 Q. I think that completes the list of that portion of the subpoena, except for any collateral authorization that there may be. Are there any such in existence?

A. I have a photostatic copy of what purports to be a notice to the field offices of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that Mr. Wenchel would give this speech last referred to.

Q. Anything further in the way of authorization or direction?

A. There is nothing further in the way of authorization or direction.

Q. There are just the two subpoenas. The matters called for in the second subpoena are compilations and summaries of which I was since advised in the proceeding that there are none and consequently do not call for any response to the subpoena. I am speaking of the second now, Mr. Schwartz, and going back to the first.

Now, will you produce the items mentioned in the first section of the subpoena—which now becomes the last item that I am going to talk about, your Honor,—that is No. 1 in the subpoena. I think it is No. 1. No, it is No. 2.

4348 A. No. 2 of the subpoena relates to any documents connected with the disclosure, or alleged disclosure, in this case. Those are the documents which were handed to me, which have been gathered together here in the Chicago area. They were handed to me as I came into the court room.

4349 Q. Well, you do not know what is in there?

A. I do not know what is in these envelopes.

Mr. O'Brien: I wonder, your Honor, if we might not during the recess run through those with Mr. Lockley and Mr. Schwartz.

By the Court: Supposing we take our recess now and see if you can make some progress.

We will recess for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing until the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will be in recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

By the Marshal: Will the party who lost a $25.00 Treasury bill, and recognizes the name on it, let me know.

By the Court: The Marshal found a Treasury bill on the floor and he asked me for permission to make an announcement. I gather you have all heard it. If any of you lost such a document you can get in touch with him.

4350 By Mr. C'Brien: Judge, on the basis of finding a Treasury bill Mr. Schwartz should return oftener?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Have you, during the recess, segregated the documents mentioned in Section 2 of the first subpoena, Mr. Schwartz?

A. We have, sir. And I have in my hand now those documents which relate to the subject-matter called for in Section 2 of the subpoena.

Q. Would you produce those, please?

A. The first document is an interoffice memorandum under date of October 31, 1945, together with an assignment sheet, route slip, dated November 2, 1945, in the matter of Hankermyer, Roy, and David G. Lubben.

4351 By Mr. Lockley: Might I suggest, Mr. Schwartz, that there are some notations which are not a part of the original files and which should be detached at such times as they are turned over to Mr. O'Brien.

By the Witness: I neglected to say, on that last, it was a photostatic copy and not the original.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you like that notation?

(Document handed to the witness.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 92 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 92 for identification.)

By the Court: Why don't you have those marked, those you want to have introduced, and introduce them, and I will rule on them. I don't see any purpose in having—

By Mr. O'Brien: Just give me the documents and I will ask the Reporter to mark them for identification, 93 and upwards, detaching the slips.

4352 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You want those slips?

A. Yes, if I may have back the slips on the top of each document.

By Mr. O'Brien: In fact, if it may be agreed, the Reporter can mark these afterwards, Judge. We can take them from 93 up, this group.

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then the group which the witness first produced, before the recess, go right on with the numbers, as to those, for identification only.

And I think very shortly I can excuse the witness.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I will ask Mr. Schwartz if there are any other papers which you have brought in response to the subpoena?

A. Yes, sir; I have brought with me all of the files we could locate in Washington which cover the office of the Chief Counsel in Washington, and the Intelligence Division in Washington; and those files consist of the confidential reports of the agents and interdepart-4353 mental correspondence, and copies of such documents that came into headquarters over the years involved.

By Mr. Lockley: Which papers do you mean, Mr. Schwartz?

By the Witness: Since the investigation was initiated. When the agent makes the final report he transmits a copy to Washington. And a copy of that report then is in the headquarters final—the final report.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And do you have that final report here?

A. I have the copies of the final reports of the agents.

Q. May I see that?

A. Those are the confidential files of the Treasury Department, your Honor, and I would not wish to submit those to counsel.

Q. In that connection, Mr. Schwartz, you are not declining to respond on the basis that you are a subordinate, because we have an agreement that such objection would not be made, that you might produce anything which Mr. Humphrey, if he were here, would be willing or 4354 ordered to produce, is that not true?

A. That is correct, sir. I have them here today.

Q. So, speaking for him, you regard the reports which you have mentioned as being confidential or privileged in some sense, is that it?

A. That's correct, in that each one of these reports, as well as facts, they may contain hearsay, the identification of informers, and they have conclusions of subordinate officials.

Q. And would you be willing to produce them exclusive of the names of the informants?

A. No, sir, I would not be willing to produce them exclusive of names of informants.

4355 Q. Let me ask another question. Would you be willing to produce them so that they might be marked for identification and be made available to the Court so that the Court could determine whether they are or are not privileged?

A. Yes, sir; I would be willing to present the matter to the Court.

Q. And willing to abide by such decision of the Court, if the Court should conclude that they are not privileged, and might be used, if otherwise material and relevant?

Do you understand me, Mr. Schwartz?

A. I am not sure that I understand the full implication of your question. I am sorry, sir.

Q. If they were so submitted to the Court, and if the Court determines that they are not privileged, are you willing to abide by that?

A. I am willing to abide by any ruling that the Court may make on the admissibility or the relevancy of these reports.

Q. And that includes the point of privilege?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, would you then produce the documents to be marked for identification and to be—

4356 By the Court: Well, it may be that even marking them for identification might disclose confidential material. And I don't know that that is necessary until the Court has seen the documents and determined which ones, if any, should be admitted in evidence. Whether or not the remaining documents should be impounded, I haven't a very clear idea about it, but we can work it out.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think so.

By the Court: I wouldn't think it was necessary to mark all the documents, because in the very marking, you are exhibiting—or you may give it to the Reporters—confidential information.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have no desire to do that, and abide by the Court's suggestion.

By the Court: Can't we leave it that way and you mark the exhibits that Mr. Schwartz has produced and then you and Mr. Lockley can take up with me later the manner in which we are going to handle the alleged confidential information.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. So that the documents
4357 themselves may be left with Mr. Lockley.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: And we need not detain the witness. Now, I do not know, Judge, which, if any, of these documents I might wish to offer in evidence, speaking of those already identified.

By the Court: Why don't you look them over and decide which ones you want to offer before they are marked. Maybe there are some you don't even want to have marked.

By Mr. O'Brien: They are quite numerous. I will look them over. But my point is that I don't think I need do it while the witness is here.

By the Court: No. There is going to be no objection to the foundation, if any of these documents are admissible?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor, I will make no objection to that. I will make objection as to their materiality.

By the Court: Yes, I understand that.

4358 By Mr. O'Brien: In that event, I am through with the witness, on those understandings.

By Mr. Lockley: I should also reserve an objection, your Honor, to such portions of the press releases, speeches, and mimeographs which have just been identified. I would like to reserve an objection to any of the interdepartmental memorandums and work product which lead up to the final end result.

You will find in the files which Mr. Schwartz has produced memorandums and speeches which were eventually disclosed to the public, but here will also be in there a great many rough drafts, notes and interoffice memorandums of various sorts, which are in no way relevant to this issue. They are only the work product of subordinate officials, and were in some cases not accepted by the officials in authority at the time the eventual memorandum or speech was produced.

And I think as to those I would object, to anything 4359 but the eventful work product, the eventual result.

By Mr. O'Brien: Those I have not yet seen. They have not been handed to me. And, of course, I haven't even had them identified, nor have I offered them.

By the Court: I take it you haven't any questions of this witness, Mr. Lockley?

4360 By Mr. Lockley: I would like to clear one thing.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Schwartz, do you have authority to waive the privilege of the sovereign of the United States Government to reveal these documents to the Court?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the form of that question, if the Court please. If the Court properly understands it—

By the Court: I am not sure that what regulations there may be in the Treasury Department. The various departments as I recollect it, have this regulation.

By Mr. Lockley: I understand, your Honor, that Mr. Schwartz is here in lieu of the appearance of the Secretary of the Treasury.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: And that he has the same authority that would clothe the Secretary of the Treasury under these circumstances.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. Lockley: And I am inquiring now as to whether under those circumstances he has such authority—

4361 By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: —as may waive whatever privilege the sovereign—whatever privilege may exist in the sovereign as to these papers and memoranda.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know that I understand the question, Judge. Do you mean that Mr. Schwartz has authority to waive the privilege, if there be one?

By Mr. Lockley: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: You are asking him whether he does have such power?

By Mr. Lockley: I am asking him where it lay, for the record.

By the Witness:

A. My authority is to submit any paper or document which in the eyes of the Court has relevancy to the issues in this case but not to submit confidential reports which might otherwise in the eyes of the Court be found not relevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I certainly would agree with that.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That's all.

4362 By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: With Mr. O'Brien's permission, your Honor, I will take those files back up to the United States Attorney's office for safekeeping.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I suppose, Mr. Lockley, there is some way to get the report or copy of the report pulled and made available to the Judge so he doesn't have to select it from all those papers?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. That was one of the things I had in mind, to take the burden of that selection off of the Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I have some statute and legal sections which I should like to read into the record. They are relatively short and—

By the Court: On what issue?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I suppose on several of the issues. The first I should like to read is the section of the Price Enforcement Act that sanctions—

By the Court: Can't the Court take judicial notice

4363 of it?

By Mr. O'Brien: The Court will, but the jury will not be advised as a fact.

By the Court: The question is whether or not it is material.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the materiality that I have in mind, so far as that section is concerned is testimony which has been given bearing on the issue of intent.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, if it is material at all, the appropriate way would be through an instruction to the jury at the appropriate time.

By the Court: I would think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I think under our practice, if the Court please—

By the Court: I haven't any particular objection, if you want to make it part of the record. If it is material, it may be proper.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have covered that in an essential respect. I have only two others and they are very short, but let us take this one.

4364 By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am referring to the United States Code, the 1946 edition, entitled 50 and to Section 925 of that title, and I should like to read into the record—that Section 925 has to do with enforcement and I should like to read into the record Sub Section B of 925 reading as follows:

> "Any person who wilfully violates any provision of Section 4 of this Act (Section 94 of this Appendix) and any person who makes any statement or entry false in any material respect, in any document or report required to be kept or filed under Section 2 or Section 202, shall, upon conviction thereof be subject to a fine of no more than $5,000.00 or to imprisonment for not more than two years in the case of a violation of Section 4(c) and for not more than one year in all other cases or to both such fine and imprisonment. Whenever the administrator has reason to believe that any person is liable to punishment > 4365 under this sub section, he may certify the facts to the attorney general who may, in his discretion cause appropriate proceedings to be brought."

The other section is Sub Section E of 925 providing in material part—I am not reading the whole sub section but only the pertinent part, as follows:

> "If any person selling a commodity violates a regulation order or price schedule prescribing a maximum price or maximum prices and the buyer either fails to institute an action under this sub section within thirty days from the date of the occurrence of the violation or is not entitled for any reason to bring the action, the administrator may institute such action on behalf of the United States within such one year period. If such action is instituted by the administrator, the buyer shall thereafter be barred from bringing an action for the same violation or violations. Any action under this sub section by either the buyer or the administrator, as the case may 4366 be, may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction. A judgment in an action for damages under this sub section shall be a bar to the recovery under this sub section of any damages in any other action against the same seller on account of sales made to the same purchaser prior to the institution of the action in which such judgment was rendered."

I would like to read a further short part, a final part of this statute. It is again in sub section E of 925:

"If any person selling a commodity violates a regulation order or price schedule prescribing a maximum price or maximum prices, the person who buys such commodity for use or consumption other than in the course of trade or business may within one year from the date of the occurrence of the violation, except as hereinafter provided, bring an action against the seller on acount of the overcharge. In any action under this sub section the seller shall be liable for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs to 4367 be determined by the court plus whichever of the following sums is greater. First, such amount not more than three times the amount of the overcharge or the overcharges upon which the action is based, as the court in its discretion may determine."

I should like to read into the record a provision from the Internal Revenue Code in effect in the year 1948 showing the state of the law at that time on the matter of the deduction of premium payments as part of the cost of goods.

It is the Internal Revenue Bulletin, the Cumulative Bulletin for 1945 and I am referring to Volume 22, page 57. The heading is "Internal Revenue Code."

"Amounts paid in 'black market' transactions in excess of ceiling prices established by the Office of Price Administration may not be allowed either as a part of the cost of goods sold or as a business expense deduction in computing income subject to Federal income taxation."

The text being "Advice is requested whether a tax-4368 payer may, for Federal income tax purposes, include an amount paid in excess of the ceiling price established by the Office of Price Administration, as a part of the cost of goods sold, or deduct such excess payment as a business expense.

"Section 4(a) of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 provides:

"It shall be unlawful"—I think, your Honor, I can skip the sections of the act to which I have already referred, which I have already read in.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to any further testimony on the ground that there has been no evidence that Shotwell paid any over-ceiling prices yet, so whether they had an offset for them is beside the point. There has to be proof first that they paid them before there is proof that they are entitled to take a deduction.

By the Court: Well, is that regulation material under the present state of the evidence?

4369 By Mr. O'Brien: I don't understand that, Judge.

By the Court: I say, under the present state of the evidence, is that regulation material? It may become material, I recognize, but is it material now?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think so.

By the Court: Well, you may read it and if it isn't connected up, why, I will entertain a motion to strike.

By Mr. O'Brien: After referring to the sections of the Price Enforcement Act which I have read and to certain of the court decisions, the bulletin concludes:

4370 "The foregoing cases support the conclusion that an amount paid to a seller of goods in excess of the legal price for such goods may not properly be recognized for tax purposes. The excess payments are not legitimately to be classified as a part of the cost of goods sold, and public policy decrees that no tax advantage may be derived from such expenditures.

• • •

"Accordingly, it is held that amount paid in 'black market' transactions in excess of ceiling prices established by the Office of Price Administration may not be allowed either as a part of the cost of goods sold or as a business expense deduction in computing income subject to Federal income taxation."

Now, your Honor, I should like to bring in and read the contrary determination in 1952.

By the Court: No, I don't think that that should be a part of the record. That is a matter for the Court to consider.

4371 By Mr. O'Brien: In order to clearly express it—

By the Court: No. It isn't part of the record. That is for the Court to determine. It is a question of law.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, there is also a question of fact, I respectfully submit.

By the Court: But not in this instance.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think there is.

By the Court: I am sorry. I have to disagree.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir. But I have got it here anyhow and I am only trying to remind myself that I want to bring it in.

I have only one other matter here and it has to do with the publicity on tax returns, that is, the publicizing of tax returns and I should like to read the Section 26 of the Federal Revenue Code, Chapter I, Part 4, 58, Sub part 16, which provides that such tax returns while unavailable to the public are available to any other agency of the government.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I fail to see the slightest materiality.

4372 By the Court: Yes. I don't comprehend the materiality of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, your Honor, if you think that it is a matter which can be more correctly presented by instruction, assuming that I am correct in the law—

By the Court: I am sure I can make it clearer, if it is appropriate matter to be placed in the instruction, than you can by reading it into the record.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am only reading it in.

By the Court: I would be glad to hear you on it if it is on a material matter and maybe the Court will put it in an instruction. I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: I do not myself regard it as the proper subject-matter of an instruction. I regard it as a matter of fact to be proved on the issue which I mentioned to you.

By the Court: Which issue, intent?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, there has been no showing that these taxpayers had any intent one way or the other.

4373 By the Court: Let us pass it for a moment. I would be glad to hear you on it and I won't foreclose a reoffer of it, but at this time I don't understand the materiality. I won't foreclose you on it, however.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, Judge. Maybe I can get it more compact.

By the Court: Maybe you can.

By Mr. OBrien: Then, may I suggest this, Judge: I would like to adjourn—I would like to recommend that we adjourn at this time. I have excused three witnesses whom I did not think it worthwhile to put on in view of some conversation which we had and I would like to spend the time in getting ready for the witnesses tomorrow in the hope that we can, by doing that, reach a conclusion sooner than I thought possible before.

By the Court: Well, are we progressing?

By Mr. O'Brien: We are progressing.

By the Court: Is it fair to ask you when you think you may conclude with your testimony?

4374 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, tomorrow is Friday. I would say that we would close with our testimony not later than Tuesday and I hope before that.

By Mr. McConnell: I think I can make a more optimistic estimate. I don't see why we can't get this case closed if not tomorrow the first thing Monday morning. I wasn't in on this discussion this morning as to the possible adjournment.

By the Court: I haven't any objection. If you think it will expedite matters by adjourning now, we may do so. We will adjourn until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken until Friday, October 9, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

Before Nordbye, J. and J.

Chicago, Illinois,
Friday, October 9, 1953,
10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court is now in session.

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al., case on 4376 trial.

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien, may I see you and may I see Mr. Lockley for a moment.

(Whereupon a discussion was had between Court and counsel beyond the hearing of the jury and the reporter.)

By the Court: All right, you may proceed.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

BYRON A. CAIN, one of the defendants herein, called as a witness herein on his own behalf, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. You are Byron A. Cain?
A. I am Byron A. Cain.
Q. One of the defendants in this case?
A. I am.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Cain?

A. At 1155 Mohawk Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Q. And how long have you resided there?

4377 A. About ten years.

Q. With your family?

A. With my family.

Q. And that is, with Mrs. Cain and your children?

A. Mrs. Cain and my four children.

Q. Who are your children?

A. I have a daughter, Mary, nine years old; a daughter, Patricia, eleven; a son, Jim, sixteen, and a son, Jack, twenty-two years of age.

Q. Are they in school?

A. Mary and Pat are in the Faith, Hope and Charity School. Jim is in New Trier High School, his senior year, and my son, Jack, is married and is living in Chicago.

Q. How long have you lived in Chicago or this area?

A. Since January 1, 1927.

4378 Q. Where were you born?

A. I was born in Union City, Indiana, and moved from Union City to Indianapolis. Before I moved, I lived in Union City and spent the greater part of my life, before coming to Chicago, in Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I have been in the real estate business since 1920.

Q. And here in Chicago since 1927?

A. In the real estate business in Chicago since 1927.

Q. Did you acquire an interest in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. About when was that and what was the interest?

A. I acquired an interest in the latter part of 1941 or early in 1942. I acquired the sum of 13,000-odd shares of stock in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Out of a total of how many shares outstanding do you recall?

A. Out of 100,000 shares.

4379 Q. Did you then proceed to participate in any way in the affairs of that company?

A. Yes, I did. Yes, we had a serious financial problem at the time, and my primary work was on the reorganization of the company, and putting it back on its financial feet.

Q. Who were your associates at that time?

A. Alfred D. Shotwell was President, Frank Huebner was Vice President and Superintendent—

By Mr. McConnell: Can we have it a little louder, please? We can't hear you back here.

By the Witness:

A. Frank J. Huebner was Vice President and Superintendent. Stanley Graflund was an officer out there at the time. Mr. Harold E. Sullivan, Mr. Shotwell, Mark Law, Frank Huebner, and myself were directors.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Had Mr. Huebner and Mr. Graflund been there before you acquired your stock interest?

A. Yes, they had. They had been there quite some time before.

Q. How about Mr. Law?

4380 A. Mr. Law was a Director at the time I went there.

Q. Mr. Huebner was the operating superintendent of the plant?

A. That is correct.

Q. And their business, as we all know, I think, is the manufacture of candy for sale?

A. That is right. We manufactured candy and marshmallows.

Q. Is there a difference in relationship, are marshmallows regarded as candy?

A. Well, it differs in that we sell through the grocery store, or did in those days, and that was about the major item that sold in the grocery store.

Q. How much time did you devote to the business?

A. Well, in the early days of the refinancing, I devoted whatever time was necessary to get that job done. My program, my routine program was to get to the factory around three in the afternoon and work until our job was done, whatever time it was done.

Q. Well, will you tell briefly the general nature 4381 of your duties as Director, from day to day?

A. Well, my duties were to consult with all of the heads of the departments, and to just kind of coordinate the organization so that it would function smoothly. I discussed problems, sales problems with the sales manager, and factory problems with Mr. Huebner—any problems that might come up in the auditing department with Mr.

Graflund, Mr. Roeser, Miss Morrill, whoever happened to be in that particular department at that time.

4382 Q. Do you know David G. Lubben?

A. I do.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. I think it was in the latter part of 1944.

Q. And will you tell where, under what circumstances?

A. Well, he was brought into my office by Mr. Huebner and John Bond, who was the west coast broker for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and I met him. Mr. Bond said that he could—he was a pretty capable fellow.

Q. Let's see. You had some discussion at that time and four were present, you, Huebner, Bond and Lubben?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what was talked about or what was said then?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben asked if he could have the New York territory, which at that time was not covered by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. We did not have a broker in the area. And as an inducement for our giving him that territory, he said that he could get us some. critical materials that we needed to manufacture mer-

4383 chandise. And I took Mr. Huebner and Mr. Lubben over to Mr. Hogan and suggested to Hogan that he be put on as our New York representative, at least, give him a try.

Q. Is that your full recollection of the conversation?

A. I turned him over to Hogan with instructions that he be put on. That ended it, so far as I was concerned.

Q. Now, what, if anything, was said about candy?

A. Well, we gave him a—

Q. What was said?

A. We made him our New York broker, and in so doing we set up a quantity of candy that could be shipped in to that New York market, and a certain portion of that candy could be directed by him, as our broker, to his company, which at that time, I believe, was the Eatsum Food Products Company. He, of course, received a commission on any merchandise that he sold to customers other than himself. And he did have quite a good many customers other than the Eatsum Food Products Company. But he got a commission on all business shipped into that territory.

4384 Q. Was there commission paid on the goods shipped to Eatsum?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. As well as those shipped to the customers in the territory?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And was that arrangement carried out, was it put in effect?

A. It was.

Q. When did you next have a business conversation with Mr. Lubben?

A. I would think in the spring—

By the Court: Have you brought out when this first meeting was?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think so.

By the Witness:

A. In the late part of 1944 I think it was.

By the Court: All right.

By the Witness:

A. The next meeting that had anything to do with our business, Mr. Huebner and I were in New York in either the spring or very early summer of 1945, and either Mr. Lubben told me or Huebner—

By Mr. O'Brien:

4385 Q. Did you meet Mr. Lubben there?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. At that time?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Is that as close as you can place the time, the spring of '45 or the early summer?

A. That's about as close as I can place it.

Q. And you, Huebner and Lubben were present?

A. That's correct.

4386 Q. Now, what occurred or what was said at that time?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben felt that if we would make a trip to Boston, he could get us a couple carloads of chocolate. A carload of chocolate is approximately 50,000 pounds, and we needed it badly. So we naturally made a trip to Boston.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben go with you?

A. Yes, he did. The three of us went. We made a luncheon date with a Mr. Nelson, I believe. It was the United Chocolate Refiners, a subsidiary of the United Cigar Stores, who, in turn, are a subsidiary of Liggets. And we had this luncheon in Boston.

On the train going up to Boston Mr. Lubben said, "Now, if I am successful in getting this chocolate, I want a substantial amount of candy shipped to me, which I, in turn, will ship to the United Cigar Stores or to the Liggett stores."

Q. Was this an additional amount of candy?

A. Oh, yes, an additional amount of candy. It was a large amount. We were a hundred thousand pounds of chocolate—that is, if the deal went through—and it 4387 would naturally be a hundred to two hundred thousand pounds of our merchandise.

Q. Was anything said about overages on that candy?

A. Oh, no, no overages—no mention of overages made on that transaction.

Q. Well, what happened in Boston, then, did you have the luncheon with Mr. Nelson?

A. We had the luncheon with Mr. Nelson.

Q. Was that immediately following your discussion in New York and your arrival in Boston?

A. Yes, it was the same day. I think we came back the same night. I don't believe—but I couldn't be sure—that we stayed overnight.

We had the luncheon. Nelson agreed to ship the chocolate. We agreed to ship Lubben the merchandise we agreed to ship, and Mr. Lubben, in turn, agreed to ship the merchandise to whoever it was he was supposed to ship it to. And that was the end of the deal. It was one of those ring around the rosy things.

Q. Did you get the chocolate?

A. We did.

Q. Two cars?

A. Two cars.

4388 Q. From United Chocolate Refiners?

A. That's correct. The only shipment of chocolate we ever received.

Q. How long after, do you know?

A. I wouldn't know that, Mr. O'Brien. I would imagine within a week or ten days, two weeks.

Q. Well, is it your recollection that it came in due course?

A. It did come in due course.

Q. You haven't consulted your record to see precisely when it arrived?

A. I would have to have somebody consult the records for me. I wouldn't know how to do that.

Q. Were there any overages involved on the chocolate, as far as Shotwell was concerned?

A. No, sir; we paid ceiling price for the merchandise.

4389 Q. And as far as you know, that is all it was, there weren't any averages involved with anybody?

A. That's right.

Q. When was the next transaction in which you had any business discussion with Mr. Lubben?

A. I would say in September or October of 1945.

Q. Where was that?

A. At our office, Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And who was present?

A. Well, I was with—Mr. Huebner, Mr. Lubben and myself were present. And there may have been others, although I can't place them in there at this time.

Q. What occurred at that conversation?

A. Lubben had been advised prior to that conversation by Mr. Huebner that we would be unable to ship the quantities of merchandise we had been shipping to him, because of the acute shortage in our plant of corn syrup. Lubben contacted, Mr. Huebner—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, Mr. Cain, I object to any recitation of hearsay by Mr. Cain.

By the Court: Yes.

4390 By Mr. Lockley: What he had to do with this—

By the Witness: I am trying to bring out the reason for the meeting.

By the Court: Your answer wasn't responsive.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Just tell us what occurred in the conversation.

A. Well, a meeting was arranged in my office and Mr. Lubben said that if we would ship him merchandise that he would pay us a cash overage on the merchandise and show us how to go into this market and cause corn to be delivered to the refiners so that the life blood of our business could continue to flow into it, namely, corn syrup.

Q. What was said about the rates of overages to be paid?

A. It may not have been consummated at that one meeting, there may have been two, but the deal was ultimately consummated whereby we started at a rate of three cents on gum work and five cents on chocolate items that were to be shipped to Eatsum Food Products Company. The money, in turn, was to be turned over to somebody 4391 in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, which, in turn, was to go out for the purchase of raw corn.

Q. Now, did those rates—well, excuse me. Did you tell Mr. Lubben that you would do that?

A. We did.

Q. And did you proceed to do it?

A. We did, we proceeded to ship him merchandise.

Q. How long did those rates continue?

A. About February of 1946.

Q. Was there a change at that time?

A. There was a drastic change in the market in corn syrup.

Q. No, a change in the rate.

A. Yes, there was.

Q. To what?

A. To five and ten cents a pound.

Q. And how long did that rate continue?

A. Until about June of 1946.

Q. And at that time what happened?

A. The rates went to ten cents on non-chocolate items and 18⅔ cents on chocolate items.

Q. What, if any, instructions did you give about the receipt of the overage money?

A. I instructed Mr. Roeser and Mrs. Morrill and—4392 well, I know those two were instructed—a box was to be opened up in our vault and the moneys that came in there from this transaction were to be put into that box and to be paid out at the request of any one of the three people in the place. Mr. Huebner was there all the time, Mr. Shotwell was there all the time, at that time.

Q. And what, if anything, did you tell them about the acquisition of corn?

A. Well, I told them we had to acquire corn to get the corn to the refinery and that they should get that by—4393 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless there is a time and a place for this particular conversation, if it is a conversation.

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness: This is concurrently or shortly after.

By the Court: Now, wait till the question is put.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When was it that these instructions were given, Mr. Cain?

A. I would say the latter part of September or the first of October of 1945, in the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now, did you tell any of those folks specifically who to pay the money to?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of any of the people to whom the money was paid?

A. I never saw the money being paid to anybody. But in my position out there and in my conversation—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. He never saw it being paid.

4394 By the Court: You have answered the question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, let me ask this, in your daily visits to the company, and your attention to the work, did you learn that the corn syrup was being obtained?

A. It was being obtained.

Q. And were there reports to you from time to time from Huebner, Roeser, Mrs. Morrill, as to the paying of the money for the corn?

A. There was—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that his answer would require hearsay.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, there is an exception to the hearsay rule.

By the Court: Yes, I think that is an exception to the hearsay rule.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was his Honor's statement?

(Record read.)

4395 By the Witness: Read the last question to me? Did I answer?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. How long did the corn shortage last?

A. The corn shortage lasted into August or September of 1946.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Cain, what it was that relaxed the situation as to corn at or about that time?

A. Well, yes, I do. The corn, the 1946 corn crop was —and corn almost became a glut on the market—not a glut, but it was a plentiful supply. The minute we knew what the 1946 corn crop was, there was no more shortage, and the OPA had gone off of the item on June 30th, I believe it was.

Q. Speaking of the box, did you at any time know of the down town safe deposit box?

A. Yes. I was advised by Mr. Graflund.

Q. Did you know the box? Did you just know the box?

A. We always had a box at the City National Bank for securities.

Q. In connection with these overage transactions, did you have any report from Mr. Graflund concerning 4396 the deposits of money to that box?

A. He advised me he had taken some twenty-five or twenty-seven thousand dollars down to the downtown box because he felt it was too much money to carry in our safe at the factory.

Q. How long were the boxes maintained for such purpose?

A. From the latter part of September.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien. I believe there were two boxes, and I am not clear as to which one you are referring to.

By Mr. O'Brien: I was referring to both. I think I said boxes.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I am sorry, if your Honor please, but I understand the first box was already in existence, and had been for some time.

By Mr. O'Brien: And I asked him how long were the boxes maintained for that purpose, that is, for the deposit of the overage sums of money. I assume they still had the physical boxes long afterward.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

4397 By the Witness:

A. The boxes were closed out in about—I would say in about July or August of 1945 or 1946, or so.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you have knowledge as to how that was done?

A. Yes, I do. There was a substantial sum of money left in one of the boxes, and I don't know which one, and I was asked what to do with the money, and I said, "Deposit it to our bank account."

4398 Q. Who did you tell that to? Who did you tell to do that?

A. Whoever the comptroller was at the time. I said, "Just deposit it in our bank account, the Merchants National Bank, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company." And that was what was done with the money.

Q. Do you remember how much money that was?

A. Approximately $15,000.00, or some such sum.

Q. Now following that, when was your next discussion with Lubben concerning business matters?

A. I would say in the fall of 1946.

Q. Do you remember where it was?

A. It was in the plant office, I think.

Q. Well, now, do you recall, Mr. Cain, you say you think—will you give us your best recollection?

A. Yes. It was—Mr. Huebner brought him into my office at the plant.

Q. Was it at the plant?

A. It was at the plant and it was in the latter half of 1946.

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. Mr. Huebner was, yes.

4399 Q. Anyone else, I said.

A. I can't recall of anybody else being present.

Q. Now what was said in that conversation?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben and Mr. Huebner came into the office, and he said, "Mr. Cain, I have worked out deals with several of my people"—.

By the Court: Who said this?

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) Mr. Lubben. "Worked out deals with several of my customers—my accounts." One of them was Urban. I know he mentioned him. I think he mentioned two or three at the time whereby they would take preferred stock in the General Confections Company, "In lieu of the money I owe you on overages."

I said, "How much do you owe us?" This was, as I say, in the fall, and the figure was mentioned as being somewhere between forty-eight and fifty thousand dollars, and I said, "Lubben, we don't want your money. We don't need it. The need for the money has long since ceased so we will forgive it. I don't want stock in your General Confections Company."

4400 That just—that ended the transaction. He said, "I am certainly very grateful. Nobody else ever done that for me," and that about ended it.

4401 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were those moneys ever paid?

A. They were not.

Q. What do you know about unbilled shipments?

A. When I returned from California—that goes into about the middle of April of 1946, and Mr. Huebner advised me that in my absence, the corn situation had become so acute that Lubben had suggested to him that in order to get money quick that he would advance the money, that is, prepay the money if we would ship these shipments to him and not bill him, and in that set of circumstances there would be no overage coming to us on the payments.

Frank was so desperate for money that he shipped several unbilled shipments.

Q. As to the money, was the money—did Mr. Huebner say that the money was to be paid in advance or after the shipment?

A. It was to be paid in advance. We needed the money. That was the most critical time of the whole corn shortage.

Q. Was that the first time that you know of the unbilled shipments?

4402 A. That was the first time I knew of it.

Q. Did you have a transaction?

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me, Mr. O'Brien. I am afraid that I didn't get the note as to when this particular transaction occurred.

By Mr. O'Brien: This particular unbilled shipment?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: In April of 1946, I understood him to say.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is that right, Mr. Cain?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you have a transaction which involved a loan at the Sterling Bank?

A. I did. That was in about the—oh, spring or early summer of 1947.

Q. Had you had a talk with Mr. Lubben about it around about that time?

A. Yes. Mr. Lubben was either—well, he needed money.

Q. Well, now, first tell us, Mr. Cain, the formal requirements, where the conversation was, who was present and what was said?

4403 A. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Lubben took—discussed the matter with Mr. Huebner and myself in the offices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company first and said that he needed $75,000.00 and that he needed it desperately and wanted to know if we would make a loan on his home and factory. He had two homes, I think, at that time and the farm, and we had—I had the place appraised, arranged with the New York bank to make him the loan. I took back a mortgage for the $75,000.00 and the loan was to be paid on monthly payments. I don't recall what they were, but so much money every month, and I presume, I would guess now it was to be paid out in three or four years.

Along about December or November, or December of 1947, I was advised by the Sterling—one other condition I made with Lubben at that time was he was to send a financial statement of his business to us at Shotwell every month so we would know where he was going. So, about the fall, late fall or early winter, 1945, I was advised by the Sterling Bank that this note had defaulted. I immediately contacted Lubben and asked him to get his statements in to us so we could see what the situation was, and I didn't get a statement.

4404 Q. What did happen, Mr. Cain? Did you have some further talk with him?

A. Yes. I think after that conversation with him he came to Chicago and said it would be—if we would—

By the Court: When?

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me.

By the Court: When?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When did he come to Chicago?

A. Well, that would place it in mid November or the first part of December.

Q. Of what year?

A. 1947

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And he said if—he just had to have another fifty thousand dollars, just had to have it.

"Well, I said, "Mr. Lubben, I don't believe we would be interested in loaning you another fifty thousand dollars. You have fallen down on the payment of the seventy-five thousand"—

Q. By the way, Mr. Cain, I forgot to ask you; When you arranged for the $75,000.00 loan and when you 4405 talked to Mr. Lubben about it, did you or did you not tell him that at a future time you would lend $50,000.00 in addition?

A. I did not. There was no fifty thousand discussed at that time. Seventy-five thousand was the limit that he needed at the moment.

Q. Well, go on. You said you had a talk with him about fifty thousand dollars here in Chicago.

A. Here in Chicago.

Q. Now, then, go ahead with that.

A. Well, I told him that I would send Mr. Graflund and Mr. Busby to look over his situation. I did that for two reasons: One, I wanted to know what the situation was as to the loan we presently held, the seventy-five thousand. Secondly, I wanted to know what his books reflected as to the over-ceiling payments that had been made to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

So I sent Mr. Busby down there to find out whether the company was good for an additional loan, and Mr. Graflund, I told him to scrutinize the books and find out what it reflected with regard to the over-ceiling payments that had been made to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did Mr. Busby report to you in any way?

4406 A. Mr. Busby reported to me on a Saturday, about the 10th day of January. He called and asked if we could have an appointment on Sunday morning at my house and suggested that I have Mr. Sullivan there at the same time.

That appointment was kept. Mr. Busby was there and he said that in his examination, No. 1, that the General Confections Company at that time was in no condition for anybody to make it any kind of a loan; it was just in desperate financial condition, so we could forget that.

No. 2, that it had come to his attention we had received some over-ceiling payments from the various Lubben companies and that we might have a serious tax problem.

Q. Did he say how that had come to his attention?

A. He said that Mr. Graflund had told him of the—in his examination, while he was examining the books and checking it up, Mr. Graflund had disclosed to him the fact that we had received these over-ceiling payments.

Q. And did Mr. Busby ask you if you had received overages?

4407 A. Yes, he did, and I told him that we had.

Q. What did he say about it?

A. He said we might have a serious tax problem. I said, "I don't see how we could have a serious tax problem. The money was taken in and the money was paid out and we don't owe any taxes."

"Well," he said, "that isn't the way it works. If you take in money, over-ceiling, it is not a deductable." And Mr. Sullivan and I, in unison, said, "Well, look"—

Q. You mean, if you pay out money over-ceiling?

A. If we pay out money over-ceiling that money cannot be deducted for the purpose of income tax. It can't be taken off. I said, "It doesn't seem fair to me, but if that is the rule, what can we do about it? How can we straighten it out?"

He said, "Well, there is this disclosure policy of the Government's."

I said, "What is that? Tell us about it." And he told us about the disclosure policy of the Government, we go in and tell the Government about what had gone on and that we would be assessed a tax and that would be that, and Mr. Sullivan and I told him to go down 4408 and tell whoever he thought should be told about the problem, and to report back to us and find out—especially find out whether this policy is still in effect.

4409 Q. When you so instructed Mr. Busby, did you tell him to name the company?

A. I told him not to name the company at that meeting.

Q. And did you get a report from him?

A. I got a report back from Mr. Busby—

Q. I don't want the details for a minute. Did he report to you?

A. He did.

Q. To whom did he say he had talked?

A. He said he had talked to Ernest Sauber, who was the Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue.

Q. Did you thereafter go with Mr. Busby to see Mr. Sauber?

A. Yes, sir. I think—

Q. When?

A. I think I went with Mr. Busby, or by myself, to see Mr. Sauber, in the latter part of January, but that one I can't be too sure of, but right after the confirmation of the Haberkorn deal, and between that time and the third day of March, when I returned to California. I flew back in and I went in to see Mr. Sauber with Mr. Busby and myself, and to discuss this problem with him.

4410 Q. What did you do with the $50,000 loan to Lubben?

A. We didn't make it.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to Lubben about it?

A. I just told him that we wouldn't make his loan.

Q. Now, where did you next hear anything about this loan of $50,000?

A. Well, the next I heard of it was a phone call and I was in California, and I got a phone call from Mr. Sullivan.

Q. Harold Sullivan?

A. Harold Sullivan. From the—I think he was at the Gotham Hotel in New York, and he said that Lubben and one of his men, strong arm men, is the way he had put it, had been in to see him, and had insisted that this $50,000 loan be made, and that he pulled out a bunch of marked up invoices, and some memoranda things, and that he had told him he would have nothing further to do with him, he wouldn't be blackmailed, and that was that.

And he said, "I am going on back to Chicago". I said, "Harold, keep me advised."

4411 Q. When did you next hear of any business transaction with or through Lubben?

A. I was called by Mr. Sullivan, I would think, about the 10th of February.

Q. What year?

A. 1948, and told that we had bought from Lubben, the Haberkorn Candy Company, and that in the transaction we had sold to Lubben or to—in the transaction, anyway, our mortgage, which was paid down at that time to $67,000, was going into the deal, and an additional amount of cash to make up $101,000, was being paid for the Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. Is it true that thereafter Mr. Davidson came to California and procured from you, as he said, an assignment of the mortgage?

A. Yes, he did. He procured an assignment of the mortgage, and that was the end of Davidson.

Q. And at that time, what, if anything, did you do about the bank loan?

A. I paid the bank loan off. I tried to pay it off with a Shotwell Manufacturing Company check, but because I had personally guaranteed the loan, to begin 4412 with, they asked for a personal check from me, so Shotwell issued this check to me, and I in turn issued my check to the bank.

4413 Q. Then that was in February, March of 1948. When was the assignment, Mr. Cain?

A. It was in February, 1948, about the middle of February.

Q. Following that, when did you next have to do with anything concerning Lubben or his companies?

A. I think the next time I saw Lubben was in the latter part of June of 1948.

Q. Prior to that, had you had any discussion about the so-called overage items with anybody?

A. Yes, we had. We had made our disclosure to the government and it was—

Q. Well, let me direct your attention to a conversation in New York at the candy convention in June of 1948.

A. Well, a Mr. Tobias who had been Mr. Lubben's bookkeeper—one of the many—called me at the Waldorf Hotel where the convention was being held and said he had some information that I would be very much interested in.

I said I would be very happy to see him. I said, "Come on up to my room", and he did. He told me he had been in the employ of Lubben, working out 4414 there on the books, and that Lubben was laying off everything he could, possibly could think of, on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

I said, "Can you get any evidence of it so we can—so we know what is going on?"

And he said, "Yes, I think I can."

He said, "It is going to take some work."

I said, "I don't care. Go ahead. I will see that you are paid for it."

Q. When did you next see Lubben?

A. The next time I saw Lubben was in June, the latter part of June of 1948.

Q. By the way, in or around that time, had you procured any data from Sproull-Scholz, the accountants, as to what Lubben's records showed?

A. Yes, we had. Back in the—we met Ed Sproull, I think, in the early part of—well, about the middle of 1947, early 1948. I think it was in the early part of 1948. And we discussed this.

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me, sir. May I have a foundation as to who "we" is?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is right, yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Cain, you must say precisely whom it was 4415 and not just "we".

A. Well, I mentioned that Mr. Huebner, Mr. Sullivan and myself met Ed Sproull in 1948.

Q. All right. Now, my question has to do with the time of the procurement from Sproull of papers showing the Lubben figures.

A. We got those figures from Sproull—

Q. Mr. Cain, take your hand down because that interferes with your voice.

A. I am sorry.

We received those figures from Sproull in the first half of the year.

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me, sir. May I have a foundation as to what he is talking about? He said figures.

By Mr. O'Brien: I thought I described it sufficiently.

By the Witness: Well, the books and records of the Eatsum—

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think so. You said in 1948 you had met with Sproull. Now, he is talking about the figures.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read my question, 4416 please. Mr. Lockley, either you are mistaken or I am. I thought I incorporated that in the question. Read the question.

By the Court: Are you asking for conversation with Sproull or are you asking for some documents he received?

By Mr. O'Brien: I just wanted to know if it is a fact he received some figures. I am not interested in proving them now. It is a circumstance I will take up later.

By the Witness: We asked Sproull to assemble some data from his work sheets and get it to us because we were in the process then of trying to assemble all of the figures that we could to put an absolute ceiling—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I just want to know, Mr. Cain, if you got some figures.

A. We did get some figures.

Q. All right. Now, when was it then that you next met Lubben?

A. In the latter part of June of 1948.

Q. Where was it?

4417 A. I met him—

Q. Well, let me put it this way. Will you tell us the circumstances. Where were you and how did you happen to meet him?

A. Well, I was at the Gotham Hotel in New York and I had called Pat Grace and asked him to have dinner with me. Pat is a bachelor and he likes to fill in the time, anyway, so he came down and we had dinner and went up to my room in the Gotham and a phone call came in from Lubben and he asked if he could see me and I said yes. I said, "Yes, Dave, come on over."

He said, "Well, what about meeting me half way?"

I said, "Where would half way be?"

He said, "There is a place on the other side of the George Washington Bridge called the Riviera."

I said, "Fine. I will be over." And I asked Pat to go with me and the two of us went to the Riviera and took a table and later on Lubben and Sam Davidson came in.

4418 Q. Had you met Davidson before?

A. I think the first time I ever met Davidson was in connection with the mortgage, which would be before.

Q. Now did they join you at your table?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And was there a conversation?

A. Yes, there was a conversation.

Q. With four people present?

A. Yes, there was four of us, Pat Grace, Lubben, Davidson, and myself.

Q. What was said?

A. Well, we carried on a general conversation for a while, and then I said, "Dave, what is on your mind? Let us get down to brass tacks."

He said, "Well, I can have an opportunity of getting a fra[illegible]se for a soft drink in one of the Central or South American countries." I don't recall what it was.

"And I am going to need some money." And he said, "I would like for you to come up with it."

"Well," I said, "I don't know, Mr. Lubben, but," I said, "it isn't concrete now, is it?

4419 He said, "No."

I said, "Whenever it is concrete, why don't you do this: You call Mr. Grace and if you have something that is concrete and worthy of consideration, I will think about it at that time."

Q. Did you discuss tax matters at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified that at that meeting you said that a couple of agents had come into your office and that Graflund like a fool gave them papers. Did you say that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Is it a fact that there had been a visit to your office by an agent?

A. Yes. While I was in New York, Mr. Krane came into our office on a collateral investigation of one of Lubben's companies. Mr. Graflund called me—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to what Mr. Krane was doing. I am sure Mr. Cain doesn't know what Mr. Krane's job was in coming to the office.

4420 By the Court: That portion may be stricken, with reference to Mr. Krane. That portion of his answer with reference to Mr. Krane may be stricken.

4421 By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, if there is any doubt in your mind as to why he was there, I can offer in evidence the telephone call from New York which brought him there, and his report on what he was there for. I don't see why you should raise that point.

By Mr. Lockley: I think Mr. Krane and the Government are in a better position to know why Mr. Krane was there, rather than Mr. Cain.

By the Witness: Mr. Krane told me.

By the Court: There isn't any question before you.

By Mr. O'Brien: We will put in the documents when we get to it. We will put in the writing, why he was there.

By the Court: Proceed with your examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did Mr. Graflund call you about that while you were in New York?

A. Yes.

4422 Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him to give them anything they wanted.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified that you said that you knew Hannegan and that Hannegan had referred you to Grace. Did you know Hannegan at the time of that meeting?

A. Yes, I have known Hannegan for quite some time.

Q. Robert Hannegan had been Chairman of the Democratic Committee?

A. That's right.

Q. And Postmaster General?

A. That's right.

Q. Did Mr. Hannegan refer you to Mr. Grace?

A. No, sir; I knew Mr. Hannegan myself. Nobody had to refer me to him.

Q. Excuse me. Did you ever talk to Mr. Hannegan or to anybody else in politics about this case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you or Mr. Sullivan ever try to get this matter disposed of through a political connection?

A. No, sir.

4423 Q. Outside of the connection which you had in Washington with Mr. Schoeneman, which you testified to before, did you have any conversation about the settlement or disposition of this case with anyone except the agents right here in Chicago?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who did introduce you to Mr. Grace?

A. Tom O'Neil, a mutual friend of Mr. Grace and myself, Mr. Sullivan. And at that meeting Mitchell McKoewn's name was mentioned. And the McKoewns and Graces are very close friends from Brooklyn. McKoewn lived in Chicago, and has for fifteen years. And McKoewn and myself were very close friends. So it was just one of those things.

Q. Did you or Shotwell have any occasion to hire Mr. Grace until September of 1948?

A. No, sir; we employed Mr. Grace in September of 1948.

Q. Now, will you tell the jury why?

A. Well, we had been advised that the New York office—we had been attempting to settle this tax matter of ours. I had been importuning the Revenue Office to get out there and get the thing settled, and let us pay our tax.

4424 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to what he had been attempting to do, and what he had been advised, unless we can get down to specific circumstances and conversations. This is so general, that I have no idea what he is talking about.

By the Witness: I will take it from there, Mr. Lockley.

By the Witness:

A. I called Mr. Sauber at least—

4425 By Mr. Lockley: Now, when was this?

By the Witness: I will enumerate the times.

By the Court: Well, place the time.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Give us the period of time over which you had been calling him?

A. I saw Mr. Sauber on about the 1st of March—on or about. I returned from California at about the middle of April. I called Mr. Sauber when I returned from California and asked him why they hadn't had an agent out there to get this tax matter settled that we discussed.

He said that he would check into it and see that somebody—and take it up with Wright's office and see what happened. It had been reported to Mr. Wright's office.

I again called Mr. Sauber in, I would say, the middle of May of 1948 and asked if anybody was going to get on that case. He told me not to be disturbed about it, that there were a lot of them, so just to wait, time would take care of it.

After this Tobias meeting in New York I came back and personally saw Mr. Sauber and asked if he 4426 wouldn't see that something was done about this case and he said he would take care of it.

Q. And did they, by July, get an agent out?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. To check the books?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was that agent, do you remember?

A. I only met him once or twice. Lima, I think.

Q. Lima. By the way, in this meeting at the Riviera—I am mistaken. Let's go on.

By September of 1948 had you procured any bill or statement from the agents or the Revenue?

A. Not a bill. I interceded for them and said, "Let's get—"

Q. I just want to know if you had received—

A. O. K. We had not received a bill.

Q. What then was the occasion of retaining Grace in September of 1948?

A. Well, in the course of our many conversations I knew that Mr. Grace was friendly with somebody in the Department of Internal Revenue in New York and we had been advised that because of some complication between some of Giglio's partners—4427 By Mr. Lockley: I object to the general nature of this testimony. He is talking about the course of many conversations, and "we had been advised." I don't know what conversations he is talking about nor who he is talking about.

By the Court: I think he should state what he hired Grace to do.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By the Witness:

A. I hired Grace to find out if the New York office was holding up any settlement of the Shotwell case.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did he report to you?

A. He reported to me that they were not, and that we should proceed—that as long as we had made our disclosure, to proceed in the Chicago office as we had been doing.

Q. At the time of the Riviera meeting had Grace been retained to act as counsel for you or the company?

A. He had been retained to act as counsel for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in New York.

4428 Q. At the time of the Riviera meeting?

A. No, no. No, this was in September. I am sorry.

Q. I am asking about that time.

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did you tell Lubben at the Riviera meeting to get in touch with Cramer?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you, in August of 1948, receive a call from Mr. Lubben—from Mr. Cramer's office, I am speaking about?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you tell the jury what was said by Lubben in that phone conversation and what was said by you?

A. Mr. Lubben called and said, "Mr. Cain, I am in Mr. Cramer's office in Boston. And I want $135,000.00 from you two fellows."

I said, "Mr. Lubben, I have been into the Internal Revenue Department. We have made a complete disclosure of our whole transactions with you and we don't want anything further to do with you."

Q. Did that end the conversation?

4429 A. That ended the conversation.

Q. You spoke of figures and of some attempt to assemble data in connection with your disclosure?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have some meetings about that at the plant?

A. We had several meetings about it. We were trying to—

Q. I just want to know if you had the meetings.

A. Okay.

Q. And did you have before you the data which you had been able to assemble?

A. It was before all of our people there who were working on the data.

Q. And by your people, whom do you mean?

A. Oh, there was Mrs. Morrill, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser, Mr. Busby—they were all working on the data, trying to get it together.

Q. Mr. Huebner?

A. Mr. Huebner was there.

Q. Don't say, "all", just tell us who. Did you have there the Sproull Scholz paper before you finished?

A. We had the Sproull Scholz paper. We had 4430 the Tobias papers. And we had some papers that were procured by, or sent by Lubben to the plant at the time of the closing of the Haberkorn deal.

4431 Q. There were some papers which Mr. Lubben turned over to Shotwell at the time that the Haberkorn deal was concluded?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether those papers included memoranda, recap sheets and items of the sort in evidence here?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. What was said, if anything, by Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, Roeser or Mrs. Morrill, as to the amount of the overages?

A. Well, they all expressed amazement at the amount, Mrs. Morrill, Huebner, Graflund, Mr. Busby and—

Q. What did they say?

A. They said it was utterly impossible, no money like that had ever come into our hands.

Q. What did you say to Busby and to them?

A. I said, "I don't care how much money came in. I don't care. Just get the absolute ceiling that this guy could possibly charge us with, get the absolute ceiling." I said "He is a super-salesman and I don't want any traffic with him at all. Let's put the absolute ceiling in and then let the government assess us, even if it is 4432 three or four times as much money as we owe them. It is all right with me."

Q. And did Mr. Busby proceed to assemble the data in that way, as far as you know?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And when you mentioned—in the testimony that has been read here, as taken from a prior proceeding before the Court—when you mentioned the sum, or receipts of $400,000.00, was that amount one which was arrived at in that way?

A. It was arrived at in that way.

Q. Now, you had a meeting with Lubben and Davidson in New York, in October of 1951, did you not?

A. I did. I sought that meeting myself.

Q. Is it true, as Mr. Lubben testified, that at that meeting you told him that you were most anxious to get the tax matter with the government straightened out and that you folks had offered to pay four hundred to four hundred fifty thousand dollars to get it done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of your visit to New York at that time?

4433 By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me, Mr. O'Brien. I don't think you—

By Mr. O'Brien: October, 1951.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is the same time.

By the Witness:

A. The purpose of my visit to New York in 1951 was to importune Mr. Lubben to—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Maybe I shouldn't ask it that way; Mr. Cain, because then you don't give us the conversation.

A. I will give you the conversation.

Q. Suppose you just tell us who was there and what was said.

A. I flew to New York on a Saturday morning in 1951, after contacting Lubben. I called him and asked him to meet me at the airport, or asked him if he could meet me and have lunch with me in New York.

And he met me at the airport with Sam Davidson, his lawyer. And we went to the Gotham Hotel for lunch.

My only purpose—I asked Mr. Lubben if he would do just two things. I said, "I think it would help me 4434 to settle this thing, this income tax problem that everybody now knows I have, and I want to get it settled, and if you will just do two things, tell the truth about the few barter deals, the barter deals we have had, and tell the truth about that 48 to 50 thousand that I forgave in the fall of 1946, I think we can get it closed up."

And he agreed with me that he would do that. That was the end of our conversation about business.

Q. And it is true, as he says, is it not, that the remainder of the conversation was also pleasant and they took you to the airport?

A. They took me back to the airport. He discussed his Puerto Rican venture, and a few other things. And we left on a friendly note.

4435 Q. Did Mr. Lubben say at that time that there were not those transactions and that that forgiveness had not occurred?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Now, Mr. Cain, when asking you about the unbilled shipments, I meant also to ask you about the syrup sales. You have said that the price controls on corn went off June 30, 1946. At that time, and in October, 1946, particularly, did Shotwell have on hand a considerable quantity of corn syrup?

A. Yes, we did. The corn syrup that we had on hand was—

Q. Just tell me where it was, what it consisted of, and what, if any, talk you had with Lubben about it?

A. Well, let me first tell what we had. We had some barrels of corn syrup in warehouse that we had gotten in as a reserve against a shortage of corn syrup. They had been standing there quite some time.

Now, Shotwell Manufacturing Company don't use barrels of corn syrup. We use carloads. We had underground tanks where we could put in four or five 4436 cars of corn syrup and just pump it through the building. So that the barrels of corn syrup were only a reserve. The barrels had been there. They were leaky barrels. And Mr. Huebner told Lubben we had them. We were going to sell them. And we sold them to Lubben.

Q. And what did you sell them for, when—

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me.

By Mr. O'Brien: Maybe I shouldn't do that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you talk to Lubben about the sale of the corn syrup?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When was that, approximately?

A. That was in the fall of '46.

Q. And did he say he would take it?

A. Yes, he said he would take it.

Q. And at how much?

A. I think it was around six cents a pound.

Q. Well, don't you know?

A. That is what our books reflect.

Q. How about overage?

A. There was no overage on corn syrup at that 4437 time.

Q. Did you ask Lubben for overage on that corn syrup?

A. No.

Q. Did Lubben say he was going to pay you overage on that corn syrup?

A. No.

Q. Did Lubben pay any overage on that corn syrup?

A. He never did.

Q. Yes. There is another conversation Mr. Lubben testified to, Mr. Cain. He said, speaking of some three checks for $13,000.00 plus apiece, that he went to see you about those checks. Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And that then, or at some later time, you told him that you were not in the business of taking cash in order to pay taxes; do you recall that testimony?

A. I recall that testimony.

Q. Did that ever happen?

A. No, sir; it never happened.

Q. When those checks came in—I needn't bother with them now—were you in Chicago?

4438 A. No, I was not. I was out in California.

Q. And did you ever hear anything at all about these checks until you got back?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And at that time did you have any talk with Lubben about it?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever have any talk with Lubben—

A. Lubben never mentioned a check to me in his life.

Q. —about the three checks, or any other checks?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: We will take our morning recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge, as well as the jury leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

4439 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q Just one more question, Mr. Cain. After you gave your instructions on the box and the cash did you require or suggest that any accounting be kept of those moneys by the people in charge?

A. I did not.

Q. Did any of them at any time ever bring to you an account calling to your attention what the amounts were and what had been done with the money?

A. They did not.

Q. Did you ask to see such an account?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know at the time that any such figures had been made?

A. I did not.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Cain, you stated to Mr. O'Brien that when you first secured an interest in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1941 you acquired 13,000 shares out of a total of 100,000.

A. I think that is correct.

Q. Were those your personal holdings?

4440 A. No, I believe that was my family holdings at that time.

Q. That was the total amount held by you and your family?

A. I think that's correct.

Q. You had it split up at the time the stock was issued, did you, to various members of the family?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, how much did you pay for that stock?

A. I paid—I acquired that stock through reorganizing the company. In other words, it was a bonus. I didn't pay anything for it in cash.

Q. You got it for nothing?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that. I did perform services for it.

Q. You got it then in exchange for the work you did?

A. That is correct.

Q. But you paid no cash?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you got a salary, didn't you, from the corporation, as an officer and director?

A. I did, yes.

4441 Q. Together with Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Triplett, didn't you acquire fifty-one per cent of the stock of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company at the time of that reorganization?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. And that gave you control of the corporation, didn't it?

A. Fifty-one per cent is control, yes.

Q. Now, you stated that you met Mr. Lubben first in the latter part of 1944 through Mr. John Bond?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. You think that's correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And had Mr. Lubben ever done any business with your company prior to the time you met him?

A. He could have.

Q. But you didn't know about it?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. If he did.

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Do you know whether he had a quota with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the purchase of candy?

A. I wouldn't know that. If he had a quota with 4442 Shotwell at that time?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I wouldn't know it, but I don't believe that he did.

Q. You set up a quota for him at the time you named him your broker, isn't that so?

A. I set up a quota for the district. A quota was set up for the district by Mr. Hogan, I believe it was, who was sales manager at the time.

Q. Mr. Lubben wasn't going to get that candy, he was just being permitted to sell it on behalf of Shotwell to various customers and he got five per cent, isn't that the way it worked?

A. Well, plus the fact that he got a commission on the merchandise that he sold to his own company.

Q. You are quite sure of that, Mr. Cain?
A. Definitely.
Q. Well, if your records show that Mr. Lubben actually bought merchandise from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company much earlier than the time you state you met him, how could you account for that, since he had no quota?
A. Well, I had sixteen thousand customers. It would be possible.
4443 Q. You had sixteen thousand customers at that time?
A. Approximately.
Q. And Mr. Lubben is the only one with whom you did any black market business?
A. That's correct.
Q. I show you these various exhibits, which are accounts receivable ledger cards of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with Eatsum Food Products, and I point out to you that there are various entries on here dated as early as May and June of 1944, is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, that would indicate then that you were actually doing business with Mr. Lubben much earlier than you originally thought. Here again are some fairly large purchases in 1944, in May.
A. This is about $1500.00 of total purchases.
Q. All right.
A. Over a period of several months. It doesn't amount to anything. This pretty well proves the statement, Mr. Lockley. In November we started to ship him some real merchandise. Up to that time he got one—probably 4444 two thousand dollars worth of merchandise.
Q. And he was dealing with you in May, isn't that correct?
A. That's entirely possible.
Q. And he didn't have any quota at that time?
A. If we gave him merchandise, we sold him merchandise. We had a right to do with our quotas what we wanted.
By Mr. Lockley: These are Exhibits 200.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, at the time you had the conversation with Mr. Lubben and Mr. Bond relative to the purchase of this chocolate, was anything said by Mr. Lubben that he was going to charge you any over ceiling for the chocolate?

A. No, sir.

Q. You bought it at the regular ceiling price. And in turn you made him your broker?

A. Let's get it straight, Mr. Lockley. The chocolate that I testified to from United is not the chocolate that Mr. Lubben sent—caused to be sent to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company prior to that time. He caused to be sent some—diverted some chocolate from the Burry 4445 Biscuit Company and some chocolate from the Peter Paul Company.

Q. And that is the chocolate which was involved in the arrangement whereby he became the broker, isn't that it?

A. And in addition to that he got merchandise.

Q. That is the chocolate that was involved. That was back in 1944?

A. I presume that's correct. But he got merchandise, and lots of it.

Q. And you didn't see him again, after you originally made him your broker, until the spring or early summer of 1945, is that correct?

A. Well, it could be incorrect in that I saw the man, but I had no conversations with him that were of any importance.

Q. And at that time you went with him to see Mr. Nelson of the United Chocolate Refiners?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, was there any overage that you paid to Mr. Nelson for the chocolate you received on the shipments from United Chocolate Refiners?

A. No, sir.

Q. All Mr. Lubben did then was introduce you, is 4446 that right?

A. Mr. Lubben induced Mr. Nelson to ship chocolate to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in return for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company shipping candies to Lubben, who, in turn, was going to ship a portion of that candy to the United Cigar Stores and the Liggett chain.

Q. You didn't pay the United any overage for the chocolate?

A. There wasn't any money paid in overage. Everybody paid ceiling price.

Q. Did Lubben pay the ceiling price?

A. Yes.

4447 Q. When he bought the candy from you which you made out of this chocolate he paid the ceiling price for it, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. When did the overages begin?

A. In about September or October of 1945.

Q. That's the first time?

A. That's the first time.

Q. Well, Mr. Cain, how do you account for the fact that as early as 1944, and certainly as early as January, 1945, Mr. Lubben on the invoices he received from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was marking a ten cent over-ceiling and was drawing checks to cash and was showing them on his records as drawn for the purpose of paying The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. If you can tell me that, you are a better man than I am.

Q. Was it in anticipation that he was going to arrange such a deal with you in September or October that he began this system in January?

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I object to that. How can he account for what was in Lubben's mind, in 4448 making these self-serving statements?

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Lubben in January of 1945?

A. I can't say that I did or did not. I don't know.

Q. Did you attend the Diamond Horseshoe with him at that time?

A. No.

Q. Did you go to the—what is the name of the place in the Bowery? It escapes me now,—did you go to a night club in the Bowery with him?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you remember if you went to New York in January of 1945?

A. No, sir; not at this moment. I was there quite often.

Q. Have you ever been to Toots Shore?

A. I have been there but I don't believe in company with Mr. Lubben.

Q. Well, according to his weekly expense account, January 20th, he had dinner with Huebners, Sullivans, 4449 Burrys—do you know somebody named Kums?

A. I don't.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben send your wife some flowers on that occasion?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Didn't you get a fruit basket from him at that time?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall whether you were even in New York at that time?

A. No, I don't.

Q. On January 19th.

A. But I wasn't on that party, in my judgment. My best memory is that I wasn't on that party.

Q. Did you go to any shows that you can recall on January 16, 1945, in New York?

A. I don't recall the trip, Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you ever see Up in Central Park?

A. I can't recall.

Q. You don't remember having seen it?

A. I didn't see Up in Central Park.

Q. You don't remember?

A. I don't remember. I don't think I saw it.

4450 Q. Would you say that you were not in New York on January 19, 1945?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I was not. But if I was there I still wasn't on those parties. And I would think I would remember that.

Q. Did you ever go on any parties with Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir; I was out with Mr. Lubben on two occasions, that I can remember, in New York.

Q. Which were those?

A. What?

Q. Which ones were those?

A. I went with him one night, with Mr. and Mrs. Krasne, and Mrs. Cain, and Mr. Lubben and myself, and we went over to wherever Milton Berle was playing and had dinner.

On another occasion I went out with him just to dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Burry and Mrs. Cain and myself. That's the only two occasions I can recall of being out with Mr. Lubben in New York.

4451 Q. Do you remember where they were?

A. I can't recall, no.

Q. Do you remember where you went to see Milton Berle?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember where you went to dinner with the Burrys, and Mrs. Cain and Lubben?

A. It was in '45, '46, that period.

Q. It was one of those two years?

A. Yes.

Q. But you don't remember specifically?

A. No. I was in New York at least four, five times a year, and sometimes for extended stays.

Q. Where did you stop when in New York?

A. Either the Waldorf or the Gotham.

Q. Were you ever out at Lubben's farm?

A. Once or twice.

Q. And who was with you at that time?

A. Mrs. Cain, Mr. and Mrs. Krasne, I think, on both occasions.

4452 Q. Was Mr. Lubben ever a guest at your home?

A. Once.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, I would put it in the indictment years.

Q. 1945 or 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. You are not able to fix it more specifically than that?

A. No, I cannot.

Q. In any event, you used to see Mr. Lubben for social events at various times during 1945 and 1946?

A. I would say during the years 1945 and 1946 I was with him socially, probably, three or four times. That isn't unusual with him, though. I was with all my brokers over the country.

Q. Did you see him in business connections other than socially at frequent intervals during those two years?

A. Well, he was a broker of Shotwell. I certainly did.

Q. You saw him on frequent occasions?

A. No, not on frequent occasions. I did not handle those problems. He saw Mr. Hogan or Mr. Huebner, 4453 whoever was in charge of the department.

Q. Now, you said that Mr. Lubben first offered to pay the overages in order to buy corn syrup for Shotwell in September or October of 1945, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Lubben made the offer to you, did he?
A. To Mr. Huebner, and it was passed on to me, or I think the two of them were there at the time.
Q. And you approved the arrangement?
A. Eventually, it was approved.
Q. Who set the amounts that were to be paid in overages?
A. Mr. Lubben.
Q. He suggested the three cents, did he, for the gum work?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And five cents for chocolates?
A. That is right.
Q. And that continued until February, 1946?
A. Approximately right about that time.
Q. Well, now, who raised the rate from three cents to five cents for the gum work and from five to ten cents for the chocolates?
4454 A. I think we did. The pressure for money was getting greater all the time.
Q. Who raised it the next time, in June, 1946, to ten cents for gum work and 18⅔ cents for the chocolates?
A. I would say we did at Shotwell.
Q. When you say "we" who do you mean?
A. I mean Mr. Huebner and myself, Mr. Sullivan, whoever happened to be there.
Q. Were these matters discussed at the meeting of the Board of Directors?
A. No, I don't think we took Mark Law into our confidence. Mr. Shotwell, Mr. Huebner, Mr. Sullivan and myself had complete knowledge of it and I think Mark had a pretty good idea of what was going on. Everybody that had anything to do with the candy industry, knew.
Q. You mean about your getting money?
A. I mean about the shortage of corn syrup and the necessity of getting money.
Q. Then I presume you also mean that they knew you were getting money, is that so?
A. Yes, they knew we were taking money in the company. Mr. Shotwell paid some of it out.
4455 Q. And when was that?
A. 1945 and 1946.
Q. Well, can't you give me a little more definite date?
A. No, I can't, because I just wasn't there.
Q. And to whom did he pay it, if you know?

A. I know one person he paid it to was a gentleman by the name of Keely. I don't know the man. I never saw him, but he told me he paid him.

Q. Mr. Shotwell is dead now, isn't he?

A. He died last year.

Q. Do you know how much Mr. Shotwell paid to Mr. Keely?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Well, you originally instructed Mrs. Morrill and Mr. Graflund to open this box, is that the idea, that was kept in the vault?

A. Miss Morrill and Mr. Graflund—Mrs. Morrill and Mr. Roeser. I don't know who the comptroller was at the time, but I think all three of them had knowledge of it.

Q. Did you actually see Mr. Shotwell pay any money to Mr. Keely?

A. No, sir. I never met Mr. Keely. Mr. Shotwell told me. In my position, I assumed he was telling me the 4456 truth.

Q. It is pure hearsay, so far as your testimony is concerned?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that as argumentative, as to whether it is hearsay.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, Mr. Cain, did you ever pay out—

By the Court: I think it is a proper question. I think that is a proper question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you ever pay out any of the money from the box?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever get any of the money from the box?

A. No, sir.

Q. For your own personal use?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how much money went into the box in all during 1945 and 1946?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge to whom 4457 one dime of that money went that you saw paid out?

A. I don't think I can answer that question by "of my own knowledge."

I was in the factory quite often and I talked to these fellows about the problem and I knew that the money was going down or people were coming in and picking up money in the factory to get raw corn. I did know that of my own knowledge but who it went to, I don't know.

4458 Q. You said you knew people were coming to the factory?

A. That is right.

Q. Who was coming to the factory to get the money?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who was paying them the money?

A. Well, Mr. Graflund, I have sat here while he testified he paid out six payments for corn.

Q. You heard that? Were you sitting in this trial?

A. In this trial. Mr. Hogan took money down to Dr. Doe. Mr. Roeser took money down to Dr. Doe.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Hogan say he took money down to Dr. Doe?

A. Well, he said, "I am not silly enough to think it wasn't money. I took an envelope down that was kind of squashy."

Q. Could it have been marshmallows, probably?

A. It could have been, in a nice, big brown manila envelope!

Q. Do you know the total amount of the money which went through that tin box during the period of its existence?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you ever see the record that was kept by 4459 Mr. Roeser and Mrs. Morrill?

A. I think—now, that was—no, I don't think I saw it, but I think it was used in the summary sheet that was being worked on by Mr. Busby.

Q. And when was that?

A. Oh, that was during, I would say, during March, April, May, June of 1948.

Q. What did you have to do with the compilation of that summary sheet?

A. Well, when they had—when they followed my instructions and I said, "Now, look, we have a dangerous character here. Get the absolute top of any amount of money that can have been claimed to have been paid us by this fellow Lubben and report that."

And then they were working, trying to build up an expense item against us to satisfy our own—I don't know why. They were trying to do something. They were trying to show the offsets.

Q. They were trying to show that you had spent all of the money you had taken in, is that correct?

A. That is right, we did that too, but we did not collect the four hundred thousand dollars but we had 4460 no—but I insisted they use that figure.

Q. How do you know you didn't collect the four hundred thousand dollars? You just testified you did not know how much money was in the box.

A. There was nothing like four hundred thousand dollars or any ways approaching that amount of money that went through that box.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because the people who took care of it told me so.

Q. Who were they?

A. Mr. Roeser, Mr. Graflund, Mrs. Morrill.

Q. Didn't Mr. Roeser, Mr. Graflund, Mrs. Morrill say they kept a record of the amount of money that went in and out of that box?

A. They did.

Q. And didn't Mr. Graflund testify that you instructed that that record be destroyed?

A. I think Mr. Graflund was mistaken.

Q. Didn't he also say that you later instructed Mrs. Morrill to destroy the record?

A. I think he was mistaken.

Q. Who is this dangerous man that you are referring to that you were dealing with?

4461 A. Lubben.

Q. This is the man you had out to your home socially and at whose home you were socially?

A. Mr. Lockley, when you deal with a con man, you don't find it out to begin with.

4462 Q. When did you find it out?

A. I found it out in 1947, when he blackmailed us into making that loan, and in 1947 when he tried to blackmail Mr. Sullivan and continually blackmailing, the continual blackmailing he carried on since that time, and I found out what his books reflected.

Q. Well, now, you just testified—

A. It was just a duplicated pattern of blackmail.

Q. You testified you were friendly with him in 1951?

A. I did not say I was friendly with him. I was down there to see if he had one little whit—down there to have him have one little whit of human conscience to admit to what was actually the fact.

I said, "You are a salesman. For goodness' sake, won't you be honest for once in your life and get the Government out of my hair?"

Q. We will get to the so-called blackmail in due course, Mr. Cain, and you will have an opportunity to talk about that.

Now, you stated at the time this box at the vault
4463 was closed out that you instructed the comptroller to deposit that in the Shotwell bank account?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know how much that was?

A. Yes. I understand it was approximately $15,000.

Q. And is that the amount that was shown on the Employees Exchange Account yesterday of $14,450.00, or some odd figure as loans to various executives?

A. I was advised that that is the way it was handled.

Q. It was put on the Exchange account records?

A. Well, what was done, the money was taken out of the Shotwell bank account, put into the box, and then taken out of the box and put back into the bank account. How it was handled on the books, I wouldn't know.

Q. So it never appeared, that $14,000 in company income, is that correct?

A. That is correct, but it wasn't anything that was extracted from the company. It was put back in.

4464 Q. Your position is that every dime that you got from Mr. Lubben you spent out?

A. That is correct.

Q. You don't know anybody that you spent it with, and you don't know how much you got?

A. I did not give it to him. I couldn't know of my own knowledge. I presume that is what you are asking me.

Q. Who is in charge of the company, Mr. Cain?

A. I was either Vice President or President of it during that period.

Q. Well, was there anybody else there that had the authority to pay out thousands, tens of thousands of dollars to people they didn't even know?

A. You betcha.

Q. Who was that?

A. Mr Graflund, Mr. Huebner, Mr. Shotwell.

Q. And you let all of those people handle this four hundred thousand dollars, as you have calculated it, without making any accounting of it whatsoever?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the assumption of four hundred thousand dollars.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: It is his own figure.

4465 By the Witness: Well, there was never at any time, by the farthest stretch of your imagination, four hundred thousand dollars paid to anybody in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, or anything approaching that amount.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, no matter how much money there was, you mean you gave those employees a free rein, did you, as they pleased, with the cash that came in and out of that bank?

A. Definitely. I wouldn't call them employees. They were well above that category. I mean by that, they were level in the department. They are men of absolute integrity.

Q. You sat here and you heard all the testimony. Did you hear one of those people testify that you paid money, any of that money out?

A. I heard them say they took a package down to somebody, or somebody came and got a package.

Q. Nobody knows who the money went to or how much was paid?

A. That is correct. I don't, anyway. I won't say nobody does, but I do not.

4466 Q. Did you once describe these people as nameless and faceless people?

A. I did, and quite a good many of them were, the people that took money.

Q. Well, who made the agreement with these nameless people that they were to get some money in exchange for which you would get corn or corn syrup?

A. Well, it was peculiar practice in those days.

Q. And who made the agreement?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It assumes there was an agreement.

By the Court: The objection is overruled.

By the Witness: Will you read the question to me please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Well, there were three or four people in the office that were empowered to make a deal. I don't know what you would call it agreement for. But, if somebody came in from New York and called somebody in the Shot-4467 well plant, either Mr. Huebner, Mr. Roeser, Mr. Graflund, or somebody, and said, "I can procure five or ten cars of corn, and the market on corn is extra dollars"—I don't know—it varied from two thousand, two hundred and fifty, to seven hundred and fifty dollars, I think was, our range out there a car. If he told us he could get that corn, the boys were instructed to give him the money and then follow it through and let him—if the corn was delivered to the refiners, that was the end of it. We forgot it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, we are dealing with at least two somebodies in there.

A. There is always going to be one somebody.

Q. Can you name anybody who came into the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with such a deal?

A. I think Dr. Doe sent messengers in there at least ten times.

Q. I want to know what you know.

A. Well, I know from what my associates told me, he sent messengers.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge that anybody ever approached the Shotwell Manufacturing Company regarding such a deal?

4468 By Mr. O'Brien: I think he has answered.

By the Court: You mean whether or not he was present?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I wasn't present, but I know that it was done.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, who laid down the terms of the so-called deals?

A. The corn market.

4469 Q. The corn market. Who is he?

A. The market is—the market for corn fluctuated from day to day and you paid the over-ceiling price, whatever that market was, and everybody in the candy industry using corn, in the consumption of corn syrup, knew that the cost of corn syrup was from day to day.

There were fifty brokers in this town who did nothing but handle corn and those fellows would call.

Q. Who would call?

A. Well, Dr. Doe would call.

Q. Is Dr. Doe a corn broker?

A. He was a dentist. He wasn't a corn broker. He was one of the biggest in town at the time.

Q. He is a dentist?

A. That is right.

Q. Did he ever call you?

A. He never called me. That wasn't my part of the business. I wasn't handling it, but I knew about it.

Q. Well, how do you know he called then?

A. I was told by my associates that he called and I know they weren't lying to me. I knew the condi-
4470 tions.

Q. Well, who told you? Whihc ones? Which of your associates?

A. Mr. Huebner, Mr. Shotwell. You will find that Graflund and Roeser got some calls on it.

Q. I don't believe they testified to that.

A. I don't think they were asked.

Q. Well, your counsel had an opportunity to do so. Who told you that it was two and a quarter or two and a half, or whatever it was, a bushel that you were referring to, $2.25 or $2.50 a bushel?

A. Well, it isn't true. That isn't the way the corn was purchased in those days. It was so much a car. This bushel figure, I mean, so far as we were concerned, it wa so much a carload of corn and the market stayed at two hundred dollars for a very short time and moved up to five and moved up to seven hundred and fifty dollars a car.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, Mr. Lockley, I was in the candy business and every single candy manufacturer in the United States knew what the market, the black market on corn was during that period. Every one of them had to procure 4471 corn the same way we did. We discussed it among ourselves. We discussed it at candy conventions.

Q. Just how did you procure it?

A. You mean, what was the modus operandi? How was the corn procured? We paid—

Q. Who? Let us start out at the beginning. Who is "we"?

A. Somebody in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid some money.

Q. You can't be more specific than "somebody"?

A. Well, Mrs. Morrill made payments, Mr. Graflund made payments, Mr. Huebner made payments, Mr. Shotwell made payments.

Q. All right. Now, to whom?

A. Now you want me to answer of my own knowledge?

Q. Yes, if you know.

A. Do you want me to tell you what they told me?

Q. Do you know whether they made any payments other than what they told you?

A. I wasn't there, Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you hear any of them testify here that they made payments?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Graflund testified that he made 4472 six or seven payments.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, he did so testify.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. We were getting started. You said "we made payments." Now, you are not able to testify to whom? Are you able to state how much?

A. Whatever money came in that box went out.

Q. Every dime of it?

A. Every dime of it.

Q. Now, do you know when?

A. At various times during this corn shortage.

Q. Mr. Cain, you have been a businessman for how many years?

A. Well, quite a good many.

Q. You are a director, I understand, of about fourteen different corporations?

A. I thank Mr. Lubben for that compliment. I am director of my real estate office and one or two other organizations.

Q. And you are interested in various business enterprises, aren't you?

A. I am in the real estate business.

Q. And a man with your business experience is 4473 going to permit even $10,000.00, let alone $400,000.00 to go out of his office without any knowledge of where it is going, to whom, what for?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that as argumentative.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Lockley, at no time was there ever $400,000.00 paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any members of our organization.

Now, I told that to Mr. Sauber. I told it to Mr. Wright. I told it to Mr. Krane, and Mr. Mammel, and now I am telling you. It never happened.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Cain, the government claims it is more than that. I was just using your figure of $400,000.00.

A. I don't care what you used.

Q. You said with respect to the unbilled shipments, Mr. Lubben again made the initial approach in April of 1946 and offered to pay all cash for some shipments so that money could be gotten for corn syrup.

Am I correctly reporting your testimony?

A. With the exception of syrup, you are correct.

4474 Q. All cash, or did he—you were to buy corn syrup with the money so paid you?

A. That is right, we were going—

Q. On that revolving basis?

A. On that revolving basis, yes.

Q. Mr. Cain, wouldn't it have been just as possible, if you wanted cash, to write a check to cash and go down to the bank and cash it?

A. In retrospect, I assume that may be, maybe you are correct, although I don't know how we could ever have accounted for it in our books.

Q. You didn't account for this on your books?

A. No, but we didn't take it out of our books either. It never went in and it never went out.

Q. What you mean, I assume, is that the money that you secured from Mr. Lubben was not included as income on your books?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the money that you paid out to these various people, whoever they may have been, whatever times it was, by whoever paid it, was likewise not included in your books as an expense, is that correct.

A. That is correct.

4475 Q. You never told your auditor about it either, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And you had a certified public accountant working on your books at that time, didn't you?

A. That is correct. In fact, I didn't give it a thought.

Q. You must have given it some thought, Mr. Cain.

A. I mean, from a bookkeeping point of view, I didn't give it a thought. I just assumed if money came in and money came out and Uncle Sam got what was due him, everybody was going to be happy.

Q. Now did you make any payments for any other raw material other than corn syrup?

A. Not to my knowledge because—I know what you are getting at. Go ahead.

Q. You didn't, to your knowledge?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you ever tell anybody in your office that you had made payments for other raw materials besides corn syrup?

A. No, I did not, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Busby that you had?

4476 A. No, no. I gave him those figures that you are talking about, but then I didn't tell him anything. I said, "Put these figures down on the sheet and make it balance."

Q. Well, let us start talking about the time when you had this conversation. When was that?

A. What conversation?

Q. When you spoke to Mr. Busby and said, "Put these figures down on this sheet."

A. That was after they were working, trying to assemble these figures for over a period of over a few months in the early part of 1948.

Q. In the early part of 1948?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you fix it any more definitely than that?

A. No, I can't. I would say it is in the first—in the first half of 1948.

Q. And for what purpose were these figures prepared?

A. They were prepared at my instruction, these figures.

By Mr. McConnell: What figures are you talking about? Now there is no showing of any figures. He 4477 is apparently referring to a document which is not identified.

By the Court: He has the right to ask him a few questions in order to lay a foundation, I suppose, for subsequent questions.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. In any event, you had a meeting with Mr. Busby some time in the early part of 1948?

A. That is correct.

Q. And who else was present?

A. Mr. Graflund, Mr. Huebner, Mrs. Morrill, Mr. Roeser, and I don't know whether Mr. Sullivan was there or not.

Q. Did you have some conversation at that time about the costs of raw materials?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And can you tell us what that conversation was?

A. Well, they were trying to—they were trying to justify these expenditures by running down all of the car numbers of corn cars that we had caused to be de-4478 livered to these various companies. I think we found some—I don't know how many, 150, 200 or 300 cars.

I don't know what it was. Anyway, the amount was not anywhere near the amount of Lubben's claim they had then ascertained from the books of one of his auditors so I simply said, "Put this down on the paper."

I was only in the room about five minutes. I said, "Work it backwards, Leon. Put this down, put this down, put this down. It isn't going to be allowed anyway; the Government says you can't be allowed any taxes." I says, "Just put it down anyway because, God knows, we don't owe them on the basis of one hundred thousand dollars, even on the basis of the Commissioner's ruling."

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 185 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 185 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now at the time you had this meeting with Mr. Busby and the others, did you prepare a document showing the amounts, the arbitrary amounts?

A. No. I just told them what to put down and 4479 "work this backwards and whatever is left, charge it to something else."

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 185 for identification and ask you if you have seen it before. Have you seen the original before?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I think I shall object to it until we at least have some definitive ruling by the Court on the scope of the issue.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That was the record that was made by you?

By Mr. O'Brien: I mean, your Honor, where the record is talking of this disclosure.

By the Court: Yes, I understand.

By the Witness: Yes, this was a record that I scratched down in that room, I presume, at the time that I was talking with this group of people.

By Mr. Lockley:

4480 Q. And then you gave it to Mr. Busby?

A. And then I said, "Work it backwards, charge it—you have got your corn worked out as best you can. Work it backwards as best you can in miscellaneous and make it balance?"

4481 Q. Work it back from what?

A. From the corn figures they worked out as best they could, that they could substitute, and then he made a miscellaneous charge and made it add up to the same figures I instructed him to use on the Lubben figures.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I offer in evidence Exhibit, Government's Exhibit 185.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were you at this meeting that you testified about, working up those figures for any particular purpose?

A. We were working them up to turn them over to whatever government agent would come in and say just what we did say when he did, when he came in, that the ceiling price during those years—

Q. You were going to turn them over to the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you subsequently turn over those figures, if you know?

A. I think Mr. Busby did.

Q. Do you know to whom?

4482 A. I wouldn't know of my own knowledge, no, any more than I know about that corn money that we paid out.

Q. Were those figures correct?

A. No, they were not correct without the explanation that I gave to them, and I have given them that explanation consistently ever since I turned them in.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 186 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 186 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 188 for identification and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you recall whether that was a document prepared by Mr. Busby at your instructions?

A. It could very well be but I couldn't say.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if you know, Mr. Cain.

4483 By the Witness: What?

By Mr. O'Brien: If you know.

By the Witness:

A. I don't know. Mr. Busby prepared it. He can identify it.

By Mr. Lockley: Any objection?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to this on the ground that unless we go into the disclosure thing in its entirety, it would be improper to go into it piecemeal.

I further object because it is not binding on my client.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please—

By the Court: It may be received.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it on behalf of the corporation, on the basis shown here, that it is not binding on the corporation under any circumstances.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 185.)

4484 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. At the top of Exhibit No. 185, Mr. Cain, there is the figure "20 months at $3,000, total $60,000". Do you know what that particular entry is? What is the significance of it?

A. Well, reasonably well. It was—

By the Court: I think I should make this statement with reference to that exhibit, that without further foundation, I don't think it is competent evidence as to Mr. Sullivan.

By Mr. Lockley: As to Mr. Sullivan.

By the Court: I will sustain Mr. Kirby's objection, with the limit I have indicated.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was Mr. Sullivan present at the time this document was prepared?

A. I couldn't say that he was. I say I am not sure. I am not sure about it.

Q. Was Mr. Huebner present?

A. Yes, Mr. Huebner—when that document was prepared? I couldn't say that either. I don't know whether I just scratched it off in my office and took it out and 4484A threw it down or what. I don't know who was present at that time other than Mr. Busby. I know all of those people were working to accomplish this one purpose and that they weren't getting it accomplished. I thought I would do it from memory, boom, boom, boom. I see I didn't. I made it from memory.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I offer it merely as to Mr. Cain and the corporation.

By the Court: Very well. It may be received.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Cain, at the time you testified on the motion to suppress the evidence at page 167 and 168, were you asked the following question and did you make the following answer:

"Q. What did you do about assembling the data that you told Sauber that you would assemble pending the arrival of the agent?

"A. We started out to make a compilation. We were primarily interested in over-ceiling payments to us, anything that could be charged to us. That is 4484-B the only thing we were interested in.

"So we started out to assemble that data, and as things usually do, the agent didn't appear and he didn't appear, so it dragged.

"The minute he appeared everybody went to work on it again.

"Mr. Busby, I think, had a man working on it continuously from about, oh, January, February, right on through, but then we put the whole staff on it, Mr. Huebner, and the whole gang of us got to work, Mr. Sullivan, and we assembled what would give him something to go by and we told him that."

Now, it is your testimony that Mr. Sullivan was not present then at the time this was prepared?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object. He is talking about the income items that they were assembling over a period of months and not about this thing he said he wrote out in two minutes.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

4484-C A. Will you accept Mr. O'Brien's answer?

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh—

By the Witness: I was—This thing was done from January and Mr. Sullivan certainly knew of the assembly of these figures for the Government.

By Mr. O'Brien: What figures?

By the Witness: The figures that we ultimately gave Mr. Lima or Mr. Busby gave Mr. Lima, whatever they were, but this thing, I got it myself, but who was present, I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I return again to the top line where it says "20 months at $60,000". Do you know what that particular entry has significance with?

A. I think—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I again want to object. He is going into the disclosure question piecemeal. If it is not a competent issue, then I think it is error to inject it in this fashion.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, it is not 4484-D any intention to get into the disclosure. These are figures which the defendant Cain has submitted or prepared prior to the time the agent came to the—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to advising everybody what he thinks the facts are. He is testifying.

By Mr. Lockley: I intend to use it to impeach the 4485 witness's statement as to how the money which went into the bank—

By the Court: I overruled the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you answer the question, Mr. Cain?

By the Witness: Will you restate the question, Mr. Lockley:

By Mr. Lockley:

Yes. What is the significance of the 20 months at $3,000, total $60,000, that entry which appears on the top of that page?

A. It has no particular significance. I was simply compiling some figures that would offset the money that Lubben—ceiling figures of approximately $400,000.00 that we put down on that paper, it has no particular significance at all and I so stated to the government at the time. They told me that these figures—they told me these things would not be allowed, that he could forget about them, they weren't going to get us any deductions.

Q. All I asked you was what does that figure mean?

A. I think I testified three times about it. These 4486 figures, all of them, mean exactly the same thing.

By Mr. O'Brien: Please, Mr. Cain, listen to the question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Let us take it one at a time. What are the "20 months"?

A. I don't know. I just put it down.

Q. It doesn't have any meaning at all?

A. Not at all.

Q. What does the figure "at 3,000" mean?

A. That is an approximate figure.

Q. An approximate figure of what?

A. What figure are we talking about, Mr. Lockley, No. 1?

Q. Well, maybe this will help: Does it mean receipts or does it mean disbursements or does it have any other significance?

A. I haven't the slightest idea. It is just some scratches.

Q. The next line is "1945, received $204,100.00."
A. On the next line?
Q. Right there (Indicating).
A. I imagine that was information being given me by the auditor, I presume, after they worked up 4487 those figures.
Q. You don't know where the "Received—"
A. I don't know that those figures on the top of the page are mine. I am sure they are not. This chocolate amount, corn syrup, are mine (Indicating).
Q. Let us take those one at a time. There is a column under the heading "1945" with the word "Choc." Is that short for Chocolate?
A. That is right.
Q. And across from it the figure 45,000?
A. That is right.
Q. Now, did you make that entry?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And what does it mean?
A. Well, it means that I was just going to tell them—I put these figures down and instructed them to deduct it from that sheet, that memoranda sheet.
Q. Does it mean the Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid $45,000.00 for overages in chocolate?
A. We caused—
Q. Does it mean that? Just answer that question, Mr. Cain, and we will get along all right.
A. We gave Mr. Lubben candy and he caused chocolate to be shipped to Shotwell. On his books who charged us an overage and we knew that.
4488 Q. Mr. Cain, I am afraid you are not answering my question. I asked you if that $45,000 means that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid $45,000 overage for chocolate?
A. $45,000 or its equivalent in merchandise.
Q. And to whom did you pay it?
A. Dave Lubben.
Q. You paid Dave Lubben $45,000?
A. Gave him the candy. The same thing. He charged us on the books.
Q. He paid you for the candy?
A. He paid us for the candy, but we didn't get any money from the overage. He charged us on his books and we knew it. The only way I could offset it was this way.

Q. So David Lubben was paying out $45,000 for chocolate in overage and you were going to give Shotwell a deduction, is that it?

A. How could they get a deduction?

Q. You have the figure down.

A. I was advised by Sauber and Busby that we couldn't get a deduction. Now, how could we get a deduction?

4489 Q. Did you pay $45,000 to anybody in overages for chocolate?

A. No, I did not.

Q. So when you submitted this to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, you knew you were not submitting a correct figure?

A. I didn't submit it to the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Q. You submitted it to Busby?

A. That's correct. And I told Lima and I told Sauber just exactly what I had done. I said, "I am dealing with a guy that's nuts. He is crazy. And I am giving you the absolute ceiling. Now, give me a bill. Forget these things down here, because they are no more true than the figures at the top. But get me a bill and I will pay it."

Q. Is the next entry, milk, 10 mos,—is that ten months?

A. I don't know what it means.

Q. And the figures, 30,000, did you buy $30,000 worth of milk in the black market, or pay $30,000 in overages for milk?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know if anybody in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company did?

A. No, sir.

4490 Q. Did Mr. Lubben buy $30,000 worth of milk for you?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. In other words, that figure means nothing whatsoever?

A. It means just exactly what I told the Government it meant, when I put it down there. They said, "You are not going to get a deduction." And I said, "Okay."

Q. What is the purpose of putting it down if it doesn't mean anything?

A. I wish I hadn't put it down.

Q. The next figure, corn syrup, 12,000; is that $12,000 the amount which you allege you paid in the black market for corn syrup in 1945?

A. The same answer, Mr. Lockley.

Q. Well, I would like to know what the answer is?

A. It is quite hard for you folks to believe, but I just took these figures and put them together on short commodities, and said, "Put that figure down as against that ceiling of $400,000 that we have arrived at, as the maximum that Lubben can charge us, and let it go at that."

4491 Q. And if the maximum you had arrived at had been $800,000, you would have doubled these figures, is that the idea?

A. Because his figures were no good to begin with. They were not true.

4492 Q. So his figures being no good, and your figures being no good, that makes it correct to be given to the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. Except, Mr. Lockley, I was told by the Bureau of Internal Revenue that no matter what, I would not get a deduction for anything. And I said, "That's all right with me."

Q. So therefore, it was all right to give them false information?

A. No, that isn't false information.

Q. Is it correct, Mr. Cain, that you paid $30,000 for milk in 1945?

A. No, it isn't correct, and I so told them.

Q. If you told them, why did you give them this incorrect document?

A. I told them just exactly what I have told the Judge, and the Jury, and you, right now, that when these figures came in, they were so astounding that we just couldn't believe it. And I said, "Look. Put it in there. Put the whole ten ceiling in there and give it to the Government and I will pay taxes on it."

They had told me previously. "You cannot deduct five cents for over ceiling payments."

4493 Q. Mr. Cain, do you know how much the Government has charged that you evaded on the income of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. How much?

Q. I have to look it up myself. But it is around a half million dollars. It is $507,000, I believe.

Now, from your own books and records you were come mighty close to that figure, weren't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Four hundred thousand? Isn't that the figure you come up with?

A. That was relatively simple. I explained that to the Department of Internal Revenue, and told them how we had arrived at it. I said, "Look. We disregarded all trade-ins, all barter deals. We took the top ceiling price that was ever given to us by this fellow, Lubben, and we used the top ceiling price, namely, ten and eighteen and three-quarters."

When we saw those books, we knew Lubben had phonied the whole setup. Every one was false.

4494 Q. And he started phonying them back in January, and didn't have a deal with you until October?

A. He phonied them all the way through. If he made a trade deal, he made a trade deal.

By Mr. Kirby: I might call Mr. Lockley's attention to Mr. Lubben's testimony that he had instructed the—

By Mr. Lockley: I am perfectly willing, Mr. Kirby, to have you make all of the speeches you want, after I have finished with your witness. But at the present time—

By the Court: Let's not have any colloquy. He is examining the witness.

4495 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Cain, there is another entry, cocoa bean deal, $30,000.00 in 1945. Did you have any cocoa bean deal of $30,000.00 in 1945?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Did you have any sugar deal for $37,000.00 in 1945?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Did you have a cocoa bean deal of $22,000.00 in 1945?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any sales expense of—the figure has been changed. It looks like it ends up being $18,000.00, am I correct?

A. That was the thing I was trying to think of, that sales expense. That was Busby's—in order to make it balance, by working it backwards, we used the sales expense figure and just fitted into the pattern.

Q. In other words, you just put in some arbitrary figures and then you plugged that one so that they would balance, is that correct?

A. That is correct. But we didn't do it for the 4496 pose of defrauding the Government. We knew darned well the Government was going to charge us on the top. All I hoped to do—and I told him I hoped to do it—was that they would give some consideration to the fact that we must have had some trade deals and must not have received all that money. But I said, "Whatever you hand me a bill for, I will pay it."

Q. Did you tell them with whom you had the trade deals?

A. Sure I told them.

Q. And who was that, who did you tell them?

A. I told them we had lots of deals. I just described—

Q. Did you tell them with whom?

A. Lubben.

Q. Were all those deals with Lubben?

A. These deals are no more deals than Lubben's books were.

Q. This is just a phoney, fictitious piece of record that you made up?

A. That is a memorandum I made for the auditor. I said, "Give them that."

Don't get me wrong. When it was given, it was 4497 explained. And Mr. Sauber and Mr. Lima and these gentlemen will so testify. It was certainly explained to them.

Q. Now, on this corn syrup figure of $12,000.00 in 1945, was that in accordance with the figures which you had been working up for these many months, as you say?

A. No, that is corn syrup. I don't know where I have got corn syrup on the sheet.

Q. Didn't you say that you had been working up some corn syrup figures?

A. Well, it should be corn.

Q. It should be on a corn deal, is that the idea?

A. That's right; I would think so.

Q. Was that $12,000.00 figure on the square, for the corn, on the square?

A. I wouldn't know that, Mr. Lockley. I am just not enough of a bookkeeper. I wanted to get this thing done.

Q. Didn't you say you had been going through the books and finding out the carload shipments and the car numbers and determining how much corn you had gotten in that period; does that $12,000.00 figure have any relationship to the work that you had been dong on the books?

4498 A. Now, I think, Mr. Lockley, that I said that I had caused my people who knew something about books to go through and find out what was going on. And that they were wasting a lot of time doing something I thought was needless, trying to substantiate these outgoing payments. And I said, "Forget about it. Here, I will scratch it down for you." And I scratched it down. That is what these figures are. I just scratched them down on paper.

By the Court: I think it is recess time. Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Lockley, please.

(Discussion before the bench outside the hearing of the reporter.)

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and the jury leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above-entitled cause to 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Friday, October 9, 1953.)

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell
Mr. William Kirby

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

4500 BYRON A. CAIN a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Cain, at the close of the morning session, we were discussing Exhibit No. 185 for the Government. I call your attention to the fact that on the right hand side of that exhibit, under the "1945" heading is the word "Recd." which I assume is "Received", and the figures "204,100". Is that $204,100.00?

A. I wouldn't know, Mr. Lockley.

Q. And then after the list of items and amounts is the figure "194,000", and the word "carryover 10,000". Do you know what that figure means?

A. No, I don't, not at this time.

Q. Does that mean that that is $10,000 left over in the box from 1945, carried over to 1946?

A. No, it has no reference to that. It is just a memoranda that I prepared. It has no reference to it at all.

4501 Q. Then in 1946, is a figure "168,600" to which the 10,000 has apparently been added to make the total of 178,600. Do you know if that indicates the amount of money which was either received or spent in 1946?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. But you don't know what it is?

A. It is just a scratch paper that was picked up in connection with something that I did at some time or other.

Q. Did it mean anything to you at the time you prepared it?

A. I can't answer that, because I don't know just the whole import of this document. It is just a scratch paper that was picked up at that time.

4502 Q. And you had to get the figures of 204,100 and 168,600 for 1945 and 1946 from someplace. Do you recall where you got them?

A. I have explained that. I don't recall where these figures came from.

Q. Well, I know you explained that the figures representing amounts paid out were arbitrary, just guesswork, but did you have any basis for the other figures which apparently are made up of the amounts paid out?

A. I don't recall, Mr. Lockley. Mr. Busby would be in a better position to tell you what we prepared it for.

Q. But you prepared it and not Mr. Busby, didn't you?

A. This is just a scratch paper and it doesn't mean anything.

Q. But you prepared it, didn't you?

A. My writing is on some of it, yes.

Q. Well, isn't most of it your handwriting?

A. Yes, but it is just a scratch memorandum. It doesn't mean anything. I don't see—

Q. Well, it must have meant something or you wouldn't have prepared it, Mr. Cain, do you think?

4503 By Mr. McConnell: I object to the argument.

By Mr. Lockley: I won't go into it. You are right, Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The next item for corn syrup under the year 1946 is $87,000.00 and apparently it has been struck over to be $87,775.00. Do you know what that means?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Does that mean that you paid out that much money for corn syrup in 1946?

A. Is this another question?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I do not. I do not know.

Q. Does that $87,775.00 figure have any relevance to the figures which you had been working on for some months, you say?

A. I had not been working on the figures. The organization had been working on them and I just worked on the assembly of them. I can't explain it because I don't know what the figures were.

4504 A. And the "milk $15,000", does that represent the amount paid out for overages in milk during 1946?

A. I can't explain that figure, either.

Q. Were there ever any overages paid out for milk in 1946?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. And "sugar, $54,825.00"; did you pay out any such amount for sugar in 1945?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know if you paid out any amount for sugar in 1946? I beg your pardon—1946.

A. I don't think we did.

Q. And "sales expense"?

By Mr. McConnell: I object. He has been over these items.

By Mr. Lockley: I have not been over this item, Mr. McConnell. If your Honor please, may I continue my examination in orderly course?

By the Court: Yes, proceed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The "sales expense" item is again the figure 4505which is struck over but which appears to be $21,000? Does that represent sales expenses which were incurred by the corporation and not charged on the corporate books in 1946?

A. No, it does not. And I don't recall what it represents.

Q. Were there such sales expenses in 1946 which were not charged on the company books?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Finally, there is a figure "$338.76 to balance". Do you know what that figure is?

A. No, I don't. That, again, is not in my handwriting.

Q. Would that appear to be the amount which was left in the cash box at the end of 1946?

A. I couldn't answer that. That had nothing to do with the cash box.

Q. In other words, this sheet has no meaning whatsoever?

A. Other than previously explained.

Q. And you prepared it for your accountant?

A. I don't believe I prepared it for my accountant. I prepared it for my own jotting down. Have you got down all the memoranda I have jotted down for the last thirty years?

4506 Q. Did you hand this to Mr. Busby, your accountant?

A. I can't answer that. I don't know.

4507 Q. Well, is this the sheet you had reference to when you were testifying on the motion to suppress, at page 168, and you said:

"And then they were in a dilemma about what to do about the pay-outs, and I said, 'I will tell you what we will do about it: give me a piece of paper.'

"I said, 'Busby worked backwards.'

"I wrote it down this way—'there is your pay-outs.'"

Is that the piece of paper you took, and to which that testimony has reference?

A. I am inclined to believe that it is, but I would like to amplify that just a little, if I can. The time that we spent on this was spent in finding out how much the maximum income to the company was, not the outgo. We didn't care what the outgo was. Because we knew it wasn't going to be allowed to us, anyway.

Q. Well, Mr. Cain, you just have the one candy plant in Chicago, do you not?

A. I am president of the Homewood Manufacturing Company, successor of Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. I meant, of course, in 1945 and 1946. You
4508 had no other plant but the one right here in Chicago?

A. That's correct.

Q. And had you ever discussed whether you were going to buy any additional plants?

A. I may have.

Q. Because of the freight differential between the East Coast and the West Coast, and Chicago?

A. Yes, we, I think, at one time, considered expanding to the west and east coasts.

Q. Now, you made a loan of $75,000 to Mr. Lubben. Do you recall about the time of that?

A. Yes, I recall the loan.

Q. When was it?

A. About the middle of 1947.

Q. About July of 1947. Now, actually, you didn't make that loan, that loan was made by the Sterling National Bank, wasn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. They gave Mr. Lubben the money?

A. That's right. I endorsed the note.

Q. And you guaranteed the note?

A. That's right.

Q. And you put up some securities, to guarantee
4509 the note?

A. That's right.

Q. And Mr. Lubben gave you a mortgage on all of his real estate, his personal property, his equipment, everything he had, didn't he?

A. That's right.

Q. And you had all that appraised before that, didn't you?

A. To the best of my ability, yes.

Q. Who appraised it for you?

A. Well, I think as to the machinery and plant, I probably would have taken Mr. Huebner's opinion. As to the real property, I would have taken the opinion of myself.

Q. And what was the appraisal?

A. There was no formal appraisal ever made.

Q. Well, did you figure that the plant was worth $75,000, and the equipment and machinery?

A. I figured the underlying security for my mortgage was worth $75,000, and I wouldn't lose any money.

Q. So you weren't taking any risk when you loaned Mr. Lubben that $75,000, or arranged the loan, I 4510 should say?

A. I wasn't in the mortgage business. I didn't desire to make the loan.

Q. But I mean, you weren't taking any risk on it, you were well secured, were you not?

A. I think I have answered the question.

By Mr. McConnell: Can you talk a little louder? We can't hear you back here.

By the Witness: I will be glad to.

4511 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And Lubben made further monthly payments against that mortgage or against that loan, I should say?

A. For about four months.

Q. And he reduced it to about sixty-six or sixty- seven thousand dollars, I think you said?

A. That is correct.

Q. That was a demand note that the bank had on Mr. Lubben, wasn't it?

A. I don't recall.

Q. And isn't it true that Mr. Lubben didn't default on the note, but that the bank called in its demand note and he was unable to pay the $66,000.00 balance?

A. No, that is not true.

Q. What is the fact?

A. They said he had failed to make the payments that were due under the arrangement that had been made with the bank.

Q. And who told you that?

A. The Sterling National Bank.

Q. The president of that bank is a good friend of yours, isn't he?

4512 A. I wouldn't say a good friend. He is a friend of mine, though. We are not close personal friends.

Q. Didn't you tell him to sew up Lubben with a mortgage, with everything he had?

A. No, he had nothing to do with the mortgage.

Q. Do you recall the conversation that you had with Special Agent Krane about July of 1948?

A. No.

Q. At your office, at Cain & Culhane?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Special Agent Krane?

A. Very well.

Q. He is the gentleman sitting right here?

A. Right.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Krane at that time that you weren't concerned about any loss as a result of your guaranteeing that $75,000.00 loan to Lubben because it was your intention to have an east coast plant?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And that if Mr. Lubben defaulted on that note you would have an east coast plant at a much lower cost than it would be if you had to go out and build or buy one?

4513 A. No, I didn't.

Q. You don't remember telling that to Mr. Krane?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Who owned the securities you put up to the Sterling National Bank?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Who got the mortgage?

A. Byron A. Cain as agent for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now, at the time that $75,000.00 loan was made wasn't one of the conditions of the loan that Mr. Lubben would change the location of his plant from the Bronx to New Jersey in order to cut down on some of his costs?

A. No, there was no condition to the loan at all. There may have been a recommendation by someone other than myself. But I made no condition to the loan at all.

Q. Didn't Huebner actually help him lay out the New Jersey plant?

A. That is entirely possible.

Q. Did you have anyone go out to Mr. Lubben's office at that time and examine his books in July of 1947, or around there?

4514 A. I don't think so.

Q. Did Mr. Graflund go?

A. No, not to examine his books.

Q. I am speaking of the middle of 1947, at the time this loan with the Sterling National Bank was arranged.

A. Well, if he did, I don't remember.

Q. Didn't he come back and tell you that he didn't think $75,000.00 was going to be enough to save Mr. Lubben financially, that he would need a hundred and a quarter?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. I think you have testified here that that $75,000.00 loan was in the nature of a shake-down or blackmail?

A. I felt that it was.

Q. Were you required to make that loan, Mr. Cain?

A. No, but I had been doing something that I was very ashamed of, with an individual who I lost all confidence in, so I just felt that I was obligated to do it, if I wanted to keep my name clean.

4515 Q. You felt it was a blackmail, although you got the securities back which you thought were of sufficient value to safeguard you against any loss, is that so?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you felt it was a blackmail even though Mr. Lubben was making regular monthly payments to reduce that loan to the Sterling National Bank, is that so?

A. Well, he made four.

Q. He made at least that many. He reduced it from seventy-five to about sixty-six thousand, and that is not including the interest, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, in 1948, about January, I think you said, you sent Busby and Graflund to Lubben's plant in connection with an additional $50,000.00 loan which he had requested, am I correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Mr. Busby was to check Mr. Lubben's financial condition to see whether or not it was a good risk for $50,000.00?

A. That's right.

Q. And he found out that it wasn't a good risk?

4516 A. That's right.

Q. So you didn't make the loan?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you characterize that as blackmail?
A. It was an attempt at blackmail.
Q. You weren't required to make the loan, were you?
A. I didn't.
Q. You never gave him the $50,000.00, did you?
A. No, I did not.
Q. And you sent Mr. Graflund along at that time, too?
A. That's right.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Graflund to get hold of any papers that he could of Mr. Lubben's with respect to his over-ceiling dealings with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, that isn't the instructions I gave Graflund.
Q. What were the instructions that you gave Graflund?
A. I told him to inspect the books and see what the books might reflect so that we would know what the situation was there.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Graflund to tell Mr. Lubben 4517 that he was going to do that?
A. I didn't tell him to tell Lubben anything.
Q. He was to do this without Mr. Lubben's knowledge, is that it?
A. He was to do it in any way he could, for my benefit, and for the benefit of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. I wasn't interested in Mr. Lubben at that time.
Q. You say you weren't interested in Mr. Lubben at that time?
A. That's right.
Q. Weren't you considering making him a $50,000.00 loan.
A. I didn't make the loan.
Q. I know that. But weren't you considering making him one at the time you sent Mr. Busby and Mr. Graflund back there?
A. Well, I sent them down to find out if it could be made or should be made.
Q. Well, you mean you were going to make him a $50,000.00 loan, but you weren't interested in him at that time?
By the Witness: Will you read the question back?
4518 By Mr. McConnell: I object to that question as having a double aspect. I don't know how anybody could answer that question.

By the Court: Overruled.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I was interested in him to find out what his books reflected.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, had you decided before you sent Mr. Busby that you weren't going to make the $50,000.00 loan?

A. I sent Mr. Busby down to find out whether there was—whether I should make it. But, on the other hand, my mind was pretty well made up, I thought, at the time.

Q. You mean you made up your mind that you weren't going to make it before you sent Mr. Busby down?

A. Well, if Busby had given me a differential report I might have changed my opinion. But he didn't. He gave me the report I expected to get.

Q. Then you were entirely a free agent as to whether you made the loan to Mr. Lubben or whether you 4519 didn't make the loan to Mr. Lubben, is that right?

A. I considered myself such, because I refused to make the loan.

4520 Q. Is that consistent with your claim that this was a blackmail attempt?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You weren't forced to make the loan, were you?

By the Court: Overruled.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I wasn't in the business of loaning money.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were you forced to make the loan, Mr. Cain?

A. No. And I didn't make the second loan.

Q. Exactly. You did exactly as you wanted to. There was no force, whatsoever.

By Mr. McConnell: Is that a question or statement?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If Busby had reported back to you that Lubben had a good financial condition, would you have made the loan?

A. I can't answer that at this time.

Q. When Mr. Busby did return, you and Mr. Sullivan had a meeting with him, is that so?

4521 A. That's correct.

Q. Was that on a Sunday at your home?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was.

Q. And at that time you discussed the question of overages, that Mr. Busby had first found out about it—

A. That's right.

Q. —on his trip with Mr. Graflund. And that was about what time, do you remember?

A. The meeting in my home?

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't be definite about that. It was on a Sunday.

Q. Well, was it 1948?

A. Oh, yes. Around the 11th day of January, 1948.

Q. About the last part of January. And you told Mr. Busby at that time that Shotwell Company received over-ceiling payments from Lubben, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And what did Mr. Busby tell you?

A. Well, Mr. Busby told me that over-ceiling pay-

4522 ments were not a proper deduction from the income tax return, and as long as our income tax return hadn't reflected the income that we could be in difficulty.

Q. Did he say what kind of difficulty?

A. Tax difficulty.

Q. Was he any more specific than that?

A. That was specific enough for Mr. Sullivan and myself.

Q. All right. And then did you have any further discussion?

A. And then—yes, sir, we asked him whether—he told us about the disclosure policy of the Government. And we told him to go down and find out whether that policy was still in effect.

Q. All right. What did he tell you about the disclosure policy of the Government?

A. He told us if we went in and told the Government there were errors and omissions in our income tax return, and that they would send somebody out and straighten it out, we could pay our bill.

Q. Did he tell you that you had to go in and see the Government before the Government started making an investigation of you?

4523 A. I don't recall what he told me on that matter.

Q. Did he tell you that in order to make a voluntary disclosure, there had to be an admission of liability?

A. I certainly admitted liability. I didn't agree with their policy, but I admitted the liability, if that was the policy.

Q. Didn't you try to wipe out the liability with this sheet of figures on Exhibit 185?

A. I couldn't wipe out the figures. I was told that nothing was deductible from this income that we had received, that that was a rule of the Commissioner of the Department of Internal Revenue.

Q. Did Mr. Busby tell you that you could avoid criminal prosecution if you went to the Bureau of Internal Revenue and made such a voluntary disclosure?

A. He did.

Q. Why were you fearful of criminal prosecution if you owed no tax?

A. Mr. Busby told me we did owe a tax. He said under the Commissioner's ruling, we owed a tax.

Q. Didn't Mr. Busby tell you that before you could 4524 be prosecuted criminally, it had to be a willful evasion?

A. I wouldn't know enough about that. You ask Mr. Busby.

Q. Did he tell you it had to be intentional?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. Well, you did send Mr. Busby to Mr. Sauber in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him not to reveal the name of the company that he was inquiring about?

A. That's right.

Q. What was the purpose of that?

A. To find out if the policy was still in effect. That's all I asked him to do.

4525 Q. Did you have any discussion with him as to what you would do if the policy wasn't in effect?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And you stated that you never got any bill from the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Did you ever file any amended returns for the Bureau of Internal Revenue reporting any additional income?

A. When I talked to Mr. Sauber, he told us it would be impossible.

Q. Did you try?

A. Mr. Sauber said it would be impossible for us to file an amended return.

Q. Did you ever offer the Government any amount of money in settlement of your tax liability and have anybody in the Government refuse it?

A. I asked them to give me a bill.

Q. Have you ever offered any money to anybody in the Bureau of Internal Revenue in settlement of your tax liabilities and have them refuse it?

A. No, not just that way, no.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you testify in your motion to suppress that you would never pay a dollar to the Bureau of Internal Revenue if you could help it?

4526 A. No, I don't think I did. If I did not owe it I might have said—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the form of the question, if the Court please. If he is trying to impeach him, let him read the question and the answer and that would take care of it.

By the Court: The question and the answer should be read.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Going back to your Exhibit No. 185, did you testify in the motion to suppress, page 220 in reference to that exhibit—you were asked:

"Q. What is it supposed to mean if it is not supposed to mean that?"

And did you answer:

"A. Mr. Ryan, there was a summary sheet. This was a sheet that really was for our own purpose. We had made our disclosure months and months and months before this sheet was put out, and when we got down to this figure, Lima was in. We had to do something quickly, so I said, 'Give him these figures 4527 and we will go ahead and work.'"

Does that refresh your recollection as to why it was prepared, a to what it means?

A. This was prepared as a memoranda for them to use outside of that sheet, that we recorded very carefully all of the income that we were charged with on Lubben's books.

Q. For what purpose was it to be used?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I object on the ground we have certainly gone over that to exhaustion.

By the Court: Well, the exhibit is not admissible as to your client.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, was Exhibit 185 used for the purpose of preparing Exhibit 186, if you know?

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me, Mr. Lockley. I would assume, your Honor, not only that the exhibit is not admissible against my client but all of the testimony with respect to it is not admissible.

By the Court: I think that necessarily follows.

4528 By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now on direct examination with Mr. O'Brien this morning, you stated that Mr. Sullivan called you while you were in California, if I understood you correctly, and said that he had bought from Lubben the Haberkorn Candy Company. Was that your testimony?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know from whom the Haberkorn Candy Company was actually bought?

A. I found it out when I got back to Chicago.

Q. It wasn't bought from Mr. Lubben, was it? Who was it bought from?

A. I didn't find that out until just recently. Lubben handled the negotiations of the deal, as I understand it. I didn't know. I wasn't there, so I probably shouldn't testify.

Q. The fact of the matter is that Haberkorn Candy Company was sold in its entirety to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company by Eddie Urban, is that correct, and his wife?

A. I can't answer that. You will have to ask another witness. I don't know anything about that transaction. I wasn't there.

4529 Q. Well, do you know that the Shotwell Manufacturing Company paid $65,000.00 for the stock in Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. Our books reflect that we paid $101,000.00 for the stock.

Q. That isn't what I asked you.

A. That's all I can answer.

Q. I asked you how much was paid?

A. $101,000.00 is all I know about.

Q. And to whom was it paid?

A. I can't answer that, Mr. Lockley. I did not handle the transaction. I wasn't here when it was handled.

Q. Who did handle it? Who did handle the transaction?

A. Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Huebner—I don't know. You will have to ask them.

Q. The fact of the matter is that the books of the Shotwell Company show the cost of that stock at $101,000.00, do they not?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. So that there was a directors' meeting at which it was recommended that the stock be bought at that price, isn't that so?

4530 A. If that is what the records reflect, it probably was.

Q. And wasn't that figure actually made up from the $65,000.00 which was paid to Eddie Urban plus the amount which was lost on the loan, the $75,000.00 loan, to Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the assumption that it was paid Eddie Urban. There is no evidence I know of that it was paid to Eddie Urban.

By Mr. Lockley: You have got the contract itself and the exhibits.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I know nothing about that transaction, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you ever see a copy of the contract of sale of the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. It was all an accomplished fact when I got back to Chicago, so there was no reason for me to look at the contract of sale.

Q. Now, you also mentioned a man named Tobias?

A. That is right.

4531 Q. When did you meet him?

A. The first time I ever met Tobias was during the candy convention at the Waldorf in 1948.

Q. When was that?

A. In June of 1948.

Q. Are you able to fix the date more accurately?

A. No, I am not. I am not even sure about the June—it was around that time of the year, though.

Q. And how did you come to meet Mr. Tobias? Who introduced you?

A. I don't recall. I know that Tobias was at the General Confections Company when Mr. Busby and Mr. Lubben, or Mr. Graflund, made their trip down East. He was employed there at that time.

Q. Did you meet him there at that time?

A. No, I did not. They reported it back.

Q. How do you know he was there?

A. They reported back to me and I believed them.

Q. The first time you met him was at the time of the candy convention in June of 1948. Did he just come up and introduce himself to you?

A. Did I say 1945? Let me correct that, Miss Reporter. That was 1948.

Q. 1948?

4532 A. Yes.

Q. We will pass that for a moment. I will show you a document which is defense Exhibit 9, a contract for the sale of the Haberkorn Candy Company, and I ask you if you will read this portion which relates to the payment of purchase price and see if that refreshes your recollection as to the cost of that stock?

A. To my knowledge, I have never read this contract before.

4533 Q. Well, do you know if the contract is wrong or right?

A. I would assume that it is right.

Q. And the contract says that the "buyer agrees to pay the sellers the total sum of $65,000.00", is that correct?

A. I would assume the contract speaks for itself.

By Mr. McConnell: Aren't there some more provisions in that contract?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now was Mr. Tobias in your suite at the Waldorf at the candy convention?

A. He came up for about an hour.

Q. As a matter of fact, he was there at the time Mr. Graflund called you and told you that a Judge Krane had just come to the Shotwell Company and had taken the books, was he not?

A. No, he was not, not to my knowledge.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. I said not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, did you ever see him again after that?

A. Yes, I saw Tobias once again after that, I think.

4534 Q. Well, let us find out first what happened at the candy convention with Mr. Tobias. Did you have a conversation with him at that time?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And what did you talk about?

A. He said that he could give us some figures on the Lubben enterprises and tell us what had been going on with their books. I said if he could, we would be very happy to have that information. He said it would take some time. I said, "Whatever time you spend, we can reimburse you for it."

Q. Did you offer to pay him for that service?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you pay him directly?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did you arrange the payment?

A. I asked him to present his bill to Pat Grace and asked Pat Grace to pay the bill.

Q. How much was it?

A. $500.00, if my memory serves me right.

Q. How about Ed Sproull, did you also tell Ed Sproull to pay him some money for you?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

4535 Q. Didn't you know that Tobias collected $750.00 from Pat Grace?

A. No, sir, he did not.

Q. Do you know that he collected $750.00 from Ed Sproull?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was charged off on their books as accounting purchases and you reimbursed him, didn't you?

A. We did not.

Q. Do you mean to say that Mr. Grace just gave Mr. Tobias $500.00 which you never repaid him?

A. Now let us get one question at a time. I said that I employed, I asked him to send his bill to Mr. Grace and I would reimburse Mr. Grace for $500.00. That is the only thing I know about it. These other questions, I can't answer. I never heard of them before.

Q. Is that all that happened at the time you met him at the Waldorf, at the candy convention?

A. That is about all.

Q. When did you next meet him?

By the Court: Who?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Tobias, sir.

4536 A. Well, I don't know definitely that I have met him since then.

Q. Did you ever telephone him and ask him to meet you?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever write him a letter?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever send him a telegram?

A. There is a--we could have sent him a wire. He could have called me on the phone and told me about these papers and I could have told him I was going to be in New York later and then when I was in New York I could have wired him and said I was going to be at the Waldorf. I don't know.

Q. Did you have such a later meeting?

A. There was no later meeting. I am talking about the only meeting we had.

Q. The meeting at the candy convention?

A. That is the only one I recall.

Q. That would be about June 21st?

A. That would be about the time.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 187 for identification.

4537 By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark that Government's Exhibit 187 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 187 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And I ask you if that is the telegram which you sent to Mr. Tobias.

A. It purports to be, yes.

Q. Well, did you send it?

A. I don't recall sending it.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 187.

By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 187.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And this reads: "Mr. Tobias. Dated July 8, 1948. Telephone Tremont 2-6394. Arriving Gotham Hotel at P. M. tomorrow, 7-9-48. Would like to see you about five P. M. B. A. Cain."

Do you have any recollection as to whether you sent that telegram?

4538 A. No, I don't, but that could possibly be the one meeting I have confused with the other meeting. I don't recall two meetings although it could have happened.

Q. The candy convention was not on July 9th, was it?

A. No, it was not on July 9th, but the meeting I refer to as having happened at the candy convention, it could have been this July 9th meeting. I don't recall the two meetings. I do know there was one meeting.

4539 Q. What happened on this meeting, on June 9th?

A. The only meeting I recall is the one meeting. Whether it was in June or July, I don't know. My testimony for the one meeting would have to stand because I can't clear up the two meetings.

Q. Well, who was there at the one meeting you do remember besides yourself and Mr. Tobias?

A. I believe Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner were with me, although I couldn't be sure of that.

Q. Wasn't Pat Grace there, too?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. Didn't you have a meeting on July 9th with Pat Grace and Harold Sullivan and Mr. Tobias and yourself at the Gotham Hotel?

A. If I did, I have no recollection of it now.

Q. Didn't you ask Mr. Tobias at that time to use his influence with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New York to delay the issuance of the summons for the books and records of General Confections?

A. I did not. I did not know that Tobias was ever connected with the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you told Tobias you could 4540 have this investigation killed very easily, because you were a very close friend of Bob Hannegan's, at that conference?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you told Tobias at that conversation you had excellent contacts that would reach to the White House?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you have any other meetings with Tobias after this one of July 9th?

A. I recall only one meeting with Mr. Tobias.

Q. Did Tobias turn over any of Lubben's records to you in accordance with your agreement?

A. It is my understanding that some records were sent to our plant. I don't know.

Q. What were they?

A. I don't know.
Q. Were they original records?
A. I can't answer that, Mr. Lockley. I don't know.
Q. Do you know whether or not you still have them?
A. No, I don't know.
Q. Didn't you at a later time tell Mr. Tobias, it
4541 would be worth five thousand dollars to you to get Special Agent Krane off this case?
A. I certainly did not.
Q. Now you stated that you never used any political influence to settle your case?
A. That is right.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to this. This isn't impeachment on a material issue in this case.
By Mr. Lockley: It was brought out on direct, if your Honor please.
By the Court: You haven't finished your question as yet, I assume?
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You stated that you went to see Mr. George Schoeneman?
A. That is correct.
Q. Who was he?
A. He was a Director of Internal Revenue.
Q. He was Commissioner of Internal Revenue?
A. Or a Commissioner, whatever the name was.
Q. He was in charge of the whole operation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the United States?
A. That is correct.
4542 Q. Who arranged that appointment?
A. I met Mr. Schoeneman at a garden party at the North Shore, and we—I talked to him about it. I told him I was having a lot of trouble getting a bill out of the Chicago office, and he said, "Why don't you come to my office". And he said; "You can talk to me one of these days". And I did. I went down there and talked to him.
Q. Did you have Mr. Hannegan as a week end guest at your home in 1948 after Special Agent Krane had been into your office and the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. No, sir. Mr. Hannegan was never a week end guest in my home.
Q. Was he a guest?
A. He might have been a dinner guest, a barbecue out in the kitchen, or out in the yard—I don't know.

Q. Did you talk to him about your tax case at that time?

A. When Mr. Hannegan died, he didn't know I had a tax case, nor did anyone else in politics, nor did any lawyer in the City of Chicago.

4543 I did not even tell the lawyers. I didn't employ a lawyer on this case until 1951, when we employed Daniel Taylor. I was ashamed of it, and I didn't want anybody to know about it. You can rest assured I did not tell any of my political associates, whether they were Republican, or whether Democrats.

Q. How about Pat Grace? Did you employ Mr. Grace?

A. Not in connection—only in connection with one phase of this thing, and that was to find out whether New York was holding up the settlement of this case in Chicago because of the connection that would have been brought out in the newspapers.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He wrote me a nice letter—no, he didn't either. He called me and said it wasn't—it had nothing to do with it.

4544 Q. Is that the only time he ever performed any professional services for you?

A. I can't recall now what I might have called upon Mr. Grace to do other than this tax matter and that was just an inquiry.

Q. Was he a tax lawyer?

A. No, he was not. He was a friend of somebody. In our social conversation, I found out he was friend of somebody and I said, "If you get an opportunity, find out."

Q. You found out he was a friend of Dan Bolick's, who chief of Intelligence in New York?

A. Thank you very much.

Q. Is that the name?

A. That is the name I was trying to think of, yes.

Q. You said early in 1948 you and Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan met Ed Sproull and asked him to assemble some information for you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Sproull is a New York accountant, isn't he?

A. That is right. He was Mr. Lubben's accountant.

4545 Q. What was the nature of the information you asked him to get for you?

A. Any information he could give us so that I could get this absolute ceiling to report to the Government in conjunction with our disclosure.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Lubben for any of that information instead of going for it in a roundabout way and asking Mr. Sproull and Tobias?

A. I asked Mr. Lubben for information that I didn't get. He didn't have any books and records or anything else, so we dug it out and got it. I wanted the best that I could get.

Q. You say that this next meeting with Mr. Lubben was in the latter part of June, 1948, at the Riviera night club?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that still during the period of the candy convention?

A. I don't think so. I think the candy convention was over.

Q. Had you come back to Chicago in the meantime?

A. I imagine so.

Q. And you say Mr. Lubben called you?

A. Yes, Mr. Lubben called.

4546 Q. At the Gotham?

A. At the Gotham.

Q. How did Mr. Lubben know you were in town?

A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. You hadn't had any contact with him prior to that?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. For how long?

A. Well, the last memory of a meeting with him is the one I testified to.

Q. Well, how long were you in New York on this particular visit when you had Mr. Grace as your guest for dinner at the Gotham?

A. I can't recall, Mr. Lockley. It was possibly two or three days. It is according to what my business was at that time.

Q. Mr. Lubben called you at that particular time at the Gotham Hotel, not knowing you were in town?

A. He could have called just as a matter of fact. I don't know how he got the information.

Q. At the meeting that you had at the night club, the Riviera night club, there was no reference whatsoever made to Mr. Lubben's leaving the United States so he wouldn't be available to testify against you?

4547 A. None.

Q. The sole purpose of that meeting was so Mr. Lubben could borrow some money and buy a soft drink franchise in South America, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. By the way, when did you meet Mr. Pat Grace?

A. I am inclined to believe that it was in 1948. It could have been in 1947.

Q. When?

A. I don't know. It could have been in 1948 or 1947.

Q. How long before you had a meeting at the Club Riviera?

A. Well, it was some time before that. I can't—

Q. Well, how long?

A. I don't know, Mr. Lockley. My memory doesn't go back.

Q. Six months, six weeks, six days?

By Mr. McConnell: Now, you have three questions in there and I object to that form of the question. He is asking about six months, six weeks, six days.

By the Court: I don't think that constitutes a question.

4548 By the Witness:

A. My answer is I don't recall.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, was it a very long time?

A. Not a very long time, no.

Q. Well, how many—

A. I know it was a short period of time prior to the Riviera meeting.

Q. How many meetings had you with Mr. Grace from the first time you met him until the night of the Riviera meeting?

A. As I recall, we were with Mr. Grace on two or three occasions during the candy convention. Whether that was that particular candy convention in 1948 or whether the convention was in New York in 1948, I don't know for sure. I mean, the convention that I met Mr. Grace at. I met him on two or three occasions. He was with Tom O'Neil quite a bit.

Q. What was Mr. Tom O'Neil's business?

A. He was a broker for the—or, he was a broker for raw materials, candy and primarily for Mars.

Q. Was he a Chicago man?
A. Yes, a Chicago man.
Q. Is O'Neil still alive?
4549 A. No, he is dead.
Q. There was no mention made at the Riviera meeting of any money except a loan to Mr. Lubben by you, is that correct?
A. I don't know what sum he was going to put it at at the Riviera meeting. It was rather an indefinite sort of thing. I said, "If you don't have the franchise at this time, wait until it gets concrete and tell Mr. Grace about it when it develops." I don't know whether it was a loan or a gift or whether he was going to invite me to participate.
4550 Q. Is that in your opinion what constitutes blackmail?
A. In my opinion it was the start of blackmail.
Q. Did you give him the money?
A. No, sir.
Q. So the next time you heard from him was a telephone call from Mr. Cramer's office in Boston?
A. That is right.
Q. Just exactly what did Mr. Lubben say on the telephone call?
A. Well, he says that he was in Cramer's office and he was trying to raise $135,000.00 and he wanted to know if I would participate in it and I said, "I want no part of it."
Q. No, no.
A. I said no.
Q. Did he say what he wanted the $135,000.00 for?
A. It was a very short conversation. He didn't get a chance to. I just said no.
Q. Was that another attempt at blackmail?
A. In my judgment, it was.
Q. Did you pay him the money?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Did he threaten you in any way?
4551 A. No.
Q. How long had you known Mr. Cramer?
A. I met Mr. Cramer once in my life before he walked into this court room the other day and I don't know when that once was. It was some time during, I imagine, the indictment years.

Q. Did you ever meet him at Ed Sproull's office?
A. Never.
Q. The next time you met Mr. Lubben was the meeting at LaGuardia Field, is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. Which you sought?
A. What is that?
Q. You sought Mr. Lubben out at that time?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did you know at that time that the special agents of the Intelligence Department were going to New York to conduct another phase of the investigation of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company case?
A. I did not.
Q. And told Mr. Lubben that you were willing to pay four hundred or four hundred fifty thousand dollars income tax, is that correct?
4552 A. That is correct.
Q. And you wanted him to tell the truth about the barter deals. Now, just exactly what barter deals did you discuss with him at that meeting?
A. I didn't discuss any. I just said generally barter deals and I also wanted him to tell the truth about the $450,000.00.
Q. We will get to that in a minute. Let us get to the barter deals. How many barter deals did you have with Mr. Lubben during the course of those two years, during 1945 and during 1946?
A. It is impossible to reconstruct on our books and it is impossible to reconstruct it on their books. There are so few—
Q. Tell us about those which involved the United Chocolate Company.
A. The Druckerman deal is another. I think Lubben got five or ten thousand cases of candy on that deal.
Q. Did you hear Mr. Druckerman testify?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. You heard Mr. Druckerman testify that Mr. Lubben was in no way responsible for introducing him to you or at least he didn't remember he was?
4553 A. That is where Mr. Druckerman was in error. Mr. Druckerman and Mr. Lubben came into the plant and I was there.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Druckerman testify he didn't sell any of that candy to Lubben?

A. Certainly he didn't. I gave Mr. Lubben five thousand cases besides five thousand cases I gave Druckerman at ceiling price.

Q. And you got paid?

A. Sure, I got paid.

By the Court: I think both of you should be a little careful. The reporter has a difficult time with both of you having a habit of talking at the same time.

By the Witness: I will be more careful.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, I don't understand, Mr. Cain, if you got paid for the candy that you shipped to Mr. Lubben, how it in any way affects the cost of these products to you.

A. It doesn't in any way affect the cost of the products to me, but in Mr. Lubben's memoranda that he 4554 has introduced, the evidence he has charged The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with, of getting over-ceiling payments on every single shipment we ever shipped him, as this money was the only consideration he ever got and that isn't true.

4555 Q. Well, how much money did you get from him?

A. I don't know. But it wasn't anyways near that $400,000, and, in my humble opinion, it wasn't a third of it.

Q. You don't know how much it was?

A. That's correct.

Q. You didn't ever see any of the money?

A. If I did, I didn't see it very long.

Q. You never paid any of it out?

A. Not a penny.

Q. You kept no record of it?

A. I kept no record of it.

Q. But you are positive it wasn't as much as Mr. Lubben said it was?

A. Definitely.

Q. And he does have records. Well, what is this forty or fifty thousand dollars forgiveness in '46, that you asked Mr. Lubben to tell the truth about?

A. It is simply as I stated. Mr. Lubben came into the office in the fall of 1946, and said he was in—didn't have the money to pay on the overages that he owed us, and asked us to take preferred stock in General Confec-4556 tions. And I think, if you will check his books, that a lot of people did take preferred stock.

Well, I didn't want any part of Lubben as a partner. Don't get me wrong now. If the money had been paid to us, it would have gone with the other fifteen thousand dollars into Shotwell, if he could have paid us the money. But I didn't want any part of Lubben as a partner in any company. I said, "Lubben, we don't want any part of the deal. We will forgive you the money if you don't have it. Pay what you owe us on the books, the ceiling prices, and forget about the overage you owe us. That period of our life is over."

Q. So that he did never pay you the last forty or fifty thousand dollars of the premiums that he has charged to the books?

A. That forty-eight to fifty thousand dollars, that's correct. And I made that statement in the presence of Huebner, and maybe somebody else out in the plant at the time.

Q. Now, was Mr. Lubben paying this money to you?

A. No, he was not.

Q. Well, how do you know it wasn't paid then?

4557 A. Because he said it wasn't paid. He said he owed the Shotwell Manufacturing Company that money. If he admits it, I am not going to deny it.

4558 Q. Do you know if he ever gave it to Mr. Huebner?

A. Mr. Huebner was there when he said he owed it.

Q. He never paid the money to you, did he?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever pay any money to you at any time?

A. Never at any time.

Q. Then how do you state that he didn't pay this forty or fifty thousand dollars, if you weren't there?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that as argumentative. He has already testified that the man said it.

By the Court: He has answered that question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. This was in 1946, the latter part of 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. That he offered you stock in General Confections?

A. I think that's correct.

Q. And you refused it because you didn't want to be in any way connected with him, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. But in July of 1947 you guaranteed him a 4559 $75,000.00 loan?

A. I think I testified about why I made that loan. In the first place, I didn't want to lose the money.

Q. Lose what money?

A. The seventy-five thousand.

Q. You never had to make the loan in the first place, did you?

A. Well, I made it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Cain, just listen to the question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben had no quota with your company, did he, except the one that was set up at the time he arranged the purchase of that small amount of chocolate, and then you made him a broker?

A. I wouldn't be able to say on that. I am inclined to say he had some kind of a quota. All our customers did.

Q. Well, was he a customer in 1941, the base period for the quotas?

A. Well, we put a lot of customers on our books, and a lot of them went out of business between '41 and '45 and '46. Our quotas shifted.

Q. Do you know how much business Lubben did 4560 with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1945 and 1946 just on invoices alone?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know how much the gross sales of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company were in 1945?

A. I would say around five million dollars.

4561 Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Lubben wasn't one of your biggest single customers in that year?

A. Oh, I don't think so. He was one of our larger customers.

Q. He was one of your larger customers?

A. That's right.

Q. And is the same true in 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other customer, who didn't have any quota in the base period, given the same amount or nearly that amount of candy as Mr. Lubben was in '45 and '46?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you say he only paid you premiums for this short period from—what are the dates again?

A. September or October of '45 until around July of '46.

Q. But you made pretty substantial sales to him, didn't you, in the months from January to August of 1945?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you continued to make substantial sales
4562 to him, didn't you, from July to December of 1946?

A. I think that's correct.

Q. And you mean that the sales that you made from September of '45 until about July or so of 1946 were the only premium sales?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the rest of them, you let him have without any premium whatsoever?

A. That's right.

Q. And in 1945, particularly before he began paying premiums in September, he had no quota base?

A. I would think that he would have some quota base, but I don't know how large it was. I know he got a tremendous amount of candy as a result of that United Chocolate deal, and I don't know what other deals might have been in there.

Q. Was Mr. Lubben the only man who could find any raw materials for you?

A. Mr. Druckerman found some for us.

Q. Mr. Druckerman sold you some sugar, didn't he?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that was his business, wasn't it?

4563 A. That's right.

Q. And you paid him the ceiling price for it?

A. That's right.

Q. And, in turn, you sold him some candy?

A. That's right.

Q. At ceiling price?

A. That's right.

Q. It was a perfectly legitimate business transaction?

A. Perfectly legitimate.

Q. It would have no bearing whatsoever on the income on your books, just so long as it was all recarded?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, do you know a person named Krasne?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Did you call Mrs. Krasne some time in 1946, the spring of 1946?

A. Yes, I did. Wait a minute. Mrs. Krasne? Oh, I did not.

Q. Who did you call then?

A. Either Mr. Krasne called me or I called him. I don't know which it was.

Q. Did you have a conversation at that time
4564 about some jewelry?

A. Yes, Mrs. Cain and Mrs. Krasne had taken some jewelry of Mrs. Cain's over to a jeweler that Mrs. Krasne had, to have it remodeled. And I asked—he said he was coming through Chicago and I asked him to pick it up and bring it with him. I fully expected to get a bill from the jeweler. When he arrived here he told me that Lubben—who was sitting next to him, and he had told me he was sitting next to him when I talked to him,—he said, "The big fellow is sitting here." I said, "Give him my regards."

So when Krasne came in and told me Lubben had advanced the money, I didn't say anything. I just let it go. And the next time I saw Lubben I paid him the $1,450.00 that he advanced to Krasne. And that ended the transaction.

4565 Q. How did you pay him?

A. In cash.

Q. Where did you get the cash?

A. Well, I always have cash.

Q. You always carry $1450.00 around with you?

A. No, but I can always get $1450.00. I think you will find, if you check the Waldorf Hotel, that I cashed a check in sums of—on different occasions for about a thousand or two thousand dollars.

Q. When did you cash a check for this $1450.00?

A. I didn't cash a check for $1450.00. I gave him $1450.00 out of the money I had.

Q. Out of money that you had?

A. I either had or got for that purpose. And I certainly wouldn't have cashed a check for $1450.00. But he had paid it in cash and I returned it to him in cash.

Q. And you never said anything to Mrs. Krasne about Mr. Lubben was going to bring the money over to her so she could pick up the jewelry?

A. I did not.

Q. And did you hear Mrs. Krasne's testimony on the stand?

A. I did.

4566 Q. How do you know Mr. Lubben paid her the money in cash?

A. She told me—or he told me. I think the way the transaction was handled, that Lubben handed Krasne the money and he gave it to Mary. I don't know. It certainly wasn't handled in the manner she testified to. In any event, I paid Lubben back.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask one question, if I may.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Cain, you stated—I don't know whether I heard you right, I thought I understood you to say that you had—you and the Sullivan families, your family and the Sullivan families had 50 per cent control, or 51 per cent control of this corporation in 1945. You didn't, did you?

A. No, we did not.

Q. And the two families together didn't have control until along the latter part of '46 when the Shotwell stock was bought.

4567 A. And then you would have to take in all our family, all branches of the family. But our control of Shotwell Manufacturing Company was acquired in the fall of '46, when we bought the Shotwell—when the company bought the Shotwell stock.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all I have to ask.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. In 1942, when the Shotwell Manufacturing Company was reorganized, wasn't it a part of the reorganization plan, or agreement, that you and Triplett, and the Sullivans were to get 51 per cent of the stock?

A. There was 51 per cent of the stock, or about that amount of stock paid out to a group of people. But Mr. Shotwell and I could have controlled the company—not me, because I didn't take a share of the stock. I would like to correct my testimony on that. That stock was divided among my family. I didn't have any to begin with, or maybe 500 shares, something like that.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask one more 4568 question, if I may.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Lockley drew from you an admission on cross examination that you had paid nothing for your stock. Now, didn't you guarantee the obligations, the payment of the obligations to the creditors of the Shotwell Company?

A. Yes, sir.

4569 Q. To what extent did you guarantee them?

A. Well, I didn't expect it to go as far as it did. We were out for about a half a million dollars before we got very far along.

Q. You gave them your personal guarantee?

A. That's correct.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you ever pay a dollar on that?

A. Fortunately I didn't have to. I paid the obligation off.

Q. I am afraid, Mr. Cain, I didn't quite understand you. Do you mean you paid off the corporation's obligations personally?

A. No, the corporation paid the obligations that I had personally guaranteed and that relieved me of any responsibility to take care of it.

Q. You personally never paid any part of it?

A. No, the corporation paid it.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Just one thing, Mr. Cain. You were asked
4570 about records sent by Tobias. Did you ever get records from Tobias, or did you get some figures from him?

A. I don't recall, Mr. O'Brien, what came from them.

Whatever it was sent into the auditing department for the purpose that they were gotten and that was it.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By the Court: Is that all, gentlemen?

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, your Honor.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: I think we will take our afternoon recess now, members of the jury. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

4571 By Mr. Kirby: Harold Sullivan, please.

HAROLD E. SULLIVAN, one of the defendants herein, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Harold E. Sullivan.

Q. You are one of the defendants?

A. I am.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Sullivan?

A. I live at 1140 Ramona Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Q. Where were you born?

A. I was born on a farm near Woodstock, Illinois.

Q. When?

A. When? 1896.

Q. And what was the family into which you were born?

A. It was a rather large family. I am one—the youngest of seventeen children.

Q. And where was the farm?

A. It was between Woodstock and Marengo, Illi-
4572 nois, in McHenry County.

Q. Your father was a farmer?

A. That's right.

Q. How long did he live?

A. Well, he was killed when I was eight years of age.

Q. And your mother?
A. She died when I was three.
Q. How long did you stay on the farm?
A. Well, I went to high school, in Chicago, St. James High School at 29th and Wabash Avenue.
Q. Keep your voice up, will you?
A. Then I went for two years to St. Joseph's College at Rensselaer, Indiana. I finished my high school course there. Then I returned to the farm for about a year and a half.
Q. Then what did you do?
A. Then I came back to Chicago.
Q. Who did you live with?
A. I lived with my sisters, here in Chicago.
Q. Where?
A. Well, originally at 3208 Rhoads Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.
Q. Did you work?
4573 A. I worked and I went to school at Loyola University, nights.
Q. Studying what?
A. Studying law.
Q. Where did you work in the daytime?
A. At the Chicago and North Western Railroad.
Q. And how long did you continue your night law studies at Loyola?
A. One year, interrupted by military service. I enlisted in the Army in 1917. I joined a local outfit which later became part of the Rainbow Division, 149th Field Artillery. We were sent overseas and I spent about twenty months overseas.
Q. When you came back what did you do?
A. I went to work for the North Western Railroad again. And in the year 1919 continued my studies at Loyola University.
Q. When did you graduate?
A. I graduated in 1921.
Q. When were you licensed to practice law?
A. 1921.
Q. And have you practiced law continuously since?
A. Continuously.
Q. Alone, or in association with others?
4574 A. In association with others.
Q. Name them.

A. Well, John E. Crahen, who has passed away not too long ago, John O'Toole, my brother, George, Mitchell Kilanowski, Ed. Hess, Stanley Sarneg, and I believe that is all.

4575 Q. What has been the general type of your practice?

A. Chancery and corporation work.

Q. Chancery work mostly has to do with property, is that it?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you held some position in the Courts?

A. I have been a Master in Chancery. I am just finishing my nineteenth year as a Master in Chancery of the Circuit Court of this County.

Q. And what is a Master in Chancery?

A. From a layman's point of view, it is an assistant of the Judge.

Q. Well, what do you do?

A. Hear cases, and report on the law and evidence, hear testimony of witnesses, and file a written report to the Judge on my finding, on the law and on the facts.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 93 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 93 for identification.)

4576 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And are you appointed by one of the Judges, or by all of them?

A. By all of the Judges of the Circuit Court.

Q. And is Exhibit 93 for identification, the type of an order which is entered in the Masters in Chancery appointment in this Circuit?

A. That's right.

Q. And is that a copy of an order with respect to you?

A. That is.

By Mr. Kirby: This illustrates the practice, and I offer it in evidence, your Honor.

Any objection?

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 93.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And that appointment as Master in Chancery was last renewed just last year?

A. December of last year.

4577 Q. Mr. Sullivan, when were you married?

A. I was married in 1928.

Q. To whom?

A. My wife's maiden name was Stella Maguire.

Q. And she still lives?

A. She still lives.

Q. Where did you live when you did marry?

A. Well, our first home was at 2448 Estes Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. How long did you live there?

A. I lived there for nine years.

Q. And then?

A. With the increase of the family, we needed larger quarters, and we moved to another apartment in the same building, 2448 Estes Avenue, and I lived there for nine years. And at my present address, I have been living for six years.

Q. How many children were born of the marriage?

A. Three.

Q. Name them.

A. One is deceased. Died at the age of a year and a half, and I have two boys living, Harold E. Jr., 24, and Joseph J., 22.

Q. Where does Harold, Junior, live?

4578 A. Harold Junior was just recently discharged from the Service, and he is living at home.

Q. How about Joseph? Where does he live?

A. Joseph J. was married last June, and now has a home of his own at 4246 Sheridan Road, Chicago, Illinois. And, incidentally, he is leaving for the Service next Wednesday.

4579 Q. When did you first hear about the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and how did you hear about it?

A. Well, I more or less lived with it for a number of years. I first heard about it from a neighbor of mine who happened to be the secretary and, I believe, vice president of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company as far back as 1929.

Q. And when you say a neighbor, where did he live and what was his name?

A. Charles Hall, Charles R. Hall. He lived at—I don't know his exact address, but it was in the same building I lived. I think it was 2466.

Q. He lived in the same apartment building with you and he was an officer of Shotwell?

A. That's right.

Q. Well, then what did you have to do with the Shotwell Company after 1929?

A. Well, in time Mr. Hall became a client of mine and eventually introduced me to Mr. Shotwell, who, likewise, became a client of mine. And I did work for Mr. Shotwell personally, and for the company, from 1929 up until the time that I became interested in it financially.

Q. And what was the general nature of the work
4580 you did for Mr. Shotwell during those years?

A. Well, various matters that would come up in connection with the corporation, personal tax matters, and matters of a general nature, together with advice by me to Mr, Shotwell on various maneuvers in connection with the company, ways of financing and so forth.

Q. What was the situation with respect to the financial status of the company in those years?

A. When I first became acquainted with Mr. Shotwell, and with the Shotwell Company, they were in dire need of financing and continued that way as long as I knew them, up until the time that we took over the management of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did Mr. Shotwell, in 1941, attempt to work out with others his financial difficulties?

A. In 1941 Mr. Shotwell came to me and told me that his—no, I believe it was a little bit previous to that—told me that he was in danger of being forced into bankruptcy. At that time I negotiated a loan for him with the Savage Brothers Machinery Company, which tided him over.

Mr. Shotwell at that time was a rather elderly man, 4581 and in the crash of the 20's he had lost all of his personal fortune. At one time he was a wealthy man. Now, subsequent to that he again was in financial difficulties and he came to me and told me that he was propositioned on letting a fellow come in and manage the company and that this fellow agreed to give him—oh, Mr. Shotwell agreed to give him an option on all of Mr. Shotwell's stock for $150,000.00. In the meantime he was to be general manager of the company. That option was to be exercised any time within five years. I did not know the party who was going into the company.

Q. Well, how did that turn out and how did you and Mr. Cain happen to get into it? Just let's get to that.

A. Well, about a year later he again told me that the party who was in there wanted to make a different deal with him, that he didn't figure that the property—or the company was a success and wanted to make another deal with him.

I told Mr. Shotwell—he wanted me to take hold of it. I said, "Well, I don't know whether I am your man or not. If I could get somebody associated with me who knows 4582 something about business I would be glad to attempt it."

Well, he says, "That will be O. K. with me." And in February—I think it was February 12th, Mr. Cain, Mr. Triplett and myself took over the management of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

4583 Q. What about the creditors, what did you do with respect to the creditors?

A. We immediately called the creditors together, told them that henceforth we would pay cash for everything that we purchased, and asked them to go along with us and please freeze their accounts for a period of five years, with monthly payments, of course, spread over a period of five years. I mean, the present accounts or liabilities that we found when we went in there.

Q. How much did the liabilities total, just roughly, Mr. Sullivan?

A. I would say about two hundred thousand dollars.

Q. Was there any guarantee given by you men personally?

A. We had to guarantee accounts up to the extent of nearly a half a million dollars.

Q. Mr. Shotwell stayed in as President, did he?

A. That's right.

Q. Was Mr. Shotwell finally bought out?

A. Mr. Shotwell was bought out, I believe, in July of 1945.

Q. And how much was he paid?

A. He was paid in excess—I am quite sure, I think 4584 it was $435,000.00, for his stock. Likewise, we entered into a non-competing contract with him for a period of eight years, which is still in effect, $15,000 a year.

So, all in all, I think Mr. Shotwell and his family got in excess of $600,000.

Q. His family still gets that fifteen—

A. That's right.

Q. Now, after the new group took over—oh, by the way, when you did take over, who was operating, who was running the plant itself?

A. Well, most of the people that you have seen here in the last few days. There was Frank Huebner—you mean before we got into it?

Q. Yes.

A. Frank Huebner, Stanley Graflund, Martin Erekson —Howard Roeser came there later—Mr. Shotwell. I believe that's at least the main officers of the company when we took it over.

Q. As far as you personally are concerned, did you run the manufacturing operation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. How often were you out at the plant?

A. Well, I was out at the plant maybe for—oh,
4585 once a week, maybe for two or three hours.

Q. Now, in the years in question, of 1945 and 1946, how often were you at the plant?

A. I would say about once a week, maybe for two or three hours a day.

Q. So you have been connected with it in one way or another since 1929 and had an interest financially since approximately '42, is that right?

4586 Q. Now, from 1942 until the present day have you ever prepared an income tax return for Shotwell or any income tax return for Shotwell?

A. Never.

Q. Specifically, did you have anything to do with the 1945 income tax return in question here?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the 1946 income tax return which is in issue here?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. When is the first time you ever actually saw the 1945 or the 1946 return?

A. I believe the first time that I have actually seen the returns has been in this court room.

Q. And have you to this day read or examined it?
A. No, I haven't.
Q. Mr. Sullivan, you have met a David Lubben?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. How many times in your whole life, up until the time he appeared in court here, have you seen David Lubben?
A. I don't believe that it is more than on five or six occasions.
Q. Have you ever received any money from David
4587 Lubben?
A. None, never.
Q. Have you ever seen him pay any money?
A. I never have.
Q. Has anybody given you any money from David Lubben?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Lubben testified here that on about February 14th, 1946, he made out some checks which have holes in them now, and they are Government's Exhibits 14, 14-A and 14-B. One day when he was on the stand he said he came up to your office and showed you those checks. Now, did he ever do any such thing?
A. He never did.
Q. Did you ever see those checks before this trial?
A. I never did.
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben came back the next day and himself dropped that testimony. You heard that, did you?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. But he then said that he had come up to your office in August or September of '46. Did he do that?
4588 A. Mr. Lubben has never been in my office.
Q. Well, he said that he came up to your office and that you said you needed some money for building a driveway on your farm in Marengo. Did you hear him say that?
A. I heard him say that.
Q. Now, what farm in Marengo do you own?
A. I own the old Sullivan homestead.
Q. And how long has that been in the Sullivan family?
A. One hundred years.
Q. Is there a driveway on it?
A. There is a driveway on the farm that has been there for fifty years.

Q. Did you in 1946 put in a new driveway?
A. I did not.
Q. When is the first time you saw the driveway that is there right now?
A. Well, when I was born, I believe, if I could see then, Mr. Kirby. But it is at least fifty years.
Q. So did you ever have any discussion with Mr. Lubben at all—
4589 A. I did not.
Q. —about wanting cash money to build a driveway?
A. I did not.
Q. That is the only proof you heard Mr. Lubben say—that is the only instance in which he mentioned you at all when he was on the stand, isn't that right?
A. That's right.
Q. Now, when is the first time you ever met Lubben?
A. I believe it was in New York at the candy convention in June of 1945.
4590 Q. Did you spend any time with him?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Did you ever go out to dinner with him, you or your wife?
A. On one occasion.
Q. Was there more than just yourself and your wife; were there other people there?
A. Yes, there was Mr. and Mrs. Berry, or Burry.
Q. Berry?
A. Berry. And another couple. I have forgotten their name. I think Mr. and Mrs. Huebner and myself and wife.
Q. And about when was that, do you know?
A. Well, I am not sure.
Q. Were there any other occasions?
A. That was the only occasion I ever was out with him socially.
Q. Now, on that occasion, when you were out socially with him, was that a time when he came up into the hotel rooms, where you and Huebner were?
A. I don't ever remember seeing him in the hotel room, where myself and Huebner were.
4591 Q. Your wife was with you?
A. What is that?
Q. I mean, in your hotel room, that was where yourself and your wife were?

A. That's right.

Q. But was Huebner—I mean Lubben up there at that time?

A. Not that I ever recall.

Q. Now, during the year 1946, which is the next year, that is the time when Lubben said he came up to your office and that so-called driveway conversation took place. Now, he wasn't up there then?

A. I never—Lubben was never in my office.

Q. Well, did you talk to Lubben about any business matters at all in the indictment years of '45 or '46?

A. I never did.

Q. When did you first talk to Lubben about any business matters?

A. Well, I believe it was in January of 1948.

Q. Where?

A. In New York.

Q. Where in New York?

4592 A. I think at that time we were staying at the—what is it, Wicker Hotel?

Q. Warwick?

A. Warwick Hotel in New York.

Q. Who was staying there?

A. Well, I believe Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner, myself. If I recall correctly, we came from Boston at that time. I might be mistaken, but it is my memory that we came in from Boston, and we saw Lubben and a party by the name of Cary on Shotwell—on Lubben's problems. Lubben had been seeking additional money from Shotwell.

Q. What do you mean, additional money?

A. Well, he got a loan previous to that time of $75,000, which Shotwell guaranteed.

Q. That's the Sterling bank transaction?

A. That's the Sterling bank loan.

Q. And now he wanted—

A. And the information that I received from Mr. Huebner was that he had some other proposition to offer. And we met with Mr. Cary and with Mr. Lubben, and his proposition was to the effect that we subordinate the loan of $75,000 to a new loan to be put on by budget factors.

4593 It is a concern that I believe Lubben himself had an interest in, with Mr. Cary, and that we subordinate our loan. I told him that I wasn't in favor of it, and that I didn't intend to do anything about it.

Q. Had you already had—you and Mr. Cain, an adverse report from Busby?

A. That's right, in late '47 or early 1948.

4594 Q. You say the net effect of that was you told him no?

A. That is right.

Q. When was the next time you met Lubben?

A. Well, according to the records of the company, I was in New York, I believe, the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th of February, 1948.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, keep your voice up.

A. All right.

Q. In February, early, in 1948?

A. That is right.

Q. And where were you?

A. At the Gotham Hotel.

Q. With whom?

A. Frank Huebner.

Q. And what happened?

A. I believe by appointment again through Mr. Huebner, Lubben wanted to see us, and Lubben made an appointment to see us one morning at the Gotham Hotel. He arrived there with Mr. Davidson about ten thirty in the morning, as I recall it.

I don't know whether it was on the first day we arrived, or the second day, but anyway we made an appoint-

4595 ment, so he came up to the room.

Q. Did you have a parlor?

A. Yes. —And sat down, and again discussed this loan of $50,000.

Q. What was said, Mr. Sullivan?

A. Well, he says, "I have to have fifty thousand dollars. I have a lot of pressing things that I have to pay." He went on to say that he even was paying off Federal Agents.

I said, "Lubben, as far as I am concerned, you are not going to get fifty thousand dollars from us, or fifty thousand cents."

I said; "We did guarantee a loan for you of seventy-five thousand dollars." I said, "One of the conditions of the loan was that you send us a monthly statement as to the condition of your business, and that was in June of last year. To date, we have received no statement from you, and as a matter of fact, I am just not interested."

Davidson and Lubben were in the room, as I said, and Mr. Huebner, and then he turned down a brief case alongside of his chair.

Q. Who did?

4596 A. Lubben.

And he says, "Perhaps after I show you these, you will think differently about it." And he opened up the brief case, and he pulled out some invoices that he said, "Here are some invoices that maybe will make you change your mind."

I said, "Let me see them." He gave me some invoices and some memoranda, marked up invoices, and I said to him, "These are a fake." I said, "I don't scare very easily." I said, "This looks like blackmail to me."

He said, "Well, you can call it whatever you want." He said, "I have got a lot more of these at the office, and you can call it blackmail, or whatever you want, but some day, I am going to see to it that you are in a peck of trouble."

"Well", I said, "I don't scare very easily, and you can do whatever you damn well please with these papers." And with that, I left him, or he left me. He left the room.

4597 Q. Have you seen Lubben again after that?

A. I have never seen Mr. Lubben again after that time.

Q. Until—

A. I think I will take that back. I think I was out at the airport one day and I happened to see him passing by but until he came into this court room here—

Q. Until the trial?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you give him the fifty thousand?

A. I did not give him the fifty thousand.

Q. Did you call Byron Cain and tell him of the threat?

A. I called Byron Cain who happened to be in Palm Springs, California, at the time, and I told him what happened.

Q. What was the next thing that happened?

A. The meeting with Mr. Lubben?

Q. Yes. How did you get the account or the seventy-five thousand and those matters finally straightened out?

A. Well, I did say to him, I said, "There is only one thing that I would like to do." I said, "I would like 4598 to have you get out of my hair. You owe us seventy-five thousand dollars. Make some arrangements to pay for it. If necessary, you can name your own ticket on it, but I want to have you get out of my hair."

About two hours later I received a call and the party told me at the other end of the wire that he was Irving Carry. He began talking to me and I recognized his voice and then he said, "What do you mean by pushing my boy friend around?"

I said, "What are you talking about?" He said, "You know what I am talking about." He said, "Dave Lubben."

I said, "If you have anything to say to me, well, don't say it to me on the telephone. Come up to my suite and say it."

Now, that is about the only thing that happened in New York. About four days later or maybe a week later, Frank Huebner called me up and he told me that Lubben had been in touch with him and that there was a chance of straightening out the loan in New York by taking over the Haberkorn Candy Company, that that was Lubben's suggestion.

4599 I said, "Frank, you know how I feel about the situation and any deal you make is a good deal, assuming that there is some equity to it." Then I told him to get ahold of Busby, have him check over the statements of the Haberkorn deal and if he thought it was a good deal, why, to go ahead and make it.

Q. And the Haberkorn deal was finally made?

A. That is right, about a week later.

Q. And that was the end of any deals with Lubben, so far as you know?

A. That was the end of any deal with Lubben, and as I said, I don't think I saw him except this one day at the airport, until I saw him in this court room.

4600 Q. Mr. Sullivan, what was the first knowledge you ever had of Shotwell engaging in any over-ceiling cash deals with David Lubben?

A. Well, the first knowledge I ever had was in the late summer of 1945.

Q. And how did you find out about that, at that time?

A. Well, the corn syrup situation was very critical.

Q. How did you find out about it?

A. Frank Huebner called up on the telephone and told me that we were in danger of having to close the plant because of the making, or the inability to get corn syrup. He wanted to know if I could do anything about it.

I said, "No, I don't believe I can, but I will try." And I called up, oh, two or three people that I knew in the corn syrup business, and I asked them what the situation was, and they practically told me there was none available to the processor—to the manufacturers, unless we were able to get corn—

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please—

By the Witness:

A. —to the refinery.

4601 By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me, Mr. Sullivan. I object, unless Mr. Sullivan specifies the times, the places, and the individuals with whom he had the conversation.

By the Witness:

A. Well, one I talked to was Tom O'Neil, a broker. Another gentleman, I believe I talked to was Bob Adam, that testified here the other day. Another one—I am trying to think of his name, he was with Penick and Ford—not Horan. Dave O'Connor.

By Mr. Lockley: How do you spell it, Mr. Sullivan?

By the Witness: O'Connor?

By Mr. Lockley: O'Connor.

By the Witness: And I believe that's all, but they all had the same story.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Then did you talk to Huebner again about it?

A. Then I talked to Huebner about it, or he called me up. I don't know whether he called me up, or whether I called him up, and he told me that he had been talking 4602 to Lubben, and that Lubben had a way of getting corn syrup, or corn. He said that Lubben represented that he had several people out in the field buying raw corn, to be sent to the various refineries, and that if we could send him candy, and permit him to pay the overages, we could get the cash, and he would send in some men to pick up the cash, and we would eventually get the corn syrup.

I talked to him about a week later, and he told me also that there were other places where he could make, procure corn deals, and that is about—

Q. By Mr. Lockley: I object again, your Honor, unless Mr. Sullivan specified to whom he was talking, and when.

By the Court: Objection sustained.

4603 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Who were you talking to on these phone conversations?

A. Frank Huebner.

Q. When was it?

A. It was in the late summer of 1945.

Q. And you heard Mr. Lubben—I mean, you heard Mr. Ryan testify here that he had originated through Lubben that type of deal?

A. That is right.

Q. And was that what Huebner described to you over the phone?

A. That is right.

Q. Now after that conversation with Huebner, did the plant close down?

A. No, it did not close down.

Q. Did it get the raw materials?

A. It got the raw materials.

Q. Did you personally handle any of the money?

A. I never handled any of the money. I never saw any money.

Q. Did you ever handle the cash box?

A. I never handled the cash box. I didn't know where the cash box was kept, as a matter of fact.

4604 Q. Your knowledge of it was that they were getting cash and spending cash?

A. That is right.

Q. Now when—

A. And that was general in the trade.

Q. What was general in the trade?

A. Getting cash and—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I object to what was general in the trade.

By Mr. Kirby: Wait a minute.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: I beg the Court's indulgence for a minute. On the question of a person engaging in evasion and on the question of whether he is intending to defeat the Government of its taxes, it does matter what the witness testifies.

By the Court: Ask him if he knew there was a tax problem presented by these transactions.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. When did you first learn, Mr. Sullivan, that a 4605 tax problem was presented by these transactions?
A. I first learned of that in January of 1948.
Q. From whom?
A. Mr. Busby.
Q. Had you known before that of the now abandoned theory that those were not proper deductions?
A. I knew that at that time—are you talking about 1948 now?
Q. I am not talking about Busby. I am talking about your knowledge prior to the Busby conversation.
A. Well, I didn't know at that time that they were not proper deductions.
Q. The first person that told you that such was the Government's then policy was Busby?
A. That is right.
Q. Well, you know, as a matter of fact, that that is not the present Government policy?
A. That is right.
Q. But once you did learn of that policy and that it posed tax questions, what were your instructions?
A. My instructions to Busby—
4606 By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, please, if your Honor please. If your Honor please, what instructions, to whom, when and where?
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Yes. Did you give any instructions?
A. Yes, I did. That was at the meeting in January at Cain's house and I told Busby to immediately do something about it.
Q. To do what?
A. Well, he suggested that a disclosure of some kind be given, and I told him to go down and see the Collector of Internal Revenue and make a disclosure.
Q. Now, to go back to the tax returns themselves, Mr. Sullivan, you say that you never did see them?
A. I never did see them.
Q. Did you at any time have any intent to defeat the Government of any of its taxable revenue?
A. I never did.

Q. On either year?
A. On either year.
Q. Were you even an officer of the corporation in 1945?
A. I was not.
4607 Q. When did you become an officer of the corporation in the indictment years?
A. I believe the record shows July 1, 1946.
Q. And by that time the 1945 return had already been filed?
A. That is right.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That's all.

4608 Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, you are a lawyer?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. For how long?
A. Thirty-two years.
Q. And in that length of time, have you ever prepared any income tax returns?
A. I don't even prepare my own.
Q. I understood that on your direct examination with Mr. Kirby you said one of your duties when you were working in the early years of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was advice on matters of a personal nature, tax matters, and so forth, is that correct?
A. Well, that means personal property tax, real estate tax,—not income tax.
Q. Now you stated that after you interested Mr. Cain and Mr. Triplett in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company that the stock of Mr. Shotwell was eventually bought?
A. That is right.
Q. By whom?
A. By the company. He was retired.
4609 Q. The corporation bought it?
A. That is right.
Q. So the people who had stock left in the corporation thereby increased the value of that holding, isn't that right?
A. You mean per share?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, that is right.
By Mr. Kirby: I object to his mathematics because if the money goes out to buy the stock and then the stock comes in—

By the Witness: I assume—

By the Court: You have answered the question.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) I assume that he meant because the shares are reduced that the same amount of money being left in the company, it would increase the value of the shares. By taking the money out of the corporation, naturally it reduces the shares.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Yes. Have you ever represented any client in connection with the income tax matters?

4610 A. I never have. I take it back. I did. I don't say I ever represented as of record, but I advised him and I put him in touch with an income tax lawyer.

Q. You stated that you went out socially on one occasion with Mr. Lubben, Mr. Burry, Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner, but you failed to state when that was. Do you have any recollection?

A. I wouldn't. No, I wouldn't.

Q. Do you know where you went?

A. I am not sure of that. I know we did go down to the Bowery, finally. That I know.

Q. Did you go to the Diamond Horseshoe that night?

A. And I believe the Diamond Horseshoe. I think that is right.

Q. That possibly could have been January 19, 1945?

A. Well, it possibly could have been.

Q. Now, you were not an officer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company until July of 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. How long have you been a director?

A. Well, I am not sure. I think I was a director when we took over the control of Shotwell.

4611 Q. That was around 1942, was it?

A. 1942.

Q. And you continued as a director, didn't you?

A. I believe that is true.

Q. Who was the attorney for the corporation?

A. I was.

Q. And you continued as attorney for 1945 and 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you receive a salary?

A. I did.

Q. Was that only in connection with your professional duties as an attorney?

A. Not necessarily. I think the first few years that was true, but not of later years. I drew a salary.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you received a salary of $600.00 a week, effective July 1, 1946?

A. That could have been true.

4612 Q. You were only working there two or three hours a week?

A. Well, when I say working there, that doesn't necessarily mean I am physically present at the plant. There are other things that I do as an attorney for the corporation. That doesn't necessarily mean I have to be at the plant.

Q. And of course you also received attorney's fees in addition to the $600.00 a week, didn't you?

A. No, never. I am sure of that. If you have got proof to the contrary, it is certainly something that I know nothing about.

Q. When you were referring to the $75,000.00 loan that you stated Lubben had obtained from Shotwell, are you quite sure of yourself on that, Mr. Sullivan, that the Shotwell Company guaranteed that loan?

A. That the Shotwell Company guaranteed the loan?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. You are bartering with words. Mr. Cain guaranteed the loan with Security, so the Shotwell Company—

4613 Q. In other words, it was Mr. Cain who actually—

A. He signed the name, if that is what you mean, sure, the guarantor.

Q. And whatever arrangement Mr. Cain had with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, was between him and the corporation?

A. Well, he signed it as agent of the corporation. It was never intended that Cain personally should guarantee the loan.

Q. And you knew about the loan at the time it was being approved, then?

A. No. I really didn't until after it was approved.

Q. You mean that Mr. Cain could take $85,000.00 worth of the corporation's assets and pledge them to a loan without the approval of the directors?

A. Well, I don't know whether it means that or not, but he did that, and he did it with my consent. I mean, my subsequent consent. Maybe I didn't like it, no.

Q. So you subsequently approved what he could have done?

A. Yes, that is what aggravated me in the deal, as a matter of fact, one of the things. I didn't see why we 4614 should be loaning or guaranteeing loans in New York when we had enough to do of it here in Chicago.

Q. Just what were your duties with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I was general counsel of the company. I helped in the sales of the company. I called on the syndicate trade of the company, fostering sales, which was done. I earned my salary at the company, I believe.

Q. And you were aware in the latter part of 1945 that the company was receiving over-ceiling premiums from Mr. Lubben, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you continue to be aware that that situation existed throughout 1945, the balance of the year?

A. That is right.

Q. And were you aware of the fact that it also continued through 1946?

A. I believe up until June or July of 1946, that is true.

Q. Do you know at which time the practice ceased?

4615 A. I think it was in July of 1946, possibly August.

Q. How did it come to your attention that that practice had stopped?

A. My conversation with Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser.

Q. Did they keep you advised of how much money was at hand at all times in the box?

A. They never did.

Q. You mean you just had a casual conversation with one of them in the hall and he said, "Mr. Lubben stopped bringing in any premium payments"?

A. How is that?

Q. How did it come about that you knew Mr. Lubben wasn't bringing any money in?

A. Because they told me they closed up the cash box.

Q. When was this?
A. As I said, I think it was July or August of 1946.
Q. Who told you?
A. I believe it was Mr. Graflund told me.
Q. And where was he?
A. Where was Graflund?
Q. Yes.
4616 A. He was out in the factory.
Q. And what did he say?
A. Well, he told me that the deal was all over, that they deposited whatever money was left in the cash box in the Shotwell Company account.
4617 Q. Was this just a casual conversation?
A. I don't think it was casual. I was interested in knowing whether the deal was through.
Q. Did you ask him about it? Is that how it came about?
A. Well, as a matter of general conversation. I don't know whether he told me, or I asked him.
Q. You knew about the premiums being paid in 1945. As a lawyer, weren't you also aware of the fact that those premiums should have been reported on the income tax returns of the corporation?
A. Well, I didn't know but what they had been reported on the income tax of the corporation, and I was never told that they were not.
Q. Did you ever inquire?
A. I don't know as I ever inquired. I just naturally thought that in making up the tax return, those things would be taken care of. We have a CPA, and we have a group of auditors out there.
Q. And how—
A. Well, as I said, I don't pretend to know anything about income tax or books and records.
4618 Q. Well, did you know whether or not these items were being included in the books and records?
A. I didn't even know that. I did not know how it was being handled.
Q. Do you know what the purpose of it was in handling it in cash?
A. I assume that that was the only way that these people would get you the corn. In other words, you couldn't handle it by check.

Q. Well, what people?

A. Well, what people? I mean the people who were going out in the country and buying corn. They were interested in cash, and not taking checks.

Q. Who were they?

A. Well, do you want me to tell you by actual knowledge? By actual knowledge, no. What knowledge I have gained through the company, I can mention a couple of them. Mr. Keeley and Doe, and then I think there was a fellow, Rockenfelder. I never saw him. I don't know anything about him, but this is knowledge I gained through my position in the company.

Q. Did you ever pay any money to Mr. Cain?

4619 A. No, I didn't.

Q. I wish you wouldn't break in on me, Mr. Sullivan.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor. I realize it is difficult for the reporter.

By the Witness: I am sorry. I didn't mean to do it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who is Rockenfelder? How do you spell it?

A. I think your guess is about as good as mine. I never saw the name written out. That is the way I understood the name.

Q. What is his first name?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, what business is he in?

A. Well, I understood he is one of these lags that was going out in the country and buying corn from the farmers?

Q. Who told you that?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Did you ever see him?

A. I never saw him. I never saw Dr. Doe. I never saw Keely.

4620 Q. So, so far as you know, not a dime of this cash money was spent for the corn in the black market?

A. Except from the knowledge that I have gained by reason of my position with the company.

Q. And what is that?

A. What do you mean?

Q. What knowledge is that?

A. Well, I just got through telling you, I was told;

and I have every reason to believe that there was money paid to Keeley, that there was money paid to Dr. Doe, that there was money paid to this Rockenfelder.

Q. Were any figures mentioned?

A. Well, at times, sure, there were figures. They told me figures ranging from—

Q. Well—

A. —$18,000 to $8,000 at a time.

Q. Can you tell us as closely as possible the date upon which you were told, and who told you, and the amount in each instance?

A. Well, as a matter of fact, I don't believe that I was too much interested in it, after we were getting our corn 4621 syrup; and therefore, I believe that it must have been some time in 1946, and when you say "Who told me", I think it was a matter of general conversation in the office, Graflund, Roeser, Mrs. Morrill, Al Shotwell, Frank Huebner, Byron Cain.

Q. It was your understanding that this money was being paid for corn in the black market, is that so?

A. You mean being paid for raw corn in the black market? Yes.

Q. Did you, as a lawyer, not warn your client that it was violating a criminal law of the United States by conspiring with others to evade the OPA laws?

A. We knew that we were violating the OPA laws, but there is a question of survival. If we didn't do it, it would have meant that our factory had to shut down, and we were not the only ones that were doing it. Everybody in the confectionary business did it.

4622 Q. Weren't you getting allocations of corn syrup?

A. Not at that critical period, we were not. Otherwise we would have had no occasion to go out on the black market and buy corn.

Q. Can you tell us how many cars of corn were bought by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in this manner or were arranged by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I couldn't tell you within 200 cars, no, except what I have heard.

Q. Could you tell how many cars were allocated on the quotas of corn syrup from the various refineries?

A. You mean what—

Q. During 1945 and 1946?
A. You mean cars of corn syrup?
Q. Yes.
A. No.
4623 Q. You think it possible that you did receive some corn syrup during that period under allocation?
A. I don't think there is any question about it. And that is just knowledge that I have gained from my position in the company, not personal knowledge. I had a lot of friends in the corn syrup business. Still have, I hope.
Q. Did you ever receive any currency from Mr. Cain or Mr. Huebner during 1945 or 1946?
A. I never received any currency at any time from anybody.
Q. Are you aware of the fact that a record was being kept of the currency in the black box in the office?
A. I was not. I didn't know how it was handled. There were people out there at the factory that I had confidence in. And I wasn't worried about it.
Q. Now, in the conversation you had with Mr. Huebner when he told you that corn syrup was hard to get, he told you that Mr. Lubben had approached him with a suggestion for getting corn?
A. That's right.
Q. Will you tell me again the substance of that 4624 conversation with Mr. Huebner?
A. Well, he said Mr. Lubben called him, or either called on him, I don't know which, and told him he had a way of getting corn to refineries, and that he—if he could get the candy and get us some money—or get some money to us in cash, he would send somebody to the factory to pick it up and eventually we would get the corn syrup.
Q. You mean that Mr. Lubben was going to send the money to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for candy?
A. That's right.
Q. And then he was going to send somebody to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company to pick up the money?
A. I don't know how—what his modus operandi was. Maybe he wasn't. But maybe he told somebody to go to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and they could get cash to purchase corn.
Q. Wasn't candy then on a seller's market?
A. You are talking about what year?

Q. 1945 and 1946.

A. No. On a seller's market? Yes.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. You mean that candy was hard to get.

4625 Q. Wasn't corn, likewise?

A. Corn was hard to get, sure.

Q. You stated that you hadn't improved your driveway any at your farm at Marengo in fifty years. Have you made any other improvements around the farm in the last years since 1945?

A. I have made a lot of improvements on the farm. And I paid for them.

Q. Didn't you buy additional land in 1945 and 1946?

A. I think I bought 79 acres adjacent to me in 1949—or I believe it was '47. Maybe you are right. Maybe it was '46. It cost $10,000.00.

Q. Now, in 1948 Mr. Lubben met you at the Gotham with Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan?

A. Mr. Huebner and Mr. who?

Q. Mr. Lubben met you at the Gotham Hotel with Frank Huebner and Mr. Sullivan, and Mr. Lubben had Mr. Davidson with him, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. In February of 1948?

A. It was, I think—according to my records it must have been around the 4th or 5th of February.

Q. And that was after you had turned him down

4626 on the $50,000.00 loan?

A. That's right.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's right. And that's the time he came with the invoices, too.

4627 Q. Well, now, was that before or after the Haberkorn deal has been consummated?

A. That was just previous to the Haberkorn deal. As a result of my meeting there the Haberkorn deal was born, although nothing was said of it at that time. But about a week later Mr. Huebner called and said that Lubben had been in touch with him, or was in town—I think he said he was in town.

Q. Now, did Mr. Huebner go out to Mr. Lubben's home during the particular visit to New York?

A. I think that Mr. Huebner went out to his home on that particular visit. I am not sure.

Q. And do you know what the purpose of Mr. Huebner's visit was at that time?

A. Lubben apparently got in touch with him and told him he was turning over some invoices to him.

Q. Are those the invoices that you said Mr. Lubben threatened you with?

A. That I don't know, because I wouldn't believe Lubben if he told me they were the same invoices.

Q. Well, what would cause him to turn them over?

4628 A. What would cause Lubben?

Q. Yes.

A. I wouldn't know what would cause him to turn them over. He stated here on the stand that he never intended to turn them over.

Q. Now, what did Mr. Davidson say during all of this conversation when Mr. Lubben was allegedly threatening you?

A. Mr. Davidson had a rather conciliatory attitude. He said nothing. He was afraid there may be trouble, I think. I mean physical trouble.

Q. Didn't he remonstrate at all with Mr. Lubben when he was attempting to blackmail you in this way?

A. Yes, he did. He says, "Now, Dave." And he waved his hand at him.

Q. And had you ever met this man, Irving Carry, who called you a couple of hours later?

A. Yes. And he is a typical "hood," if you want my opinion of him.

Q. Did he threaten you?

A. Yes, he did. I mean, I don't know what you mean by threat. But certainly his tone was such as to indicate 4629 that it wasn't a little social gathering of some kind that he wanted to see me about.

Q. Well, I am not associating with "typical 'hoods,'" Mr. Sullivan. Could you tell me what one is like?

A. Well, maybe he is—he is a rather large fellow. Impresses me as being very ignorant and tough.

Q. He talked to you on the telephone and you gained all this impression of him?

A. Oh, no. No, I saw him before. Otherwise I wouldn't have had that impression, likely.

By the Court: I think it is adjournment time. Well, members of the jury, it is adjournment time and we will recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

I trust you will bear in mind the admonition I have given you, that you should not talk to anybody about this case during the time you are serving as jurors. And if anybody does talk to you about it I want you to report the matter to the Court.

I trust all of you will have a happy week end.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain
4630 standing until the jury and the Judge leave the court room, please.

This honorable court will recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause to Monday, October 12, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock A. M.)

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Clerk: No. CR 52 143, United States versus The Shotwell Manufacturing Company et al. Case on trial.

4632 HAROLD E. SULLIVAN one of the defendants herein, heretofore called on his own behalf, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, on Friday when Mr. Kirby was questioning you, were you asked the following questions, on page 4597 of the record:

"Question: How did you get the account or the $75,000 in those matters finally straightened out?

"Answer: Well, I did say to him, I said, 'There is only one thing that I would like to do.' I said, 'I would like to have you get out of my hair. You owe us $75,000. Make some arrangements to pay for it. If necessary, you can name your own ticket on it, but I want to have you get out of my hair.'"

That is not the complete answer, but that is a portion of it. Do you recall making that answer?

4633 A. I do.

Q. Now, did you have anything to do with Mr. Lubben at the time the $75,000 loan was negotiated?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You had no part of that negotiation?

A. No. You mean of the loan itself?

Q. That's right.

A. No.

Q. In July of '47?

A. No.

Q. That was done entirely by Mr. Cain, is that correct?

A. Well, I don't know whether it was by Mr. Cain or not. I think Mr. Huebner was also present.

Q. Mr. Cain personally guaranteed the loan?

A. Well, again you are bantering with words. Shotwell guaranteed the loan.

Q. It was done in Mr. Cain's name, he was acting as agent for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, is that correct?

A. That's right.

4634 Q. Well, in any event, you knew that Mr. Lubben had given Mr. Cain, as agent for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a mortgage in the amount of $75,000.00—or a mortgage, rather, for security on the $75,000.00.

A. Well, I knew that there was a mortgage. As a matter of fact, as I understand it, the bank wouldn't give the mortgage unless the loan was guaranteed by Mr. Cain.

Q. Well, the bank didn't give the mortgage, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Lubben gave the mortgage, is that correct?

A. I mean they wouldn't loan the money. Put it that way.

Q. And Mr. Lubben gave the mortgage, not the bank, he gave the mortgage to Mr. Cain, isn't that so?

A. Yes, but the bank put up the money.

Q. That's right.

A. Yes.

Q. The bank put up the money, but Mr. Lubben gave the mortgage to Mr. Cain, is that so?

A. That's right.

Q. And you heard Mr. Cain testify that he had 4635 had the property appraised and that he thought that his $75,000.00 was well protected?

A. Well, I don't know as he said that it was a regular appraisal. I think he looked over the factory and the machinery, and the property, yes. But not a regular appraisal.

Q. Well, didn't he say that he had ample security?

A. Well, I think perhaps there was ample security, yes.

Q. Well, then, as a lawyer you were perfectly well aware of the fact that you could have foreclosed on that mortgage if Mr. Cain had considered that it was worth more than the $75,000.00, and on which there was a $66,000.00 balance, isn't that so?

A. Well, I believe so, yes.

Q. Well, then, as long as you could have done that, why was it necessary for you to tell him to name his own ticket?

A. Well, I think that I have already stated my reason for that, and that was when he wanted the $50,000.00 from Shotwell, the additional $50,000.00, and pulled out these marked up invoices and memoranda.

4636 As a matter of fact, I wouldn't have given him seventy-five cents in the first place.

Q. Well, I don't quite follow your reasoning, Mr. Sullivan. He owed you $66,000.00 on a mortgage, and the property which was mortgaged was well worth $66,000.00, and yet you were willing to let him write his own ticket because now he wanted an additional $50,000.00, is that correct?

By Mr. Kirby: I object on the ground that that isn't a question. That is kind of a summary argument.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Will you restate the question, please.

(Question read.)

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the assumption that the property is worth $66,000.00.

By Mr. Lockley: That is the testimony, your Honor, of Mr. Cain.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: In the first place, I don't know whether the property was worth $66,000.00.

By Mr. Lockley:

4637 Q. You heard Mr. Cain testify.

A. Well, that doesn't necessarily mean that that is the value of the property. That might be his opinion as to the value.

Q. You are the attorney for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

A. I was the attorney for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And wasn't Mr. Cain in the real estate business?

A. That's right. Not in New York.

Q. Well, did you, as attorney for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company ever recommend that that mortgage be foreclosed?

A. I told you what my recommendation was.

4638 Q. Well, what was it?

A. Well, as I said previously, there was only one thing I wanted to do with Lubben. That was to get Lubben out of my hair. And I meant it.

Q. Couldn't you have done that by foreclosing the mortgage?

A. If you wanted to go through that trouble, yes.

Q. You are a lawyer. Is it trouble to foreclose a mortgage?

A. Certainly it is. And you are a lawyer and you know it is.

Q. You got paid for being the lawyer for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, didn't you?

A. Well, I don't know what time you are talking about.

Q. I am talking about—

A. When I was an officer, no.

Q. You got $30,000.00 a year for being attorney in 19[illegible], didn't you?

A. I don't know the exact amount that I got for being the attorney. But if you say that is right, that is what I got.

Q. If the books say $30,000.00, will you say that is correct?

4639 A. I think it is.

Q. And you got $15,000.00 for the first six months of '46?

A. That I don't know. But if that is what the records show, that is what shows.

Q. And you got $15,000.00 for the last six months, only it was called salary?

A. That's right.

Q. And you continued to get that amount during '47 and '48?

A. I believe so.

Q. You were representing the corporation?

A. That's right.

Q. And yet you didn't know anything about this $75,000.00 loan which Byron Cain was making out at that time, in the corporation's name?

A. I don't know whether that is an exact statement or not. I knew that Lubben wanted money, yes. But, as I told you, I wouldn't have recommended the loan, nor did I recommend the loan. As a matter of fact, I criticized Cain for making the loan.

Q. Well, Cain made the loan personally. The corporation didn't have to take it over from Cain, did it?

4640 A. Well, I don't believe in running out on Cain, either. If that's what you mean. Certainly I could have lightly said, as a stockholder, "Well, no, this is not a corporate matter." I knew well that it was, though.

Q. Well, you subsequently entered into the Haberkorn deal, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. What did you have to do with the Haberkorn purchase?

A. Well, I had very little to do with the Haberkorn purchase. I don't know whether I covered it or not. But I will be glad to tell you what—if I didn't, I will be glad to repeat it.

Q. You had very little to do with it?

A. Very little to do with it.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Cain's testimony, at page 4411, where he said:

"I was called by Mr. Sullivan, I would think, about the 10th of February, 1948, and told that we had bought from Lubben the Haberkorn Candy Company, and that in the transaction we had sold to 4641 Lubben or to—in the transaction, anyway, our mortgage, which was paid down at that time to $67,000.00, was going into the deal, and an additional amount of cash to make up $101,000.00, was being paid for the Haberkorn Candy Company."

Did you have that conversation about the 10th of February with Mr. Cain?

A. I think so.

4642 Q. Well, then, you must have had something to do with the Haberkorn Candy Company.

A. I didn't say I didn't have anything to do with the Haberkorn Candy Company. I didn't say I didn't.

Q. Well, then, what did you have to do with it; did you have anything to do with the transactions which led up to the purchase of that company?

A. I had nothing to do with the transactions that led up to the purchase of that company. Mr. Huebner called me on the phone—this is shortly after we got back from New York in February—and he told me that Lubben had been in touch with him, and that he wanted to sell us the Haberkorn Company. I asked him if there was any equity in the Haberkorn Company. He said, yes, there was, it looked as though there was some equity in the Haberkorn Candy Company, over and above their obligations.

I said, "Get hold of Busby and have him make an audit." And I said, "You know how I feel, I want to get that fellow out of my hair." Meaning Lubben.

4643 And that is the extent of what I had to do with Haberkorn, with that deal, with this exception, that I approved the contract, I believe, which was drawn in Eckert and Peterson's office.

Q. Did Lubben own the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. I don't know what your contention—yes, Lubben owned the Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. You are a lawyer, Mr. Sullivan. You know the difference between owning something and not owning something. Now, did Lubben own the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. Yes, he did. And you could prove that he owned it very easily.

Q. Did you buy the Haberkorn Candy Company from Lubben?

A. No, we didn't buy the Haberkorn Candy Company from Lubben, because he had a nominee. His sister was his nominee in the Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. Did you buy the Haberkorn Candy Company from his sister?

A. No, because that was also worked—the sister sold her stock to the Urbans, on the very day that the contract was entered into.

Q. And Urban sold all the stock to The Shotwell
4644 manufacturing Company?

A. With the connivance of Lubben, yes.

Q. So it must have been with the connivance of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company didn't have anything to do with it.

Q. You weren't required to buy the Haberkorn Candy Company, were you?

A. I just got through telling you, there was only one thing that stuck in my mind, "I want to get rid of this fellow, and get rid of him forever, if it is possible."

Q. You could have done that by foreclosing the mortgage?

A. Oh, we could have done a lot of things. I presume.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I think this is just generating into an argument between a couple of lawyers.

By the Court: Yes, I think the question is argumentative.

4645 Q. Well, what was the purchase price of the stock of the Haberkorn Candy Company from the Urbans?

A. The contract shows $65,000.00, but that wasn't the deal.

Q. Just a second. We will get to that.

A. All right.

Q. The contract shows $65,000.00, you say, and you know that the meeting—or the minutes of the stockholders meeting of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company showed that the cost of that was $101,000.00, don't you?

A. I believe that is right, without looking at the minutes.

Q. Was the difference of that $36,000.00 actually paid to anybody?

A. I don't follow you now.

Q. Was the $36,000.00 difference between the $65,000.00 shown on the contract and the $101,000.00 shown on the minutes of the corporation actually paid out—

A. It was—

Q. Will you let me finish my question. Was it actually paid out to anybody?

A. It was forgiven as to Lubben, or for Lubben.

4646 Q. Did Lubben get $36,000.00?

A. Yes, he got credit for $36,000.00.

Q. That was the forgiveness on the loan?

A. That is right.

Q. And you put it on your books as the cost of the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. Well, it should be the cost of the Haberkorn Candy Company because the deals were made at the same time. That was the purpose of the deal.

A. And Shotwell Manufacturing Company only paid $65,000.00 for the Haberkorn Candy Company stock, didn't it?

A. And a forgiveness of $35,000.00 on the loan, or 36,000, whatever it happened to be.

Q. You paid $65,000.00 to the Urbans for their stock?

A. That is right.

Q. And a year later when the Haberkorn Candy Company was dissolved, you took a loss on your tax return on the basis of the $101,000.00 cost rather than the 65,000, didn't you?

A. Well, now, I don't know why you would argue with me about that for the reason that I told you previously 4647 I know nothing about what the books might show and we have a CPA out there who perhaps could advise you a lot better than myself on that very deal.

Q. In any event, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, neither they nor Byron Cain lost a dime on the Haberkorn Candy Company deal, did it?

A. 101,000. Maybe not that much. Maybe we did salvage something. That's all we lost.

Q. Now when did you learn, or did you learn in 1945 of the per poundage amount of overages being paid to Mr. Lubben?

A. Let me have that question again.

Q. Did you know in 1945 of the unit price per pound overages being paid by Mr. Lubben?

A. I didn't know in 1945, no, I didn't. Did I personally know? No.

Q. Well, in any event, you testified that you knew that there were some overages?

A. That is right.

4648 Q. Well, I wondered if you knew what it was for poundage—

A. Well—

Q. Will you let me finish my question.

By Mr. McConnell: Let him answer your question.

By Mr. Lockley: I haven't finished it yet.

By Mr. McConnell: He is answering your question.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to object to the young gentleman who has borrowed the title of District Attorney in Chicago and who is not allowing this gentleman to answer the question.

By the Court: Wait a minute. You address your remarks to the Court and I will determine whether or not they are sound or otherwise.

Proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: Miss Reporter, will you read the question back?

(Question read.)

By the Witness: Is that a question?

4649 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I wondered if you knew how much of the overages were per pound?

A. No, I didn't know about how much it was or whether it was on unbilled shipments or whether it was overages per pound. I didn't know.

Q. Did you know at the time that the overages were increased, as Mr. Cain testified?

A. No, I did not know.

Q. Did you know about the increase in June subsequently, in 1946?

A. No, I did not know.

Q. All you were aware of is there was some sort—

A. There was some cash coming in as the result of a deal with Lubben and that's all I knew.

Q. Well, did you know about the so-called unbilled shipments where no invoices were rendered?

A. I didn't know anything about the unbilled shipments, as I told you previously. I didn't know how it was handled until subsequently.

Q. And when did you learn that?

A. I think it was in 1948.

Q. And what was the occasion of learning that information?

4650 By the Witness: I did not get the question, please.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, how did you come about to learn it?

A. That was at the Busby meeting.

Q. You heard the testimony of your employee, Mr. Ericson, that you were present in the spring, or March or April of 1946?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. He didn't testify to that on cross examination. He said he didn't know who was there. He said he couldn't tell.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. When the ABC Candy Company name was selected on the bills of lading?

A. Mr. Ericson was wrong and he didn't testify to that on cross examination.

Q. He testified to that on direct examination?

A. That is right, and he subsequently said that he might be mistaken and he was mistaken.

Q. That would be an unusual transaction, would it, Mr. Sullivan?

A. That would what?

Q. That would be an unusual thing, a meeting of 4651 that sort where you are making up bills of lading without invoices and using a fictitious name on the bills of lading?

A. Well, I presume it would be, yes, sure.

Q. And isn't it likely that circumstances of that sort are likely to be remembered quite easily by a person who was participating in it?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that.

By the Witness: What is the question? I mean, are you arguing with me now?

By the Court: To whom do you refer, to Mr. Ericson or to Mr. Sullivan?

By Mr. Lockley: I will withdraw the question, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you know that this money was needed for the purpose of buying corn at the time?

By Mr. O'Brien: What do you mean by "this money"?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The cash overages and the money on the unbilled shipments.

A. I was so told.

4652 Q. You knew that, did you, in the spring of 1946?

A. I was so told.

Q. Didn't you look into it yourself? Did you rely entirely on what other people told you?

A. I told you the other day when the matter was brought to my attention, I made an attempt to contact a few friends of mine that happened to be in that particular line of business, and tried to get some corn syrup, and I told you the results, that there wasn't any to be had unless the corn was furnished to the refinery.

Q. And that is why The Shotwell Manufacturing Company needed cash, is that correct, then?

A. That is right, and every other confectioner did the same thing, too, and even the Government did it, to the extent of fifty million bushels of corn.

Q. Did you have to get this cash for Mr. Lubben?

A. Did we have to get that cash for Mr. Lubben?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't suppose so. We had to have cash and you couldn't deal in checks, that is certain.

Q. You could have cashed a check in the bank.

4653 couldn't you?

A. I don't know the extent of our bank account at that time. I presume that it could have been done, and I am sorry it wasn't done in that way.

Q. But at that time, by that do you mean 1946, you had an account with Shotwell Manufacturing Company at the Merchants National Bank, did you?

A. I think so.

Q. Was this one of the monthly statements rendered by the bank?

A. I don't know that I have ever seen that before. I guess it is. This in itself doesn't mean anything. You show me the liabilities of Shotwell, and maybe I can answer it.

Q. Well, would you say that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had on deposit at that bank account, at that time, $400,000?

A. I think it said three hundred and something.

Q. There is one that is $409,000. It varies during the periods.

A. Yes.

Q. And in April, it was around three hundred?

A. We had a bank account at the City National, 4654 too. I don't know how much money was in there, but it would likely be increased, if that is what you want to know.

Q. Didn't the daily balances average from $350,000 to $400,000?

A. I wouldn't know?

Q. Doesn't it say so on the bank account?

A. Not the daily average, no.

Q. It shows what the daily balance is?

A. Maybe by the end of the month, or by the 10th of the month, it might be entirely different.

Q. Take a look at it.

A. I don't know what the tax obligation is. I would venture to say the tax obligation at the end of the month was at least that much.

Q. You have got April. Take a look at March, and look at May, and see if it doesn't run around three hundred and four hundred thousand dollars?

A. If you say it does, it does. I have never seen them before. If you say it does, and it shows so, that is what it shows.

Q. If you had so much money in the bank, why did you have to get the cash from Lubben?

A. Again, I think you are arguing with me. 4655 It is unfortunate that I ever saw Lubben, or ever did get the money from him.

By Mr. Lockley: I move that the answer be stricken, if the Court please.

By the Court: It is unresponsive. It may be stricken.

4656 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I asked you if you had this money in the bank, why was it necessary to get the cash from Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, because, as you know, no one was interested in anything but a cash deal, the people that were getting the corn from the farmers, or however it was obtained.

Q. Well, you could have written a check to cash, taken it down to the bank and gotten the money and used that cash, couldn't you?

A. That is right. As I said before, it is too bad it wasn't done that way.

Q. And you did do it on one—

A. But apparently Lubben sold somebody a bill of goods that he could get this corn for them and it had to be handled in this way.

Q. What do you mean, "Apparently Lubben sold somebody a bill of goods", to whom did he sell a bill of goods?

A. I take it he talked to Frank Huebner.

Q. And Huebner never came to you?

A. I told you Huebner called me.

Q. Did he ever mention this to you, about Lubben

4657 getting the unbilled shipments and getting corn for them, and so on?

A. I didn't say that. I knew that there was a way by which Shotwell was getting cash from Lubben. I didn't know the deal, whether it was unbilled shipments, whether it was marked up invoices, or what it was, and I didn't know that until the latter part of, the late summer of 1945.

Q. Well, the fact of the matter is that you could have gone to the bank and gotten money that way without getting it from Lubben, isn't that true?

A. If you are trying to ask if the bank would recognize a check and whether or not we had money in the bank at that time, the answer will be yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Roeser testified that on one occasion you had gone to the bank and gotten $1450.00 which was part of the employees—

A. $14,550.00.

Q. You are interrupting me again, Mr. Sullivan. I am sorry, Mr. Sullivan, but I haven't finished my question.

A. I am sorry.

Q. (Continuing) And you put that money through the employees exchange account and then subse-4658 quently made another entry in the employees exchange account at the time it was paid back.

It was done one time and it could have been done again, couldn't it?

By Mr. O'Connell: I object to the question. It assumes it was $1450.00. The evidence shows it was $14,550.00.

By Mr. Lockley: I will accept the correction, $14,500.00.

By Mr. McConnell: $14,550.00.

By the Witness: I have no quarrel with that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You stated further that this was a question of survival, is that correct, when it came to violating the OPA laws?

A. That is right.

Q. You were asked:

"Q. Did you, as a lawyer, not warn your client that it was violating a criminal law of the United States by conspiring with others to evade the OPA laws?

"A. We knew that we were violating the OPA 4659 laws, but there is a question of survival. If we didn't do it, it would have meant that our factory had to shut down, and we were not the only ones that were doing it. Everybody in the confectionery business did it."

Is that the reason these entries weren't reflected on the books of the corporation?

A. Well, I think I previously said I do not know or I did not know how the books were handled and I did not know that they didn't reflect on the books of the corporation. We have auditors out at the factory and certainly they know more about keeping books than I do and I just naturally thought that the books did reflect it.

4660 Q. And you never asked about it, whether it was on the books or not, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. But you knew it was being dealt in cash?

A. And I knew it was being paid out in cash, too.

Q. And you never had any record to whom it was paid out?

A. Well, if we did, I never saw it.

Q. And you never paid any of it out?

A. I never saw it.

Q. You never saw any of it being paid out?

A. No.

Q. You never got any of this yourself?

A. I never saw any of the money, never got any of it myself.

Q. Well, this was a matter of extreme importance to the corporation, was it not, that you were violating the OPA laws, that you were subject to possible criminal prosecution, and subject to possible treble damages. Didn't you ever take that up with the officers of the corporation at your directors' meetings, or otherwise?

A. Certainly.

4661 Q. Well, when was that?

A. I think it was more or less general. We knew that we were violating the OPA. And I also knew that the Government did the very same thing. The Government went out and bought fifty million bushels of corn—

By the Court: You didn't answer the question.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike that portion, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By the Witness: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you at these directors' meetings, if that is what it was, discuss the mechanics of how this was handled?

A. Well, I don't know as I follow you. How what was handled?

Q. The receipts and payments of currency?

A. No, no.

Q. Well, what did you discuss about it?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the subject of the directors' meeting. I haven't heard anything about the directors' meeting.

4662 By the Witness: No.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. State when you did discuss it with the other officers of the corporation.

A. I wish you would be more specific in your question. What do you mean? Discuss what?

Q. I am talking about the receipt of currency, and the payments of currency during 1945 and 1946. Now, you said you had some discussions with the officers.

A. I had a discussion with Huebner. Subsequently I might have talked it over with Cain, or with Mr. Shotwell.

Q. Well, now, when was—

A. There was no formal discussion of it.

Q. —when was your first discussion with Huebner?

A. I told you that he called me up and said he couldn't get corn.

Q. That is the first time?

A. What is that?

Q. That was the first time?

A. That was the first time.

Q. When was that?

4663 A. That was in the late summer of 1945.

Q. And that is when you contacted some of your acquaintances?

A. That is right.

Q. Well, did you have any other discussion with him subsequent to that?

A. Well, I think maybe general discussion. I knew that the money was coming in, and I knew it was going out.

Q. That was all. You didn't ask him how much was coming in, and how much was going out, whether you were getting any corn, or anything of that sort?

A. No. There was one time when there wasn't any cash, and that was the reason for drawing the checks on the company so they could pay out the cash to get the raw corn.

Q. Well, you didn't tell him: "Look, Frank, this is in violation of the OPA, and we better not put any of it on the books"—

A. No, I didn't. I didn't know how it was going to be handled on the books, and I naturally thought it 4664 was going to be handled by the auditors, and I assumed only that Busby knew about it. It was a matter of general conversation, and talk, but apparently, he didn't know about it. But I thought he did.

Q. Well, did you ever tell him yourself?

A. No, I never told him. I never had any occasion to tell him.

4665 Q. Didn't you know it would have to be kept off the books or the OPA investigators would locate it?

A. That was true after—that wasn't true after June of 1945 when the OPA went off, or am I right—1946, June 30th.

Q. How about the period prior to that?

A. Certainly it had to be kept off the books or you would be subject to perhaps additional trouble. I know that now. I didn't know it then, I don't believe.

Q. Well, are you sure?

A. Am I sure about what?

Q. You said you don't believe you knew it then. Are you sure you didn't know it then?

A. I don't ever remember discussing it. I am not positive.

Q. Of course you knew that if it was off the books for OPA purposes, it was also off the books for Internal Revenue purposes, didn't you?

A. Not necessarily. Not necessarily.

Q. You didn't know anything about those. You didn't concern yourself with such matters?

A. No, I didn't.

4666 Q. Now, when you were discussing the meetings with Mr. Lubben at the Gotham Hotel, you said that Davidson was present and Mr. Huebner, at page 4596:

"A. Lubben.

"And he says, 'Perhaps after I show you these, you will think differently about it.' And he opens up the brief case, and he pulls out some invoices that he said, 'Here are some invoices maybe will make you change your mind.'

"I said, 'Let me see them.' He gave me some invoices and some memoranda, marked up invoices, and I said to him, 'These are a fake.' I said, 'I don't scare very easily.' I said, 'This looks like blackmail to me.'"

And some more to the answer.

Now, I want to show you some of the invoices which are in evidence here and which contain markings, and ask if you can tell me if these are the markings, the marked up invoices of the nature that he showed you, Exhibits 23-A and B and 24-A and 25-series, 26-series, 29-series. Now, is that the type of markings that 4667 you were referring to on these invoices that Mr. Lubben showed you?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know if those are the invoices that he showed you?

A. I wouldn't have any idea.

Q. Do you recall whether the invoices he showed you were addressed to the Eatsum Food Products Company or to General Confections?

A. No, I do not. I couldn't say positively.

Q. But that is the nature of the markings that you are referring to that appear on those invoices, is that correct?

A. Well, together with his statement that that is what they were.

Q. Well, I am sorry. I didn't hear you.

A. Together with his statement that he had marked up invoices.

Q. And he pulled these out of the brief case and he handed them to you?

A. That is right.

Q. That is the kind of invoices he gave you?

A. I wouldn't say they were exact duplicates. Are these the invoices? Is that what you mean, similar invoices?

4668 Q. Are these the Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoices?

A. That is right.

Q. I assume they were Shotwell invoices he was referring to?

A. That is right.

Q. These are addressed to the Eatsum sale proprietorship or Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That, I wouldn't be able to tell you.

Q. And it could not have been the partnership invoices, could it, because Mr. Lubben had left all the partnership records with Mr. Giglio when the partnership broke up. You heard that testimony, didn't you?

A. I did not know it at the time.

Q. And you heard with respect to the General Confections Corporation that they were not marking up invoices at that time, that they used this cash authorization slip, is that right?

A. I think that is what the testimony—

By Mr. McConnell: This witness can't testify as to what the testimony was.

By the Court: All he can determine is whether or not he heard that.

4669 By Mr. Lockley: That is right, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state with any certainty whether it was the sole proprietorship invoices he showed you?

A. No.

Q. Those were the only ones that contained markings according to the testimony, is that correct?

A. I wouldn't know, as I said before. I wouldn't know.

Q. You were here, weren't you, and you heard the testimony?

A. I am not quarreling with you about the testimony.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. Yes.

Q. You heard that testimony?

A. Now, what is it again? I don't want to be admitting something that I am not sure I am admitting. What is it again?

4670 Q. With respect to the partnership, that the invoices and all the records were left with Mr. Giglio at the time that Mr. Lubben left on March 9, 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. And with respect to the General Confections Corporation that the invoices were not marked up, that they marked up the cash authorization slips instead. You heard that testimony?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. As a matter of fact, here are some of the General Confections invoices, and they—

By Mr. McConnell: I don't understand that that is a correct statement. As I understand it, the books and records of the Giglio partnership were not all left here. He has introduced in evidence here memoranda, recap sheets which he says are records of the partnership.

By the Court: I think what counsel has reference to is that the testimony was that it wasn't the practice during the partnership to mark up the invoices. That is my recollection.

4671 By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, Miss Feldman, who was the bookkeeper, insisted on three or four occasions that she didn't know whether they were marked up or not in the partnership period.

She said she was quite certain they were not in the General Confections period.

By the Court: That may be.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, because when we sought to go into impeachment on the depositions, Miss Feldman, she ducked that and said, "I don't know one way or another." And certainly, I don't think that the witness should be expected to summarize what was the testimony.

By the Court: I don't think he should determine just what the testimony is.

You can ask him whether or not invoices that Lubben showed him were similar to those you are exhibiting to him. I suppose that is the correct question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were the invoices Mr. Lubben showed you 4672 similar to these during the period of the General Confections? Do they contain the sort of markings that you referred to?

A. I don't see any markings on this one.

Q. Well, the fact is there are no markings of that nature on any of them, are there?

A. Well, I didn't look at the rest of them. Now, what is the question, whether—

Q. Did those invoices during the period of General Confections contain the sort of markings that were on the invoices Mr. Lubben showed you at the meetings at the Gotham Hotel in February, 1948?

A. You mean the General Confections invoices, right? I assume that they weren't General Confections invoices for the reason that there are apparently no markings on them. There were markings on the invoices I have reference to.

Q. Didn't you hear your own witness, Mr. Edward Sproull, the public accountant, testify that Mr. Lubben had given him the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship in May, 1945, and that he had kept them for an unpaid accounting bill?

A. No. I heard that he had got the records. I don't know why he kept them. That isn't entirely clear 4673 to me. I don't know as he testified to that.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, that is an inaccurate summary of Mr. Sproull's testimony.

By Mr. Lockley: Let me read it then.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Sproull testified that the records were there. Lubben was back several times and finally the Government got them.

By Mr. Lockley: I will read it.

By the Court: Well, maybe. I am not too clear on just what the purport of his testimony was.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. On page 3413, didn't Mr. Sproull testify with respect to Mr. Lubben:

"Q. Thereafter when did you next see him?

"A. I next saw him on one occasion shortly after that when he brought in his—some income tax returns that he had filed for prior years.

"Q. Was there an occasion when he brought into your office and left with you for safekeeping 4674 the books of Eatsum Food Products proprietorship?

"A. That was approximately May, 1945.

"Q. And did that happen?

"A. That did.

"Q. And how long did the books remain there?

"A. Until September, 1948."

Now, did you also hear Mr. Sproull testify that he had turned over those records to the Treasury Department in September of 1948 in compliance with a subpoena?

A. I did.

4675 Q. That subpoena calls for invoices, among other documents?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, there is the copy of the subpoena.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, the subpoena speaks for itself. What do we get in addition by having this witness confirm what is in that subpoena?

By the Court: I think now you are getting into an argument with the witness, rather than propounding a question to him that he can answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Sullivan, if Sproull & Scholz had these invoices, and records of Lubben from May, 1945 until September of 1948, the fact of the matter is that you didn't have them in January or February, 1948, at the time you say he came up to the Gotham Hotel?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the question on the ground—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. (Continuing) . —is that correct?

By the Court: Yes, I think it is a matter of 4676 argument that you are indulging in now, rather than propounding a question.

By Mr. McConnell: Further than that—

By the Court: Now, I ruled favorably, and why carry it on?

By Mr. McConnell: You are right. I ought to have learned that a long, long time ago.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you ever meet a Mr. Tobias?

A. Once I met Mr. Tobias.

Q. When was that?

A. I think it was—

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Sullivan, please.

By the Witness: All right.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I know I was in New York at that convention at the time.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. At the candy convention?

A. I think it was in 1948.

Q. That was at the Waldorf Astoria?

4677 A. Yes.

Q. The candy convention in 1948?

A. I don't remember if it was at the Waldorf, but I think it was at the Waldorf. I wouldn't be sure about it.

Q. Who else was present besides Mr. Tobias at that time?

A. Well, I think Mr. Cain was present.

Q. With Mr. Huebner? Was he also present?

A. I am not sure.

4678 Q. And do you remember what the conversation was with Mr. Tobias there?

A. Well, generally speaking, yes. It was to the effect that Lubben was doctoring the books and he thought we should know about it.

Q. That is what he told you?

A. That's right.

Q. Was Mr. Tobias present at the time when Mr. Graflund called Mr. Cain and told him about Special Agent Krane coming into the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in Chicago?

A. I don't even remember the telephone call.

Q. You don't remember that at all?

A. And I wouldn't know. I am sure he wasn't. I am sure Mr. Tobias wasn't. I don't think that he was there over ten minutes.

Q. Isn't it a fact that at that meeting Mr. Tobias came to you and told you that Mr. Lubben was going to go to the Bureau of Internal Revenue and tell about his dealings with you?

A. No, it was not a fact.

Q. And Mr. Cain said that if he would keep the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and its officers informed of what was going on in the Bureau of Internal 4679 Revenue he would make it worth his while?

A. No, no such statement made.

Q. Do you recall any other meetings with Tobias?

A. I recall no other meeting with Tobias.

Q. That's the only one?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Cain being questioned on direct examination, and that he was asked:

"Q. Did you or Mr. Sullivan ever try to get this matter disposed of through a political connection?

"A. No, sir."

On page 4422. Do you remember that testimony?

4680 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, Judge, I don't know as I care especially about the particular question, but if I may note the general objection, I do not think that it brings the matter within the scope of the witness's direct, just because the record of Cain's direct or cross is directed to him. Any such testimony was not, in fact, within the scope of this witness's direct examination.

By the Court: Well I will overrule the objection. The question isn't whether Cain's testimony was called to his attention on direct. If it is fairly within the scope of the direct, then it may be proper.

By Mr. O'Brien: I mean there was no direct of any kind about this to the witness.

By the Court: The entire matter has been gone into. I don't think the Government is limited on cross examination to the very specific matters that you may have touched upon. This entire field is open now for cross, I take it, the entire field encompassed within the 4681 charge of the indictment.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, all right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Have you ever attempted to have this matter disposed of through use of political influence?

A. Well, I don't know what you call political influence.

Q. Do you know a Mr. James B. McCahey?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who is he?

A. Well, he is president of the Dunn Coal Company here in town. He was president of the Board of Education of the city of Chicago for fourteen years. In my opinion he is a highly respectable man.

Q. Is he a lawyer?

A. No.

Q. Is he a tax expert?

A. Is he what?

Q. A tax expert.

A. No.

Q. Does he have any official government connection?

A. None that I know of.

4682 Q. Well, on September 7, 1950, didn't you write him a letter asking him to do what he could about getting this investigation settled?

A. I wrote him a note, a synopsis of our problem, and suggested to him that we needed help, and asked him if he had any suggestions, as I recall the letter.

I didn't write him a letter, I delivered it to him in person. I think I have a copy of the letter in my files, if you want it.

Q. Well, if Mr. McCahey wasn't a lawyer or a tax expert, or a government official, why did you turn to him for advice?

A. Well, when you have a problem, if you think somebody might be able to give you advice, he doesn't necessarily have to be a lawyer, or a tax expert, or anything else. I have talked this matter over with a lot of people, looking for advice.

Do you think it is a pleasure for me to be up here the way I am right now?

4683 By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike that.

By the Court: Yes, it may be stricken as not responsive.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you understand that Mr. McCahey was a friend of some high government official; is that why you went to him?

A. Not necessarily. I think that he is—or has friends in government service. There is no question about that. But who they are, I wouldn't be sure. I know he has several friends in the government service.

Q. Did you ever see Government's Exhibit 185 at the time it was prepared to subsequently?

A. Never.

Q. Well, do you know of your own knowledge whether the Shotwell Manufacturing Company spent one dollar for sugar, or cocoa beans or milk, or corn syrup in the black market?

A. Except what I have been informed, is all, through my position with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you ever see Government's Exhibit 186 before? It is for identification.

4684 A. Yes, I have seen that.

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness: Pardon me.

By the Witness:

A. I am not sure now. What is this? No, I don't recognize this.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, at this time I would like to move to strike the testimony of the witnesses Cain and Sullivan relative to the amounts of overages which were paid by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the black market during the years 1945 and 1946 on the ground that it is based entirely upon the hearsay testimony of other employees, that they have not testified of their own knowledge that any such amounts were paid out, and, to the contrary, they have testified that they knew of no particular transactions at which such money was paid out.

By Mr. O'Brien: The Court has already ruled that is an exception to the hearsay rule.

4685 By the Court: Yes. I will deny the motion.

By Mr. Lockley: And I move to strike Mr. Sullivan's testimony that the government was buying corn in those years.

By the Court: Yes, that may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley: I likewise move to strike his testimony as to what other candy companies may have been doing during 1945 and 1946.

4686 By Mr. Kirby: That was responsive, and it bears upon the witness' knowledge and intent.

By the Court: That may stand.

By Mr. O'Brien: I was going to say, Judge, for the record—

No, you have ruled.

By Mr. McConnell: Don't talk after he has ruled.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 94 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 94 for identification.)

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, I hand you a document marked Defendants' Exhibit 94 for identification, and I ask you if you have ever seen that before.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Mr. Lockley was asking about your writing a James McCahey in September of 1950. Do you recall those questions?

A. That's right.

4687 Q. And he asked what you wrote him about?

A. Yes.

Q. What does that document purport to be?

A. This is the copy, office copy, of the letter that I handed to Mr. McCahey.

By Mr. Kirby: I now ask its admission in evidence, and would like the witness to be permitted to read what it was he wrote him, as long as Mr. Lockley has indicated he is interested in that.

Do you have any objection?

By Mr. Lockley: No objection.

(Said document as received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibit 94.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Would you read the letter?

A. All right. This is a copy of a letter which I gave to Mr. McCahey.

By the Court: How do you spell his name?

By the Witness: M-c-C-a-h-e-y.

A. It is addressed to Mr. James B. McCahey, Morrison Hotel, Chicago, Illinois. In re: Shotwell Manufacturing 4688 Company, 3501 West Potomac Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. Read it loud enough so that everyone can hear it.

A. All right.

"Dear Jim:

"You will recall that I talked with you some time ago, pertaining to an apparent claim of the Government for income tax due for the years 1944, 1945, and 1946, from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

"I do not have the figures before me at the present time, but I know that some time during these years, we deemed it necessary to violate the OPA regulations to get additional chocolate or sugar, corn syrup, etcetera, in order to stay in business, and a full disclosure was subsequently made in connection with these matters.

"In June, 1948, a special agent of the Internal Revenue office, Charles Mammel, visited our factory to make an investigation in furtherance of disclosures heretofore 4689 made to them. The executives and employees of the company have been instructed to cooperate in every way with the agent making this investigation, and I believe that these instructions have been carried out.

"I can't help but feel that the time has arrived when this investigation should be completed, and if necessary a tax levied. I am certain that two and a half years of this continuous investigation should be sufficient.

"As I informed you, I not only represent the company, but I am an officer of the company as well. Maybe that old saying applies here, 'He who represents himself has a fool for a client.'

"Be that as it may, I am almost positive that were I acting only in the capacity of a lawyer, I would have insisted that this matter be brought to a close before now. So maybe I should be criticized. I represented Shotwell for the past twenty years, and it was not until 1942, that I became financially interested in the company. For ten 4690 years previous to that time, to the time that I became associated with the company, the total volume of business done was not in excess of eleven million dollars, without profit, and naturally no tax was paid to the United States Government. Since 1942, up and including the year 1949, the total volume of business done by the company was in excess of $42,000,000. And during that period of time an income tax was levied and paid in the amount of in excess of $2,700,000.

"I just give you these figures to let you know that a considerable amount has been paid in the way of income tax to the Government, and if it were not for the fact that we did certain things that were perhaps in violation of the OPA, the Government never would have collected that amount of money.

"I am hoping for a suggestion as to how to bring this matter to a head.

"Sincerely yours."

4691 Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Sullivan, in this letter you refer to the years 1944, '45 and '46, saying you deemed it necessary to violate the OPA regulations to get additional chocolate, sugar, corn syrup and so forth.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I wouldn't—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The fact of the matter is you did not get additional—

By Mr. Kirby: Wait a minute.

By Mr. Lockley: Let me finish my question, please, Mr. Kirby.

By the Court: Wait till he finishes his question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The fact of the matter is you did not get additional chocolate, sugar and corn syrup in violation of the OPA; isn't that so, to your knowledge?

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I want to make this objection. He reads the years 1944, 1945, and 1946 from one part of the letter. Then he reads the references to the securing of 4692 raw materials from another part of the letter. But he leaves out these words—

By Mr. Lockley: Read it all, if you want.

By Mr. Kirby: "Some time during those years.", And he is posing the question to the witness as if it was the whole three years. He is not reading that letter correctly.

By the Court: Modify it as Mr. Kirby suggests.

By Mr. Lockley: I will modify it by—

By Mr. Kirby: The modification goes to the essence of it.

By Mr. Lockley: I will modify it by reading the full two paragraphs.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. "You will recall that I talked to you some time ago pertaining to an apparent claim of the Government for income tax due for the years 1944, '45 and '46 from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. I do not have the figures before me at the present time, but I know that some time during these years we deemed it necessary to violate the OPA regulations to get additional chocolate, corn 4693 syrup, etc., in order to stay in business, and a full disclosure was subsequently made in connection with these matters."

Now, my question is: Did you, to your knowledge, get additional chocolate, sugar and corn syrup in violation of the OPA regulations in 1944, 1945 and 1946, or some time during those years?

A. Certainly.

4694 Q. All right. Tell me one time when you bought some additional chocolate in violation of OPA regulations?

A. Well, I don't know about chocolate. I don't know about sugar.

Q. Tell me one time when you bought sugar then?

A. I don't know about sugar. But I know that there were manipulations made to get sugar and chocolate; from what I have been told,—corn syrup.

Q. You said, "I know that sometime during these years • • •"

A. That's right.

Q. Did you know?

A. Certainly I knew. Certainly I knew.

Q. You knew because somebody else had told you, in other words?

A. By reason of my position in the company, yes.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. One thing, Mr. Sullivan. You said that Mr. Mammel was at the company in 1948. Did you ever see Mammel until 1949?

A. What is that again, Mr. O'Brien?

4695 Q. I am trying to find it here. You say, "In June, '48, a special agent of the Internal Revenue office Charles Mammel, visited our factory to make an investigation."

Did Mr. Mammel come to the factory in '48 or was it Krane?

A. No, it was Krane. I was wrong there.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: I think we will take our morning recess. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing until the Judge and jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

4696 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I have some written exceptions which I should like to file. I have handed counsel a copy.

(Document handed to the Court.)

LAURENCE E. HINES, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name, Doctor?

A. Laurence E. Hines.

Q. And what is your profession?

A. Physician.

Q. In Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. Where do you live, Doctor?

A. 5322 Lakewood Avenue.

Q. Is that on the north side of Chicago?

A. The Edgewater district, north side of Chicago.

Q. And for how long have you been a resident of the north side?

A. Thirty years.

4697 Q. The north side and the environs?

A. Thirty years.

Q. How long have you practiced medicine in the community?

A. About thirty years.

Q. And what hospital or hospitals are you now identified with?

A. St. Joseph's, Passavant and United States Marine.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron A. Cain?

A. Yes.

Q. That's the defendant, Byron A. Cain?

A. Yes.

Q. And for how long have you known him?

A. About twenty years.

Q. Mr. Cain also lived on the north side of Chicago?

A. When I first knew him he lived on Pratt Avenue, on the north side of Chicago.

Q. And that too is in the Edgewater district?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you had occasion to attend him as a physician?

A. I have.

4698 Q. And also to visit with him and his family socially?

A. Yes.

Q. So that you know him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you, during the year 1945 and 1946, and before, know his reputation in the community for truth, honesty and integrity?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was that reputation good or bad?

A. Excellent.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, Doctor, that is all.

(Witness excused.)

THOMAS J. BURKE, a witness called herein on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name, Father?
A. Reverend Thomas J. Burke.
4699 Q. And you are a priest of the Catholic Church?
A. That's right.
Q. In what parish?
A. Saints Faith, Hope and Charity in Winnetka, Illinois.
Q. And for how long has that been so, Father?
A. I have been pastor there since—
By the Court: A little louder, please.
By the Witness:
A. I have been pastor there since 1936.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. And prior to that, I presume, you have been identified with other parishes in the Chicago or North Shore area?
A. I have been a priest for twenty-seven years. And in that capacity I was assistant pastor at a parish in the northwest side of Chicago, St. Sylvester's, at St. Lucy's on the west side of Chicago, at the Holy Name Cathedral, and in 1935 I was assigned to a parish in Mundelein, Illinois, and was there until November of 1936, at which time I was assigned to establish the parish of Saints Faith, Hope and Charity, in Winnetka, Illinois.
4700 Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron A. Cain?
A. I do.
Q. Is he one of your parishioners at the present time?
A. He is.
Q. And was that true during the years 1945 and 1946?
A. That's right.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Harold E. Sullivan?
A. I do.
Q. Is he likewise one of your parishioners as of this time?
A. He is.
Q. And has he been for some years?
A. I believe for about the past seven or eight years.
Q. Now, do you know the reputation in your community of the defendant, Byron A. Cain, for truth, honesty and integrity?

A. I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?

A. It is good.

Q. And was it so during the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes.

4701 Q. And do you know the reputation in your community of the defendant, Harold E. Sullivan, for truth, honesty and integrity?

A. I do.

Q. And was it during the years 1945 and 1946 good or bad?

A. It was good.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Father.

(Witness excused.)

A. R. GARDNER, a witness called herein in behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. A. R. Gardner.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Gardner?

A. 2770 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

Q. And for how long have you lived in that area?

A. About eighteen years.

Q. What is your occupation?

4702 A. At the present time I am an executive consultant in the Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago. Up until September the 1st, this year, I was the managing officer of that institution since its organization in 1932.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron A. Cain?

A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. Since 1940.

Q. Do you know his reputation in the community for truth, honesty and integrity?

A. I do.

4703 Q. And did you know his reputation in the community for those things in the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I did.

Q. And during those years was his reputation for truth, honesty, and integrity good or bad?

A. It was good.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

(Witness excused.)

Q. You are a Judge of the Appellate Court for the First District of Illinois, are you not?

A. I am, yes.

Q. How long have you been in the Appellate Court, Judge?

A. Since 1948.

4704 Q. Where do you live?

A. I live on a farm between Barrington and Dundee, Illinois.

Q. And prior to that, did you live in the City of Chicago?

A. I did.

Q. How long have you been on the farm?

A. For five years.

Q. Prior to that, where did you live in Chicago?

A. I lived in North Edgewater, on Kenmore Avenue, 6132 Kenmore Avenue.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron A. Cain?

A. I do.

Q. And for how long have you known him?

A. Between ten and 15 years.

Q. Was Mr. Cain a resident of the same general area during most of that time?

A. Yes. When I lived on the north side, he lived further north, but in the same general community.

Q. Do you know what Mr. Cain's reputation was in the community for truth, honesty and integrity during the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I do.
4705 Q. Was it good or bad?
A. It was good.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Judge.
(Witness excused.)

JAMES J. McDERMOTT, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. James J. McDermott.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 1106 West Garfield Boulevard, Chicago.
Q. And your present position?
A. Judge of the Superior Court of Cook County.
Q. You have been a lawyer for how many years, Judge?
A. Thirty-three years.
Q. And in those thirty-three years in the practice of law, did you know a Harold Sullivan?
A. I did.
Q. And what opportunities did you have, Judge,
4706 to know Harold Sullivan?
A. I met him quite frequently. I have seen him in the courtrooms of our courts for many years.
Q. And are you familiar with the reputation that Harold Sullivan bore in this community for honesty, and for truth, and for voracity?
A. I am.
Q. For how many years have you known of the reputation that Harold Sullivan bears in the community?
A. I'd say 30, 31 years.
Q. And in all that time, has his reputation for honesty been good or bad, Judge?
A. Good.
By Mr. Kirby: That is all.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Judge. Thank you.
(Witness excused.)

4707 BERNARD L. MAJEWSKI, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. My name is Bernard L. Majewski, sometimes called Mayefski.

Q. How do you spell that name?

A. M-a-j-e-w-s-k-i.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am an oil man.

Q. How long have you been in the oil business?

A. Since 1909.

Q. And what positions in that industry have you held?

A. I started out driving a tank wagon in the city of Chicago, hitched to a team of mules, and I stayed at that for four years. Then I went to night school and thought I would go out and be a salesman, became a bulk agent, general sales manager, vice president and a director of a good independent oil company.

Q. What was the name of that?

4708 A. Deep Rock Oil Corporation.

Q. You were vice president of the Deep Rock Oil Corporation?

A. And director.

Q. Have you served on some national committees?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I have no objection to Mr. Kirby bringing in character witnesses, but do we have to go into their background and character?

By the Court: I suppose it is proper to bring out his background in the community and his work. I think that is proper.

By Mr. Kirby: I wish for you, Mr. Lockley, if you are ever questioned, that you can get people of this calibre to testify for you.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, if your Honor please, to Mr. Kirby's—

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: —addressing his remarks to me, and to his speeching.

By Mr. Kirby: He should know better.

By the Court: They were improper, Mr. Kirby.
4709 They may be stricken.
By Mr. Kirby: All right.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Mr. Majewski, in the city of Chicago here were you on the School Board?
A. I have been on the School Board since January 3rd, 1936.
Q. And you still serve on the Board?
A. Yes, sir; I have served continuously since then.
Q. Where do you live, in what part of the city do you live?
A. On the northwest side of Chicago. And I also am a farmer on the side.
Q. In what part of Chicago were you born?
A. I was born about two blocks from the intersection of Chicago Avenue and Milwaukee Avenue, which was at that time the heart of the Polish colony in Chicago.
Q. Have you lived then in Chicago all your life?
A. 59 years next January 14.
Q. And in those years have you had an occasion to get to know Harold Sullivan?
A. Yes, I have known Harold Sullivan for more than 20 years.
4710 Q. And what occasions have you had to get to know about the man?
A. Oh, many. He has been a close personal friend, he and his family and his brothers. Weddings and social affairs. Real close personal friends.
Q. Have you gotten to know the reputation that Harold Sullivan has borne?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In those years?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And do you know how he is regarded, so far as being a man of honesty and integrity, who tells the truth?
A. He is highly regarded in all those respects.
Q. And does he bear, in all those respects, a good or a bad reputation?
A. An excellent reputation, I would say.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That is all.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions.
(Witness excused.)

4711 CORNELIUS J. HARRINGTON, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Cornelius J. Harrington.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 9821 South Winchester Avenue, Chicago.
Q. And do you occupy a position in this county?
A. Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County.
Q. How many years have you been a judge?
A. Nineteen years. Twenty in June of next year.
Q. And in what part of the city have you lived?
A. Principally the south side of Chicago.
Q. And have you known Harold Sullivan?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. When did you first meet Harold Sullivan?
A. In July or August of 1917, at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, where we were together in D Battery of the 149th Field Artillery of the Rainbow Division.
Q. And since you first met him at Fort Sheridan in 1919, were you with him for some time then?
A. For eighteen months overseas, through about 4712 eleven engagements. And then it was interrupted at one time. I think it was practically the last engagement that we were in when he was gassed and taken to the hospital.
Q. Other than when he went to the hospital were you with him continuously overseas?
A. Constantly. We were in the same gun section until he was promoted to a sergeant and he took charge of another gun section, and I took over the gun section he was in.
Q. After you both came back and became lawyers did you have some occasion to be with him and to observe his character and his work?
A. Yes. After he was admitted to practice, I think we both tried our first case together, defending one of the men that was in the service with us, in the Criminal Court. And I have known him intimately over the period since about 1922 or '23, when he was admitted to practice and I was admitted to practice. We were associated together in the Legion work, Rainbow Division Veterans Association activities, and in Catholic Charities work, and other different organizations that we had an interest in.

4713 A. And in the years have you had an opportunity to know the reputation that Harold bears, as to whether he is an honest man, a man of integrity and a man who tells the truth?

A. I certainly have.

Q. And what is that reputation in this community?

A. Excellent.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Judge.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Judge.

(Witness excused.)

MARGARET I. ASTE, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as ofllows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Will you give us your name, please?

A. Margaret I. Aste.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By the Witness:

A. Margaret I. Aste.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is it Miss or Mrs.?

4714 A. Mrs.

Q. And, Mrs. Aste, where do you live?

A. 754 Buena Avenue.

Q. That is up on the north side?

A. The north side, yes.

Q. Have you been a resident of Chicago, Mrs. Aste, for all of your life?

A. All of my life.

Q. And you have engaged in various club and public work in the city?

A. That's right.

Q. Charitable work?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And have you served in some public posts of helping people?

A. At the present time I am Conservator and Public Guardian of Cook County.

By the Court: You will have to speak up a little louder. You can face the jury.
By the Witness:
A. I am sorry. I didn't know there was a jury here. I am Public Guardian and Conservator of Chicago and Cook County.
4715 By Mr. Kirby:
Q. That is for the people who require care of the courts; you are on the supervisors of that?
A. That is true.
Q. Now, have you known Harold Sullivan, Mrs. Aste?
A. I have known him about 15 years.
Q. And what opportunities have you had to know Harold Sullivan?
A. I have met him at many social functions.
Q. And do you know his standing in the legal community?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And do you know what his reputation has been in the city, as to whether he is a man of honesty and integrity and a man who tells the truth?
A. I have never heard it questioned, in any other way, of what he is, his integrity and his honesty.
Q Is his reputation good or bad?
A. Well, for fifteen years it has been very good, that I know about. That is all I can answer.
By Mr. Kirby: That is all we wanted you to tell us. Because you have had an opportunity to know him and these people have not.
4716 By the Witness: Yes, I have.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you very much.
(Witness excused.)

4717 CHARLES S. DOUGHERTY, a witness called herein in behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Please state your name.
A. Charles S. Dougherty.
Q. And where do you live?
A. 2231 East 67th Street.

By the Court: Let's get the name again, please.
By the Witness: D-o-u-g-h-e-r-t-y.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. And you are a judge in Chicago?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And for how many years have you been a judge?
A. Eighteen—seventeen years and six months.
Q. On what courts have you served?
A. I have served on the Municipal Court for sixteen years and the Circuit Court for a year and a half.
Q. And in those years have you gotten to know a lawyer by the name of Harold Sullivan?
4718 A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what chance did you have to get to know him, Judge?
A. Well, I have known him from the contacts with him, before I was on the bench and after I was on the bench, in appearances in court and appearances in his court, when he was a Master.
Q. Keep your voice up, Judge, please.
A. I served—frequently have been in contact with him through the Bar Associations and personal contacts in other matters.
Q. And, Judge, are you now the Chief Justice of the Criminal Court of Cook County?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In the years have you gotten to know the reputation that Harold Sullivan bears for honesty, integrity and telling the truth in this community?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And is that reputation, Judge, good or is it bad?
A. Very good.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Judge.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Judge.
(Witness excused.)

4719 CHARLES E. GREEN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Charles E. Green.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Green?
A. 1223 Park Avenue, River Forest, Illinois.
Q. And what is your profession?
A. Attorney at law.
Q. For how many years?
A. 38 years.
Q. Besides having been a lawyer for 38 years are you also engaged in some other work?
A. Yes, I am, and have been for a long time. General counsel, and secretary for Motorola, Incorporated, and all of its affiliates and subsidiaries.
Q. And what does Motorola, Incorporated, do?
A. Manufactures televisions, radios, communication equipment, military electronics.
Q. And how large an organization is that, Mr. Green?
4720 A. Employs approximately 10,000 people. And they have plants in Chicago, multi-plant operation, Quincy, Illinois, Phoenix, Arizona.
Q. Now, Mr. Green, do you know a Harold Sullivan?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. When was the first time you ever saw Harold Sullivan?
A. I would say over fifty years ago. He and I were boyhood friends in the country, down the farming district.
Q. What farming district?
A. McHenry County, the territory of Woodstock and Franklinville.
4721 Q. What did your people do, Mr. Green?
A. My father operated a small farm.
Q. Close to the Sullivan farm?
A. Within a few miles, yes. Walking distance in those days.
Q. And for your family?
A. That's right. And for the Sullivans.
Q. Mr. Green, after you knew Harold as a boy, did you have any occasion to keep track of him through the years?
A. Yes.
Q. How did that come about?
A. I have always been near Harold. We came to Chicago practically together to go to school. I knew Harold as a soldier, as a lawyer, as a Master, and down through those years, as a very good friend.

Q. By the way, did you ever appear in front of him, as Master?

A. Yes, I had one case before him. I'd say that was about 15 years ago.

Q. Did you win or lose?

A. I lost it.

Q. Mr. Green, have you in those years visited 4722 at his home and do you know his family?

A. Yes, I have, and I do.

Q. And have you been with others that know him, and know him in his practice of law, and his family relationships?

A. Yes, I have. I have been with those others practically my entire life.

Q. You have known Harold your whole life?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know what his reputation has been all that time?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is it?

A. Excellent.

Q. Is he a man who bears a reputation in this community of a person who tells the truth, who is honest, and who is a man of integrity?

A. Very definitely.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Mr. Green.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Mr. Green.

(Witness excused.)

4723 BARRE BLUMENTHAL, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Barre, B-a-r-r-e, Blumenthal—B-l-u-m-e-n-t-h-a-l.

Q. Mr. Blumenthal, where do you live?

A. 2423 Harrison Street, Evanston, Illinois.

Q. And what is your business?

A. I am a lawyer.

Q. For how many years have you been a lawyer?

A. Forty-one years.

Q. Practicing where?

A. In Chicago, Cook County, Illinois.
Q. In all of the courts?
A. All of the courts.
Q. And has your practice also extended to the Supreme Court of the United States?
A. It has, in one instance.
Q. One instance, in which you beat me, I think.
Mr. Blumenthal, have you known Harold Sullivan?
A. Yes, I have known him for a long time.
4724 Q. How long?
A. I think I have known Harold Sullivan since we both got into service in a Regiment during the first World War. That was in June or July, 1917.
Q. Were you in the same outfit with him?
A. I was in the same Regiment. It was the 149th Field Artillery. It was the unit later known as the Rainbow Division.
Q. While you were in service, did you get to know Harold Sullivan?
A. I saw a lot of him during the time we were in service together.
Q. After you came back and went into the law business, he was never a partner of yours, Mr. Blumenthal?
A. No, he was not.
Q. Did you have opportunities to observe him and get to know how he was regarded by the lawyers and judges of this community?
A. I did.
Q. Did you get to know his family, Mr. Blumenthal?
A. Not too well. I have met his family on several occasions.
Q. Then your connection with Harold has been 4725 mostly professional?
A. That is right.
Q. You know what reputation Mr. Sullivan bears in this community as to being a person who tells the truth, who is honest, and who has integrity?
A. Yes.
Q. What is that reputation, is it good or is it bad?
A. It is a fine reputation.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Mr. Blumenthal.
By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Blumenthal. No questions.
(Witness excused.)

WILLIAM J. TUOHY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. William J. Tuohy, T-u-o--h-y.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 1044 Loyola Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.
4726 Q. And you are a lawyer?
A. I am, yes, sir.
Q. You are also a Judge?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Of what court?
A. The Circuit Court of Illinois, Cook County.
Q. And what post do you hold in that court?
A. I am an associate judge of that court.
Q. And before that, and some years ago, did you hold a post with the County Board?
A. Yes, I was States Attorney of Cook County, and prior to that I was an assistant States Attorney, Attorney for the County Board of Cook County.
Q. When did you get to know a lawyer by the name of Harold Sullivan?
A. Oh, about 1926, some 27 or 28 years ago.
Q. Well, how did you happen to get to know him?
A. Well, he was Commander of the Post of the American Legion to which I was very close, and whose meetings I had attended, Gibbons Post.
Q. In the last 25 years, have you known him well?
A. Intimately.
Q. Do you know of the regard in which he is held 4727 by others in this community?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And do you know the reputation he has built up over the years, as to whether he is a man who tells the truth, who can be believed, and who is an honest man?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is his reputation with respect to his honesty, and truth and integrity in this community good, or is it bad?
A. It is good.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Judge.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Judge.
(Witness excused.)

4728 LOUIS J. ROTH, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. Louis J. Roth.
By the Court: Speak up.
By the Witness: R-o-t-h.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Roth?
A. 12 East 86th Street, New York City, New York.
Q. You are an accountant?
A. I refuse to answer that question on my constitutional rights.
By the Court: Louder, please.
By the Witness:
A. I refuse to answer that question, as it might tend to incriminate me.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Well, will you let me ask this—
By the Court: As to what is your business, is that it?
By the Witness: Yes, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien:
4729 Q. Mr. Roth, have you brought with you the subpoena that was served upon you in this case?
A. No, sir.
Q. You do appear here in response to a subpoena which I served upon you?
A. I do.
Q. Have you brought with you all copies of audits or audit reports and all work sheets or copies of work sheets pertaining to the books, records or accounts of the Eatsum Food Products Company, a co-partnership, which are within your possession or within your control?
A. I refuse to answer that question as it might tend to incriminate me.
Q. Are you a defendant in proceedings pending in the Southern District of New York brought by the United States, a criminal proceeding?
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I think it is improper for Mr. O'Brien to attempt to impeach his own witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not attempting to impeach him. He isn't my witness, either. I subpoenaed him to bring some papers and that's all.

4730 By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am trying the best I can to get them.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Your Honor, I don't know whether, if I answer that question or not, whether I will violate my constitutional rights. I am here without an attorney.

By the Court: Well, the question is whether or not you are a defendant in certain criminal proceedings pending in the Southern District of New York. That is the question you are asked. He is asking you if you are the Louis Roth who is a defendant in a certain criminal proceeding pending in the Southern District of New York.

By the Witness:

A. I am.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And is that the same proceeding in which William Giglio and Howard Lawn are defendants, is that the same case?

A. It is.

Q. Well, I asked if you brought with you the papers

4731 which I have described and you refuse to answer on the ground that it might incriminate you. Do I understand that you do refuse to produce the papers mentioned in the subpoena which I caused to be served upon you because to do so would tend to incriminate or might tend to incriminate you?

A. That is my answer.

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By the Witness: That is my answer.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions, your Honor.

By the Court: All right. That's all.

(Witness excused.)

JAMES C. DOWNS, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. James C. Downs, Jr.

By the Court: James C. what?

By the Witness: James C. Downs.

4732 D-o-w-n-s.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Downs?

A. 180 East Delaware Place.

Q. What is your occupation or profession?

A. I am a real estate economist.

Q. And you have been for how long?

A. Well, since all of my business career, since 1925.

Q. Are there different positions which you have held within the real estate field?

A. I have been national president of the Institute—

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Louder. It is hard to hear in here.

By the Witness:

A. I have been national president of the Institute of Real Estate Management. I am president of the Real Estate Research Corporation. I am in the property management business of the mortgage business.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. How long have you lived on north side of 4733 Chicago?

A. All my life.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron A. Cain?

A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. Since 1928.

Q. How much opportunity have you had to be associated with and to observe him?

A. Well, I have—I was directly associated with him when we were both in the same firm of Baird & Warner and I have known of his business since he has been in business for himself, known of his Savings and Loan Institution, was for one year, a director of that Savings and Loan Institution.

Q. Mr. Cain was or you?

A. I was.

Q. Can you state for the jury whether Mr. Cain's reputation in the community for truth, honesty and veracity 4734 was good or bad in the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Well, in the wide range of dealings which I had with his firm and which I knew my associates had, I would say it was never questioned.

Q. To your knowledge, was his reputation generally in the community for those things good or bad?

A. It was good.

Q. Is the same true since those years 1945 and 1946, Mr. Downs?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have limited it to those years, Judge, because of the legal limitation, that the reputation afterwards is not admissible, but I do not mean to say that his reputation ceased at that time.

Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Mr. Downs.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you excuse us just a moment? Will you indulge us just a moment until we see who we have?

(Witness excused.)

4735 By the Court: All right.

Mr. O'Brien, may I see you for just a moment. This is not for the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I have some odds and ends, here, Judge, that I would like to ask you about. There are some things I want to offer.

First, it was not altogether clear to me the other day when you handed back the Penick & Ford exhibits. Those were 79 to 87. It was not clear to me whether there had been any change in the Court's ruling. At the time that those were offered, commencing at record 4226 and down to record 4252, I think that your Honor sustained objections to Exhibits 79, 80 and 81.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Without prejudice to our right to reoffer them later if there should be further material to connect them up.

By the Court: I don't remember that but that may well be that I gave you that right. I wouldn't deny you 4736 that right to offer it again if you desire.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then you said you would look at them and afterwards you handed them back to us without any observation, so I assume the ruling is the same.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: There were documents. Perhaps I shouldn't bother you with them now, but at record 1086 and record 1090 we offered Defendants' Exhibits 11 and 12. Those were papers having to do with the inception of the partnership and your Honor reserved a ruling on those.

If you will mark your notes, I will discuss it directly when we talk about the other record matters.

4737 By the Court: Well, supposing we—I take it that there will be a large number of exhibits that we may have to check on, and we can do that before you rest, and straighten out the record insofar as it needs straightening. You have the daily transcript, and I don't, so you can go back and determine better than I can, whether I received those exhibits.

My notation is, however, that I received No. 11, after reconsideration, and that I did not receive 12. But I would like to have you check the transcript on that.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the Government record shows that 11 was received.

By the Court: That is my notation on my own record.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 3811 of the record.

No. 12, page 1093 of the record, you reserved your ruling on that, on Exhibit 12, on the question of materiality.

4738 By Mr. O'Brien: I will look for it. There are just too many papers in this case.

I should like to have marked for identification a letter from the Department of State, and the five attached documents having to do with Mr. Lubben's passport.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 95, 95-A, 95-B, 95-C, 95-D, and 95-E, for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, pursuant to your order, we have obtained from the Department of State a letter and photostatic copies of documents pertaining to Mr. Lubben's passport, as to which there has been testimony in the case.

I should like to offer those as Defendants' Exhibits 95, and 95-A, B, C, D, and E, respectively.

By the Court: A, B, C, and—

By Mr. O'Brien: It is 95 and 95-A, B, C, D, and E.

Will you please mark these Defendants' Exhibits 96 and 97 for identification?

4739 (Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 96 and 97 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien: And will you please mark this Defendants' Exhibit 98 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 98 for identification.)

By the Court: Well, is there any objection?

By Mr. Lockley: I beg your Honor's indulgence. Yes, your Honor, there is objection to at least Defendants' Exhibits 95-E, and 95-D, on the ground that they purport to relate to matters happening in 1953, and in 1950, neither of which is at all involved in the issues of this suit, and to which there has been no testimony.

By the Court: Well, how is that material, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is not, to me. I just presented it as part of the whole. It makes no difference, if there is objection, it could be removed.

By Mr. Lockley: I object furthermore to Exhibit
4740 95-C, on the ground that it is undated, and that it is impossible to determine with what passport it has any reference. I have no objection to the letter, Exhibit 95, nor to Exhibits 95-A and 95-B, which purport to be the actual applications for the passport in 1948. The balance of it, I question the relevancy and that's all.

By Mr. O'Brien: We needn't argue about that, because I have no particular interest in these three items. I just got them all together from the State Department, and I didn't want to exclude any of them.

By the Court: The Exhibits will be 95, 95-A, and 95-B?

By Mr. O'Brien. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: As to those, your Honor, we have no objection.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received by the Court marked Defendants' Exhibits 95, 95-A, 95-B, 96, 97 and 98.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I also offer, Judge, on behalf of the Defendants, documents marked 54 for identification, 4741 and 55. Those are figures in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, identified by the witness Sproull.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the Government objects to Exhibits 54 and 55, on the ground that no proper foundation was laid.

By the Court: Well, what is lacking in foundation?

By Mr. Lockley: The testimony of the witness Sproull was that this was in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, and that Mr. Lubben had given this to him in some period of time after 1945 for preparation of the income tax return.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: And at that time, if you recall it, defense counsel objected to the Government looking at this document, and therefore, we were unable to use it in cross examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is hardly accurate, Mr. Lockley. I attempted to proceed as we would in our common practice here, but the Court ruled that you were entitled 4742 to look at it, and I handed it over at that time for the purpose of cross.

This is the document which I did, however, object to Mr. Krane proceeding to copy at that point, but at that time there was possession for cross.

By the Court: That is my recollection.

By Mr. O'Brien: On the date, Judge—

By the Court: My notes show they were left with Sproull early in 1946.

4743 By Mr. O'Brien: And that the 1945 figures which were up here were told to him by Lubben. They were in the candy cash for that time and that he put those figures on at the time of delivery because Mr. Lubben said they were for the year 1945. They are thoroughly identified.

By the Court: They may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 54 and 55.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, if the Court please, I have a few more items, but the work sheet papers and all, I should like, if you would adjourn at this time, perhaps talk about both matters or at any time you suggest. It would be of some help to us in moving along with the case.

By the Court: Are you about to rest, may I ask?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, Judge. I do have—oh, I don't know, two or three more witnesses, but some of their 4744 testimony—Some of the testimony pertains to these papers. The testimony of one pertains to these papers.

By the Court: I see. Well, we can adjourn now until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, members of the jury.

By the Marshall: Will the audience remain standing until the Judge as well as the jury leave the court room. This Honorable Court will recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

By the Court: I will come back in a few minutes.

(Whereupon the jury was dismissed and the following proceedings were had and taken outside the presence and hearing of the jury, in open court:)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will resume.

By Mr. Kirby: Those four documents for which your Honor is reaching—

By the Court: Yes. I will rule on these exhibits now and that pertains to Exhibits 88, 89, 90 and 91. I 4745 will sustain the objection to Exhibits 88, 89 and 91—I will sustain the objections as to being incompetent. I will admit—I am sorry. I misspoke myself. 88, 89 and 90, I sustain the objection to. I will admit 91, which is a Federal Trade Commission report and I admit the pages that Mr. Kirby specially pointed out.

(Said document was received in evidence and marked by the Court Defendants' Exhibit 91.)

By Mr. Lockley: Do you mind if I look at it?

By the Court: All right.

Mr. O'Brien, this might be an appropriate time to complete the record with reference to the pages of Mr. Cain's testimony which was proffered by the defendant and as to certain portions of which I sustained the objection.

The record could disclose that after Mr. O'Brien presented me with a compact transcript of Mr. Cain's testimony, that is, the portion of Mr. Cain's testimony 4746 which were offered by Mr. Lockley and by himself, that I reconsidered my ruling and on Friday, October 9th, at the opening of court, I told Mr. O'Brien that I was going to reconsider my rulings.

At that time, Mr. O'Brien had called Mr. Cain, but Mr.

Cain had not as yet been sworn and I told Mr. O'Brien that I thought he should know that I was going to modify my rulings regarding portions of the testimony offered by the defense and that it might be that he would want to know that before he put Mr. Cain on the stand. And thereupon, Mr. O'Brien told me, as I remember it, that he didn't think it made much difference, or words to that effect. I am not too clear as to the exact words, however, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: The matter was called to my attention, as the Court says.

By the Court: Be that as it may, I desire, therefore, as of October 9th at 10:00 o'clock a. m., and before Mr. Cain was sworn, to have the record reflect that counsel were then notified that I was going to modify my 4747 ruling and during the day, when the transcript had been prepared by my secretary, I presented to Mr. Lockley and Mr. O'Brien the portions of Mr. Cain's testimony offered as to which I had modified my rulings and I now deliver that to the Reporter so that she may make a transcript of the statement that I furnished to Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Lockley and I assume that Mr. O'Brien would like at this time to have the record indicate the exception which he has taken and which she likewise may make a part of the transcript, if you desire.

Well, I think that is all I have to say in that regard.

After considering the pages from Mr. Cain's testimony which was submitted to me by Mr. O'Brien, I have reconsidered the rulings that I have made with reference to the portion of the testimony proffered by Mr. O'Brien and have concluded that I should modify my rulings, and I do overrule the Government's objections to the following portions of the testimony offered by the defense:

Page 160—The next to the last question, which reads:

"Following that did you tell Mr. Busby to go back to Sauber and reveal the identity of the company and make this disclosure?

A. I did."

Page 161—The last question and answer, which read:

4749 "Q. What, if anything, did you tell him to say concerning the payment of that tax which you planned to do?

"A. I told him we were ready, willing and able to pay any tax that might be assessed."

Page 162—The question and answer at the top of the page:

"Q. Did you tell him to tell Sauber that?

"A. Yes."

Page 163—The last question on that page and the answer on page 164, as follows:

"Q. When you saw Sauber in March did you ask him—what, if anything, was said between you and him as to the fact of whether any investigation had commenced?

"A. He assured me that there had been no investigation commenced."

Page 165—The portion in the middle paragraph in which Mr. Cain stated to Mr. Sauger as follows:

"I said that the only thing that we could possibly do in dealing with a chap like that chap Lubben would be to take every invoice that we had sent to him 4750 and apply the maximum over ceiling price."

Page 166—The entire page, including the first paragraph on page 167, reading as follows:

"A. I am talking to Mr. Sauber, this conversation. I said, 'We will use the peak price and when we come up with that figure, that would be the best of our recollection.'

He said, 'You can't make an amended return. You just give us—we will have to send a man out there and you will work with him and we will get the best we can.'

I said, 'As to our expenditures I just can't tell you anything. I don't know.'

"Q. What did he say about expenditures?

"A. He said, 'it wouldn't do any good if you did know because we wouldn't allow them anyway. We absolutely won't allow over the ceiling expenditures.' I said, 'O.K., but I hope you will take it into consideration and see that we are treated fairly.'

4751 I think that is the tone on which that particular meeting on March 4th ended.

"Q. What, if anything was said concerning the payment of the tax when and if the tax was determined?

"A. Well, I told him in view of the government situation where they make no allowance, we owe them a lot of money, and we stood ready and able to pay it immediately, and the sooner we would pay it the better I would like it, but I said that wouldn't stop us if at some future time we tried to get our money back or a portion of it for those over ceiling payments."

"Q. Mr. Cain, in your conversation or conversations with Mr. Sauber what, if anything, was said by you to him as to your ability to say who the premium payments were paid to?

"A. Well, I told him it would be impossible for us to tell him who the payments were paid to because we didn't know.

"Q. What did he say about premium payments in general?

4752 "A. He said that premium payments regardless of whether we could or could not tell would not be allowed the Government.

"Q. Did Mr. Busby tell you, Sullivan, or Huebner, that is, you or Sullivan in your talk on January 11, 1948, or any of your talks after that that there was any requirement for a disclosure other than those mentioned in the published policy?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you ever know of any other or further requirement?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you know if it is the fact that your ability to say to whom premium payments were made was or might be regarded as a condition precedent to a disclosure?

"A. No, sir.

Page 200—The first question and answer reading as follows:

"Q. Did you tell him to tell the official of the Treasury Department hypothetically otherwise that the Shotwell Corporation owed the Government taxes for those years?

4753 "A. He reported back that the Government told us that we did owe taxes."

Page 201—The two questions at the bottom of that page, and including the answer on the top of page 202, which read as follows:

"Q. Did you at that time tell him to advise Mr. Sauber that the Shotwell Corporation had made false tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. I had quite a bit of confidence in Mr. Busby. He knew the case by that time.

"Q. Did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false tax returns for those years?

"A. I don't recall telling him anything. We told him what to do, to go in and disclose the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, period."

Page 202—The first question on that page, reading,

"Q. Do you recall what you did tell him?

"A. We told him to go to whomever had been to before and disclose the identity of the taxpayer."

And the remaining questions and answers on 4754 that page, together with the answer, question, and answer at top of page 203:

"Q. And did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. I don't believe I did. I don't think I had to tell Mr. Busby anything. We certainly told him to go in and do whatever was necessary to get the matter straightened out.

"Q. Did Mr. Busby in the course of informing you about the requirements of the voluntary disclosure doctrine on or about January 11th or 12th of 1948 tell you that it was necessary that the taxpayer make an honest, full disclosure of all the material facts?

"A. Mr. Sauber told us that we couldn't make that.

"Q. No—Mr. Busby.

"A. Mr. Busby reported back to us that Mr. Sauber said we couldn't—

"Q. I am sorry, I mean, in the conference you had with Busby before he went over to Mr. Sauber the first time.

4755 "A. No, he did not.

"Q. He did not?

Page 203—The portion in the middle of the page starting with the question:

"Q. Well, in sending him over to Mr. Sauber you had in mind making a disclosure to avoid criminal prosecution, was that the purpose?

"A. Very definitely."

Page 206—The last question on that page, reading:

"Q. Well, I went into the matter of the over ceiling receipts. He discouraged me on the matter of the over ceiling payments. He said it was out, that they might give it some consideration, but if they did it would be very little, that the Department's rule is they would not consider over ceiling—

Note: Page 207 is missing and therefore I am unable to complete the remaining portion of the question and answer which extends into page 207.

4756 Page 216—The last question, reading:

"Q. Now, at which meeting, the first or the second, was it, that he told you as you testified that it wouldn't make any difference whether you could prove the disbursements of these over ceiling moneys or not?

Top of page 217:

"A. I think at both meetings. He emphasized that to us.

And the remaining questions and answers on page 217, as follows:

"Q. He said to you that it made no difference so far as the Government was concerned?

"A. That is right.

"Q. Whether you proved that you actually made those expenditures or not?

"A. That is right. He said it was the Government's policy that over ceiling payments could not be deducted."

EXCEPTIONS

The defendants hereby except to the action of the Court, as evidenced by its memorandum of October 9, 1953, pertaining to reconsideration and modification of its rulings on the Government's objections to certain testimony proffered by Vincent O'Brien, for the following reasons:

1. It is untimely and therefore insufficient in that it does not remedy the failure to have the material now added by the memorandum read to the jury during the Government's case in chief along with the portions which were then read.

2. It does not include all of the proffered material to which the Government's objections were sustained.

4758 The defendants, Byron A. Cain and The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, specially and additionally except to the foregoing matters, because they say, that if the matters mentioned in the Court's memorandum which were proffered by Vincent O'Brien had not been excluded, but had been read to the jury at the same time as other portions of Byron A. Cain's testimony at the disclosure hearing were read to the jury during the Government's case in chief, the defendant, Byron A. Cain, would not have been compelled to take the witness stand, and would not have been subjected to cross-examination, including cross examination on the memorandum of payouts which on cross-examination he testified about.

4759 By Mr. O'Brien: Are these all the sheets?

Judge, coming back to these work sheets which have been identified as to handwriting and preparation by the witness Hausman, at the moment, I have before me those marked 21-B, 21-C, 21-D and 21-E, that series.

By the Court: Will you start over again, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. 21-B, 21-C, 21-D and 21-E. And I also have before me the 65 series, 65-K and 65-L and 66-W.

Now, although those work sheets stand identified as of the time they were marked, as being in the writing of the witness and actually prepared by him, his testimony also was that the originals had been turned over to Mr. Roth in whose employ he had then been, and it was objected that we did not procure or we had not shown that the originals were unavailable.

Now, I don't know, Judge. I want to be completely candid in this further statements of it: I do not 4760 know the legal effect, but in an attempt to find a basis for the admission of photostatic copies, absent the originals, we asked Roth's attorney to send us an affidavit and he did send an affidavit which said the originals of these papers were left by him with the partnership, with the Eatsum Food Products partnership and which said that they were either in the possession of Giglio or were impounded in the court proceedings down east and he didn't know which.

Now, I was not present when the affidavit—I think it was in chambers between Mr. Kirby and Mr. Lockley, but unless counsel could agree, unless Government counsel would agree that the affidavit might be treated as evidenciary, there was nothing that the Court could do according to what I was afterwards advised. It was just an affidavit and not more. Now, I have insisted that the man come here on the subpoena and have put him on the stand to try to interrogate him with the results which your Honor observed.

4761 I think that on the record, as it is made by appropriate evidence, the record shows that the originals were delivered to Roth by Messrs. Hausman and Starr, and I have subpoenaed Roth to produce them and he refuses to bring the papers in accordance with that subpoena. Indeed, I subpoenaed him back at the same time that we have subpoenaed Giglio, but until this precise question arose, I saw no need to actually bring him here. And if one offered, that is, the formal record, offered that record, I know through his affidavit, if I am to give it practical significance, that he says that he left those papers with the partnership and that they are now either impounded in the east or they are in possession of Giglio along with the other documents of the partnership.

In that situation, I believe that I have laid all the foundation which we can lay and I desire to reoffer the exhibits which I have described at the outset of this hearing now. Practically, Judge, some of the photostatic copies of the Hausman work sheet have been 4762 turned over to us from time to time, or perhaps at one time under your Honor's orders by the Government. We do have some. There is no doubt but that they are the same handwriting, the same instrument, prepared by the same person as those which we have, but they are not always for the same dates.

In other words, we have some which are not among the papers that the Government gave us. So, I should like to, on that showing, renew our offer of these instruments, with leave to look at the remainder that were identified over the noon hour, to look at them to see if there be any additional which are relevant to the subsequent proof which we want to make.

As I said before, my reason for taking it up at this time is that one of our few remaining witnesses has to testify on a subject which is predicted on these papers, or some of them.

4763 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, as I understand Mr. O'Brien's offer, he now offers Exhibit 21-B, C, D, E, 65-K and L, and 66-W, is that correct?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: A quick look at the transcript fails to show where Mr. Hausman identified 66-W and I don't believe he was questioned as to that particular document.

By Mr. O'Brein: 66-W is the Starr—

By Mr. Lockley: That was Mr. Starr?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I thought that must have been the situation.

By Mr. O'Brien: This is the one (Indicating). This is Starr's handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. And with respect to the balance of them, while counsel says that the government has turned over certain records to him, they are not the records which he now offers, although perhaps it could be that the handwriting on the documents he offers and the documents the government has turned 4764 over to him is similar. They are not the same, however.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I didn't mean that they were, Mr. Lockley. I said they merely purport to be the same handwriting and the same type of sheet.

By Mr. Lockley: I want to make that clear on the record, Mr. O'Brien. The government's objection, your Honor, goes far beyond the foundation laid for the absence of the originals themselves.

There is no foundation laid for the accuracy as to these particular papers and even more fundamentally, as to the accuracy of the books and records from which these papers were taken. To the contrary, the only witnesses which have testified here and they have been defense witnesses, have said that they do not know what those books were and when they asked Mr. Roth to explain certain matters to them, they were told to mind their own business.

Now, under those circumstances, I feel there has been an absolute inadequate foundation whatsoever 4765 for the accuracy of these books and records and for the government now to have to try to rebut information which may appear on secondary work papers which came from books and records for which there has been no foundation, it is putting far too great a burden upon us.

Furthermore, as to Mr. Roth's testimony, the defendants did not pursue the remedy they may have had with Mr. Roth. To be sure, they brought him here. He was asked a few very token questions and he claimed his constitutional rights, but the defense did not question as to whether or not his claim of constitutional immunity was well founded in fact. They didn't ask your Honor to go into the matter and determine whether the witness should be ordered to answer the questions. They asked him no questions at all as to the accuracy of the books and records which were maintained by him or as to the identity of these papers themselves, as to whether they were taken away, taken off of 4766 the books and records or as to whether he had these particular work papers which they are now offering, or whether he ever had them or where they are today. I mean, the foundation which they attempted to lay through Mr. Roth was completely inadequate. There was absoluetly nothing said about any specific record or document during that testimony. Mr. O'Brien just asked him some general questions as to whether or not he had been subpoenaed to bring work papers and had he brought work papers. He didn't specify what sort of work papers. He didn't specify the type of work papers he was subpoenaing from Mr. Roth.

As to those matters, your Honor, my position is simply that not only is there no foundation laid for these work papers, but there is no foundation made, but that there is no foundation laid for the accuracy of these books and records, where these work papers were purported to be taken from.
4767 While it may have been possible through the witness Hausman to have determined whether these books and records and work papers were accurate, you will remember that counsel consistently refused to at least failed to go into any explanation as to what these work papers were. They were merely handed to Mr. Hausman and to Mr. Starr. They were asked if it was their handwriting, and if they had prepared them, but those witnesses who were the best witnesses, as far as being capable of explaining what these records were, were not asked, for the obvious reason that counsel didn't want them to testify from their own knowledge.

They merely wanted to get those work papers into evidence so their own expert witness, basing his answer upon an expert's version of these work papers, could give them the sort of answer they expected to hear or that they wanted to hear.

You remember when I asked Mr. Hausman some questions on Exhibit 136, they objected. They didn't want me to bring out the actual meaning of the 4768 loans and exchange account on the books at all.

All they wanted to do was get it in evidence, get it in evidence alone. Getting it in evidence doesn't mean anything at all unless it is explained. They had an opportunity to have these documents explained but they didn't do that. They just had them identified and put them aside so the Government was unable to cross examine as to the basis of these unless we first agreed to put them in evidence without objecting to the foundation which had been laid for them.

Now, I think counsel have failed to produce the proper remedy with Mr. Roth. They have failed when they had the witnesses on the stand, to establish a proper foundation for the accuracy of these books and records, and the Government had no knowledge as to what sort of books and records these particular work papers are based upon, and we object to them on those grounds.

By Mr. O'Brien: All I want to say is—

By Mr. Lockley: I might point out too that the Government was denied the right to examine these 4769 work papers.

By Mr. O'Brien: All I want to say is first that when I had the papers identified by Mr. Hausman, I expressly tendered him for cross examination, although my foundation was not complete, because of the absence of the originals, but I tendered him for cross with the statement that if there were any questions that Mr. Lockley had to ask while he was on, let him ask them and to some extent he did, and also the documents so identified were available for that purpose.

Indeed, I made the suggestion, because of the ruling which your Honor had made on those two cash sheets at a prior occasion—the ordinary practice is to have them marked, to take them back and wait until they are fully connected up and then reoffer them. Because of that ruling, I tendered the witness and the papers for any question Mr. Lockley might have.

Now, Hausman and Starr both explicitly stated that they had been retained by Roth. They stated just 4770 what their duties had been at the Eatsum partnership. They said that they took these items from the partnership books. I don't have to show that the books from which they took them are true and correct, under your Federal shop book rules. It is merely that those were books maintained by the partnership and if they think they are not true and correct, that is something that goes to their weight, but not their admissibility.

Now, indeed, the objection that there is no showing that the books from which the auditors made their work sheets, that there is no showing that those books are true and correct, I never heard of such an objection. I mean, I have never heard of such an objection generally. If they are admittedly the books of the company, if the auditor says he correctly took off what appeared on them, I don't have to, under your shop book rule, or the analogy of it—I don't have to show that the books from which he was working were true and correct.
4771 They are the books, whether true and correct or not. So I believe, particularly in the case of those two witnesses, that the only open question was the question as to where were the originals.

4772 By the Court: Well, my recollection is that Mr. Hausman—is that the name?

By Mr. O'Brien: Hausman had the bulk of the sheets.

By the Court: Starr did say that they correctly transcribed what their work sheets—

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: That is, from the books, but that it appears on the work sheets. I think that was made when you made some statement that that hadn't been brought out.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By the Court: And then Mr. O'Brien went back and covered that, so I think there is testimony in the record that the work sheets correctly portray the data thereon as they appeared in the books of the Eatsum partnership.

Now then, your objection is that we have no testimony that the Eatsum books themselves were true and correct, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. As a matter of fact, we have evidence that the partnership return 4773 which was prepared long after Mr. Lubben left the partnership, was itself false and so obviously, the books and records from which that return was prepared must have been false and what the defense is attempting to do here now is to throw on Mr. Lubben's shoulder the responsibility for whatever false entries may have been made in those books and records after he was no longer connected with the company and when they were under the custody and control of Mr. Roth and Mr. Giglio.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I am talking about the 1945 period. My sheets are in the 1945 period.

By the Court: Have we any testimony at all that the books and records which constitute the underlying data for these exhibits were made by anybody in authority in the Eatsum partnership during the period?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. They were made by Bercu, Judge. His testimony is here. He set up and maintained all of the books in the partnership.

4774 I put him on the stand and had him so testify. Roth and his assistants, Hausman and Starr, not only on their testimony, but on Bercu's and also on Miss Feldman's—they were the people whom from time to time would take these items off the records set up and maintained by Bercu.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Bercu's testimony was he maintained the records until about December 31, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, may I butt in for a second?

By Mr. Lockley: You will recall that one of the principal questions in the case up to now has been the maintenance of the currency boxes, the cash box and the corn box, which were brought out by the defendants. Obviously, those books were not complete and adequate and correct if the entries reflecting the money going through these cash boxes were not put on there, were not put on the books themselves, and we have no testimony as to whether or not that was being done.

4775 As a matter of fact, Miss Feldman, who had charge of the books and records, says she knew nothing about the corn box. Mr. Bercu, I believe, said something of the same sort. I frankly don't recall too clearly what his testimony was on the existence of the cash boxes during the partnership. I think he said he didn't know much about it.

4776 By the Court: The photostatic copies of the books of the Eatsum partnership, are those here at all by the way of an exhibit?

By Mr. Lockley: The books of the Eatsum partnership, no.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: Let me explain.

By the Court: You entered into a stipulation that you could use secondary evidence to establish the Eatsum partnership books.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By the Court: I rather assumed both the Government and the defendants had some photostats of the partnership books.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we didn't know—we alluded generally to secondary evidence of their contents, if the Court please, without saying specifically what book, and these papers we are now talking about are part of the secondary evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, you will recall the only secondary evidence that the Government put in with respect to that partnership period, consisted of carbon copies of invoices which were obtained from the defendant corporation itself, and Recordak copies 4777 of checks which were obtained from the bank. Now, I believe that that is the extent of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that may be, but the Judge is asking if he knows what the stipulation was. He was refreshing his memory on whether it referred to specific books, or whether it was just general. It was general.

By Mr. Lockley: Our stipulation, your Honor, as I understood it at that time, and as I undertand it today went to the books, not the work papers, and I don't believe work papers are covered by the shop book rule.

By Mr. O'Brien: The work papers made from a book are secondary evidence of the contents of the book.

By the Court: I would like to see the transcript covering the testimony of Hausman and Starr.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, suppose we get it out for you over the noon hour, and bring it in. I do not have—

By the Court: You need not make a special transcript of it. If you would merely give me the volume that contains that testimony so that I may find it, I would like to see the exhibit also, the appropriate exhibit.

4778 By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Starr's testimony, your Honor, appears in Volume 33 and 34 of the transcript, and Mr. Hausman's Volume 34 and 35, and Mr. Hausman's also goes over into 36. It is indexed in the front.

By the Court: Now, then, Bercu was auditor of the Eatsum partnership, from the beginning of the partnership until what date?

By Mr. Lockley: I believe it was December 31, 1945.

By the Court: And then he was succeeded by—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, Mr. Roth at that point took over the actual operation of the books.

By the Court: These exhibits cover what part of the—

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't read the exhibit to you, your Honor, but it was December, 1945, as of December 31, 1945, November, 1945. Here is one as of May 31, 1946. I don't know just what period 66-W does relate to at this minute.

65-K is working papers covering June 1, 1945 to May 31, 1946.

Would your Honor like to see them?

4779 By the Court: I don't know. I can see them later. You can give me the page.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, may I make this observation because I examined Mr. Hausman. I was the one that examined Hausman. Hausman testified that the papers he handed to him were all within the period when he was working with Lubben. He was working for Roth, but these papers are papers prepared during the life of the partnership, while Lubben was there. These are not papers, Hausman papers which were made up at any later, or disputed period because indeed, Hausman did not stay with Roth for the disputed period. He went with General Confections, and Lubben, individual, so that Hausman's papers are within a period when the partnership was in existence, and then when the objection was made, I tried to cover that he made these concurrently, he made these work papers as a part of his regular work there, and that he transcribed them accurately, indeed, the most important of the papers, the loans and exchanges group.

I then asked him to look at one book on the partnership, which is in apparent existence, and he keyed the dol-4780 lar amounts which appear on his work papers into the dollar amount for the same month which appear into the book.

By Mr. O'Brien: That book is here.

By Mr. Kirby: That book is in evidence. I just say that to say that as long as I examined Hausman, I remember it quite clearly. Hausman's work papers are unquestionably things that he made in his own handwriting, that he made during the time before there was a split up of the partnership, during the time Lubben was there, and he did say he made it concurrently, and he took off from the books and records what he found.

Now, I think that the proof so far as Hausman, at least on the records—I said, "Who did you give the papers to?" He said, "I gave them to Roth, the originals." And then Roth refused to testify. I think on the Hausman papers the record is quite clear.

By Mr. Lockley: I have just one comment on Mr. Kirby's statement. Although he examined Mr. Hausman, he failed to have him inquired of as to what was the meaning of any of these papers. He objected very 4781 strenuously, you will recall, when I did ask Mr. Hausman what this loans and exchanges account consisted of.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the Judge can read it.

By the Court: All right.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above case, until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Monday, October 12, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Monday, October 12, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:—

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

4783 GEORGE F. THOMPSON, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr O.'Brien: If your Honor doesn't mind, I will stand a little close, because I think the Doctor is hard of hearing.

By the Witness: A little deaf. I heard all you said then, but—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is your full name?

A. George F. Thompson.

Q. And you are a physician, licensed to practice in the State of Illinois?

A. I am.

Q. Where do you live, Doctor?

A. 148 North Mason Avenue.

Q. Is that in the city of Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. In the vicinity of Oak Park?

A. Yes.
Q. How long have you been practicing medicine?
A. Since 1901.
Q. And what hospitals are you identified with?
4784 A. At the present?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. At the present I am identified with St. Anne's and the Oak Park Hospital.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Frank Huebner?
A. I do.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. Approximately 40 years.
Q. And do you know his reputation in the community for honesty, veracity and integrity?
A. I do.
Q. Is his reputation good or bad?
A. Good.
Q. And was that true in the years 1945 and 1946?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you had occasion to attend Mr. Huebner and his family as the family physician?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that the chief way in which you grew acquainted with him?
A. No, socially, also.
Q. Also socially?
A. Yes.
Q. And during those occasions, and others, you
4785 have had a chance to observe him and to become well acquainted with him?
A. I have.
By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.
By Mr. Lockley: No cross examination, Doctor.
(Witness excused.)

4786 JAMES A. MEAGHER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name, sir?
A. My name is James A. Meagher, M-e-a-g-h-e-r.
Q. And where do you live, Mr. Meagher?

A. I live in Chicago at 1546 West Farwell Avenue.
Q. And what is your business or occupation?
A. I handle industrial sales for a large producing coal company, the Sterling Midland Coal Company of Chicago.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Frank Huebner?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. For how long have you known him?
A. Well, about thirty or thirty-one years, I believe. Somewhere in there.
A. And what has been the nature of your association with him?
A. Well, for many years I was intimately associated with Mr. Huebner, his wife and his family, his two children. We were more or less very good friends for many years. I also had some business relations with Mr.
4787 Huebner.
Q. And from your acquaintance and experience with him, are you able to state what his reputation in the community is for honesty, integrity, truthfulness, as to whether it is good or bad?
A. From my associations with Mr. Huebner over those many, many years, I always had a great deal of respect for him. I knew he was a fine Catholic gentleman, and certainly a good family man, and a good father and husband.
Q. Well, I am forced to ask you, Mr. Meagher, merely what his reputation in the community is as to whether it is good or bad.
A. As far as I know, I would say very good.
By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, sir.
(Witness excused.)

FRANK J. SMITH, a witness called on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name?
4788 A. Frank J. Smith.
Q. A little louder, Mr. Smith, please.

A. Frank J. Smith.
Q. And where do you live?
A. 1228 Columbian Avenue, Oak Park.
Q. What is your business or occupation?
A. I am a bedding manufacturer.
Q. And for how long has that been true?
A. Over forty years.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Frank Huebner or Hubner?
A. I do.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. In the neighborhood of fifteen years.
Q. And how well?
A. Well, very close, from the family angle.
Q. Do you know his entire family?
A. His wife and children and such.
Q. And have you maintained some frequency of contact with his family over the years?
A. Quite a bit, socially.
Q. Do you know what Mr. Huebner's reputation is in the community for honesty, integrity and veracity, as to whether it is good or bad?
4789 A. He is exceptionally well thought of, very good.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.
By Mr. Lockley: No questions, Mr. Smith.
By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, Mr. Smith.
(Witness excused.)
4790 By Mr O'Brien: If the Court please, I have selected from the papers produced by Mr. Schwartz three instruments. One is the Wenchel speech, another is the letter or memorandum circulated to the employees of the Internal Revenue Department concerning that speech, and the third is the certified or official copy of the mimeograph of July 2nd, 1934.
Those I desire to offer in evidence.
By Mr. Lockley: Do they have numbers?
By Mr. O'Brien: They are marked Defendants' 96, 97 and 98, respectively, in the order that I mentioned them.
Mr. Lockley suggests—and I think I should accept the suggestion—that the offer of 98 is limited to paragraphs 17, 18 and 19 of the mimeograph of July 2, 1934, as those paragraphs appear in the certified photostatic copy.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I do not object to the foundation for them, but in view of your Honor's ruling I object to the materiality.

By the Court: Well, we could take that up later
4791 and I will defer my ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: At this point, your Honor, it would be appropriate for me to read the instruments. At least, I should like them read to the jury.

By the Court: You can read it later, if I receive them.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

For the record, if the Court please, I should like to offer as Defendants' Exhibit 99 the original of the subpoena duces tecum served upon Penick & Ford. I have been looking through my papers to find it. I don't readily locate it, but I have it. I had it this morning. And I would like to consider that as offered, with leave to bring it here physically later in the day when I do get hold of it.

It is a conventional subpoena, but the original, together with the return of service, and I am interested in showing the documents which it orders brought.

By the Court: We can defer that until you have the original subpoena to be marked and you can formally 4792 offer it at that time.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, your Honor, we are at a point at which we should like to have your ruling, if possible, on those papers we discussed at the morning adjournment.

By the Court: Well, I haven't had as much opportunity as I would like to look over the transcript. Haven't you other evidence that you can take up?

By Mr. O'Brien: Perhaps we should discuss, very briefly, Judge, where we are at this time, so your Honor understands the situation. You said, if I may suggest, that you did want to discuss some things before we closed. I think it would be an appropriate place to do it now. We could do it in chambers, if you wish.

By the Court: Well, then, we can take a recess, if you suggest that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: We will take a recess for about ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain
4793 standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

4794 And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein, in Chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By Mr. O'Brien: Here is the situation, Judge, as far as our case is concerned. We have one witness, and we have these pending matters that are in suspense.

First, the offer of the Hausman-Starr papers. The witness' testimony in part, concerns itself—or would concern itself with an item of $36,148.00, that is in the case here on the Government proof . And part of his testimony is predicated on the papers, if not all of the papers, that are exhibited today.

Second, there is a reserved ruling on our Exhibit 11 or 12. It isn't altogether clear to me.

By the Court: 11 has been received.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then it must be 12

By the Court: 12 was a check, a certified copy of a check.

By Mr. O'Brien: They are the two exhibits that Mr. McConnell proffered. It is in the record at 1086 or 1090. I think I have that transcript here. I will get it.

4795 Now, 12 comes up at page 1090, where McConnell said, "I show you document which is marked for identification—"

By the Court: Who was he examining then?

By Mr. O'Brien: McConnell is examining Lubben.

By the Court: It is a photostatic copy of a check.

By Mr. O'Brien: And he asks if he can identify the signature, and the signatures are identified as Lubben's, and Giglio's. It is a check made out to Eatsum Food Products, and has to do with a new account of the co-partnership, as drawn on their account, and the check says, "For deposit, the account of Eatsum Food Products Company."

4796 Now, the check was one for $67,000.00, as appears at page 1091.

Now, at that time the objection that was made by Mr. Lockley was that "No foundation has been laid for the absence of the original. However, if counsel is willing—if counsel will stipulate, we can put in the photostat that we have here, we will agree to the admission of the photostat of the defense."

And McConnell said, "I called on you to produce the original."

And Mr. Lockley said, "That is the original check that belonged to the partnership, your Honor, and we have had some discussion about the partnership records, outside of the presence of the jury. I think your Honor understands why they aren't here."

Now, we have a photostat of this check. The original checks of the partnership are not available to either one of us.

And that is, in our view of the matter, a rather important item because we say that the proceeds of that check went to Lubben in payment for the net worth of the proprietorship.

4797 So we offered it as No. 12 and the Court reserved its ruling.

By the Court: Have you the exhibits here?

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you get it from young George, Bill? There is a whole envelope of our exhibits there.

4798 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, during the course of that colloquy, concerning that exhibit, I also objected to it on the grounds of its materiality.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, possibly so.

By Mr. Lockley: Which I think is the more important and more significant objection than the absence of the original.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, you do on page 1093. The Court says, "Then there can be no objection to the foundation."

By Mr. Lockley: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And you say you object to the materiality and the Court says, "I will reserve my ruling until I have determined whether or not it has any materiality."

And we were directed to proceed with the examination.

By the Court: Is there any evidence as to the application of this check or is that just a surmise on your part?

By Mr. McConnell: No, it went back to the old proprietorship account. The record showed that it did.

By Mr. Lockley: Both the witnesses, Berch and 4799 Feldman, testified that Mr. Lubben received, I believe, about $35,000.00 for his half interest in the partnership and that this method of handling it on the books was one of Mr. Roth's brainstorms, I think.

By Mr. O'Brien: He did say something like that.

By Mr. McConnell: That shows its materiality.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is part of the entire story on materiality.

By the Court: Well, I will receive it in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't see how it relates to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Well, we have gone into many collateral matters, I appreciate, in this lawsuit, but, nevertheless, the arrangement between Lubben and the partnership, and the details of the financial setup has been gone into without any objection, and I suppose I may admit this, in so far as it may relate to other evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 12.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, I will find that Penick & Ford subpoena and get it in.

Then I have this, your Honor. I want to remem-
4800 ber—not that I have any additional evidence on the matter, but out of the hearing of the jury I again wish to offer in evidence our Exhibits 79, 80 and 81. Those were three of the documents brought in by Penick & Ford, the witness, Horan.

By the Court: Well, the condition hasn't changed any since the offer was made and the Court ruled. I see no reason for changing my ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't wish to argue it, Judge, but I want to suggest this, that I don't think I said then—it seemed to me that through those documents we were not only trying to, but we could prove a negative. That is the reason for the peculiarity of the proof.

You see, the witness was asked to bring all of his papers and contracts as to the Shotwell procurement of corn. He did actually select and produce and there are in evidence some five contracts that are marked Shotwell on their face.

4801 Now, if your Honor excludes these exhibits, these three that I am talking about, it leaves the matter before the jury as though those were the only possible Shotwell contracts, whereas, if you admit them, while it does not prove affirmatively that there were more, it leaves the record in a fairer position, because it leaves the full story there, that the witness cannot say that those he produced are all that there are, or might have been.

By Mr. Lockley: I understand that the witness testified orally and was permitted to testify: I fail to see how these documents can in any way add or detract from the case.

By Mr. O'Brien: The documents corroborate and explain what he meant by that.

By the Court: I will adhere to my prior ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

Now, we are to the point, your Honor, where to go forward with the next witness here we have to have a ruling on the Hausman and Starr papers.

By the Court: I have given it some thought over the noon hour, and I did hurriedly read the transcript 4802 that was left with me, regarding the testimony of Bercu, Starr and Hausman.

Of course, I admitted the Bercu work sheets during the time that he was the accountant, and, I suppose, to be consistent, I must recognize that the foundation is substantially the same for these work sheets as they were for Bercu, except that we have the anomalous situation of Bercu being an auditor, so to speak, for the Lubben side of the controversy, and Roth the auditor for the Giglio side of the controversy. As far as foundation is concerned, I think the same situation prevails.

While it is true that Mr. O'Brien wasn't very complete in his examination of Roth—he might as well have gone further to obtain a ruling of the Court as to whether or not this man was acting under constitutional reservation with sufficient basis—but I don't believe that I would be justified in being too technical about that. I am satisfied that if Mr. O'Brien had asked Roth, or he had been instructed by the Court, he would have taken the same position.

I don't think I should overlook what I feel to be absolutely right in the matter.

4803 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I would have done it, if you hadn't heard about the proceeding before, right in the case here. I felt that you knew that.

By the Court: I am confident that Roth would refuse to answer any questions as to the whereabouts of those papers, or whether he ever had them, or anything that would throw any light upon it.

Well, if that is my reaction to it all, it seems to me I would be acting in less than good faith if I didn't rule on the matter in the light of my own reaction to the entire picture.

Now, of course, it may be argued that these work sheets, after all, don't constitute any evidence, but again we are confronted with the unusual situation of having very important papers in the hands of certain parties who were charged with a criminal offense, and were standing on their constitutional rights, and the Court is powerless to obtain results from the documents.

In view of that, it seems to me that I must not adhere too strictly to the foundation that otherwise might be required for these documents. Both Hausman and 4804 Starr testified that to the best of their knowledge these work papers accurately reflected the data on the books and records of the Eatsum partnership at the time they made their audit, and they had merely taken down certain figures in the carying out of their work as auditors. Of course, they may be piece meal data, and they may present a part of the picture rather than the total picture. And I appreciate the difficulty the Government may have under those circumstances in meeting what those work papers may seem to reflect.

But, on the other hand, I would feel hesitant to deny the defendants to avail themselves of those documents insofar as they may constitute competent evidence.

If they are irrelevant, then I take it no harm is done. If they are immaterial, no harm is done. If, perchance,—and I suppose that is what the defendants contend—they do bear on some of the issues of this law suit, I would be inclined to lean over backwards in order to permit secondary evidence to be admitted in order that no injustice might be done to these defendants on trial.
4805 I think, in view of the observations that I have made, that I will receive the exhibits.

I am assuming, and if I am wrong in my assumption, I want to be corrected—all these documents have been identified, either by Hausman or Starr, as work sheets made up by them, in their own handwriting, and that that foundation has been laid.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir; they have.

By the Court: And with that understanding I will admit them in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court.)

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I would like to point out that by the device of handling these documents in this particular way, the defense has very effectively prevented the Government from examining the documents, from cross examining any witnesses as to the accuracy of those documents, or from, in any way laying any foundation for the impeachment of these documents. They have refused, and have failed to comply with the Government subpoena served upon them to produce records which they have gotten hold of by some hook or crook, and they have failed to advise the Government of 4806 the existence of documents which are not in any way privileged, but which the Government should have as much right to as they do in order that justice is done in the case. And I think that at least the Government should be entitled to under the circumstances is an adequate opportunity for examination of all of these documents before we are required to cross examine any witnesses they may now expect to call, and attempt to examine as to what these documents purport to mean.
4807 By the Court: Which documents do you now refer to?

By Mr. Lockley: I am referring to the so-called work sheets which were obtained in some manner or other from Giglio or the other—

By Mr. O'Brien: There isn't any "some manner or other" about it. He just gave them to me, to my men.

By the Court: To what sheets now in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: The ones you just admitted.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may say—you have said that twice—I would be glad to turn to the record and show you were Hausman and Starr were tendered to you for cross examination after we identified the documents.

By Mr. Lockley: Cross examination on what?

By Mr. O'Brien: On the documents.

By Mr. Lockley: I was given an opportunity to ask them whether or not there was a proper foundation laid for those documents. That was all. The documents weren't in evidence. I couldn't examine from the documents.

By Mr. O'Brien: That was all you were entitled to.

By Mr. Lockley: When I did try to examine them
4808 from one document, which I had no objection to, you complained about that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I did, but the Judge let you. You could have done the same with all those.

By Mr. Lockley: Not the ones not in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: You objected to them. I would have been happy to have them in.

By the Court: I don't remember whether you made an attempt to interrogate Hausman or Starr.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, you recall that when we were given those things to look at Mr. O'Brien objected to Mr. Krane using his photographic eye, or whatever it was he called it.

By Mr. O'Brien: On the cash sheets.

By the Court: That one exhibit that was in Lubben's handwriting.

If my memory serves me right, you had these exhibits to examine for some time.

By Mr. O'Brien: Over the noon recess, the whole Hausman bunch.

By the Court: In order to examine Hausman.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right. I forgot that, but that is true. The whole package of them.

By the Court: And I think, furthermore, Mr. Lockley, you were told by counsel that you could make Haus-
4809 man your own witness, if you wanted to, to interrogate as to the verity of these figures, or explain them, or generally go into matters outside the scope of the direct.

Now, all that they did was to establish—not the verity of the figures themselves, or what the figures meant, but merely that the data correctly reflected the information that was on the books and records.

Now, of course, it may be that you could have examined some of these witnesses as to what this means. Maybe there is an entry there that needs explanation, and it might have some bearing on the foundation as to whether or not it is material. I don't know that you did, outside of examining Hausman as to this one exhibit, and I permitted you to do so. And I don't know that you offered to cross examine him on anything else.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, all I ask at this time is that we do be given some opportunity to examine the documents before they are required for cross examination.

By the Court: You mean to cross examine whom?

By Mr. Lockley: I presume that Mr. O'Brien is going to call an expert witness in now.

4810 By Mr. O'Brien: Not at any great scope, Mr. Lockley. We have one item we are interrogating about. That is all. There is nothing too extensive.

By Mr. Lockley: O. K.

By the Court: I don't suppose there will be any objection, in view of the examination of this witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: The documents would be rather few. I don't think you have seen it.

By the Court: You should have some time to acquaint yourself further. We will cross that bridge when we come to it. I don't know now what may be in the offing.

This isn't for the record, necessarily.

(Discussion off the record.)

By the Court: I think the record should reflect this. I want it clear in the record that I tendered to Mr. O'Brien an opportunity to read the portion of the transcript of Mr. Cain's testimony as to which I modified my rulings, so that he may know and the defendants may be informed, that before they recess if they desire to read such portions of the record they are afforded an opportunity to do so.

4811 Now, off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

4812 By the Court: I think I would want defendants to clarify in the record specifically what their position is going to be before I rule on them.

By Mr. McConnell: I am not contending that they are, so far as the corporation is concerned.

By the Court: Not what?

By Mr. McConnell: That they are within the issues. I am not contending that.

By the Court: For any purpose?

By Mr. McConnell: For any purpose.

By Mr. Kirby: So far as the defendant Harold Sullivan is concerned on this question of the disclosure, he had testified that he informed Busby on that January day of 1948 that Busby should go to the government and I think that it is important that proof be in the record.

Now, what did he tell Busby to go to the government about? He told him to go about a disclosure policy and he referred to the fact that it was explained. Busby had testified that he knew in general what a disclosure meant, generally, and therefore, it can be plain to the jury that the defendant Sullivan would like to have the outlines of such a policy shown as a matter of evidence, not for the purpose of posing to the jury every conceivable 4813 question, but so that the jury would know what he did, what Sullivan did in that January, 1948, set of circumstances and without some explanation by way of evidence of what that means, the picture is incomplete.

Now, that is my own view of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: So far as I am concerned, Judge, I think it is only fair to say that I know of no legal basis for any of the evidence on disclosure, including these three documents that I am talking about, except the issue of intent, good faith or wilful evasion and for no other purpose that I offer those documents.

By the Court: Well, no—

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know what your position is going to be on instructions or what may come out of that, but regardless of what comes out, it is for this purpose that the documents are offered.

By the Court: What is your position now, Mr. Lockley, in view of the purposes for which the evidence is offered?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, the testimony with respect to Mr. Sullivan's conversation with Mr. Busby allegedly in January was gone over completely during the course of the hearings on the motion to 4814 suppress.

If that sort of thing is going to be brought out on the defense case, then the government has got to rebut it by showing that there was bad faith, that they didn't go in January, as Mr. Sullivan testified, but they went as late as March, as Mr. Sauber testified on the motion to suppress and it means we are going to be trying that issue which has been disposed of once all over again.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, no.

4815 By the Court: Counsel have made it very clear, as I understand their statement in the record, that they recognize that there is no issue of a voluntary disclosure as such. They contend, however, that what Mr.

Cain and what Mr. Sullivan did with reference to telling Mr. Busby to go to the government and what Mr. Cain did when he talked to Mr. Sauber, should be interpreted in the light that the so-called disclosure policy prompted them to go to the Government and tell the Government what they did and that unless there is in the record some evidence regarding the so-called disclosure policy, the bearing that their actions may have on intent and good faith will be lost.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, those are self-serving acts on their part as to which there is question as to whether they are admissible in any event, because they transpired subsequent to the commission of the crime.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge Kennedy admitted them in the Lustig case.

By Mr. Lockley: Judge Kennedy may have done so, but he did it on the question of whether there was a compromise, in that case.

4816 By Mr. O'Brien: No. He expressly said, Mr. Lockley, in his instruction, he put it this way:

"Not on an issue of a plea at bar, nor on a question of compromise, but, l[illegible]ies and gentlemen, on the question of intent and good faith."

By Mr. Kirby: May I interpose that in Balter on tax fraud—

By Mr. Lockley: Don't rely too much on Harry Balter.

By Mr. Kirby: He cites on this question of intent that they even let a man prove he paid his taxes after he was indicted so that the date on which he did something is not controlling.

By Mr. Lockley: That is the Hindell-Rogers case, I suppose you are talking about, but the reason in that case is that the Government first brought in his amended return to show it was an admission that he owed it, that he owed the tax, but then he was permitted to come in and say yes, but I paid it as an offset.

By Mr. Kirby: You brought in the question of didn't Mr. Cain say this and so in connection with it. I think it is clearly admissible.

4817 By Mr. McConnell: Well, there is one question which is clear. When the government brings in statements of the officers of my client, in which they make admissions which are against the interests of the corporation, certainly all the facts and surroundings of that admission are admissible as evidence to explain the admission and the circumstances under which it is made. That doesn't mean we have to try a disclosure case and I don't want to. I have an antagonistic view of all of that proof.

By the Court: I would like to look over all that exhibit, that is, the Wenchel statement.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have handed them to you.

By the Court: I will look them over. I don't see that you are going to be prejudiced any if I delay my ruling until I am a little more clear as to what portion of the exhibits I will admit, if any, if I defer my ruling. You go ahead with your testimony.

All right.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 4818 77-A through 77-W for identification.)

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 100 and 101 for identification.)

LEON J. BUSBY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Busby, you were sworn and you testified before?

A. Yes, sir.

By the Court: Mr. Busby, your initials are what?

By the Witness: L. J. Leon J. Busby.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You testified during the government's case, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wanted to identify if I could the documents which are marked Defendants' Exhibits 100 and 101 respectively, for identification.

4819 I will ask you first whether in the year 1948 you prepared from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company books and records or papers the work sheets on the syrup purchases during the year 1941, that is, for the year 1941?

A. I believe these were prepared.

By the Court: You will have to speak up a little louder Mr. Busby.

By the Witness:

A. I think the figures were prepared during 1949.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And were they prepared by your auditing firm?

A. Yes, under my supervision.

A. And do they represent correctly and completely in detail the purchases of the items indicated for that year, 1941?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. And is that reflected in Exhibit 101 for identification, the results of that examination?

A. Is this 101?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, it is reflected in this.

4820 Q. What is Exhibit 100 for identification?

A. 100 is a rearrangement of the same material by vendors, and also by commodity.

Q. Can you tell us what sheets relate to corn syrup and corn products, omitting those which do not?

A. Then I don't know how to identify them. These are the ones (indicating).

Q. These are the ones that relate to the corn products?

A. That is correct

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you mark these—

By the Witness: Corn syrup.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Would that include corn, sugar and starch also?

A. Starch is in a separate section.

Q. The last page here is starch?

A. The last page is starch.

Q. What is the middle one?

A. The middle ones pertain to something else, to cocoa.

Q. No. I mean these (indicating).

A. These are syrup, corn syrup.

4821 Q. These (indicating)?

A. These, the cocoa. That is another product.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please mark these sheets?

By the Court: 100 or 101?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am having marked these specific sheets 100-A through 100-M.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 100-A through 100-M, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Busby, the ones pertaining to starch I have marked 100-I, J, K, L, and M. Those which you designated pertained to corn syrup, I have had marked 100-A, B, C, D, and so forth through H.

By the Court: Now, am I correct, Mr. O'Brien, in assuming that Exhibits A to H cover corn syrup, and from I to M, cover corn starch?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. Those are the two commodities.

By the Witness: That is correct, in that section.

4822 By Mr. O'Brien: You are correct on the numbers, Judge.

By Mr. Kirby: Corn syrup, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Corn starch and corn syrup.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, do all of these detail sheets of Exhibit 101 pertain to the same items, or do they include something else?

A. They include other commodities as well as the corn syrup and corn starch.

Q. Could you readily identify those which pertain to the starch or syrup, or are they comingled?

A. No, they are segregated in specific columns for starch and for corn syrup.

Q. But not by page, not separated by page?

A. Each page shows that classification.

Q. It shows a mixed classification?

A. It shows a mixed classification.

Q. So I have to put in all the sheets to get the total of the corn syrup and the corn starch?

4823 A. Correct.

Q. All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will offer the documents, Judge, as Defendants' Exhibits 100 and 101, the 100 including only the lettered sheets.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. This Exhibit 100, Mr. Busby, relates only to '41, does it?

A. Yes. That is my understanding. I would have to look at it again. Yes, 1941.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what it was intended to do.
By Mr. Lockley: I wanted to make sure.
By the Witness: That is correct. It is on the bottom.
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, with respect to Defendants' Exhibit 100, I object to the inclusion in that document sheets other than those marked for identification, and suggest that those which have been marked for identification be segregated and separated from 4824 the balance of the document.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is agreeable to us, but I will do it afterwards.
By the Court: Let me see if I understand what the exhibits cover. Does the exhibit cover the year of just 1941?
By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.
By the Court: That is, Exhibit 100, A through M, inclusive, covers corn syrup and corn starch?
By Mr. O'Brien: Right.
By the Court: What is 101?
By Mr. O'Brien: The 101 is the detail on the same items. I may say that 100 is according to classified,—according to vendors of those items. 101, as I understand it is the detail on the purchases comingled, inextricably comingled with other data which I can't physically separate.
4825 By Mr. Lockley: I object to 100, your Honor, on the ground that it is immaterial and irrelevant because it relates to the year 1941.
By the Court: Well, what is the purpose of the offer when you limit it to 1941?
By Mr. O'Brien: Because 1941 shows, the evidence shows was the base year.
By the Court: In other words, you contend that is the year upon which the allocation was based?
By Mr. O'Brien: There has been such a contention and I am sure it was in 1941.
By the Court: May it not be material, counsel?
By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, there has not been that testimony with respect to all of the various companies which are listed in this exhibit. I don't believe that we have had such testimony from A. E. Staley, as I understand it. The vendors listed here are American Maize Products, Anheuser Busch, Corn Products Sales Company,

Penick & Ford, Union Sales Corporation, and Cer-4826 tified Products Company. We have had no testimony, as I recall, as to Anheuser-Busch, as to what base period they may have used, whether it was 1941 or not. Hubinger isn't in here.

By the Court: What do you say about it?

By Mr. Lockley: There may be—

By Mr. O'Brien: I am trying to show what their situation was in that year as to the purchase of commodities of that kind.

By the Court: It would be only material in so far as the refiners may have used that as the base period for allocation in 1945 and 1946 and Mr. Lockley says you haven't established that Anheuser-Busch, for instance, used that as their base period. Whether there was any variance among these various refiners, I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley: My recollection of the testimony, your Honor, is only Corn Products Sales Company and Penick & Ford have testified as to the use of 1941 as a base period. The other four vendors who are listed here have not so testified. If I am wrong, I wish counsel 4827 would correct me.

By Mr. O'Brien: As Mr. McConnell reminds me, his cross examination shows it was general throughout the industry to take 1941 as a base.

By Mr. Lockley: I think there was no general testimony of that sort. I asked specific witnesses representing specific concerns whether they used 1941 as a base. I don't recall that I asked what the practice was.

By the Court: Was it a part of the OPA?

By Mr. O'Brien: No. They had the voluntary basis. The prices were, but the allocation was on a voluntary basis, where it existed at all.

By the Court: You will have to check the record.

4828 By Mr. Lockley: As to those companies which have actually testified that they used 1941 as a base, I have no objection as to the use of recapitulations as to those companies.

I object to Exhibit 101, your Honor, on the ground that it contains information as to the use of raw materials, including sugar, corn syrup, chocolate, corn sugar, starch, milk, cocoa, and the other items, as to which there has been no testimony other than the corn syrup itself.

As a matter of fact, the testimony has been that there was no corn, that there was no sugar, and chocolate or milk, or cocoa bought in the black market.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am limiting the offer to the corn syrup, and corn starch data in columns, as your Honor can see, and the preparation is a very voluminous effort.

By the Court: What does it purport to cover with 4829 reference to corn syrup and starch?

By Mr. O'Brien: Why, it shows the quantities purchased during the year, does it not?

By the Court: 1945 and 1946?

By Mr. O'Brien: No. 1941.

By the Witness: By date.

By Mr. O'Brien: Sir?

By the Witness: By date.

By Mr. O'Brien: Perhaps I can show your Honor on the sheet. Part of the information contained on the sheet is all I have reference to. I am not interested in having the rest of it.

By the Witness: The rest of it is as to how long they came—

By the Court: Well, it shows the total amount of corn syrup and starch purchased during 1941, from these various companies, is that it?

By the Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: It does show the companies and the quantities and the date. First, all I am doing in 4830 offering this now is to lay a foundation for the testimony of the next witness, because the work is so exhaustive in making this recap, that where Mr. Busby had already done it, I didn't want the other witness to have to do it for those years. It is just a preliminary thing. I am perfectly happy if the balance of the sheet is excluded, and it be confined to the corn syrup as to the corn starch.

By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley makes the objection, however, that there isn't any evidence that these other companies allocated to Shotwell in the 1941 period.

By Mr. O'Brien: That will become important, I think, only during the testimony of the other witness, but I do what the foundation is as we arrived at it, so I have some identifiable papers.

By the Court: I don't understand how it would only become important with reference to the other wit-4831 ness. If these other companies did not allocate Shotwell on the 1941 purchases, that other testimony is immaterial.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to point out the testimony of Penick and Ford's representative was that the 1941 allocation base was used whenever possible, but that they also attempted to provide additional material over and above the allocation, and insofar as Hubinger was concerned, there was no—

By the Court: That might go to the weight of it, rather than the competency.

By Mr. Lockley: As to Exhibit 101, furthermore, that also contains the names of various vendors who have not testified here, that they used 1941 as a base period in allocating corn syrup or starch.

By the Court: Well, then, moreover, wouldn't you have to show that Shotwell in 1945 and 1946 bought corn syrup from these various concerns?

4832 By Mr. O'Brien: I intend to, Judge. I tried to express that when I said I have a witness to come on that subject and he has some summaries but I did not want that witness to spend months developing the same information as to 1941 that Mr. Busby already developed years ago.

By the Court: I suppose you can show the amount of corn syrup that Shotwell bought in 1945 and 1946 for the foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Through the other witness.

By the Court: Yes, without the reference as to whether or not it was allocation or whether it was just purchases without allocation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, some of his testimony relates to 1941 and to the extent it does, I want it to be based on this so far as a foundation is concerned. Now, on materiality, your Honor can deal with it then.

By the Court: I will sustain Mr. Lockley's ob-4833 jection if you are offering 1941 as a base period for these companies in allocating corn syrup to Shotwell in 1945 and 1946. You haven't laid sufficient foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I can't tell you that I am interested in proving allocations. I mean, that isn't it. I am making the evidence available. If Mr. Lockley doesn't want it, it is all right with me.

By the Court: Well, it is all right with me too.
By Mr. O'Brien: O. K.
Do you have any questions or is Mr. Busby through?
By Mr. Lockley: Did your Honor rule on Exhibit No. 100? I had the same objection with respect to it.
By the Court: I understood 100 is a mere classification of 101, isn't that right?
By Mr. Lockley: By companies, yes, sir.
By the Court: I make the same ruling, that I limit
4834 it to those companies you have testified—or rather had their representatives testify that Shotwell was under an allocation on the 1941 base.
As to the other companies, I will sustain the objection.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court.)

By Mr. Lockley: I have no questions.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.
(Witness excused.)

4835 FREDERICK B. ANDREWS, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Frederick B. Andrews.
Q. Mr. Andrews, the acoustics in this room are not very good and you are going to have to speak up.
Where do you live?
A. Glencoe, Illinois.
Q. What is your business?
A. Public accounting.
Q. For how many years have you been in public accounting?
A. Since 1908.
Q. By yourself or with firms, or what?
A. I have been by myself since 1921.
Q. And the name of your firm?
A. F. B. Andrews & Company.
Q. Where is it located?
A. One North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. In connection with certain of the accounting
4836 questions in this case, we have retained you to look into them, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to show you certain of the documents that have already been introduced in evidence and first of all I want to show you a Government's Exhibit 63 and ask you what is that exhibit, generally?

A. It looks like a statement of the bank account of Eatsum Food Products Company, 1841 Broadway, New York, with Manufacturers Trust Company of New York for the month of—or for the period from November 15th to November 30th, 1945.

Q. Do you find a check clearing the bank in the amount of $36,148.35?

A. Yes, sir, on November 27th.

Q. I now show you a document introduced by the Government, which is marked 63-A and that I can describe generally as what has been called a recap sheet here. Do you find on that document an item showing balance due?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the dollar amount stated of that?

A. $36,148.35.

4837 Q. Now that being the same amount as this check that cleared here (indicating)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I show you another document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 21-A and ask you—

By the Court: What is that number, please?

By Mr. Kirby: It is 21-A, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, that purports to be a work sheet of the Bernard Bereu & Company, doesn't it?

A. It is a work sheet that has imprinted on it "Bernard Bereu & Co., Certified Public Accountants."

Q. And what period does it purport to cover?

A. It is a statement as at a date, November 30, 1945, and it appears to cover transactions for a period begun June 1, 1945, and ended November 30, 1945.

Q. And on that Bereu work sheet, do you find that item of $36,148.35?

A. There is a debit entry in that amount on this sheet under date of November 27th.

Q. Now, then, I show you Exhibit 21-B for the de-
4838 fense, and that has been identified by the witness Hausman as having been made in his handwriting, and as of what date does that purport to speak?

By the Court: That is Exhibit 21—

By Mr. Kirby: B.

By the Court: Defendants' Exhibit B.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What is the latest date on it?

A. It appears to represent receipts and disbursements in the month of November. I don't see a year mentioned here, but some of the figures are the same as appearing in this November 30, 1945 statement which is Exhibit 21-A.

Q. And particularly, does the $36,148.35 item appear on the Hausman work sheet just as it did on the Bercu work sheet?

A. That is on Exhibit 21-B.

Q. Yes.

A. Under date of November 27th, yes, sir.

4839 Q. Now, then, I will show you a sheet which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 21-C, and testimony as to that is it is in the handwriting of the witness Hausman, who identified it, and that purports to be what, Mr. Andrews?

A. That purports to be an analysis of the balance in the loans and exchanges account of Eatsum Food Products Company as of December 31, 1945.

Q. What date?

A. December 31, 1945.

Q. And is there a balance given for charges against David Lubben personally?

A. There is an amount with respect to D. G. Lubben, of $65,570.49, a debit amount.

Q. Is that $65,570.49 charged against Lubben?

A. Yes. It shows here as a debit opposite his name.

Q. Is the detail given on that sheet of what makes up the $65,570.49?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you another exhibit which is Defendants' Exhibit 21-D, and ask you—or, I will tell you that 4840 the witness Hausman testified that that was in his handwriting, and I will ask you if that purports to show the detail of 21-C, the preceding sheet?

A. It purports to show the detail of the item of $65,570.49 under the initials "D.G.L."

Q. And is that $65,570.49 the same items as shown on the line, "D. G. Lubben" on the preceding exhibit?

A. The same amount, yes, sir.

Q. Does it show what makes up that total of $65,570.49?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This $36,148.35, does that appear there?

A. It does.

Q. And against whom is it charged?

A. It is included in the items aggregating a net amount of $65,570.49 under the initials "D.G.L." and under date of November 27th.

Q. And is November 27th the same date as the date that this check cleared the bank, as is shown by Government Exhibit 63?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now that sheet there, where it is charged 4841 against David Lubben, is made out how many months —well, it purports to be made out how long after the check went to the bank?

A. It shows a balance of at December 31, 1945, when the check had cleared the bank on November 7th—November 27th, a little over a month.

Q. Now, I show you one which Mr. Hausman testified—it is 21-E, for the defense—that is in his handwriting, and he testified he made it up at the end of February, 1946. Am I correct that that purports to speak as of the end of February, 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now is there a charge shown on there against Lubben?

A. There is.

Q. How much—or let me ask it this way: Is that $65,570.49 item or total still charged against Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that that $36,148.35 item as to the end of February, 1946 is still charged against Lubben, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you a document which is Exhibit 4842 36 for the defense, and this is a sheet which the evidence says came from the only book of the partnership that remains, that is in existence, and ask if you have examined that? Have you?

A. I have.

Q. Now does that have some balances on the loans and exchange account?

A. This is the loans and exchange account, and it shows a balance at the close of—I would say eight months, although I haven't checked it for every month, but it looks to be every month—it shows a balance in the account.

Q. And on Exhibit 21-E, there is a balance of $105,864.07 shown. Is the same thing shown on Defendants' Exhibit 36?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So do these two, Mr. Andrews, key together?

A. The Exhibit 21-E appears to be an analysis of the balance of $105,864.07, as of February 28, 1946, which also appears as the balance on Exhibit 36.

4843 Q. Now Exhibits 21-C and D, they give the balance and then the detail as of 12-31-45, do they?

A. 21-C gives the detail of the balance of December 31, 1945 in the amount of $82,915.82, which also appears at that date in Exhibit 36.

21-D shows a balance at October 31, 1945, of $38,002.42 which also appears under that date in Exhibit 36.

Q. Does 21-A also key to the ledger, the one ledger that is in existence so far as the partnership is concerned?

A. 21-A shows a balance of $70,854.21 which also appears in Exhibit 36 as the balance at November 30, 1945.

Q. Mr. Andrews, did I request you to have enlarged some of these exhibits that have been referred to?

A. I think technically, you asked me, sir to examine some that had already been prepared.

Q. All right. I attended to the mechanics of it, that is right, and you have examined these that I have on this easel and you notice the exhibit stamps appearing on the bottom of them, do you, sir?

4844 A. They are the same as those you have been discussing?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then this (indicating), that is this black one, it is the little page which is Exhibit 36, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Andrews, will you be good enough to come here, please, and just trace for the Court and the jury where this $36,148.35 item appears through these sheets. I am not sure they have been placed here in the right order.

I notice there is 21-A. Just trace it through pointing out where it appears and explaining, will you, who it is charged against?

A. On Exhibit 21-D—

Q. Will you stand on the other side, so the Court can see it also.

By Mr. O'Brien: Why don't you pull it over?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, then the Court can't see it.

By the Witness:

4845 A. Exhibit 21-D, appears as the fourth item in the little table which is headed by the initials "D. G. L."

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What appears—

By the Witness: The item of $36,148.35.

Q. Yes.

A. It is a part of a total of $70,218.89 which represents the sum of debits being on the left hand side.

On the right hand side there are some credits that aggregate $4,648.40 which, taken away from the $70,218.89 leaves a net debit of $65,570.49.

Q. And that is under the sub heading "D.G.L."?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now this is the check then that we are talking about, and it is under that sub heading "D.G.L."?

A. It is the same amount and bears the same date.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Andrews, is the exhibit to which you just referred connected with 21-C?

A. Yes, sir. The net amount of $65,570.49 which appears in this small table in Exhibit 21-D appears also in 21-C as a part of a total of $83,415.82 of debits from 4846 which $500.00 credit is taken away to produce a balance at December 31, 1945, of $82,915.82.

4847 Q. My question really is this: The sub total of $65,570.49 on 21-D, which includes the check for $36,148.35, that is the $65,570.49 sub total, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then on this exhibit (indicating) against whom is that $65,570.49 charged?

A. D. G. Lubben.

By Mr. O'Brien: Which exhibit?

By Mr. Kirby: 21-C.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, is that $65,570.49 which is charged against Lubben, and which includes that $36,148.35, shown again in the February, 1946 recapitulation?

A. That recapitulation being Exhibit 21-B, the answer is yes, sir, it does. It is shown.

Q. And who is charged against?

A. D. G. Lubben.

Q. This black sheet here is Exhibit 36, Mr. Andrews.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I correct in believing that there are sub totals in pencil along in this first big column?

4848 A. The figures to which you have been pointing are balances representing the excess of the sub totals in the column headed "debits" over the corresponding sub totals—that is, the totals of the same date in the column headed "credits".

Q. And do those balances in each case agree with the balances on these sheets in the 21 series?

A. As to the ones I have already testified to, yes, sir. I haven't checked any others.

Q. But they do agree with those?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is there any place—oh, now, the latest balance on this 21 series that we have is $105,864.07.

A. Yes, sir, as of February 28, 1946.

Q. And is that balance of $105,864.07 shown as at the end of February, 1946 on this exhibit 36?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And up to that point, at least, am I correct that it is charged against Lubben personally?

A. I think so, from the statements that we have been discussing.

4849 Q. By the "statements", you mean exhibits?

A. The exhibits we have been discussing, yes, sir.
4850 Q. Now, during the remaining life, the remaining life of this Exhibit 36, is it ever taken off and charged against anybody other than Lubben?
A. There is not enough taken off at any time after that date to include that $36,000.00.
Q. So that it remains?
A. I would say the answer to your question is no.
Q. That it wasn't taken off and that it remains in there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now will you resume your chair, please.
By Mr. Kirby: I now find, your Honor, that after going to all the trouble of getting it enlarged that I didn't get it enlarged enough so as to make it visible to the Court and the jury at all. I thought that it would be large enough.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Now, Mr. Andrews, is there any time from the date the check was cashed, the $36,148.35 check, I mean up 4851 to the end of this record, where it is charged against Shotwell?
A. I haven't seen Shotwell's name on here anywhere, have I? I don't think so.
Q. The only name you have seen it charged against was who?
A. With respect to that thirty-six thousand dollar item?
Q. Yes.
A. It is D. G. Lubben.
Q. And how late a period, what is the latest period shown on Exhibit 36?
A. May 31, 1946.
Q. And that is how many months after the check cleared the bank?
A. Six months.
Q. So that at least for six months it was charged against him and not Shotwell?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Andrews, we have had a good deal of discussion in this case about corn and corn products and corn syrup and corn starch and corn sugar.
Did I request that you make certain summaries with respect to the purchases of corn products by Shotwell?

4852 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do some work and prepare some summaries?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you keep your voice up and tell just exactly how you went about your work. What did you do?

A. I examined some tabulations of those purchases which had been made by another accountant.

Q. That is, Busby's office?

A. Yes, sir. So I was told.

Q. Yes.

A. I compared with those tabulations.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a minute, your Honor. I object unless the witness identifies the tabluations that he is referring to.

By Mr. Kirby: These tabulations, these exhibits which have been marked 100 and 101.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I am not asking you to read from them, but just so we can identify them, are those the ones you did some work on?

A. These are the among the tabulations, yes,
4853 sir. There were others.

Q. And that is for what year?

A. For 1941.

Q. Well, what did you do? What work did you do with respect to 1941, Mr. Andrews?

A. I compared original invoices against Shotwell by the suppliers of these corn products.

Q. Where did you get those invoices?

A. From the files that are now in the office of the United States Attorney.

Q. Here in the court house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, you went and got the invoices from the suppliers to Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And checked? What did you check the original invoices against?

A. Against the tabulations.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a moment, please. I object, your Honor, unless we are told what invoices he compared, from what suppliers.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Very good. What suppliers?

4854 A. We are talking now about the year 1941.

Q. Yes.

A. American Maize Products Company, Anheuser-Busch, Incorporated, Corn Products Sales Company, Penick & Ford, Ltd., Incorporated, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: What is the last one.

By the Witness: A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Spell it, please.

By the Witness: S-t-a-l-e-y.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) Union Sales Corporation. Certified Products Company. That's all for 1941.

4855 Q. When you checked the invoices, did you also make some running tabulations?

A. Those tabulations had already been made, and I made tick marks on them to indicate that I had examined the invoices which were tabulated there.

Q. Did they check out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then after you confirmed them, did you make some summaries of purchases?

A. I did.

Q. And in what form? That is, were the purchasers, the suppliers, and purchases, by months?

A. There was a line for each month.

There was a pair of columns for each supplier. One of those two columns related to poundage, and the others the dollars and cents.

Q. And what products did you cover?

A. Corn syrup, corn sugar, boiling starch, and molding starch.

Q. Now, did you then make the same type of a summary for various suppliers for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I did. It was possible that in those years there
4856 was a supplier who had not been named for '41, and possibly for those years a supplier which I named for 1941, who did not appear in 1945 and 1946.

Q. But whomever the suppliers were for the respective years, you put down the purchase from them by month, and both quantity and pounds and dollars, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now how much of a search against the original invoices did you make for 1945 and 1946?

A. Enough to know that I have seen every invoice for those years which were listed on the tabulations that I referred to.

Q. Every one?

A. Every one. There was one exception in 1945, and six in 1946.

Q. And how many invoices then altogether did you examine, roughly, for the year 1941?

A. Oh, I would say probably between fifty and a hundred, although I made no effort to get the number of cases, and it isn't clear in my mind now.

Q. And then a large number of invoices for 1945 4857 and 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make a summary also of those tabulations in some fashion, Mr. Andrews?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have that with you now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you hand them to me, please?

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By the Witness:

A. Wait. That isn't one of them.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. No, that isn't one of the total tabulations.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you please mark these exhibits 102, and so forth?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 102 through 109, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you documents marked Defendants' Exhibits 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107—4 and 5 by inadvertence, were both put on the same—excuse me. Suppose we just have these marked over again. I put them 4858 down in such a fashion that I confused you.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, the way I put them down confused the young lady.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 102, 103, 104, 105, and 106 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby: I will withdraw that last question.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I ask you if Exhibits for identification on the part of the defense, 102, 103, 104, 105, and 106, are those summaries?

A. Yes, sir.

4859 Q. And without reading any of them into the record will you just briefly describe by document number what each of them is.

A. Exhibit 102 is a summary of corn syrup purchases by months and by suppliers for the years 1941, '45 and '46.

Exhibit 103 is a similar summary with respect to corn syrup purchases.

Exhibit 104 is a similar summary with respect to boiling starch purchases.

Exhibit 105 is a similar summary with respect to molding starch purchases.

Exhibit 106 is a summary of the other four.

By Mr. Kirby: Now I am seeking, if the Court please, to proceed without calling the Court's attention to the fact that on 102 we have a name of American Maize Products Company with respect to which there was the witness, Miller; we have the name Anheuser-Busch, but it appears that there was no supplying by Anheuser-Busch in '45 and '46, they only supplied in '41; we have the name of Corn Products Sales Company, as to which 4860 there was the testimony of the witness Adam, the witness Godfrey and the witness Aiger; we have the name of the Hubinger Company as to which there was the testimony of the witness Robinson; we have the name of Penick & Ford, Ltd., as to which there was the testimony of the witness Horan; we have the name of A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company, as to whom there was no testimony, except that—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. If there was no testimony, there was no testimony.

By Mr. Kirby: I said—

By Mr. Lockley: There should be no exception.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Kirby: Except that the witness Mike Cohen said—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to what the witness Mike Cohen may have said about A. E. Staley, if your Honor please.

By the Court: Let me hear it, anyway.

By Mr. Lockley: It is hearsay, before he starts.

4861 By Mr. Kirby: The witness Mike Cohen testified that the only corn products company in the country that didn't require corn deals was A. E. Staley, so that I would think in the absence of any other testimony, it may be that the Staley portion should not stand. That testimony of Mike Cohen, with respect to his exculpatory remarks as to Staley, is the only thing about Staley, specifically, in the record.

The next name is Union Sales Company. No witness of Union Sales testified. But the testimony of the witness Cohen, of the witness Godfrey, of the witness Adam, of the witness Robinson, of the witness—not Horan, he didn't venture that—but Miller, the witness Cain, the witness Sullivan, all were to the effect that these companies—and I invite the Court's attention that they were named specifically—the whole industry, except Staley always seems to be excluded, these people were names as requiring corn deals. But I will say that that is 4862 my summary of the proof as it rests in my memory.

Now, then, I would say this, that I could omit asking this witness about Staley and we could block out the figures and include the figures as to Staley. There would be no question, I think, as to all the other figures, unless there is an argument about Union Sales. And on Union Sales, no man from Union Sales testified, but the practice, the universality of the practice was testified to repeatedly.

Now, it would go to its weight, and the proof is not as strong on Union sales as it is on the others. But the proof does exist.

4863 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please—I am sorry, Mr. Kirby, I thought you were through.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, we have much the same situation as to these other products, your Honor. It was testified that the boiling starch and molding starch, that they were a corn product, that they were all in short supply, and that they were all used in the confectionery field.

And you will notice, for instance, in the Robinson testimony, he listed the starch purchases, and sugar purchases, just the same as the syrup. And they are all on this difficult supply situation.

So I offer all of these, Mr. Lockley, subject to the exception as to Staley on each one.

By Mr. Lockley: Now, that Mr. Kirby has concluded his testimony, your Honor, I would like to object to the use of these documents on the ground that the testimony which relates to them was limited to Perfick 4864 and Ford, to Corn Products, and to Hubinger, that there were any corn deals whatsoever with Shotwell. None of the others testified as to any of the so-called corn deals, irrespective of what this condition may have been in the trade.

Furthermore, none of these witnesses testified as to 1941 being a base year for allocation purposes. And those who did so testify, as to having base years, also testified that they did not rigidly adhere to such allocations, but that it varied from time to time, depending upon the amount of product they had on hand.

I further object to them on the ground that they are immaterial and irrelevant.

And, may I say further, there was no testimony whatsoever that I can recall about any molding starch, and about any boiling starch. This is the first time I heard that language.

And Hubinger testified that they had no dealings 4865 with the Shotwell Company in 1941, that their base was in 1942, so I recall it.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right. We don't claim purchases from Hubinger in '41, Mr. Lockley. Your memory is right on it.

By Mr. Lockley: So I think an improper foundation has been laid, your Honor, for the admission of these schedules.

By the Court: What do you propose to prove by the comparison of 1941 invoices and the 1945 and '46 invoices of these various products?

By Mr. Kirby: We propose to prove—

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I believe I would like to have this testimony of Mr.—pardon me, this statement of Mr. Kirby's out of the presence of the jury.

By the Court: I see no objection to it.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to prove the quantities required by this business in '45 and '46.

4866 By the Court: Quantity required?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: Well, you can show that you bought.

By Mr. Kirby: That is what I should have said. The '45 and '46 figures basically show what we bought, and they show it by months.

By the Court: Well, I take it you have no objection to that, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Not at all, your Honor, as to 1945 and 1946. We will stipulate as to how much they bought.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: As to what their books show.

4867 By the Court: Now, then, in the absence of some testimony as to the method of allocation, if any, between the 1941 figures and the 1945 and '46 figures, as to the companies to which there has been no reference in the record, it seems to me that you can't draw any such deductions from comparing 1941 figures with 1945 figures.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if the government doesn't want us to put in evidence—

By Mr. Lockley: If the Court please, the government is only trying to get before the jury the appropriate facts in the case. If we are going into every by-alley, every sideline, every possible diversion, we would be here forever. We have already gone into all sorts of improper, immaterial matters, and this, I believe, is just another one.

By the Court: I think, Mr. Kirby, that I will limit the exhibit to your purchases in 1941, from those companies who stated that your allocation was based on the 4868 1941 sales.

Now, granted that there is some uncertainty in the testimony as to just how much you got, because there was some testimony as to 80 per cent, then it was lowered, but be that as it may, I think that goes to the weight.

But as to the companies with reference to which there has been no testimony as to the 1941 base, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, your Honor, I have at the extreme righthand side—it just so happens that the only two as to which there could be a question, is Staley and Union. Now, there is no testimony as to Staley except Mike—

I can tear that off, on the righthand side, or just have the witness not refer to it, and then tear it off later on, if you would like.

By the Court: I do want to have him examine the exhibit very thoroughly. If that could be done and come 4869 within the scope of my ruling, good and well.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it ought to be amongst the papers in the record, Mr. Kirby. The Judge is admitting only the part of it that he says.

By Mr. Kirby: Then that would be American Maize, Corn Products—

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I recall no testimony that American Maize had any corn deals with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, in '41.

By the Court: We are speaking about the allocations.

By Mr. Lockley: But I assume the allocation in 1945 has some relationship to the amount bought in 1941. And if the amount in 1945 is greater than the amount in 1941, presumably it was necessary for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company to enter into some corn deals.

Now, there has been no testimony that there was any such corn deal. So the presumption just did stand.

By the Court: Well, in any event, I think it is 4870 proper for the defense to show a comparison between the 1941 and 1945 figures as to those companies who allocated Shotwell on the 1941 base.

Your argument goes to the weight of it, Mr. Lockley, not necessarily the competency.

4871 By Mr. Kirby: Then I will offer 102 with respect to American Maize, Corn Products—

By Mr. O'Brien: They are already offered and received, except for that part, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor. I am wasting your time.

By the Court: I think that is my ruling. And you thought you could revamp the exhibit to come within the scope of my ruling. And that is what I left for you to do.

By Mr. Kirby: Does that apply to each of these exhibits, 102, 3, 4, 5 and 6, having in mind that 2 is the syrup, 3 is the sugar, 4 is the starch, 5 is another type of starch and 6 is the summary?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I recall no testimony about any boiling starch, no testimony about any molding starch and no testimony about any corn sugar. This was all corn syrup to begin with. Now we 4872 are getting into all the corn by-products.

By the Court: I think there is some subsance to Mr. Lockley's position. I don't remember that there was any testimony, that you had to buy raw corn for the purpose of getting corn sugar. The testimony was exclusively directed to corn syrup.

By Mr. Kirby: The first time that corn sugar question came up was in June of 1945, in connection with—

By the Court: Are you testifying now or are you merely attempting to refer to certain testimony?

By Mr. Kirby: I am referring to the testimony of the witness John Kelly, who testified with respect to an Army Quartermaster contract that involved the use of corn sugar, and the exhibits were introduced in evidence, and they showed—and they are in evidence—that they were having difficulty getting corn sugar and therefore the Army gave them permission to use cane sugar instead 4873 of corn sugar.

Now, Kelly also testified that on the same contract involving pudding there was difficulty on corn starch. The letters show that.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Robinson of Hubbinger was asked what was molding starch and he said that is a light starch used in the candy trade. He was asked about corn sugar. He explained that. He said it was also known as dextrose. He was asked whether the problems were the same as to all the products and he said that that was true.

The witness Adam, Corn Products Refining Company, gave the same general testimony.

Now, we didn't go down the litany with everyone of these gentlemen about every one of the products. But certainly the expert proof is plain that the corn products in their entirety were difficult. And they were all difficult for the same reason. And they were all involved in these corn deals.

4874 By Mr. Lockley: There was no testimony, your Honor, that there was any corn deal necessary in obtaining corn sugar.

By the Court: I don't recollect that testimony.

By Mr. Lockley: That the company was unable to obtain corn sugar certainly doesn't indicate that they had to have a corn deal in order to get it.

Furthermore, with respect to Exhibit No. 106, which is a summary of the other four, I must object to it, your Honor, on the ground that since it is a summary of some portions of those documents which are in themselves inadmissible, that it, in itself, is inadmissible in its present state, until it has been at least recomputed, so as to reflect only the information which your Honor has permitted the defense to introduce.

4875 By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, 103 is the exhibit tendered with respect to corn sugar purchases.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: And does your Honor rule on that, sir?

By the Court: Well, I yet haven't been convinced by what you have stated that there was any testimony on the part of the defense that it was necessary to buy raw corn, in order to obtain corn sugar.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I have called, as best I can, the Court's attention to the fact that we did not ask about corn sugar every time we asked about corn syrup, but it was asked often enough, Judge Nordbye, that I do think that it does clearly show you couldn't get any of these corn products without making corn available. Specifically, it was so testified by certain of the witnesses, of whom I specifically and clearly remember Robinson's explanation about molding starch, and

4876 dextrose—

By the Court: Well, that is Exhibit 103, is it?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, it is, your Honor.

By the Court: Are you also going to show your total sugar purchases during 1945 and 1946?

By Mr. Kirby: Only corn sugar, your Honor.

By the Court: How about other sugar?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, that other sugar, we are not offering proof on that. There has been some testimony about isolated deals, like the 535,000 pounds of Turbinato sugar.

The answer is no on cane sugar.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to remind your Honor that the testimony with respect to that was that there were no overages paid in any way whatsoever in connection with the 535,000 pounds of sugar.

By Mr. Kirby: That is right, it was a trade deal.

4877 By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony that there was a trade deal, outside of Mr. Kirby's.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, your Honor, I can conceive that the Government may argue that we should have asked each one of these those questions, but that goes to the weight. We have gone to, I think, great effort to prove the status of the corn market. And that would encompass 103 on the corn sugar,, 104 on the starch, and 105.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to point out to your Honor that the Government has had no opportunity whatsoever of cross examining any witnesses as to the existence of any shortage of corn sugar on the market, or of the existence of any deals for starches, and so forth.

And for counsel to now attempt to summarize by throwing in a lot of material which is entirely unrelated to the testimony which has gone on before leaves us at a complete disadvantage.

4878 By the Court: Yes, I think the Government's position in that regard is well taken. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: You are now referring to?

By the Court: 103.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, 104, your Honor, refers to boiling starch.

By the Court: Well, you referred to starch. I don't know whether you referred to boiling starch or molding starch. And I don't know to what extent boiling starch is used in the candy industry. You haven't brought it out.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I don't want to shock my brother here, but the totals of what we used of boiling starch in the two years, in the indictment, are indicated right here, and I will pass them to your Honor, and to me those are awfully big figures.

4879 By Mr. Lockley: They may be big figures, your Honor, but it doesn't mean anything on that document as it stands right now. We have no way of knowing whether there was any sort of a corn deal, or whether there were any premiums paid for the purchase of boiling starch, and we have not had an opportunity to cross examine and find out if that was the situation.

By Mr. Kirby: And I also call the Court's attention to the quantities of molding starch involved.

By the Court: This is 104. Where is the starch column on here?

Can't you offer some evidence as to what extent molding starch and boiling starch were used in the candy industry? It seems to me you could supply that evidence without too much trouble. I would be able to understand more clearly than I do right now what the relevancy might be.

By Mr. Lockley: I think that, standing by itself, it would fail to establish that there was any sort 4880 of a black market deal relative to boiling starch.

By the Court: There was testimony, as I recollect it, that if a manufacturer delivered raw corn to a supplier, the supplier would allocate a certain amount of corn syrup and a certain amount of starch.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: In fact, you asked one of the witnesses yourself, Judge, and he pointed out to you that you couldn't get at one time the corn starch and the corn syrup, the full quantity.

By the Court: I think you can supply testimony, without much trouble, so as to indicate more clearly the relevancy of those items.

By Mr. Kirby: And is the offer of them at this time rejected?

By the Court: Yes, I will reserve my ruling on 104 and 105. And I have admitted 102, within the scope 4881 that I have heretofore indicated.

I will sustain the objection to 106 and to 103.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 102.)

By Mr. Kirby: I don't think there would be any particular point in just reading off all these totals. And that is all I have to ask of you. Thank you.

They may want to ask you some questions.

4882 By Mr. Kirby: Before they get into cross, Judge, we might have some questions of Mr. Andrews in the morning, depending upon whether there is any further showing.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you want me to go ahead with my cross examination before you finish your direct examination?

By Mr. O'Brien: Subject to that, surely, in the interest of time.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't care to cross examine on incomplete documentation.

By the Court: Are there going to be any further documents.

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By the Court: At least to the extent that Mr. Andrews has testified with reference to the exhibits that heretofore have been received, you may proceed with the cross, with reference to that phase of his testimony.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Andrews, do you still have the docu-4883 ments which Mr. Kirby gave you, relating to the $36,000.00 check?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Here is one of them.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you, Mr. Andrews, make the entries on Exhibit No. 36, which is this large document on the bulletin board; did you make those entries?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make the entries on Exhibits Nos. 63 or 21A, B, C, D and E?

A. As to 21 I can answer no. As to Exhibit 63, I don't know what you refer to.

Q. Exhibit 63 is an Eatsum bank statement and Exhibit 63-A is a recap sheet.

A. Oh, yes, I remember seeing those exhibits. I did not make any entries on them.

Q. So that your testimony here is not based upon what you know about these particular exhibits, but what you assume they mean, as an accountant, is that correct?

A. Well, of course, I know what I see in front of me and I interpret it on the basis of the knowledge 4884 of accounting that I have.

Q. That's right. That is based upon your interpretation as an accountant of how a loans and exchanges account would normally work; isn't that the way it is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And usually when there is a debit amount in a loans and exchanges account, that indicates that somebody owes the company money, doesn't it?

A. When there is a debit—if there is a debit balance, it indicates that; yes, sir.

Q. And a debit is a charge, isn't it?

A. That's correct. But the debit might be a repayment of an amount owed by the company.

Q. Well, was your interpretation of the debit balance on the loans and exchanges account that Mr. Dubben owed that much money to the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That is what I would understand from that account; yes, sir.

Q. And that would be the normal way that such a transaction would be handled, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is in accordance with common and ac-
4885 cepted accounting procedure, in other words?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, assume that it was testified to here that the loans and exchanges account was not used to charge loans and exchanges, as such, but that it was used as a holding or a clearing account for checks issued to cash for the purpose of getting money to pay premiums, would your testimony be any different?

4886 By Mr. Kirby: May I object to the question on the ground that the assumption is not supported by the proof?

By Mr. Lockley: It is supported by the testimony of the witness Hausman, your Honor, that that is exactly the way this particular count was handled.

By the Court: That is substantially my recollection.

By Mr. Kirby: I call the Court's attention to this important error. Hausman said that they were taken out each month. And unless he puts that in, that they sometimes put items in there, but they would take them out each month, the question is grievously misleading.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. May I hear the question?

By the Court: He may answer the question.

The loans and exchanges account showing a debit does not indicate that the money was due Eatsum, but rather a clearing for premiums and over-ceiling cash payments.

4887 By Mr. Kirby: That is true, but he went on to explain that they would take it out when it was for that purpose each month.

By the Court: I think what I have stated is fairly in accord with Mr. Lockley's question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. You are asking me to assume as a fact that the account was used for this other purpose?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That is correct.

A. Well, that is so different from ordinary procedure I wouldn't know how to interpret it.

Q. Would you interpret it as meaning that the balance, the debit balance due, reflected an amount owing by the person in whose name that debit balance was charged.

A. Well, Mr. Counsel, when entries are made admittedly at variance with the method followed by competent and honest people, for whatever purpose may be sought to be served by the person that is making the entries, then there isn't any basis for interpret-

4888 ing them. It is his own system and whatever he means by it, he says he means by it.

Q. These entries were made by an accountant whom you have not seen or talked to, you do not know exactly what he had in mind at the time he made the entries, and you are only assuming that this was a loan which had been made by the partnership to Mr. Lubben, and which he, in turn, owed to them, on the basis of the general accounting practice?

A. Sometimes, sir, people agree that when they say black they mean white. They agree that amongst themselves, but—

Q. Go ahead.

A. Under those circumstances, if I see something written down and it says black, I can only assume that it has the generally accepted meaning for the word black.

4889 Q. All right, sir. Don't you think that the accountants who actually made those entries were in the best position to know what they were intended to reflect?

A. If they were competent accountants, sir, they would know what they would reflect to other accountants. Now, whether they intended them to reflect that or not, is another matter.

Q. All right.

Now, will you take a look at this Exhibit 36, and tell me, was that account closed?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was never closed out?

A. That's correct.

Q. So you don't know how the balance of—what is it; a hundred thousand dollars, or something? You don't know how that balance of $105,864.07 was actually distributed on the books?

A. It doesn't appear to have been distributed.

Q. Could it have been distributed by journal entry?

A. It could have been.

Q. Without ever closing the books?

4890 A. No.

Q. But otherwise it would require closing the books, is that correct?

A. You wouldn't have a completed entry.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, that is all I have to ask him on the loans and exchanges account, and I would prefer to withhold the rest of my cross examination.

By the Court: We will be in recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing until the Judge and the Jury leave the courtroom.

This Honorable Court will recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon the hearing in the above entitled cause was adjourned until 10:00 o'clock a.m. Tuesday, October 13, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Before Nordbye, J. and J.
Chicago, Illinois,
Tuesday, October 13, 1953
10:00 o'clock a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell.
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States versus The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

4892 By Mr. Lockley: May I state, your Honor, that the reporters have called to my attention the Exhibit 100 series of the defense, and have advised me that the record is not entirely clear as to which portions of that exhibit have been objected to, and which portions have been admitted; and so, to correct the record, I would like to express my objection to any portion of Exhibit 100—let me start at the beginning. 100-A, which relates to Union Sales Compnay, 100-B, Union Sales Company, 100-C, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company. I have no objection to 100-D, which relates to Penick and Ford, nor to 100-E which relates to Corn Products.

I object to 100-F, which is Anhaueser Busch. I do not object to 100-G, which is American Maize.

I object to 100-H, which is a recapitulation of corn syrup purchases in 1941.

I do not object to the Penick and Ford, Corn Products, or American Maize, on the theory that there has been at least some evidence that there was a 1941 quota base system employed by those companies, but they are 4893 the only ones for which any such testimony is appropriate.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is in accord with your Honor's ruling yesterday, Judge.

By the Court: That is my recollection.

By Mr. O'Brien: And it merely specifies the companies. I think that is correct.

By Mr. Lockley: That is what my intention was, Mr. O'Brien.

FREDERICK B. ANDREWS, a witness heretofore called as on behalf of the Defendants, having been heretofore previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Redirect Examination.

By the Court: You are Mr. Andrews?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you please mark this Defendants' Exhibit 107 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 107 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Andrews, have you prepared an exhibit which is Defendants' Exhibit 107 for the defense, with respect to corn syrup purchases alone, and only from certain companies for the year 1941?

4894 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what companies?

A. American Maize Company, Corn Products Sales Company, and Penick and Ford, Ltd., Incorporated.

Q. And you have not included any other companies there?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I now offer in evidence, Defendants' Exhibit 107. We did redraw it to only put in the year 1943, those three companies.

By the Court: Does it include 1941, 1945, and 1946?

By Mr. Kirby: No, just 1941. That particular exhibit is limited.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the court, and marked Defendants' Exhibit 107.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will you please mark this Defendant's Exhibit 108 for identification?

4895 (Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 108 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And did you also prepare an exhibit, Defendants' Exhibit 108 for identification?

By the Court: 108?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, 108.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you?

A. Yes.

Q. And does that show the corn syrup purchases of the company in 1945 and 1946?

A. The answer to both questions is yes, I did, and it does show that.

By Mr. Kirby: I will offer in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 108.

By the Court: The same three companies?

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, no, no. With respect to 1945, and 1946.

By the Court: I was just inquiring. This is—

By Mr. Kirby: The purchases of corn syrup.

By the Court: From all companies?

4896 By Mr. Kirby: In 1945 and 1946.

By the Court: All right. It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibit 108.)

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to see it.

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, indeed. I am sorry.

That is all, Mr. Andrews, that I have of you. Wait and see what these gentlemen have.

By Mr. Lockley: Just one moment, your Honor.

By the Court: I take it there is no objection, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection, your Honor.

By the Court: Is there any examination of Mr. Andrews?

By Mr. Lockley: Just one moment, please, if your Honor please.

No cross examination.

By the Court: Very well.

(Witness excused.)

4897 By Mr. O'Brien: Will you excuse us just a moment? Maybe I can proceed with some odds and ends which you can always find.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. O'Brien, maybe I can get this out of the way.

By Mr. O'Brien: Go ahead.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor will recall when the witness Alger was here from the Corn Products Refining Company, he had a number of exhibits in the 76 series and it was suggested that we make an exhibit of those letters so that we would only have on our excerpt the name of Shotwell, having in mind that there were many other people named on each letter. Now, I have done that and I have had them marked in the 77 series and have already shown them to the Government people and I think they agree that I have done my abstracting correctly so I now offer Exhibit 77-A through W, inclusive.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 77-A through 77-W, inclusive.)

4898 By Mr. O'Brien: During Mr. Cain's cross examination, your Honor, at record 4478, there was exhibited to him by Mr. Lockley Government's Exhibit 185 for identification, at that point. Then following that there was an examination, a series of questions on that exhibit which follows through the balance of that volume, except that at page 4482, Government's Exhibit 186 for identification was also shown to the witness and he was interrogated about that.

The questions throughout the balance of this section, namely pages 4478 to page 4498, have to do with those exhibits, and continuing over to Section 40 of the transcript, at page 4533—no, I am sorry. I picked up this volume because the cross was continued, but it does not deal with that same subject.

Now, my motion, for the record, at this point is to strike Government's Exhibits 185 and 186, and the testimony to which I have expressly referred relating to 4899 those two exhibits, on the basis of the objections which were urged to your Honor a long time ago and which I am now renewing.

In other words, the Court recalls that it is my position that none of those documents are properly in evidence.

Well, I suppose your Honor should rule on the motion and then I will proceed.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

My records are not clear. Has Government's Exhibit 186 been received?

By Mr. Lockley: It has not, your Honor. It was merely identified and not offered as yet.

By the Court: All right. I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wasn't sure that they had been received, Judge, either.

By the Court: 185 has been received.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: But not 186.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right. Whatever was said about them I am moving to strike.

Now, just for your record there I had identified as 4900 Defendants' Exhibit 78 this report of the sub-committee of the Ways and Means Committee, while Commissioner Dunlap was testifying.

By the Court: Which exhibit is that, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: It is Defendants' Exhibit 78.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: The matter to which we were referring in that is included in the documents which I left with your Honor yesterday. I think they are numbered 96, 97, and 98, on which you were to later rule.

So that I withdraw 78.

By the Court: All right. It may be withdrawn.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will call to your Honor's attention, without further comment, the motion which we have pending in respect of Paragraph 4, a somewhat voluminous motion which the Court is holding, and which the Court indicated could be taken care of at some time.

4901 By the Court: I don't remember it. Paragraph 4 of what?

4902 By Mr. O'Brien: Of a motion to dismiss, originally made. Let me exhibit it to your Honor, just to identify it.

By the Court: Haven't I ruled on it?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, you said that you could take care of it any time, and I wanted to come to it before we are finished.

(Document handed to the Court.)

By the Court: I remember it. Well, I was going to give Mr. Lockley an opportunity to look over this rather voluminous exhibit, as I remember it, and to indicate to me whether or not he had any objection. I don't know that I have heard—

By Mr. O'Brien: It is not necessary to take the time before the jury on it, Judge, because it isn't that type of matter, as you know. But I did want to, for reasons of coherence—

By the Court: I think the record can indicate that I deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir. I will leave this in the file.

By the Court: Leave it in the file with the clerk, unless you want to have the record more definitely indicate

4903 which motion I am ruling on, you may show it to the reporter and he may make a suitable—

By Mr. O'Brien: Suppose it is marked Exhibit A of this date, for purposes of identification, as tying in or if the—

By the Court: I wouldn't suggest that you mark it as an exhibit. It is filed with the clerk and that is sufficient identification. The reporter can make such notations on his record to indicate that I am ruling on that motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

I think I had No. 99 saved for the Penick & Ford subpoena, the original subpoena, together with the return of service. I exhibit it now and ask that it be marked with that number.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 99 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, I would like to have marked as 99-A, B, C, and D, respectively, original subpoenas and returns of service thereon, in the order mentioned, 4904 Judge. A is American Maize, B is Corn Products Refining, C is the Hubinger Company, and D is Union Sales Corporation.

By the Court: Have witnesses been here with respect to Union Sales?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor.

By the Court: Than I can't see—

By Mr. O'Brien: Then I don't need that. I see. Union Sales was D and we will omit that and make them A, B and C.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 99-A, 99-B and 99-C, for identification.)

4905 By Mr. O'Brien: I offer all four, that is, 99, 99-A, B and C.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, these are subpoenas duces tecum which are already a part of the official records of this Court.

The mere fact that they have been issued sometime in 1953 asking for certain documents doesn't in any way make them evidentiary or competent. It doesn't in any way establish that the documents they ask for may have ever been in existence. I think that it is entirely immaterial. A subpoena can have been issued on anyone, but that doesn't make it necessary to the determination of the issues in the case.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let me say, Judge, that, to begin with, they are not part of the records in the case. They have not been logged in the Clerk's office as subpoenas which are served by the Marshal.

4906 By the Court: You called the witnesses. They stated they had searched their records in response to the subpoena and they could not find any other documents than those produced.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the purpose is to show more precisely what it is that they were asked to search for.

By the Court: That doesn't establish that the record were ever in existence.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, their testimony would have to do with that.

By the Court: No, I will adhere to my ruling. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

Now, Judge, in addition to the three documents which I gave you—

By the Court: I will rule on those now and I state for the record that I am receiving in evidence Defendants' Exhibits 96, 97 and 98. But I am receiving them for the limited purpose of the Court's perusal and in order that the Court may have a basis for a charge to the jury which covers the matters set forth in the documents. They 4907 are not evidence before the jury as such, and my reception is limited, as I have indicated, so that the Court may have before it the material you are submitting and upon which the Court will attempt to give to the jury an appropriate charge with respect thereto.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 96, 97 and 98.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Does that mean, if the Court please, that they are not available for discussion?

By the Court: Not as matters of evidence for the jury. Yes, that is my ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: Very well.

When I say "Very well," Judge, I am not acquiescing in the matter, but I am not excepting to it.

By the Court: I have given the matter consideration and that is my best judgment in the matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: In addition to those papers there is one other from the files of the Treasury which I 4908 should like to have marked for identification and to offer in evidence.

Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit No. 109 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 109 for identification.)

4909 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant. It has no bearing on the issues of the case.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, if I may say, this document is not on the issue we were last talking about.

By the Court: Until I am informed, I don't know what issue—

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what I am trying to do.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: There was some misunderstanding in some other evidence as to who was at the place at a certain date, and there were considerable conversations about that come up in the evidence. This instrument shows—

By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley, Mr. O'Brien is now explaining to you the relevancy of this exhibit. He said it pertains to a question as to when Mr. Mammel first 4910 came to the Shotwell Company. I didn't think there was any issue on that.

By Mr. O'Brien: There was some misunderstanding in the testimony about it, yes, Judge.

By the Court: I confess I don't remember that there was any controversy as to when Mr. Mammel first went to the Shotwell plant.

By Mr. Lockley: We will stipulate as to when Mr. Mammel first went to the Shotwell plant. I think it is entirely immaterial when he went there.

By Mr. O'Brien: We can stipulate as to a certain date.

By the Court: Perhaps you can agree as to when Mr. Mammel first visited the Shotwell plant.

By Mr. O'Brien: February 7th, 1949. At least, that is when he was told to go. That is the first time he was told to go. That is the assignment, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I fail to see the relevancy in any way whatsoever, your Honor, as to when any particular 4911 agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue went into the Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant. To be sure, I will stipulate that Charles Mammel went there on February 7, 1949, but that doesn't indicate that he was the first man to be there. There had been others before him.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no contention that he was the first to be there.

By Mr. Lockley: To the extent that only the date upon which Mammel arrived was February 7, 1949, I will agree to that.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: But I think it is entirely immaterial.

By Mr. O'Brien: That will take care of it. So, we won't disregard the Exhibit No. 15, or rather—is it 115? I see.

There are two exhibit numbers, it is 109.

By the Court: It may be withdrawn, I take it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

Now, I have some exhibits which have been identi-
4912 fied, Judge. These are Defendants' Exhibits, but they have not, as yet, been formally offered.

They are Defendants' Exhibits 18-A, and 18-B. I think I am one ahead here. The first is 17-A, B, and C, and then Nos. 18-A, and B.

Now, the 17 series were marked at page 1333 of the transcript. The 18 series were marked at page 1337 of the transcript.

4913 By the Court: Well, these are invoices.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right. They are accounting invoices, that is, Shotwell.

By the Court: Ask Mr. Lockley if he has any objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't recall any testimony, your Honor, relating to these particular shipments, and that is the only objection that I would have to them, that they are not material and that they are not within the issues of the case.

By the Court: Well, they were identified during the testimony of Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: These defense exhibits were, yes, your Honor.

By the Court: I don't remember the testimony regarding them, but—

By Mr. Kirby: It was during my cross examination of Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: Yes, that is right.

By Mr. Kirby: It relates to—he had testified that there were certain shipments which were unfilled and these are the bills for those shipments.

4914 By Mr. Lockley: I believe, Mr. Kirby, that these particular shipments were not a part of the Government's case on the unbilled shipments. However, if there is any question about it, your Honor, I would have no objection.

By the Court: Well, I will receive them in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: I would have no objection except to the materiality of them.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 17-A, 17-B, 17-C, 18-A and 18-B, respectively.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, we have Defendants' Exhibits 38-A through 38-M. Those are bank statements or photostatic copies of bank statements of the Manufacturers Trust Company pertaining to the account of General Confections, Inc., and identified at record 2395 and 2396 which we offer in evidence under those numbers.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection, your Honor.

4915 By the Court: It may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 38A through 38-M, inclusive.)

By Mr. O'Brien: There is also a bank statement of the same bank pertaining to Eatsum Food Products Company and its account, Defendants' Exhibit 13. It was marked at record 1095 for identification, and it pertains to the check for $66,000.00, which I believe is Exhibit 12, which your Honor yesterday admitted in our discussion. Those are connected exhibits.

By the Court: I had it just the other way around. I thought I had admitted 11.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, you had before, Judge, at a prior time, I think you had admitted 11.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. O'Brien: But yesterday in the colloquy in chambers you also admitted 12.

By the Court: You are now offering what?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am now offering 13.

4916 By the Court: Oh, I see. I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: Which is a connective exhibit. I will be through with these presently. I don't like to bore everybody with them but we have to put them in.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, my objection to this is merely to the materiality.

By the Court: Well, I will receive it.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 13.)

4917 By Mr. O'Brien: There is a document, Defendants' Exhibit 5 identified at page 937 of the record. That document is a release, or rather it is labeled an agreement and it is executed by Burry Biscuit, L. M. Peterson & Co., and Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object to it on the ground that it is entirely immaterial as to what arrangements may have been entered into by the Burry Biscuit Company and David Lubben.

By the Court: How does it throw any light on the issues in this lawsuit?

By Mr. O'Brien: It is part of the same $67,000.00 item, if the Court please, and it is an item that enters preliminarily into the net worth value of the proprietorship.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, there has been no testimony of that sort whatsoever, that I recall. There is no relationship.

By Mr. O'Brien: That page in the record is page 937.

By Mr. Lockley: I mean, there has been no tes-
4918 timony that there was any relationship between this particular release and the $67,000.00 check. As I recall, that check was in June of 1945, was it not?

By Mr. O'Brien: I say it relates to it preliminarily.

By Mr. Lockley: This is January, 1945.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is true.

By Mr. Lockley: I object anyway, your Honor. It is immaterial.

By the Court: You mean the balance of the $75,000.00 loan?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, Judge. This has to do with the proprietorship and the setup of it and the values as of the time of this agreement, January, 1945. Then later, in following this through and with this as a foundation, they arrive at the situation which marked the value of the $67,000.00 that was paid by the partnership for the net worth of the proprietorship as was evidenced by that $67,000.00 check and the bank statement that accompanies it.

By the Court: So what? So what?

4919 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I think they are all in a package. I think, to be utterly candid with the Court, I can't say it adds too much, so what.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: If your Honor please, it has some relevance here, because on cross examination of Mr. Lubben, he denied that he received the net worth of that business when he went into the partnership, and he made that specific denial on my cross examination.

Now, this shows that he did receive the net worth of the business, and to show the net worth of this business, this document was offered. It goes directly to the question of the credibility of the testimony of Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I questioned that in the first place, but even assuming in the first place it is true, it is attempting an impeachment on an immaterial, collateral issue. We are trying the issues whether The 4920 Shotwell Manufacturing Company and its officers evaded its income tax, and yet we get back into 1944 and 1945, and as to whether Mr. Lubben bought the Eatsum Food Products from Burry. It is so far removed from the issues of the case, I can't see where it has the slightest materiality.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, at record 2369, and at record 2396, we had Defendants' Exhibits 29-A through 29-H. Those are ledger sheets of National Process Foods, or ledger sheets relating to National Process Foods, and National Process Foods was one of the companies—let me say we have a series of ledger sheets here. I will have to not confine it to National Process Foods, but there is that company, Joseph Eiger, Two Star Confectionery Company, and Gum Products Company.

The relevancy of the exhibits when so identified in the record was that Mr. Lubben, and later Mr. Lubben 4921 testified to overages, supposedly paid to those people which really went into a box, and these are the foundation sheets showing what the transactions were on which we were interrogating Mr. Lubben, and later interrogating Miss Feldman.

They were identified, but since that was on the Government case, they were not offered, and so are now offered.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I recall no testimony at all tying this up with the issues of the case. Whatever relations there may have been between the Eatsum Food Products, and National Process Foods, Joseph Eigher, and Two Star—

By the Court: What page is that?

By Mr. Lockley: This covers the period of the sole proprietorship, some of it going back to October, 1944, and extending through May of 1945, on National Process Foods. That is Exhibit 29-A.

29-B begins in September, 1944, and relates to Joseph Eiger.

By the Court: When were 29-A through 29-H iden-
4922 tified?

By Mr. Lockley: I believe it was through Miss Feldman, was it not?

By the Court: 29 was, but I have no record of any other.

By Mr. O'Brien: At record 2369 and 2396.

4923 By Mr. Lockley: I am afraid, Mr. O'Brien, I will have to refer to the record and it will show that as to 29, Mr. Kirby merely asked the Reporter to mark 29-A to H, and then his questioning went on to something else. At 2396 he refers to Exhibit 29, a sheet from the accounts payable ledger.

By the Court: That is the Blue Ribbon Trading Company.

By Mr. Lockley: It doesn't refer to any of these other sheets.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I was examining Miss Feldman with respect to checks which were made out to these.

By the Court: The record will speak for itself as to what identification has been made of the 29-A to 29-H.

By Mr. Lockley: It appears they were marked but never shown to the witness Feldman.

In any event, whether there was a foundation laid as to them or not, my objection would go to the relevancy of them. I think it is entirely immaterial. What 4924 Mr. Lubben may have done with another concern has no bearing whatsoever on what he did with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and whether they evaded their taxes. We have to keep in mind we are trying Shotwell Manufacturing Company and not Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: I am trying to do that to the best of my ability.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would feel sure whatever the Court has gone into, it regards as relevant to the issues and within the scope of the case and I am talking only of matters we went into.

Now, at page 2369, or rather at page 2368, Mr. Lockley produced these ledger sheets from records already identified in the proprietorship. They are all here.

By the Court: What questions were—

By Mr. O'Brien: I will go on to that. And then Mr. Kirby had them identified as Exhibits 29-A to 29-H, at page 2369.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will move over to page 2396 where there was some interrogation of the witness Feldman 4923 about one of those sheets. That would really be on A, B, C and D of those sheets, which is misdescribed as—

By Mr. Lockley: It appears in the record as Exhibit 28.

By Mr. O'Brien: It does, but I do not believe that there is any 28-A, B, C and D.

By the Court: 28-A.

By Mr. O'Brien: But not A, B, C and D.

By the Court: You look at the record. I don't think we should take the time now.

By Mr. O'Brien: (Continuing) Which I think were the ledger sheets on Two Star and on those other companies.

"Those were all records regularly kept and maintained by the proprietorship, were they not?"

And Miss Feldman said:

"Yes, sir."

By the Court: You are referring to what now?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am referring to the sheets which at that point are 28-A, B, C, and D.

4926 By the Court: We are talking about 29. We are not talking about 28.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, but it should be 29.

By the Court: Well, we have 28-A which is the sheet in the cash disbursements book.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is a different thing. This context shows—see, it may well be that the error is mine. Here is the way it reads:

"Miss Feldman, all of these exhibits which Mr. Kirby had identified this morning, that is, Defendants' Exhibits 28-A, B, C and D, that series."

By the Court: We have that series. Those have been marked. Those are cash disbursements sheets from the Eatsum Food Products.

4927 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, do they not only run as far as A?

By the Court: They run through A, B, C and D.

By Mr. O'Brien: Going on, however, I think they were the ledger sheets on Two-Star and on those other companies. I am talking about these ledger sheets.

By the Court: Well, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Which were all records regularly kept and maintained by the proprietorship.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: All. I know, Judge, is these were identified as records regularly kept and maintained by the proprietorship and they are—

By the Court: Well, you haven't been able to point out any identification as yet. Moreover, I have great doubt as to any relevancy of them and at least, you haven't identified them in the record.

4928 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I have some—without going into the early part, we offer, if the Court please, as Defendants' Exhibits 2 and Defendants' Exhibits 3, a letter and a copy of the Lubben 1943 tax return.

By the Court: Which is the tax return, Exhibit 3?

By Mr. O'Brien: It is 3 and 4.

By the Court: The tax return?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. And the letter is No. 2. Your Honor did not rule on those, according to the record.

By the Court: Has it been offered?

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't answer that directly. Have they been offered?

By Mr. Kirby: No, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I now offer them.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I now object to Exhibit No. 2 on the ground that it is immaterial. It is irrelevant. It is a letter dated March 13, 1944, from a man named Brewster, to Mr. Lubben. I don't recall that anyone has inquired about this record. There 4929 has been no foundation laid for the absence of the original itself and it has no bearing on the issues in the case. It doesn't appear in any way to relate to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, your Honor.

By the Court: Let me see it.

(Handing document to the Court.)

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection as to Defendants' Exhibit 2.

By Mr. Lockley: And as to Exhibit No. 4, apparently there are two of them here, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: 3 and 4.

By Mr. Lockley: 3 and 4 are the 1943 income tax returns of Mr. Lubben. That again—

By Mr. O'Brien: Let's see if that is all that is there.

By Mr. Lockley: It is immaterial. It is irrelevant to the issues. Whatever happened was in 1943. And it had no bearing—

By the Court: Did you say Exhibit 3?

By Mr. Lockley: It is Exhibits 3 and 4.

By the Court: What is No. 4?

4930 By Mr. Lockley: Defendants' Exhibit 3 appears to be a schedule which is a part of Exhibit 4.

By the Court: Well, they all pertain to 1943 income taxes?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, if the Court please, it isn't altogether clear to me whether your ruling of yesterday is clear on the record. We had a question on the Hausman and Starr work sheets which your Honor, after discussion and so on, admitted, but for the purposes of the Andrews testimony, we physically presented at that time only a limited number of those work sheets which I yesterday identified.

By the Court: Well, I ruled on whatever you offered, did I not?

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, yes, you certainly—

By the Court: What more can I do?

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no question about that. You certainly ruled on those and I did not raise any 4931 question about those, but I said that I had others which I would search for over the recess, or which were also identified by Hausman and Starr, and I would like to bring those in.

I have done that and I am referring now to instruments, this is a Starr instrument, 65-J which I offer. It has to do, as your Honor's notes may already show, with the period May 31, 1945.

4932 By the Court: What other exhibits are you going to offer of that series, if any?

By Mr. O'Brien: I tell you, Judge, the next batch is a number of Hausman work sheets which are identified as Defendants' 66-A, through 66-S.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, without me stating the objections that I had to all of these documents yesterday, I object to them.

By the Court: I will receive them in evidence.

Now, you are offering 65-J, and 66-A to S.

By Mr. O'Brien: Correct.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibits 65-J, and 66-A to 66-S, inclusive.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Then there is a break, Judge, and they go to 66-Y, X, and Y. I don't even know the alphabet this morning—66-V, X, and Y.

4933 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to them for the same reasons that I stated yesterday.

By the Court: I will receive them in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibits 66-V, 66-X and 66-Y.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Then I just have four more, Judge. They are Defendants' 15-A to E, inclusive, and H, I, and J.

They are identified at record 1111. These are records which Mr. Lubben testified that he directed be kept. They are cash box records.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to 15-A through G, inclusive, on the grounds that there has been no proper foundation laid for them. Mr. Hausman identified them as probobly being in Mr. Loperfido's handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's true, but Lubben also testified, at record 1111, that he directed that those be kept. Tl y are cash box records on the partner-4934 ship. The handwriting is identified.

By Mr. Lockley: And, furthermore, I object to it on the grounds that it is entirely immaterial. Whatever records may have been kept, of course, of corn syrup deals that Mr. Lubben had outside of those with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, are immaterial.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we were permitted to go into the subject of the cash box in the partnership, and we identified the papers.

By the Court: I will receive them in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the court, and marked Defendants' Exhibits 15-A, 15-B, 15-C, 15-D, 15-E, 15-H, 15-I, and 15-J.)

4935 By Mr. O'Brien: Then I have Defendants' 31, which was identified by Miss Feldman at record page 2354. That's Exhibit No. 31.

By the Court: It was never identified by Hausman.

By Mr. O'Brien: No. No, by Miss Feldman.

By the Court: She just said that it was Hausman's handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's true.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor. No proper foundation has been laid for it.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Defendants' Exhibit 27, identified at record 2316, cash box sheet, pertaining to the August, 1945, receipts.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor, on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid. It was shown to Miss Feldman and she identified it as Mr. Hausman's handwriting, but she also said she didn't know 4936 anything about the cash box. If that purports to be some record relating to the cash box there has been no proper foundation laid for it.

By the Court: If that is the only foundation, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Finally, Judge, I have Defendants'—

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. Judge, when Mr. Hausman was here I asked him about these exhibits. It is true, initially they were called to Miss Feldman's attention, but then—

By the Court: Perhaps you can indicate the portion of the record where that appears.

By Mr. Kirby: I will look that up, your Honor. Because I remember specifically having Hausman's papers together and I went right down the list.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the defendants, at 3978 of the record, said they didn't offer 31 because, by the witness's testimony, it is a duplicate of 23. Are you changing your mind now?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the point I was seeking to make 4937 to the Court was that I did have this identified by Mr. Hausman and that certainly is sustained by that.

When it appeared that both 24 and 31 were duplicates—

By the Court: Go forward with your offers, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. The only two I have are 27 and 37. These are both Hausman's work sheets, and Mr. Kirby says—

If you don't have it now, Mr. Kirby, would you look it up, 27 and 37?

By Mr. Kirby: 27 is referred to on page 3977.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of Hausman's testimony?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: How about 37?

By Mr. Kirby: 37 is referred to on page 3977, Hausman's testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: They are both identified by Hausman, too, Judge, as well as by Miss Feldman. I had only the Feldman reference. So I reoffer them.

4938 By the Court: Is that 27 and 37?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, at record 3967 Exhibit No. 27 was shown to Mr. Hausman and he stated that it related to cash received and paid out for the month of August through September 8, 1945, and is in his handwriting. But there was no further testimony relating to that document and it was not offered at that time.

By Mr. Kirby: It was offered at 3977.

By Mr. Lockley: So we were unable to cross examine on it.

By Mr. O'Brien: It just isn't so, as we said yesterday, that Mr. Lockley was unable to cross examine on it. I think the Court has so ruled.

By the Court: Well, what about 37?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, except for the fact that it is included in the offer with numerous other exhibits, I don't find anything in the record relating to that exhibit at all. That is the record of Mr. Hausman's testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is it identified?

4939 By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: At page 3977 he identified it. That's the point.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe not.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am told it was.

By Mr. Lockley: At 3977 Mr. Kirby offered it in evidence. But I have gone through the pages preceding that and I find no reference to that exhibit.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you want to check it?

By Mr. Kirby: I will check it.

By the Court: Check that up later. I don't think we should take the time now to explore the record further. Is that all you have now, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: I should like to read in this matter.

By the Court: Oh, yes. Shall I make any statement about it?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will appreciate it if you would say something.

By the Court: Yes, I will.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may have this copy, if you wish.

4940 By the Court: The jury will remember that during the Government's case Mr. Lockley read certain portions of Mr. Cain's testimony on a motion that was made, and he read a considerable portion of that transcript. At the time Mr. O'Brien made an offer also of portions of the transcript, and as to some of the transcript I sustained Mr. Lockley's motion, as to the relevancy of some of that offered by Mr. O'Brien.

Upon further consideration I have determined that as to some of the offered testimony that I should overrule Mr. Lockley's objection. And I have done so. And that occasions the need now, for Mr. O'Brien to read into the record, and for your information, the additional portions of Mr. Cain's testimony that were given on this day, when there was a hearing before the Court, and which relates to the same time that Mr. Lockley referred to when he read the portions of the transcript offered by him and by Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I may omit the pages, if the Court please.

By the Court: Yes.

4941 By Mr. O'Brien: Some of this may be a little disconnected, because the jurors understand, from what the Court said, it is out of context. But going to it directly, these questions and answers were asked and made with Mr. Cain on the stand, at the same time:

4942 "Q. Following that, did you tell Mr. Busby to go back to Sauber and reveal the identity of the company and make this disclosure?

"A. I did.

"Q. What, if anything, did you tell him to say concerning the payment of that tax which you planned to do?

"A. I told him we were ready, willing and able to pay any tax that might be assessed.

"Q. Did you tell him to tell Sauber that?

A. Yes.

Q. When you saw Sauber in March, did you ask him—what, if anything, was said between you and him as to the fact of whether any investigation had commenced?

"A. He assured me that there had been no investigation commenced."

Now, this goes to a somewhat different subject, as you can see, but is a part of Mr. Cain's answer, or the further part of that was not read.

4943 "I said that the only thing that we could possibly do in dealing with a chap like this chap Lubben, would be to take every invoice that we had sent to him and apply the maximum over ceiling price."

Then, going on, Mr. Cain, in answering says:

"I am talking to Mr. Sauber, this conversation.

"I said, 'We will use the peak price and when we come up with that figure, that would be the best of our recollection.'

"He said, 'You can't make an amended return. You just give us—we will have to send a man out there and you will work with him, and we will get the best we can.'

"I said, 'As to our expenditures, I just can't tell you anything, I don't know.'

"Q. What did he say about expenditures?

"A. He said, 'It wouldn't do any good if you did know, because we wouldn't allow them anyway. We absolutely won't allow over the ceiling expenditures.'

"I said, 'Okay, but I hope you will take it into consideration and see that we are treated fairly.'

4944 "I think that is the tone on which that particular meeting of March 4th ended.

"Q. What, if anything, was said concerning the payment of the tax when and if the tax was determined?

"A. Well, I told him in view of the Government situation where they make no allowance, we owe them a lot of money, and we stood ready and able to pay it immediately, and the sooner we would pay it, the better I would like it, but I said that wouldn't stop us if at some future time we tried to get our money back, or a portion of it for these over ceiling payments.

"Q. Mr. Cain, in your conversation or conversations with Mr. Sauber, what, if anything, was said by you to him as to your ability to say who the premium payments were paid to?

"A. Well, I told him it would be impossible for us to tell him who the payments were paid to, because we didn't know.

4945 "Q. What did he say about premium payments in general?

"A. He said that premium payments regardless of whether we could or could not tell would not be allowed by the government.

"Q. Did Mr. Busby tell you, Sullivan or Huebner, that is, you or Sullivan in your talk on January 11, 1948, or any of your talks after that that there was any requirements for a disclosure other than those mentioned in the published policy?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you ever know of any other or further requirement?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you know if it is the fact that your ability to say to whom premium payments were made was or might be regarded as a condition precedent to a disclosure?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you tell him to tell the official of the 4946 Treasury Department hypothetically or otherwise that the Shotwell Corporation owed the government taxes for those years?

"A. He reported back that the government told us that we did owe taxes."

At this point I think it is admissible to say that the witness is speaking of Mr. Busby.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: (Reading):

"A. He reported back that the government told us that we did owe taxes.

"Q. Did you at that time tell him to advise Mr. Sauber that the Shotwell Corporation had made false tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. I had quite a bit of confidence in Mr. Busby. He knew the case by that time.

"Q. Did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false returns for those years?

"A. I don't recall telling him anything. We told him what to do, to go in and disclose the Shotwell 4947 Manufacturing Company, period.

"Q. Do you recall what you did tell him?

"A. We told him to go to whomever he had been to before and disclose the identity of the taxpayer.

"Q. And did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation had made false returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. I don't believe I did. I don't think I had to tell Mr. Busby anything. We certainly told him to go in and do whatever was necessary to get the matter straightened out.

"Q. Did Mr. Busby in the course of informing you about the requirements of the voluntary disclosure doctrine on or about January 11th or 12th of 1948 tell you that it was necessary that the taxpayer make an honest, full disclosure of all the material facts?

"A. Mr. Sauber told us that we couldn't make that.

"Q. No—Mr. Busby.

4948 "A. Mr. Busby reported back to us that Mr. Sauber said we couldn't—

"Q. I am sorry. I mean in the conference you had with Busby before he went over to Mr. Sauber the first time.

"A. No, he did not.

"Q. He did not?

"A. No.

"Q. Well, in addition to sending him over to Mr.

Sauber you had in mind making a disclosure to avoid criminal prosecution, was that the purpose?

"A. Very definitely.

Well, I went into the matter of the over-ceiling receipts. He discouraged me on the matter of the over-ceiling payments. He said it was out, that they might give it some consideration, but if they did it would be very little, that the department's role is they would not consider over-ceiling—"

Now, going to the other record:

By the Court: I take it you are now referring to the page which was missing from the transcript you furnished me.

4949 By Mr. O'Brien: There was a break in it, at least, Judge, and I am trying to pick it up there.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: You say it is 207 that is missing?

By the Court: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: It goes on this way in the original transcript, at the bottom of 206:

"—the department's role is that they would not consider over-ceiling payments by us."

Then:

"Q. Now, at which meeting, the first or the second, was it that he told you as you testified that it wouldn't make any difference whether you could prove the disbursements of these over-ceiling moneys or not?

"A. I think at both meetings. He emphasized that to us.

"Q. He said to you that it made no difference so far as the government was concerned?

"A. That is right.

4950 "Q. Whether you proved that you actually made those expenditures or not?

"A. That is right. He said it was the government's policy that over-ceiling payments could not be deducted."

By the Court: We will take our morning recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshall: Will the audience please remain while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

4951 By Mr Kirby: On Exhibit 37, which is in Hausman's handwriting, we did locate at page 3961, the presentation and identification of that by Hausman, so we reoffer it.

By Mr Lockley: I object to it on the same ground as I objected to the other Hausman papers, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, I will receive it.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 37.)

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, the Defendants rest.

Thereupon the Defendants rested their case in chief.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to give your Honor this original.

(Handing document to the Court.)

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, have you some rebuttal?

By Mr. Lockley: A little, if your Honor please.

4952 Prior to that, however, I would like to call your Honor's attention to defense Exhibit No. 68, which is a book from the Hubbinger Company relating to their corn syrup deals with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

I have had an opportunity to examine that and I have no objection to three pages which are dated February 6th and 7th, February 8th and 9th and February 10th and 11th respectively and which appear to contain all of the matter relating to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. The balance of the book contains no entries of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Therefore, I would like your Honor to reconsider the ruling admitting the whole book and admit just those three pages which I have referred to on the grounds that the balance of the book is immaterial and irrelevant.

I see they have once been detached and put back in the book by scotch tape and I think they can be detached again without difficulty.

4953 By the Court: I assume only the pages referring to Shotwell are material. I don't know just what took place when it was offered.

By Mr. O'Brien: It was offered and received, Judge.

By the Court: I will modify my ruling and receive only the pages that refer to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

(Said document, so modified, was received in evidence by the Court being Defendants' Exhibit 68, being three pages dated February 6th and 7th, February 8th and 9th and February 10th and 11th.)

By Mr. Kirby: I would make the same observation with respect to wanting the record in its entirety as I made in connection with wanting all of the Corn Products records, those being in the 76 series.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may say, Judge, on the document that I just handed you, there are two or three more to come, but I didn't think that I should de-4954 lay until they arrived.

By the Court: All right. Well, that refers to the request for instruction.

And thereupon the Government, to further maintain the issues on its part, introduced the following evidence, in rebuttal, to wit:

By Mr. Lockley: Miss Frazier.

EUNICE FRAZIER, a witness called on behalf of the Government, in rebuttal, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Will you please give your name, Miss Frazier?

A. Eunice Frazier, F-r-a-z-i-e-r.

By the Court: Now, you have to raise your voice if the jury is going to hear you.

By the Witness:

A. Eunice Frazier.

By Mr. Lockley:

4955 Q. Where do you live?

A. Hicksville, New York.

Q. And where were you employed in the year 1948?

A. With the Intelligence Unit of the United States Treasury in New York City.

By the Court: You will have to raise your voice and speak louder, Miss Frazier. The jury can't hear you.

By the Witness: I am sorry.

By the Witness:

A. The Intelligence Unit of the United States Treasury in New York City.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Where was that located?

A. At 253 Broadway.

4956 Q. What was your business at that time?

A. I was receptionist with that office.

Q. And who were the persons for whom you received callers?

A. I received anyone who came to the office to see any of the officials, or the employees of the United States Treasury of the Intelligence Unit.

Q. And who was the Chief of the Intelligence Unit in New York City at that time?

A. Mr. Daniel Bolick was a special agent in charge of the office.

Q. Now in your capacity as receptionist, did you make a record of callers?

A. Yes, I did.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 188 for identification?

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 188 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit 188 and ask you if that is the record that you referred to?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

4957 Q. And is that in your handwriting?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And for what year is it?

A. 1948.

Q. Now was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Was it your practice to enter the names of all callers?

A. That is right, anyone who came into the office was entered in this book.

Q. So far as you know, it is true and correct?

A. That is right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 188.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the materiality of it so far as the corporation is concerned. I don't see that it makes any difference who went to 253 Broadway.

By Mr. O'Brien: What are you doing, offering the whole book, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I will limit my offer to three 4958 pages which I will subsequently identify but I tender it at this time to show the whole book.

By Mr. O'Brien: Maybe you better show us the three pages that you want to offer.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By the Court: Well, perhaps you had better identify it.

By Mr. Lockley: I will have the pages marked separately, your Honor.

Will you please mark this page Government's Exhibit 188-A. That is the page beginning with the date, 5/27, and will you mark the next page, 188-B, which is the page beginning with the date 6/25, and mark this Government's Exhibit 188-C, the page beginning with the date 7/9.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 188-A, B, and C, for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley: Those are the pages, if you want them.

By Mr. Kirby: Pass that down here.

4959 By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering these?

By Mr. Lockley: If you have no objection I will substitute the photostats. Otherwise, I will offer the book.

By the Court: Is there any objection?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it, it shows no connection at all with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to it. It shows no matters binding on the defendant Sullivan.

By Mr. O'Brien: Certainly there is nothing material in it.

By the Court: I am sorry?

By Mr. O'Brien: There is nothing that I have seen, Judge, that would disclose its materiality.

By the Court: I don't know what it is.

(Document handed to the Court.)

By Mr. McConnell: Those are the photostats, your Honor. The purpose of this is to impeach the witness Grace, who testified—4960 By the Court: Grace?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. Grace, who testified he had not been in Bolick's office.

4961 By the Court: It may be received as to Defendants' Cain and The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 188-A, 188-B, 188-C, respectively.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't see how it identifies what Mr. Lockley says.

By the Court: Mr. Grace said he met Bolick on the street in a casual meeting.

By Mr. O'Brien: He doesn't say that that is the only time he met him. He said he met him a number of times.

By the Court: It is for the jury to determine the weight of it. This record would indicate Grace called to see Bolick rather than—

By Mr. O'Brien: There is nothing in that book that says he called on this man. I object.

By Mr. Lockley: Grace's testimony, if your Honor please, is he had never been in Bolick's office until 4962 the year 1951, as I recall it.

By the Court: It may be Bolick was written after the name Grace.

By Mr. O'Brien: What of it?

By the Court: Perhaps Mr. Lockley can bring that out from the witness as to what that means, if anything.

By Mr. McConnell: I renew my objection unless there is some discussion about Shotwell matters. There is no showing of that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Frazier, when you were receptionist at the Intelligence Unit, was it your practice to mark down the name of an individual calling upon one of your superiors?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

Q. And were those names recorded in the book that you hold in your hand, Exhibit 188?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was the name of anyone placed in that book on a telephone call alone?

A. No, sir. This was when they came into the office in person.

Q. That was only on personal visits?

4963 A. That is right, sir.

Q. Now does your record show on June 1, 1948, that a Mr. Grace called on Mr. Bolick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that indicates that Mr. Grace actually came to the office at 253 Broadway?

A. And that he had an appointment, sir.

Q. And that he had an appointment. Does your record show the purpose for which that visit was made?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the purpose?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Your job was merely to receive them and take them into the office of the person upon whom they were calling, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

Q. Does your record show that Mr. Grace called on Mr. Bolick on June 28, 1948?

A. Yes, it does, sir.

Q. And what does the record actually show?

A. That he came in the office in person and that he had an appointment to see Mr. Bolick.

Q. Does your record likewise show that he made

4964 a call, that Mr. Grace made a call on Mr. Bolick on July 12, 1948?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. And does that record likewise indicate that he came personally to the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any knowledge as to the purpose of those visits?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Did you attempt to search the records of the Intelligence Unit to find if there was any memoranda as to the reason for those visits?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike the testimony on the ground that this witness doesn't know that it has anything to do with any conversation concerning Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and for the further reason that the only item is that a man by the name of Grace called. I believe the witness testified that he had brothers who were lawyers, besides himself. It doesn't identify the item with the particular witness 4965 who testified in this case.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask a question?

By the Court: All right.

4966 Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Is there a first name shown for the caller?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the name to which you have been referring?

A. Mr. Grace.

Q. Just Mr. Grace?

A. That is right, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same motion.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to ask the young lady a question.

By the Court: I haven't received it as to the defendant Sullivan but if you want to inquire—I think that was made clear.

By Mr. Kirby: I appreciate it is not received as against the defendant Sullivan.

Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. I hope that I don't impose upon the young lady by asking her, do you know that the Grace family is a large family in Brooklyn?

4967 A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Do you know that there are several Grace brothers that practice law?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know that the Grace family and the Bolick family have been friendly in Brooklyn for 35 years?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know which of the Grace family did come to see this Mr. Bolick?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, ma'am.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, Miss Frazier.

If your Honor please, I ask leave to substitute photostatic copies for the originals.

By the Court: Very well.

(Witness excused.)

JOSEPH MICHAEL LIMA, a witness called on behalf of the Government, in rebuttal, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

4968 Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Lima, will you speak up and give us your full name?

A. Joseph Michael Lima, L-i-m-a.

By the Court: L-y-m-a?

By the Witness: L-i-m-a.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Where do you live?

A. 1700 Rainbow Drive, Clearwater, Florida.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. Internal Revenue agent.

Q. How long have you been an Internal Revenue agent?

A. Since August of 1942.

Q. Where were you stationed in 1948?

A. In Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And were you assigned in 1948 to conduct an audit of the returns of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you at that time call at the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I did.

4969 Q. Do you know when that was?

A. Sometime subsequent to July 30, 1948.

Q. Was that pursuant to an appointment?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall?

A. That is right.

Q. A telephone appointment?

By Mr. O'Brien: What was that date, Mr. Lima?

By the Witness: The date that I called at the Shotwell Company?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness: Sometime after July 30, 1948.

By Mr. O'Brien: July 3rd?

By the Witness: No. After July 30th.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, 30th.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And who did you meet when you went to the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I met Mr. Frank Huebner, Mr. Leon Busby, and Miss Morrill. I believe that is her name.

Q. And at that time, did you have any conversation with Mr. Huebner?

4970 A. The first day, other than getting acquainted, Mr. Huebner, I believe directed me—

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Lima.

By the Witness:

A. Just getting acquainted with the officials of the company. Mr. Huebner introduced me to Mr. Busby, the accountant, and the rest of the time I had spent with him.

4971 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 186 and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Where did you get it?

A. I received this exhibit from Mr. Busby.

Q. When?

A. The first day that I was at the plant, at the company offices.

Q. That would be some time after July 30, 1946?

A. That is right.

Q. 1948, I mean.

A. 1948.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 186.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor has already ruled, I believe, with respect to 185, that it was not binding on the defendant Sullivan and I ask that the same ruling be made with respect to Government's Exhibit 186. Sullivan had been shown that on the stand and he said he had never seen it before.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as not binding on the corporation, under the facts and circumstances 4972 in this case.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection and for the same reasons as I did this morning, Judge, to 185 and 186.

By the Court: Is this proper by way of rebuttal?

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't see that it is any part of rebuttal, to begin with.

By the Court: I am not clear on it.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the purpose of that document is to establish that the defendant, in making the document available to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, also misled the Bureau of Internal Revenue as to the amounts of overages, charges which they had paid out. It also is rebuttal to their statements that there were no payments received by them or overages until the latter part of 1945 because, as your Honor will see, that document reflects payments at a much earlier time, or receipts by Shotwell at an earlier date.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it as not being proper rebuttal. He should have put it in his main case and 4973 given us a chance to meet it. It is an admission against interest, and all the facts and circumstances surrounding it.

By the Court: I am not clear. Did you identify this with Mr. Busby?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. He said he prepared it.

By Mr. O'Brien: The first time I saw it was when Mr. Cain was being cross examined.

By Mr. Lockley: Is that correct? Perhaps I can correct it, your Honor. It was shown to Mr. Cain.

By Mr. O'Brien: On cross. It was exhibited for the first time to Mr. Cain then.

By the Court: What identification has been made of it?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lima identified it as a document received by him in the office of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company from the accountant employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company during the course of his audit of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company return for the year 1946.

4974 By the Court: Well, who was present when this was delivered to you?

By the Witness: Mr. Busby and myself.

By Mr. O'Brien: You never asked Busby anything about it.

By Mr. Lockley: I intend, if your Honor please, to call Mr. Busby.

By Mr. O'Brien: Maybe so, but it isn't rebuttal.

By the Court: What?

By Mr. Lockley: I intend to call Mr. Busby about that particular record. It is rebuttal to this extent: The defendants claimed that they didn't receive—

By Mr. Kirby: I object to these statements.

By the Court: My query is directed as to the foundation.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lima identified it as a record received by him from Mr. Busby.

By the Court: Well, even so, I don't think you have laid sufficient foundation for it. That is what concerns me.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir. I will withhold 4975 my offer until Mr. Busby is on the stand then.

By the Court: All right.

4976 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lima, at the time you were in the office of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, were you given a record showing the amount allegedly paid out for such items as sugar, corn syrup, milk, chocolate, and so forth in the black market?

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the form of the question.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the nature of the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: If you have a record, let us have it.

By the Court: If there is a document, I suppose the document would be the best evidence, and in the absence of the document, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, if your Honor please.

By the Court: Is there any cross examination?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: That's all, Mr. Lima.

(Witness excused.)

4977 By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Busby, please.

LEON BUSBY, a witness heretofore called on behalf of of the Government, having been heretofore previously duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further in rebuttal as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Busby—

By the Court: You have been sworn, Mr. Busby, so you can just take the stand.

By the Witness: Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Busby, on or about the 30th day of July, or shortly thereafter, 1948, did you have a meeting with Revenue Agent Joseph Lima?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time, did you give to him Exhibit 186 which I now show you?

A. Along with other papers, yes, and this was among them.

Q. And did you prepare Exhibit 186?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at whose direction was it prepared?

A. My own.

4978 Q. At your—

A. At my own direction. That is a sheet that I prepared for my convenience in accumulating the over ceiling receipts of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And who employed you to perform that service?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. And was that on behalf of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, your employment?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 186.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to cross examine the witness on it.

By the Court: Very well.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Busby, you had been retained to get up some summary of receipts, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some recap of transactions with Lubbens' companies, and Shotwell?

A. Yes.

Q. Those sheets have not, as yet, been exhibited
4979 to you, have they?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I haven't finished my examination of Mr. Busby yet.

By Mr. O'Brien: I know, but I will come to it.

By the Court: Have you reoffered it?

By Mr. Lockley: I have offered this exhibit, yes, but I haven't released Mr. Busby for cross examination.

By the Court: I suppose Mr. O'Brien has a right to examine as to the foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right. That is all I am doing.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you understand the question, Mr. Busby, or shall we have it read?

A. They have not been exhibited to me here.

Q. In the courtroom?

A. In the courtroom, if that's what you mean.

Q. What has been shown to you is a sheet marked Government Exhibit 186?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you can identify it even from there,
4980 can you not?

A. Yes. I think that is a copy of the original.

Q. Did Shotwell, or anyone connected with Shotwell ask you to make this sheet for delivery to the Government?

A. No.

Q. Did Shotwell, or anyone at Shotwell know at the time that this was among the other sheets that were turned over to the Government?

A. No.

Q. When Mr. Lima arrived at the plant on or about July 30, 1948, is it true that Huebner brought him in to you, and that you and Lima sat down and talked about the matter?

A. I don't recall.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Busby.

By the Witness:

A. I don't recall whether it was Mr. Huebner or Mr. Graflund. We sat down, anyway.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. At any rate, you were talking there to Lima?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had quite a series of sheets?

4981 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those sheets pertaining to premium receipts of some kind?

A. Yes. They pertained to the date I had collected, and I assume they covered the premiums.

Q. I didn't want to go into it in detail now, because that will come later, but they were in quite some detail, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

4982 Q. Now, where was this sheet physically at the time?

A. It was on the top of a stack of papers that I had, instead of a folder.

Q. And did you deliver that whole stack to Lima?

A. Yes, I put them on the desk and explained to them what they were.

Q. And in the process of doing that you handed him Government's Exhibit 186?

A. Yes, as being an aid to the work that we were undertaking.

By the Court:

Q. Did what?

A. I handed it to him as being an aid for the work we were undertaking.

Q. What work were you undertaking?

A. To determine how much the over-ceiling corrections amounted to.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Lima was the agent who was sent out to audit the books?

A. Yes.

Q. Following the visit of you, and later of Mr. Cain, to see Mr. Sauber?

4983 A. That is correct.

Q. That had been back in January, as far as you are concerned, and March 4th, as far as Cain is concerned, of the same year, 1948?

A. That is my recollection, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, your Honor, on that basis

I object to the document. There is nothing in this that we told Mr. Busby to turn over to the Government.

By the Court: He was acting for the corporation, wasn't he, in doing that which he did do.

By Mr. McConnell: I take serious exception to that, if your Honor please. He was acting for the corporation under the circumstances of this disclosure.

By the Court: Be that as it may, he still was trying to make some sort of an audit of the books at the behest of the Shotwell Company, is that right, in connection with this tax matter?

By Mr. McConnell: I don't understand that he was auditing any books at all. I understand he was mak-4984 ing some sort of a statement for Mr. Cain, to turn over on the disclosure. That's what he said.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 186.)

By Mr. O'Brien: In addition to the objection I made, I make the objection of this morning to both 185 and 186. In other words, you know my position as to all these documents based on the hearing we had before, that they are inadmissible.

By the Court: Very well. I will overrule the objection.

4985 By Mr. Lockley: Will you mark these Government Exhibits 189-A, B, C, D, and E.

(Said documents were marked Government Exhibits 189-A, 189-B, 189-C, 189-D, and 189-E for identification.)

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Busby, do you have the originals of the work papers, Exhibits 189-A, B, C, D, and E?

A. I have. Not in the court, however. They are at my office.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't object on the ground that they are photostats, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By the Witness: You better let me look at them.

(Documents handed to the witness.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And did you prepare a portion of Exhibits 189-A, B, C, D, and E?

A. Yes.

4986 Q. And when was that prepared?

A. The data was collected over a period of time, from the first of February, through—

By the Court: February of what year?

By the Witness: 1948.

By the Witness:

A. —through June of '48, I would say, the first part of June, or thereabouts.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And is a portion of it in your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that prepared as part of your employment as accountant for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It was a special assignment by Shotwell.

Q. And was the information contained on this taken in part from the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Some of it came from duplicate copies of invoices that I had selected.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 189-A, B, C, D, and E in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: I object, and I ask that the Jury be instructed that neither 186, nor this, if it were to be 4987 received, would be binding on the defendant, Sullivan, or any evidence against him at all.

By the Court: Yes, it may be so understood, and the record may indicate that 186 was not received as to the defendant Sullivan.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the document as not binding on the corporation under the circumstances in this case, and that no proper foundation has been laid as to what books and records and so forth were used in the making up of Exhibits.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I make a general objection, that I made to all papers growing out of that matter, because of the Court's rulings on that subject.

I make also the objection that this is not properly rebuttal. All of these things, if they were to come into evidence here should have gone in during the Government's opening case.

Number three, I, of course, would—rather than in-4988 terrupt again, since we are going into matters to this extent—would rather cross examine at the time that I cross examine generally, if the document is received.

4989 By the Court: I think you should outline—or, rather, question the witness somewhat further as to where this information came from and what it purports to reflect.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to have a ruling on those objections now, your Honor.

By the Court: I haven't yet ruled one way or the other, have I?

By Mr. O'Brien: All right, sir.

By the Court: I assume I will rule ultimately.

By Mr. O'Brien: I see.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Busby, I call your attention to Exhibit 189-A and ask you where did you obtain the information under the column headed "Invoice number"?

A. From carbon copies of invoices that the Shotwell Manufacturing Company had on file representing sales to Mr. Lubben's companies, either General Confections, Eatsum Products or others. I can't say now.

Q. And with respect to the columns headed "In-4990 voice number" on each of the other exhibits, 189 series, would your answer be the same?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get the information under the column headed "Date"?

A. The same source.

Q. From the carbon copies of the invoices, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get the information from the column headed "Invoice amount"?

A. From the same source.

Q. And "Net weight"?

A. The same source.

Q. And under the column "Description", where did you get that information?

A. From the same source.

Q. And under the column headed "Shotwell Unrecorded per pound", where did you get that information?

A. Mr. Huebner gave me that information as being his understanding as to Mr. Lubben's claim on each pound of overage, claim for overages on each pound of commodity.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is that column?

4991 By Mr. Lockley: "Shotwell unrecorded per pound."

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And does that information, or explanation, remain the same for the columns headed "Shotwell unrecorded per pound" on each of the remaining sheets of Exhibit 189?

A. Yes, that is Mr. Huebner's memory of Mr. Lubben's claim.

Q. And in whose handwriting do the figures 10 and 18 and ⅔ appear on this record?

4992 By Mr. O'Brien: Is that a column?

By Mr. Lockley: It is a column.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the heading of it again?

By Mr. Lockley: The heading is "Shotwell unrecorded per pound."

By the Court: I can't hear a word, Mr. Busby.

By the Witness: I was explaining to him. I will tell you.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, now, in whose handwriting are the figures 10 and 18⅔?

A. Some of these figures are Mr. Huebner's. Some of them are mine.

Q. And the next column is headed "Computation of price adjustment, total."

A. Those computations were made by me.

Q. Is that an extension of the net weight times the unrecorded per pound figure?

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you obtain the information on the columns under the general heading, "Memo taken from 4993 Lubben record," the first column being his record.

A. The memo taken from Lubben's record is my memorandum of identification. It has no basis of authenticity.

Q. Where did you obtain the figures?

A. The figures underneath came from memorandums that I had gathered from Shotwell's office.

Q. Were they Shotwell's records?

A. Well, they represent records that Shotwell had accumulated from other sources, I understand.

Q. They were not a part of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company records, is that correct?

A. No, they were not.

Q. They had been accumulated from Mr. Lubben, for example?

A. I understand some of them came from Mr. Lubben, Mr. Sproull.

Q. And where did you obtain the column—figure under the heading "He added"?

A. The same source.

Q. And where did you obtain the figures under the column headed "Paid to Shotwell and others"?

A. The same source.

Q. And where did you get the information for 4994 the column "Shipped to Eatsum"?

A. The same source. The photostatic copies of memorandums that were available.

Q. And are the headings on the other exhibits in the 189 series similar to those on the one that I have been showing you, 189-A?

A. Yes.

Q. And would your answer, as to each of those columns, and the information obtained therein, be the same?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I now reoffer the exhibit as based upon the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, upon the statements of the defendant Huebner to Mr. Busby, and upon such other records which Mr. Busby had at that time in his possession and which are now in the possession of the defendants and are unavailable to the Government.

By Mr. McConnell: I object on behalf of the corporation to such part of it as not represented by recap of Shotwell's records. So far as the invoices are con-
4995 cerned, I have no objection. But the additional data which was apparently put on from sources obtained from Mr. Lubben, I object as not binding on this corporation.

By the Court:

Q. Well, am I correct, Mr. Busby, that this exhibit was made up from various books and records that were made available to you by Mr. Huebner?

A. The availability cannot be classified as books. As records, yes.

Q. Well, miscellaneous records.

A. Miscellaneous records were made available to me, primarily by Graflund. Mr. Huebner had very little to do with making available any documents. Mr. Graflund was the comptroller.

Q. I see. And have you correctly reflected in this exhibit the data that you otbained from these various papers and documents that were made available to you by Graflund and Huebner?

A. All information that I could obtain from the documents that were presented, and hearsay, are reflected in that recapitulation there, for the purpose.

Q. When you say hearsay, you mean that which 4996 Graflund told you and that which Huebner told you?

A. Yes, sir. Anyone that I could ask, any of the employees of Shotwell.

4997 Q. What was the purpose of making up this document?

A. It was an attempt to have a working basis to determine, if possible, the amount of cash that had been received as over-ceiling prices. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company advised me that they had no formal records of these transactions and instructed me to gather the information the best way I could. And this was the attempt that I made to get a starting point to accumulate this data.

Q. And did you deliver that document, or documents, to some agent of the Government?

A. Incidentally to the verification of this work it was delivered, along with my regular audit working papers, the formal books of the company, the memorandums of which we had been talking, and everything else was put on the desk.

Mr. Lima was seated beside the desk and I sat at the end. And we were going to begin, and did begin, to verify each and everyone of these items that are put on there. None of them were presented as authentic or final. It was merely a starting point.

Q. Were they presented to Mr. Lima for his use?

4998 A. Not alone. They were presented along with all of the other information that I had. Yes, for his use.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask a question?
By the Court: Yes.
By Mr. McConnell: Were you instructed by Mr. Cain to obtain a work sheet or a summary which would show the highest amount of overage claimed by Mr. Lubben?
By the Witness: Definitely.
By Mr. McConnell: And that is what you were working on?
By the Witness: Definitely.
By Mr. McConnell: Without any attempt to determine whether or not it was true or false, isn't that right?
By the Witness: That's correct, at that time.
By the Court: It may be received in evidence. And I understand that you make your objection, Mr. Kirby, to its competency as to Mr. Sullivan.
By Mr. Kirby: Yes.
4999 By the Court: I will sustain that objection.
By Mr. Kirby: And will you instruct the jury with respect to that?

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 189-A, 189-B, 189-C, 189-D and 189 E.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I again make the objection, Judge—
By the Court: I am sorry.
By Mr. O'Brien: I again make the objection that it is not properly part of the rebuttal and should have been brought in the case in chief.
By the Court: Well, in what way, Mr. Lockley, does it constitute rebuttal material?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, you will recall that Mr. Cain testified that the first time that the corporation received any overages was in the latter part of 1945, at which time it was set at 3 cents and 5 cents 5000 on the gum work and the chocolate, and that it went up to progressive rates till it got to 10 and 18⅔ cents. This document shows that as early as 1944 there was 10 cents overage.
5001 By Mr. O'Brien: No, it doesn't show that.
By Mr. McConnell: It doesn't show that at all. It shows Lubben claimed that.
By Mr. O'Brien: The witness just said he took those figures from what Huebner said Lubben was claiming. And he next said, in answer to Mr. McConnell's question that he took the very maximum of Lubben's claim.

By the Court: Will you connect it as to that?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: I will receive it in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Busby, to this column headed "Shotwell Unrecorded Per Pound" and the amounts, ten cents, opposite the description, "spice buttons", and ask you who wrote in that ten cent figure?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. And did he tell you at that time what that ten cents was intended to represent?

5002 A. He said he didn't know what the amount was. Mr. Lubben has claimed that the over ceiling price paid was ten cents a pound, and he said you will have to verify it, Busby, for yourself, the best way you can.

Q. And did he tell you at that time that over ceiling prices in the amount of ten cents a pound on such spice buttons had been received in 1944?

A. No, he did not. As a matter of fact, he said he didn't know whether any payments such as indicated here had been received.

Q. Did he acknowledge having received the amount represented by ten cents a pound on the over ceiling price times the poundage of spice buttons shown on those particular invoices?

A. He said he had received ten cents a pound on specific items. He couldn't identify the ones.

Q. Did he say he had received ten cents a pound on those items in 1944?

A. I don't recall that he did.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mr. Cain about it?

A. Yes, I talked to Mr. Cain about—

5003 Q. Did you talk to him about the preparation of that particular document?

A. Only in general. That was my assignment, uninstructed, to prepare the document.

Q. Did he tell you at that time that rather than ten cents a pound, there was only three cents a pound being charged?

A. He said that ten cents a pound was the highest priced. He didn't know which ones were ten cents, and which ones were at other prices.

Q. Did he mention any amount other than ten cents a pound for gum work?

A. No, he didn't go into it at all in detail.

Q. Did he mention any amount having been—not having been received in 1944; did he mention when the first payments were received?

A. No, he did not. He mentioned that some of these items represented trade deals, if that is what you have reference to, that they didn't represent cash, but he wanted them put in anyway.

By Mr. Lockley: May I call your Honor's attention to the fact that it is twelve thirty.

By the Court: All right.

5004 We will take a recess, Members of the Jury until two o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the Judge and the Jury leave the courtroom, please. This Honorable Court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken at 12:30 p.m. until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Tuesday, October 13, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Tuesday, October 13, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: Mr. Busby, I think you were on 5006 the stand.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Busby, will you resume the stand, please.

LEON J. BUSBY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, in rebuttal, heretofore having been first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Busby, did you bring with you the originals of your work papers, Exhibits 189-A to E?

A. I think so.

Q. Well, will you get them for convenience so we can both have a sheet to work from.

That is the analysis of transactions between Shotwell and Dave Lubben.

A. Do you want to separate them?

Q. You just take them up there.

Now, Mr. Busby, to what period of time does Exhibit 189-A refer?

A. 19—the year 1944, including the month—one transaction in May, one in April, several in November and several in December.

5007 By the Court: 1944?

By the Witness: 1944.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is the meaning of the term "price adjustment" shown on that exhibit?

A. That was my descriptive terminology for the over-ceiling cash that had been received or at least tentatively put down as possibly received.

Q. And what is the first or earliest date for which the price adjustment is recorded on Exhibit 189-A?

A. November 20th.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, which is 189-A, those large sheets?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, indeed, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: And where does the price adjustment come?

Oh, I see.

By the Witness: The first one that is recorded here is November 20, 1944.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are there other recordings for the month of November and December?

A. Yes, there are several for each month.

5008 Q. And what is the amount under the column "Unrecorded per pound" during the months of November and December?

A. 10 cents per pound.

Q. And what are the items for which that 10 cents applies?

A. It is shown here: Spice buttons, citrus drops, gum drops.

5009 Q. What is the total computation of the price adjustment for 1944?

A. The total that I made was $16,940.20.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit 186 and I ask you if there is any relationship between that and Government's Exhibit 189-A.

A. No, I don't think that figure was carried into—I don't know this number, this exhibit.

Q. That is Exhibit 186.

A. Following out the general instructions from Mr. Cain to use the highest amount available, I used figures that I had gathered from other sources.

Q. Well, let me call your attention to the entry on Government's Exhibit 189-A, a total at the bottom of the page of $29,837.00.

A. That is correct.

Q. Does that figure also appear on Government's Exhibit 186?

A. Is this Exhibit 186?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, that figure appears. I think it does. Yes.

Q. What does that figure purport to be, that 5010 $29,836.00?

A. That figure purported to be the amount that Mr. Lubben claimed had been paid to Shotwell for the year 1944, as I gathered it.

Q. Does it say that that is the amount Mr. Lubben claimed on Exhibit 186?

A. Is this 186?

Q. Mr. Busby, the numbers are contained on the exhibit itself.

A. Oh, I see. I see. I beg your pardon. No, it doesn't say that, but this sheet was made up for my convenience in gathering this data.

Q. Well, just—

A. It is not all-inclusive.

Q. Just what is the description on 186 of the figure $29,837.00?

A. Sales from 11-9-44 to 12-31-44, price adjustment in parenthesis.

Q. And is the meaning of price adjustment on Exhibit 186 the same as you have previously testified that it means on Exhibit 189-A, namely, that it was your terminology for the overages?

A. It was my tentative computation and it means the same, from a descriptive standpoint, as far as 5011 I am concerned.

Q. Now is there also a figure on Government's Exhibit 186 with the description "Net Sales"?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. And what is that intended to represent?

A. That is a theoretical sales figure beginning with the $29,837.00 less certain assumed adjustments that I thought were proper.

5012 Q. Well, by "sales figures," do you mean the total sales to Mr. Lubben's company during that year?

A. No, that is the excess of cash received. That is the black market portion of the sales figure.

Q. And how much is that figure on Government Exhibit 186?

A. The adjustment?

Q. Yes.

A. $8,826.40.

Q. And there is also an entry below that with the terminology, "Collections, 1944." What does that term represent?

A. That was my estimate on calculation at that time of the cash received against those theoretical price adjustment sales.

Q. And what is the amount collected, according to your computation, in 1944?

A. $11,700.00.

Q. And is there a balance due?

A. Yes, shown here (indicating).

Q. How much?

A. $9,310.60.

5013 Q. All right. Now, will you please turn to the next two pages of Government Exhibit 189. That is the large analysis sheet.

A. I have it straight now.

Q. Which are Exhibits 189-B and 189-C. Is 189-C a continuation of 189-B?

A. I guess—yes, it is. I don't see those markings.

Q. And to what period of time do Exhibits 189-B and C relate?

A. 1945, and—1945.

Q. And what period of 1945? What are the earliest and latest dates?

A. January 5, 1945 is the earliest listed, and December 21, 1945, is the last item listed.

Q. And from where did you get the information contained on the column, "Shotwell Unreported Per Pound", and the figures "ten cents" and "18-1/3".

A. Mr. Huebner gave me that figure as his best recollection of the highest price that Mr. Lubben had claimed as paid in connection with these over ceiling items.

Q. Did Mr. Huebner tell you at what period 5014 of time he had conferred with Mr. Lubben, and Mr. Lubben had made these claims?

A. No, he did not.

Q. On some of those items of ten, and 18-1/3 cents, are they in Mr. Huebner's handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And to what type of item does the ten cent unrecorded per pound relate?

A. Gum drops, spice buttons—I believe those are the principal—the only two I see here.

Q. And there are some citrus drops, too, are there not? There is one entry on May 4th?

A. Yes.

Q. And to what does the 18-1/3 cent item unrecorded per pound relate? To what type of product does it relate?

A. Cardinal chocolates.

5015 Q. Now what is the total of the price adjustment column shown on Exhibits 189-B and C in 1945?

A. I don't believe it is totaled here.

Q. Well, turn to Exhibit No. 186, will you please?

A. Yes. All right.

Q. Now on Exhibit No. 186, what is the total price adjustment for the year 1945?

A. $204,105.10.

Q. What is the total of collections for 1945?

A. $198,429.84.

Q. And does the term "price adjustments" on Exhibit 186 refer again to the overages as you computed them?

A. That is my terminology for it, yes.

Q. And the term "collections", the $198,429.84 figure, what does that relate to?

A. That relates to my tentative computation of the collections for that year.

Q. And how were you able to determine the amount collected during that year?

A. From memoranda sheets that had come into my possession through The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

5016 By Mr. O'Brien: Memorandum sheets of whom?

By the Witness: Most of them were unidentified.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were you told what they represented?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. I believe Mr. Graflund told me most of them were sheets that had come in from Mr. Lubben. Some of them from Mr. Lubben's auditor, Mr. Sproull.

Q. And what is the item of balance due, 12-31-45?

A. $14,985.86.

Q. And what does that represent?

A. At that time I thought it represented the balance due from Lubben for uncollected over-ceiling prices.

Q. You mean the difference between the total over-ceiling charges during 1945 and the amount collected during 1945, is that it?

A. Plus the carry-over from any other year, which in this case is 1944. In other words, I attempted to construct an accounts receivable merely for my own control purposes.

5017 Q. All right. Now, will you please refer to the next two pages on the large work sheet, which are Exhibits 189-D and 189-E. To what period of time do Exhibits 189-D and E relate?

A. 1946. I assume this is the same exhibit. I don't see any identification here. It's all right. I guess it is the same.

All right. Yes, it is the same.

Q. That relates to 1946. And what months of 1946?

A. Started on January 10. There are some items—the last item listed on the sheet is October 10—October 11.

Q. I call your attention to the items, the second and third item on that sheet. What dates are those, on Exhibit 189-E?

A. November 26 and December 12.

Q. And the next one?

A. December 16.

Q. Now, did you use the same system of computing the net weight times 10 cents per pound for gum drops for the year 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. And other gum drops?

A. Yes.

5018 Q. And 18-1/3 cents on chocolate — Cardinal chocolates?

A. Yes, I think that's correct. I intended to, anyway.

Q. Did you get the information as to those overages from the same source?

A. Yes.

5019 Q. And who was that?

A. It all came from Mr. Huebner's memory of what Mr. Lubben claimed.

Q. Is any of that column showing the ten cents and 18-1/3 cents unrecorded per pound in Mr. Huebner's handwriting?

A. Yes, some of it is in his handwriting, especially the ten cents.

Q. Now, what is the total unrecorded price adjustment for the year 1946, without regard for the moment to the unbilled shipments?

A. The two figures are not totaled.

Q. Let me call your attention to the total on the right hand side of the page.

A. That's something else. This is the total you are asking for.

Q. I see. That particular figure is not totaled?

A. That's right. It is approximately $138,000.

By the Court: Did I understand that the total of the so-called price adjustment for 1946, is $138,000?

By the Witness: Yes, sir, approximately.

5020 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, I call your attention to the first page of the 1946 record, Mr. Busby, which is Exhibit 189-D. There is a figure there of $131,287.05.

A. Yes.

Q. Does that represent the total through November 21st; and there is a total for the balance of the year on the next page, is there not?

A. That's correct.

Q. And how much is that?

A. $7,732.00.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the heading, "Shipments Not Billed", on Exhibit 189-E, from what source did you obtain this information?

A. That information was handed to me by Mr. Graflund.

Q. And in what form did he give it to you?

A. I don't recall whether he gave me—he gave me a slip of paper with that information on it.

Q. Did he give you the bills of lading at that 5021 time?

A. The bills of lading were there, but they had no amounts on it, as I can recall.

5022 Q. Do you recall from what source you obtained the dollar amounts which appear on Exhibit 189-E. per unit?

A. That was given to me by either Mr. Graflund or Mr. Huebner. I can't recall.

Q. And you made the extensions, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. To show the total?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your computation then of the totals on shipments not billed for 1946?

By the Court: The total of what? The total of the shipments?

By Mr. Lockley: I am going to have to ask the witness that, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What does the figure represent, first?

A. In the first place, the figure is erroneous. But put down at that time it represented shipments that had not been billed.

Q. For which no invoices had been issued.

A. But it includes, since—I found out later that it includes some items that had been billed.

5023 Q. And what item or items does it include in error?

A. Well, I am not—I don't know the extent of all them. But the one item is July 24, 1946, for Cardinal chocolates, $14,758.00. I think that item has been billed, among others.

Q. So that amount should be deducted, is that correct, from your total as shown on Exhibit 189-E?

A. At least that amount.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes, at least that amount.

Q. Do you know of any others?

A. No, I don't. Hearsay.

Q. Well, will you deduct the $14,758.00 from the total now shown and give me the total of the shipments not billed?

A. Fifty thousand—

By the Court: How much?

By the Witness:

A. $50,976.64.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, will you please turn to Exhibit No. 186 and tell me if it bears any relationship to these two sheets, 189-D and 189-E?

5024 A. Well, not the columns you have been talking about.

Q. Well, does it bear any relationship to this exhibit in any way whatsoever?

A. Yes, the unbilled shipments are listed there. And a part of the items representing price adjustments that were computed by me have been carried over and added to those claimed by—or those taken from Mr. Lubben's figures to arrive at the highest amount that could possibly be involved, and that highest total is what is put into this exhibit 186.

Q. And what is the total of the amount of overages for 1946 as shown by that record?

A. Exclusive of the overages, $135,923.80.

Q. And did you add to that the unbilled shipments?

A. Yes.

Q. And the correct amount of the unbilled shipments is $50,976.64, is that not so?

A. That is as I computed it here.

5025 Q. So what is the total of the two corrected amounts?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is deducting only the $14,758.00, Mr. Busby, is it not?

By the Witness: Sir?

By Mr. O'Brien: I mean the so-called correct balance of unbilled shipments is arrived at only after deducting the $14,758.00.

By the Witness: That is correct. I know of no other. I have heard of some others.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, may the witness's statement, as it was hearsay, be stricken?

By the Court: Sorry?

By Mr. Lockley: May the witness's statement, as it was hearsay, be stricken?

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't even hear it.

By the Court: I didn't hear what you said nor what the witness said.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked that the witness's statement, as to what he had heard, be stricken from the record.

By the Court: In fact, I didn't listen to that. You may read it.

5026 (Record read.)

By the Court: Do you want the statement, "I heard of some others" to be stricken?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: Very well.

By the Witness:

A. In answer to your question as to the total of price—so-called price adjustments, plus the corrected figure for unbilled shipments, that total amount is $186,900.44.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And there is another item, less items uncollected due to financial difficulties, of $48,614.90. From where did you obtain that information?

A. Mr. Cain told me there was some items that were not collected because of Mr. Lubben's financial difficulties. And Mr. Huebner approximated the figure by selecting what he thought might be the period from which these items were not collected.

Q. Then you deducted that, did you, from the total of the unbilled shipments and the over-ceiling premiums received in 1946?

A. That is correct.

5027 Q. So what is the total collections as shown by your computation for 1946?

A. $168,029.40.

Q. And that should be decreased, should it not, by the amount of this $14,758.00?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, the original item of $14,758.00 was included in that total, wasn't it?

A. Yes, it was. So it should be decreased.

Q. So it should be deducted from it now?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. I now call your attention to the bottom part of Exhibit No. 186, under the heading "Cash account" and ask you if the term receipts—collections in parenthesis—and the figures under years 1944, '45 and '46 bear any relation to the top portion of the exhibit?

A. Yes, they are as a result of the computations at the top.

Q. What do those figures represent, the receipts figures?

A. To the extent that the figures at the top are correct, which I have to assume include trade deals, the receipts are from those over-ceiling items.

5028 Q. Now, I call your attention to the heading "Disbursements" and beneath it the items "Chocolate, 45,000 milk, 30,000, corn syrup, 12,000, cocoa beans, 22,000, cocoa bean deal, 30,000, sugar deal, 37,000, sales expense, unallocated, 18,000, 1945", and for 1946, "Milk, 15,000, corn syrup, 87,775, sugar deal, 54,825 and sales expense, and unallocated, 27,661.24," and ask you what those figures represent?

A. Well, that is an approximation made to be used in accounting for the disbursements for these funds for raw materials.

Q. And from what source did you obtain the information to include those disbursements on Government's Exhibit 186?

A. I believe Mr. Cain gave me a sheet showing just a rough approximation of what those items might have been.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 185 and ask you if that is a photostat of the sheet which Mr. Cain gave you for that purpose?

A. Yes, this is a sheet that he gave me for use in trying to determine the outgo of the money.

Q. Did Mr. Cain tell you at that time that those amounts had actually been expended?

5029 A. No.

Q. For corn syrup, sugar or cocoa or the other items listed here?

A. No. He only told me that the entire amount had been expended for raw materials.

Q. Did he tell you it had not been used for the purchases shown on Exhibit 185?

A. He said a lot of it included trade deals and to that extent, that it didn't represent money. Otherwise, the money had been spent.

Q. Did Mr. Cain have any records from which he obtained the information as to the trade deals?

A. I don't know of any.

Q. Well, what is the cash balance shown at the bottom of Government's Exhibit 186 for the end of 1946?

A. $5,898.00.

Q. And what does that figure represent?

A. Just what it says, a balance, thast was put in the bank, 7-25-46.

By the Court: How much, please?

By the Witness: The amount was $5,898.00 deposited in the bank on 7-25-46.

5030 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And does that purport to be the amount left over from the over ceiling collections and unbilled shipments after the disbursements had been made?

A. At the time I made this sheet, I thought it did, but it has no relation to it.

Q. And was that amount of $5,898.00, actually deposited in the bank account on that date?

A. Yes.

Q. And was it included in the company's taxable income for the year 1946?

A. From the way they kept the books, you might say it was included.

Q. Now, it either was, or it wasn't. You prepared the return, didn't you, Mr. Busby?

A. Yes, I prepared the return.

Q. Well, was it included in the return for 1946 as taxable income?

A. It was included in the corporation's books as a credit to a miscellaneous account receivable, which I find, or was told, was an offset against excessives which were charged into that account to the extent that 5031 the mixed account can be considered a return of this item into income which was so returned, but in the common regular accounting procedure, it was not included in a regular income account.

Q. That is all I wanted to know. Was it included in the 1948 return, at which time these documents, 186—

A. No.

Q. (Continuing)—and 189 were prepared?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is objected to.

By the Witness: I don't know about that.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: The 1948 tax return?

By the Court: I assume the disposition that was made of it may be material.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you answer the question?

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, the witness said he charged it out, and satisfactorily credited it to a previous charge. That closes it right there.

By the Court: If that closes it, that closes
5032 it.

By the Witness: No, there wasn't any special entry, to my knowledge, in 1948.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now what did you do with Government Exhibit 186 after it had been prepared?

A. I—Mr. Lima came out, and I turned it over to Mr. Lima in conjunction with other papers to be used in a follow up of our disclosure to determine how much over ceiling money had been received, and in determining how much tax, if any, was due, so that it could be paid.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, Mr. Busby, thank you.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Busby, when you were last on the stand, I asked you on cross examination about a conversation which you had at Mr. Cain's home upon your return from the east in January of 1948. Do you recall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Following that conversation, did you go in to see Mr. Sauber?

A. Yes, I did.

5033 Q. Who is Mr. Sauber?

A. He is the district director of Internal Revenue Service. At that time he was chief field deputy collector.

Q. And how long after that conversation, approximately, did you so go to see him?

A. It was within the week after January 11, 1948.

Q. Were you alone?

A. Yes, I went alone.

Q. And was he alone at that meeting?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Will you tell us in substance what you said to him at the time?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object to the cross examination along these lines on the grounds it is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Well, I assume you contend it has some relation with the making up of the exhibit?

By Mr. O'Brien: Indeed, your Honor. That is my sole interest in it.

By the Court: He may answer.

5034 By the Witness:

A. I told him that I had a client that was involved in the receipt of over-ceiling prices resulting from the sale of candy to one of its customers, and that these over-ceiling amounts had not been included in the tax return; that this client had advised me that the amount so received had been paid out for raw materials needed in the production of its candy, and that I had advised this client that by not having included these items, by having omitted both the receipts and the pay-outs, if any, that they probably were in violation of the income tax law; the client thought he was only in violation of the OPA law, and I told him that the client, after being advised that he might be in violation of the income tax law, wanted to make the correction in their return and clear up the matter, and I asked him whether or not the proper procedure would be to file amended corporate returns.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What did Mr. Sauber say?

A. He told me that it would not be advisable to 5035 file amended returns.

Q. Let me ask you this question: Did you say anything to Mr. Sauber at the time as to the amount of money involved?

A. He asked me how much money was involved and I told him that Mr. Graflund had told me that it probably wouldn't exceed one hundred thousand dollars but I did not have any idea of what was involved.

Q. What did he say about the amended returns?

A. He said that since they didn't know how much was involved, he would not advise filing amended returns; that I should go back and talk to the client about it, and if I wanted to come in or the client wanted to come in and disclose their name, which I did not do at the first meeting, then I should proceed to find out how much was involved.

Q. Did you thereafter go in with the client?

A. Yes, I went in with the client.

Q. About when was that?

A. Well, to my best recollection, I went in with the client about January 23rd for the first time. I went again—

5036 Q. Who was it that was with you?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. And you went again with Mr. Cain?

A. March 3rd or 4th—the 4th.

Q. That visit you are sure of?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it true that substantially the same conversation was had at that time between you and Mr. Cain and Mr. Sauber on March 4th or 3rd?

A. Yes, substantially the same.

Q. What if anything was said about an audit of the books and records by a revenue agent and by whom was it said?

A. Mr. Sauber suggested that I go back and try to work out these over-ceiling receipts and disbursements if possible and in the meanwhile he would have a revenue agent come out and work to determine for himself how much was involved and that I should work along with him in furtherance of this disclosure.

5037 Q. When was it, to your knowledge, that a Revenue agent arrived for that purpose?

A. The latter part of July, 1948.

Q. Was that Mr. Lima?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to his arrival, did you visit with Mr. Huebner, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser, Mrs. Morrill, concerning the matter of the premium receipts?

A. Yes, perhaps with the exception of Mrs. Morrill. I don't know whether she was in on it or not.

Q. And you did have some papers available which had been procured from Lubben or his companies?

A. I had some papers that were given me as having been procured, yes.

Q. And did you also, before the completion of this so-called Government's Exhibit 186, have some papers from Mr. Sproull's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to the people with whom you met at Shotwell concerning the probable amount involved?

A. Yes. I talked to both Mr. Graflund and Mr. Huebner and I talked to Mr. Cain also. Mr. Graflund—

Q. I just wanted to know if you talked to them.
5038 A. Yes, I talked to them.
Q. What, if anything did Graflund say?
A. Well, Graflund again said he thought the amount involved was around $100,000.00. That was the best of his recollection.
Q. What did Huebner say?
A. Huebner thought it couldn't exceed somewhere between 150 and 160 thousand dollars, including the trade deals.
Q. What, if any, instructions did Mr. Cain give you?
A. Well, Mr. Cain merely gave me general instructions.
Q. By the way, was Mr. Cain present during these discussions you had at the plant—
A. Yes.
Q. —as to the probable amount due?
A. Sir?
Q. Was Mr. Cain present at the plant during these discussions as to the probable amount due?
A. Oh, yes, Mr. Cain was there.
Q. What did he say?
A. He said—
Q. As to your mode of procedure—
5039 A. He said—
Q. Tell us what he said.
A. Mr. Cain told me to proceed the best that I knew how from whatever records that I had, to gather this over-ceiling data together and if there was any question as to amounts, an item that should or should not be included, that it should be included; that he was interested in getting the thing done quickly and getting the tax matter cleared up and if he paid more than was—more than he thought was due, why, he wanted to get it over with.
Q. Did Mr. Cain tell you to try to ascertain the figures actually received by Shotwell or to ascertain the maximum of Lubben's claim?
A. He told me to take Lubben's claim where it was in excess of anything—any other information I had.
5040 Q. Now, one of the methods by which you proceeded to work was the one you described to Mr. Lockley of recapping of the Shotwell invoices over the whole period whether they said there were overages or not?

A. That is correct. I took the overall possibility.

Q. And then you took the poundage of the items involved on those invoices, and applied the maximum overage rates as procured or established by Mr. Huebner's recollection of what Lubben claimed?

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And that is the items set down in the unrecorded per pound column?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then you extended those figures, those horizontal figures to arrive at the total shown?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, on the right hand side of the sheet, or these sheets, 186, are one, two, three, four, five columns, all bracketed under the general heading, "Memo Taken from Lubben Record". Is that right?

5041 A. That is what is there, but that is my terminology, my method of identification.

Q. I appreciate that, but that is there?

A. That is correct. That is the information that I had, that it was Lubben's record.

Q. And then you set down in those columns the data or such of the information as you were able to procure from the Lubben papers that were available?

A. That is correct.

Q. Including the Sproull figures?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Busby, whether there were any other figures available besides those from Lubben and Sproull, any other set of figures which entered into these sheets? Do you remember that offhand?

A. I can't segregate Lubben and Sproull from other memoranda that I had. I don't recall of any other outside—

Q. For example, do you know—or let me ask you this: Did you have available at the time any book or record of General Confections, any book or record as such?

5042 A. No.

Q. As to General Confections, is it true that the figures you had from Sproull, related to General Confections?

A. They were reported to—I don't know.

Q. Where did you get the figures relating to Eatsum partnership, do you know?

A. It all came from the same source, from Lubben's papers, or Sproull's papers. The headings that I have used were taken from their work papers.

Q. But none of those were part of the Shotwell records?

A. None at all.

Q. Now, about how long would you say did it take you to work up and complete in the manner that you described, this Government Exhibit 186, having to do with the subject of receipts?

By the Court: Isn't that 189?

By Mr. O'Brien: Perhaps it is, Judge.

By the Court: It isn't 186.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, it is 189.

By the Witness:

A. The compilations on that sheet ran over a period of three or four, five, months, begining in January, 5043 after I had made the disclosure.

By the Court: January of what year?

By the Witness: January, 1948, down through June. Part of the time I didn't work on it. I was on vacation, but the work covered that span of time.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Busby, did you make any comparable study of the alleged premium payouts?

A. Well, I made considerable study, but I couldn't draw any conclusions.

5044 Q. I mean, did you arrive at any figures of your own?

A. No conclusions, no.

Q. And I was asking Mr. Cain or Mr. Lockley was asking Mr. Cain about this Government's Exhibit 185, the longhand figures in his handwriting, I think, in which, as I recall it, he said the figures were to be worked back. Do you recall some conversation with Mr. Cain having to do with the work-back of figures?

A. Well, he just gave me the slip of paper and told me to use as a basis to go into the Shotwell production record and see if I could determine how much raw materials had otherwise been consumed as to whether or not such consumption was in excess of the quotas and by—

Q. And now—excuse me.

By the Witness:

A. (Continuing) By analysis or analogy determine whether any of these estimated pay-out figures could be substantiated.

Q. Do I correctly understand that the longhand sheet, Government's Exhibit 185, was handed by Mr. Cain to you for your own use?

5045 A. That is correct.

Q. Did Mr. Cain say that that was to be given to the Government?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you ever make an analysis or written analysis of premium pay-outs and hand it—that is, comparable to the one on receipts—

A. No.

Q. —and hand it to the Government?

A. No.

Q. Now when Mr. Lima was visiting with you, did you, in handing him this Government's Exhibit 189, tell him that these were the figures which represented overages actually received by Shotwell?

A. Oh, no. That was impossible.

Q. What did you tell Mr. Lima about them?

A. I told him these were work sheets that I had gotten together as a guide to working with him and determining if possible what these receipts amounted to.

Q. And he was to make an audit of everything available for that purpose?

A. Oh, yes. This whole thing was—

Q. Did Mr. Cain tell you to assist him in making

5046 that audit?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you especially retained and paid to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. And after Mr. Lima left and Mr. Mammel came in February of 1949, did you continue to work with him?

A. Yes.

Q. In every way that they directed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you assist in determining the precise amount?
A. Yes, indeed.
Q. And when I say you, I mean you and your staff.
A. Well, I worked pretty well on it myself.
Q. Yes.
A. With Mr. Mammel.
Q. Now I would like to know again about this Government's Exhibit 186 which I understand to be this typewritten item that is clipped to Government's Exhibit 189.
A. Yes.
Q. At least in the copy which I have here.
5047 A. Yes. That is the copy.
Q. In the first place, I am not clear how Lima came by this paper, 185. Would you restate that.
A. Well, I handed him the entire work papers that I had, which was a stack of papers probably two or three inches thick, and told him what they were, and I pointed —this sheet happened to be on the top and I explained to him it was my first tentative recapitulation and that it was not designed to be correct but it might be a guide in going about the work.
5048 Q. Did you tell Lima that any such amounts had actually been expended for these items?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Did you tell him that you had even studied it to find out on the payouts?
A. No, I had not at that time. No, I did not.
Q. Did you tell Lima?
A. Yes, sure.
Q. That you had not?
A. Yes, definitely.
Q. Now, I notice, Mr. Busby, again calling your attention to the right side of the sheet here headed "Memo taken from Lubben records" is it? I haven't got my glasses.
A. It is "record".
Q. Will you look at the two corn syrup items which seem to be the last two items described under the column "Description" and they are apparently shipments of corn syrup made by Shotwell in October of 1945. Do you see those?
A. Yes, I see them.
Q. According to the memoranda or papers available from Lubben, did Lubben ascribe any overage to those corn shipment items?

5049 A. No.

By Mr. Lockley: There wasn't any testimony that he had in 1945.

By the Court: I didn't hear.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, there was no testimony that he had ascribed to such a thing in 1945.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I said 1945, I should have said in 1946, Mr. Lockley. I don't say 1945. I mean to take only what is on the sheet.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. These October dates are 1946, are they not?

A. Yes. You said the last sheet and that is how I could tell.

Q. Correct.

A. No, I didn't look at the year.

Q. Now, the items below those are collected under a heading of "Shipments not billed", is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did the Shotwell people say about overages on unbilled shipments?

A. They told me there were no overages on unbilled shipments.

5050 Q. And when you say "they"—

A. Mr. Graflund, Mr. Huebner.

Q. —to whom are you referring, the same people you mentioned before?

A. Yes, Mr. Graflund, Huebner. Cain, I think, was in on the conversation.

Q. You are not certain whether Mrs. Morrill was there or not?

A. I doubt it.

Q. Did they likewise say at the time that there were no overages on the corn syrup?

A. Yes, on these—on the corn syrup, yes.

Q. I am not sure that I asked you, but going back to the conversation with Mr. Sauber, I think you said to us here this afternoon that Mr. Sauber—that you told Mr. Sauber that the plant had thought these payments to be deductible but that you had informed the plant that they were not. Is that what you said?

A. Yes. I informed him.

Q. Now, what did Mr. Sauber say to you and Cain about it when you were both in there around March 3rd or 4th of 1948 as to whether they could or could not be deducted?

5051 A. Well, Mr. Sauber told us that they could not be deducted.

5052 Q. Is it fair to say, Mr. Busby, that your concern then was in providing Mr. Sauber and the agents with a full statement of the receipts against which a tax might be assessed?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask just one question.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. You say "full receipts". Didn't I understand you to say this morning that you were basing your receipts not upon what Shotwell told you but what Lubben claimed as the receipts by the Shotwell Company, is that correct?

A. A large part of this summary is based upon what Lubben claimed, yes. The whole crux of the computation is based upon what Lubben claimed, because it is—

By the Court: When you say "claimed", you mean the papers you had before you that had been obtained from Lubben's records.

By the Witness: That is correct. Plus the per 5053 pound rate which Mr. Huebner had given me as his recollection of what Lubben claimed was the going rate.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, these papers that you are referring to, which you say you had before you, were these the papers that Mr. Huebner had obtained from Mr. Lubben?

A. I believe so.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, do you know? I object to any hearsay on the part of this witness.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What did Huebner say about it?

A. That's what he said.

By the Court: Well, all right, it may stand.

By Mr. Lockley: It doesn't change it.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, it is cross examination of your witness.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Busby, without regard to any of these records, whatever they may be, of Mr. Lubben's, which were 5054 in your possession, and which I believe are not in the court room, you could have arrived at the same conclusions that you did arrive at by merely taking the invoices which were in the possession of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, the amount or the weight of those invoices, and a simple multiplication of ten cents, isn't that so, for the gum items, and eighteen and one-third, or two-thirds cents, whatever it was, for the chocolate items?

A. I couldn't have arrived at any reliable figure. That was just a starting point.

5055 Q. But that is what you did do, isn't it?

A. Yes, of course.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, at this time I would like to renew my motion to strike the testimony of the witness Rubinson on the ground that there has been no connection, or no relationship whatsoever to the subject-matter of the issues in this case. Mr. O'Brien said that he could connect it up and there has been no further testimony along those lines.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, the question about Rubinson was whether he turned over cash for candy and put it in a cash candy box, or Lubben put it in a cash candy box. You will recall that Lubben denied on the stand that there was a candy cash box.

By the Court: Well, it may stand for whatever weight it may have.

5056 By Mr. Lockley: At this time, your Honor, I would like to reoffer Exhibits No. 156-A, which is a cash authorization slip for $7500.00, dated August 29, 1946, and 156, which is a check of the same date for $7500.00, and on which your Honor had reserved ruling, I believe, at a previous date.

By the Court: Well, I don't remember, I confess, what the situation was, or why.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien wanted to check on those items, if your Honor please, to ascertain whether, to his satisfaction, the government was exceeding the bill of particulars.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, not in '46 I wasn't.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, those are the '46 items. Then I presume you have no further objection to them.

By Mr. O'Brien: To be honest about it, Mr. Lockley, I don't remember what the connection was. Do you have the record reference, where they come up?

If I can have the record reference, Judge, I would like to look at it.

5057 By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I made objection to that, I believe, because there was no showing that it had ever been paid. Lubben didn't testify about it, Miss Feldman didn't testify that she paid it. There was no proof at all that that money was ever paid to anybody.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, that relates to one of the so-called unbilled shipments.

By the Court: And identified by whom?

By Mr. Lockley: By the witness Meyer, as one of the documents which he saw.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, which one is that?

By Mr. Lockley: 156 and 156-A. Identified by the witness Meyer.

At that time Mr. O'Brien said he had no objection to the items, that is, he didn't question the documents, but before responding to the offer he would like to check them against the prior government proof.

5058 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that does begin to sound right. I would like to read it.

(Record handed to counsel.)

By Mr. O'Brien: That's a seventy-five hundred dollar check?

By Mr. Lockley: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Meyer referred to it on his examination, so you offered the check and the cash authorization slip.

By Mr. Lockley: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that part I remember, but I can't remember that anybody said he paid us that money.

By Mr. Lockley: It was one of the unbilled shipments.

Mr. Lubben testified he paid all that money.

By the Court: I think Mr. Meyer said that Government Exhibit 156 was reflected on his work sheet, and it was charged to merchandise for Shotwell. And 156-A, is a cash authorization slip for that expenditure.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: The only thing open, then, Judge, is the testimony that that was paid, the testimony 5059 that it was paid to someone at Shotwell. I don't recall what that was.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lubben testified as to all of the unbilled shipments, that he paid the money. Now, he didn't testify as to this particular check, to be sure.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like a chance to look that up.

By the Court: All right. We will defer the matter.

By Mr. Lockley: At this time, your Honor, the Government rests.

And Thereupon the Government rests in rebuttal.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have nothing more, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, then, I think that it would hardly be advisable to proceed with the arguments this afternoon, would it?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: I think I will let the Jury go, and we will thrash out whatever details we have, preliminary 5060 to the commencement of the arguments, and the Jury may be at recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: The Jury will be at recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Court: I might see counsel for a few minutes if you come in.

5061 (And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in chambers, outside the hearing and presence of the jury:)

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to go on the record for this, your Honor.

At the close of the Government's case, and the close of the defense, I file a motion in writing of Harold E. Sullivan for an acquittal. And I wish to point out the reasons that are stated in writing in the motion to the Court.

I want to point out, too, to the Court that the situation with respect to the proof as to the defendant Sullivan is—at this moment I conceive it to be plain that there is a complete absence of proof that this defendant knew that the returns themselves were false. Certainly there is a complete absence of proof that the defendant Sullivan had a wilful intent to file a false return.

Each of the people who worked at the factory and 5062 who had anything to do with the handling of these transactions, has specifically now testified, and every single one of them has excluded Sullivan from knowledge of how this money was being handled.

The defendant Sullivan testified and he specifically explained that he did not know how these moneys were being handled; he did know that there were transactions in the black market, he knew only from what these people had told him; and that his knowledge of it was that—he assumed that the bookkeepers and the accountants of the corporation were keeping it in whatever manner would have been proper for tax purposes.

The courts have held, your Honor, that in the case of a question of specific intent, where there is a negativing of the intent by the defendant, and he may so negative it in an income tax, it has been held so by the courts, and where there is nothing but a circumstantial link, if any, to that wilful intent to defraud the Government of its tax revenue, that the rule then is that if there is any reasonable hypothesis of innocence there must be an acquittal, even though there may be other and equally 5063 reasonable hypotheses of guilt. The question is not whether there is one hypothesis, but whether there are two, or more. And if there be two or more, and one of those hypotheses is a hypothesis that the defendant Sullivan, although an officer after July 1st of 1946, nevertheless did not personally direct acts knowingly and wilfully intending to see to the filing of a false income tax return, there is the hypothesis that he was innocent of any such acts and guilty knowledge, then I submit he must be acquitted.

5064 Now, there is an enormous amount of evidence in this case which your Honor has quite properly ruled is not binding or competent as against the defendant Sullivan. So you strike that from your mind. You get to the specific evidence with respect to the defendant

Sullivan. He has now testified. His evidence is to be considered along with all the other evidence. It is true, you consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the Government on a motion of this type, but taking it even in the light most favorable to the Government, there still is a reasonable hypothesis that the defendant Sullivan, although knowing of the black operations, did assume that they were being properly handled, so far as taxes were concerned.

And the only proof in the record as to what he knew is that the quantity being taken in was equal to the quantity taken out. That is exactly the same testimony as to the knowledge of Graflund. That is exactly 5065 the same testimony as to the knowledge of Morrill.

Now, would your Honor say that Graflund and Morrill, with the knowledge which has been testified with respect to them, knew that there was more, if there was more—knew that there was money in excess of the amount that was paid out? Surely, you cannot say that.

And it cannot be said, either, as to Sullivan.

So that I am urging with as much force as I can upon the Court, that this is certainly the appropriate time for a dismissal of the defendant Sullivan. The case is not stronger against him, it is weaker, than it was earlier.

Now, your Honor is familiar with the rule that a corporate officer is not responsible where the crime charged involves guilty knowledge, or criminal intent, unless the officer of the corporation actually and personally does the acts which constitute the offense, or that they be done by his direction or permission.

5066 Now, the offense here is what? Preparing a false income tax return. Now, is there any proof that he did it, actually? Indeed not. That he did it personally? Indeed not.

The testimony is uncontradicted that the first time he ever saw those returns was in this court, and that he hasn't examined them fully to this day.

5067 Now, then, does the proof show that the false return, the preparation of a false return, if such an offense be committed here at all, was done by his direction? Indeed it does not. As a matter of fact, the people that prepared the returns, and worked on the returns, were explicitly asked by me, did they cal' it to the attention of Sullivan, and in each instance they said they did not.

So that, if the Court please, in the case of a corporate officer, no matter how responsible his general title, I think the rule is plain that where the crime charged involves guilty knowledge, and criminal intent, then, as I read the language from 13 American Jurisprudence, it is essential to the criminal liability of an officer of the corporation that he actually and personally do the acts which constitute the offense, or that they be done by his direction or permission.

Now, there is an absolute absence of proof of that. At the most extreme, there is certainly an hypothesis, 5068 which your Honor can certainly see, that it was not done by his express direction. He did not do it personally. He did not have that personal knowledge which is essential to guilt.

And if there be that reasonable hypothesis, then even though there could conceivably be others, then since it is based on circumstantial evidence as to his intent, he would need to be acquitted.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, as to the reasonable hypothesis rule, I believe your Honor is well aware that that has been rejected in many of the Circuits expressly, and by the Supreme Court, at least by implication, that the better rules is the substantial evidence rule.

And there certainly is substantial evidence in this case that Mr. Sullivan was aware of the activities of the corporation, and himself, as one of the officers, in dealing in the black market.

Now, he cannot avoid the natural consequences of 5069 his own acts by delegating to somebody else the actual performance of the preparation of the income tax returns, and the keeping of the books.

If there is any substantial evidence that he knew there was this type of transaction being carried on, and he has admitted they knew it, and that there was any duty on his part to determine whether or not the income tax returns of the corporation were being properly prepared, and the books were being properly kept, then he can't avoid it by simply saying that "I delegated that to somebody else."

Furthermore, even though he wasn't an officer until July of 1946, I want to call your attention to the fact that he was a Director during all of the years involved. And he was the lawyer for the corporation, who was charged with the responsibility, a greater responsibility than Mr. Grathund, or Mr. Roeser, or Mrs. Morrill, who were merely employees, performing administrative or clerical duties, and who in no way directly or indi-5070 rectly, are alleged to have benefitted any from the crime charged, the evasion of the income taxes.

To be sure, we have not traced directly into Mr. Sullivan's hands any of the money which was received, but I don't think that that is necessary. We are not charging him with having received the money. What we are charging him with is having attempted to evade the taxes of the corporation.

And when he participated in the activities, along with the other officers of the corporation, in black market transactions, whereby those transactions were kept off the books of the company, he is just as liable for evasion of income taxes, as if he had prepared the return by his own hand.

5071 And as to 1946, particularly, there is evidence that he knew that there were certain specific unbilled shipments which were not going on the books of the company, which could not by their very nature have been recorded on the books, and which obviously could not have been recorded on the income tax returns.

By merely attempting to insulate himself by putting these clerical, administrative duties, in the hands of somebody else he isn't now able to say that "I didn't know the natural consequences of my acts and therefore I shouldn't be penalized for them."

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, to respond shortly to Mr. Lockley: This is not a charge of nonfeasance. This is a charge of wilful act.

In Lurling vs. The United States, 179 F. 2d. 419, the Court speaks of the offense of filing an unlawful—I mean a false income tax report. The Court says:

"Such filing is unlawful, however, only if made 5072 wilfully, with knowledge of its falseness and intent to evade taxes. There is no presumption that may be drawn from the act itself. Both knowledge and wilfulness must be established by independent proof, direct or circumstantial."

And our Seventh Circuit, in the Tinkoff case, 86 F. 2d, 868, has made it plain that you cannot convict a man connected with the corporation for what, as Mr. Lockley said, he should know, he ought to know what the others did. They say in here:

"There could be no criminal liability upon the part of appellant for negligence or for anything of which he did not have actual knowledge; that appellant was not responsible for what his employees knew, unless such knowledge was actually brought home to him; and that the indictment required proof of actual knowledge and wilfulness upon his part."

5073 Now, there is an absolute failure of proof to show that actual knowledge and wilfulness upon the part of Harold Sullivan with respect to these income tax returns. And it does not follow that because he knew there were some transactions explained to him, as balancing out, so there was no tax liability, that he could be said to have had actual knowledge of the falsity of the return. The proof as to the unbilled shipments, your Honor, is that he first learned of them in 1948.

5074 By the Court: Well, I will deny the motion, and allow the exception.

By Mr. Kirby: Will your Honor be good enough, as the rule permits, to reserve your ruling until after the jury has returned its verdict?

By the Court: Well, I assumed that would be the necessary implication of such a ruling, that where a motion for acquittal has been made, and the Court denies it, that you have a right to renew your motion, in the event of an adverse verdict.

But I haven't any objection, if you prefer me to reserve my ruling until after the jury has returned a verdict. I haven't any objection to that practice, if you want me to handle it that way.

By Mr. Kirby: I would, because of the language in the rule. We would be strictly within it then, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, then, you suggest that I reserve my ruling.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, so that you can pass on it after the verdict.

By the Court: That may be entered in the record, 5075 that the ruling on Mr. Kirby's motion is reserved.

By Mr. McConnell: I think, your Honor, in order to preserve my record on the motion that I made for acquittal of the corporation that I must at this time renew it. And I do so renew it at this time.

By the Court: Have you any suggestions as to how you want me to rule, in the event it is adverse? Do you want me to reserve my ruling?

By Mr. McConnell: I would just as soon you rule on it now, as far as I am concerned.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: I want to renew the motion of the remaining defendants, made under Count 1, for an acquittal, now, at the close of all the evidence.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: So much for the motions.

(Discussion off the record.)

(And thereupon Count and counsel retired to chambers, without the presence of the reporter.)

(And thereupon an adjournment herein was taken until the following day, Wednesday, October 14, 1953, at the hour of 9:00 o'clock a.m.)

* * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

5076 Chicago, Illinois, Wednesday, October 14, 1953, 10:00 A.M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:—

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States v. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

5077 By the Court: Now, members of the jury, I thought I would outline to you just what our plans are so that you may know. As I told you at the close of the session yesterday we are going to go today to the summations of counsel, and it is figured that we will take all day and maybe crowd us a little bit on the noon hour.

The case has taken a long time to try, as you well know, and there are many matters that counsel necessarily will want to touch on in their closing arguments. And I trust you will be patient and give due attention to the summations and arguments that counsel may make in behalf of their clients.

As I stated, I assume it will take the greater share of the day. Mr. Kirby will open for the Government. He then will be followed by Mr. McConnell—

By Mr. O'Brien: We would like that.

By the Court: I am sorry. A faux pas on my part. Mr. Lockley will open for the Government. He will be followed by Mr. McConnell, and then Mr. Kirby and then Mr. O'Brien. And then Mr. Lockley will make a closing or rebuttal argument on behalf of the Government.

5078 Unfortunately, and I have told counsel, many months ago I made a commitment to be back home tomorrow, and it distresses me that we have to interrupt, but I made a promise and I don't feel that I can break it, and they are depending on me. Therefore, I am leaving for Minneapolis and will return again tomorrow night so that I can charge you Friday morning and have the case in your hands, I hope, sometime Friday morning. That means we will be in recess tomorrow.

Well, with those preliminary remarks, Mr. Lockley will open for the Government.

Thereupon Mr. Lockley addressed the court and jury in argument on behalf of the Government:

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, ladies and gentlemen of the jury: We have been here together for a month now. In that length of time I have noticed particularly the close attention and the interest that you have shown to the testimony that has been given by the witnesses. And I know that I speak not only for the Government, but for the defense, when I say at the outset that I want to thank you for your interest and for your at-5079 tention. It is a pleasure, actually, to try a case before a jury that you feel has some interest in what is going on and is actually paying attention to what is doing, and you realize that when they do bring in a verdict it is going to be a verdict based on the full facts in the case as they have heard them in the court room.

So I say again thank you, both for the Government and I am sure also for the defense. We want to thank you for that.

Now, a month ago when I made my opening statement to you I told you some of the things that the Government expected at that time to prove. What I want to do now is to go over and sum up for you the things that the Government believes it has proved beyond a reasonable doubt which establish the commission of the crime charged by these defendants.

5080 A month ago I told you that the Government expected to prove that they had evaded their income taxes—or, rather, the income taxes of the corporation, by filing a false and fraudulent income tax return. And I told you that we expected to prove that income tax return was fraudulent because it failed to contain or to include certain premium payments which had been received from the defendant Lubben, or from the witness Lubben in his various companies.

I told you then that the issue was a fairly simple one, although it wouldn't seem so at times. I am sure that at least the latter part of that prediction came true. It has seemed complicated. There has been a fog, a cloud of confusion has been created about the really simple issues of this case.

It isn't a question of whether or not Mr. Lubben sold the Haberkorn Candy Company to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. It isn't a question of what Mr. Lubben did with any of his other customers. It isn't a question of what the grain or the corn market was in 1945 and 1946. That is just smoke screen. That is all it amounts to.

5081 The simple issue in this case is: Did Lubben pay this money over to the defendants, in behalf of the corporation; was it reported; and, if not, was it left off the returns wilfully? Now, that is really all the case is about.

Now, I am going to try to summarize some of the Government's evidence to show for you—factually, not theoretically—by means of documentary evidence and by a resume of the actual testimony of some of the witnesses what the Government has attempted to prove for you.

Now, we started out to prove that there had been a false return filed by the corporation, or on behalf of the corporation.

You heard the lady from the Director's office identify the returns of the corporation in evidence. She identified them as having been filed with the Collector's office in Chicago from the stamps which appeared on them. She identified the amount of money which was reported in the returns and which had been paid over at that time.

Subsequently, Mrs. Morrill, the defendant corporation's office manager—and I believe its only remaining em-5082 ployee—also identified the 1946 return which she had filed, and she stated that she knew at the time she signed it that it did not contain all of the receipts from the corporation.

Stanley Graflund and Howard Roeser, who were the comptrollers at different times in the corporation, also identified the 1945 and 1946 returns and they testified that they did not contain the premium payments which had been received from Lubben. They testified that those premium payments were not contained on the books and therefore they could not have been in the corporate returns.

Mr. Busby, the CPA who returned those returns, also identified them as having been prepared by his office from the books and records of the corporation. And he said that at the time they were prepared he had asked specifically whether there was any other income from the corporation and he had been told that there was not.

You will recall that there were letters read into the record to Mr. Busby by Mr. Huebner, and I think in 5083 one case Mr. Roeser and in the other case Mr. Graf-lund signed it, saying that there had not been any OPA violations, either. That is in direct contradiction of some of the testimony which the defendants have subsequently attempted to bring forth.

5084 Now, Gladys Morrill, in addition to identifying the return, told you how the bookkeeping system was kept in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. You will recall that there was a billing system where ten or eleven or twelve copies of the bill were prepared at one time. The original of that became an invoice which went to the customer, another copy went to the salesman, another one went to the accounting department, and another one went to the shipping department, together with three bills of lading which were prepared at the same time, all as a part of this ten or twelve folio from the billing machine.

Those bills of lading were used to make the shipments, and then they went back with the shipping copy to the accounting department where the proper record was made to show the sale of that particular commodity against the individual customer who had purchased it. It was then picked up from there into the books of the company, and shown as a part of the total gross sales, and from there into the income tax returns.

Obviously, if that bookkeeping system was not followed, if, as subsequently happened with those unbilled shipments, instead of using the regular bills of lading 5085 which contained the Shotwell Manufacturing Company name imprinted right on it, they had used these stationery store copies, so to speak, as the bills of lading, why, the whole bookkeeping system was by-passed.

There was no way for the accounting department to know that those sales had been made, and without that information, of course, there was no billing, no part of those receipts, either accrued or actual, shown on the books and none of it went into the income tax returns.

Mrs. Morrill stated she knew there were some shipments which did not go into the income tax returns, speaking particularly of those so-called unbilled shipments which happened in 1946, and she stated that she knew they were not on the books.

Now, the Government's principal witness was Mr. Lubben, who was on the stand from Tuesday to Tuesday. You saw him and you heard him. You had an opportunity to observe his demeanor during all that period of time. I suppose the best way of going over his testimony is more or less to begin at the beginning, and give you a re-5086 sume as to how I recollect it.

Of course, your recollection of what the testimony is, is what governs, and not what I tell you I remember it to be.

Remember that Mr. Lubben was working for the Burry Biscuit Company, of which the Eatsum Food Products Company was a subsidiary, handling sales of candy.

5087 He bought the company, the Eatsum Food Products Company, in early 1944 and at that time he also hired Mr. Bercu to set up a set of books for him.

Mr. Bercu, in turn, hired Miss Beatrice Feldman to be the bookkeeper. Lubben said he was introduced to the Shotwell people by John Bond, who was their sales representative out on the West Coast and that he was anxious to become a broker for candy and he made an arrangement with Mr. Huebner whereby he would get a couple of carloads of chocolate that he was able to obtain through his quotas from the Eatsum Food Products Company and from other sources.

In return, for supplying them that chocolate at ceiling price, they were going to give him a certain quota of candy which meant he could sell the candy to the Shotwell Company and he got five per cent as a broker.

That went along for a few months. Mr. Lubben kept asking for more candy. The demand was great. He wanted to sell a greater amount. The more he sold, the greater his five percentage was to amount to and he wanted to buy some candy on his own and not as a broker, but to 5088 sell as a jobber.

Mr. Huebner said, "It isn't worth our while. We are caught with a low ceiling on these items and besides that, we are short on the candy itself. We can't supply our present existing trade."

So, whether Mr. Lubben suggested to Mr. Huebner, as the defendants claim, or whether Mr. Huebner suggested to Mr. Lubben, as Mr. Lubben claims, in any event, they arrived at an agreement that Mr. Lubben would pay in addition to the amount of the invoice, an amount in cash over ceiling.

Now, the invoice amounts on these candies were around 7 and 8 cents. According to Mr. Lubben, in the beginning of this agreement, there was to be a 10 cent overage. Now, you recall that when Mr. Cain got on the stand, he said it was 3 cents to begin with. That is the first testimony you heard about that. All of Mr. Lubben's books show that from the very beginning, he was paying 10 cents.

Furthermore, this resume, which Mr. Busby went through yesterday, shows that from the very beginning there was a 10 cent overage rather than a 3 cent one those so-called gum products.

5089 Now, both Mr. Lubben and Miss Feldman and Mr. Bercu testified that the bookkeeping system in the Eatsum Company was to take the invoice as it was received from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and to extend on that, as Mr. McConnell calls it "mark up" those invoices by picking the 10 cent a pound amount, multiplying it by the weight, and adding that to the invoice amount to arrive at the sum total.

5090 Here are some examples of that. Here are some exhibits. The first group of exhibits that the Government used are these. You will see on them that there is 20,490 pounds on this particular exhibit. They have multiplied it by ten cents and they come up with $2,049.00, and that is the amount added to the printed amount on the invoice of $1,587.98 which is arrived at by multiplying this 20,490 pounds by the actual invoice ceiling price of seven and three-quarters cents. Then the invoice price is added to the overage, and you get the total of $3,636.98. Now, from that figure, Mr. Lubben and Mr. Bercu said that was what Mr. Lubben paid. That was his cost. That was his purchase price.

So then he took their purchase book and he added, he entered into the purchase book the figure of thirty-six hundred dollars. He did it with every one of these invoices, because that is what it was costing him. That is what he put in this book and you will find it in here when you go through. Maybe I better go through one of them. It shows that it is on page 36 of the purchase book. The amount is $3,636.98. I am not a very good book-5091 keeper, so I have to—I better get the right page. There you find it (indicating). The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $3,636.98, invoice 60254—(indicating) 60254.

So getting back in—this actually was 1944. It was December. It was a December item but it wasn't paid, the cash overage wasn't paid until 1945. So that shows you that at the very beginning Mr. Lubben was keeping in this purchase book a complete record of what it was costing him, both for the invoice price and over-ceiling price on this commodity.

The next thing Mr. Lubben did was to pay for the invoice price itself. He didn't do that all at once. Every time he got a bill, he didn't just send a check. When you go to a department store and make purchases and you get a bill, you don't pay it all at once, and that is exactly what Mr. Lubben did. He waited until there were several bills and then he paid them.

He wrote about four of them, and they all add up to $5,018.00. That was paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company on the amount and listed on the check too 5092 by the invoice number less the two per cent discount.

5093 Now, you find in the accounts payable that that item is listed as having been paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Let us see, that date is January 26, $5,000.00, and then when he went to pay the overage amount, he had this group—in this particular instance, he had this whole group of invoices. He had Miss Feldman make up one of these so-called recap sheets. He had her keep a record from time to time. He made these recap sheets up.

She made these recap sheets up from that particular record. Here is one. It says: "Paid, January, 1945, C.D. 46".

If you want to go to the trouble to check this, you can do so. This shows on January 10th there was a shipment of spice buttons in the amount of 15,000 pounds, and so forth, and the next amount, on January 12, of 17,000 pounds. Multiply it by ten cents, and you come out with 32,000 pounds, and $3,255.00.

Gum drops, the same way: Add them all up. This is the date of the invoice (indicating). This is the 5094 amount of poundage (indicating). It comes to 142,053 pounds. It gives you $14,253.00. There was advanced an eight thousand dollar advance, some time or other, leaving this six thousand dollar balance, and $9,508.00 to pay on cash overages.

Well, you won't find any $9,508.00 check to cash, for the reason that after this was made up—look at it rather closely here. In pencil is the date, January 17, and another amount showing another purchase of spice buttons, and someone has added down here in pencil, the weight of that and the amount, $1341.00, bringing the total to $10,849.00, which was owing at the time this particular payment was made.

You recall also, Mr. Lubben testified that this particular payment was made at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York City, and at that particular time, Mr. Huebner told him that he didn't want any more five hundred dollar bills. That is why he recalled it specifically. He said he wanted them in smaller bills from then on. Here is the check for the $10,849.00, which ties in specifically 5095 with this settlement sheet, which ties in specifically with each and every one of these invoices.

5096 Now, how did Mr. Lubben handle this $10,000.00? He handled it on his cash disbursements book as a payment to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. You see if you can find that. The date of the check is January 19, 1945. Well, I will show that to you in just a minute. He also showed it as having paid that particular amount on the account of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Let's see how good an accountant I am. Let's see if I can locate it for you. All right, here we are. January 19th, cash, Shotwell, $10,849.00.

I am not going to go through this procedure on every one of these particular checks, but I wanted you to see just exactly how these documents all tie into each other, how the checks to cash tie into the invoices, how the invoices tie into the purchase book, how they all tie into the cash disbursements book, and then The Shotwell Manufacturing Company accounts payable ledger card is likewise—it is shown on there as a reduction in the amount due The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and that is true all the way through the period of the sole proprietorship.

5097 Now, I ask you, as reasonable human beings, whether Mr. Lubben back in January of 1945 could have set up a system of books which would anticipate that as late as October or so of 1945, he was going to enter into some sort of black market arrangement with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, whether at that time he was enough of a crystal ball gazer that he knew that he was going to pay ten cents a pound on spice buttons and gum drops. And Mr. Cain says they didn't raise the price to that until eighteen months later, about June of 1946. There is no question about the authenticity of the records—not the purchase book, no question at all.

You heard Miss Feldman testify that she kept them.

She kept them from the very beginning, almost, of the sole proprietorship, at least the middle of 1944 when she worked there, and she made those record contemporaneously. She made them at the time they happened.

Mr. Bercu set this set of records up and he audited them regularly. He audited them once a month. He 5098 was a man that worked out this system. When Mr. Lubben had to pay cash, Mr. Bercu suggested to him that he handle it in this particular way. Bercu knew about cash checks, checks to cash, all the way through. Is it reasonable to assume that this set of books is false or in any way fictitious or might be long after the transactions happened? It just doesn't stand close scrutiny. Well, there is another thing about that set of books, too.

Do you recall that Mr. Lubben turned them over to Sproull, Scholz? I believe it was in late 1945. Mr. Sproull was going to do some work on them. It was after the partnership had been formed and he had no further use for the sole proprietorship books. Mr. Sproull didn't give them back to him. The Bureau of Internal Revenue had to serve a subpoena on Mr. Sproull to get these books back in 1948, and since that time, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has had them, so it was impossible for Mr. Lubben to have made up a false or fictitious set of books.

These were in the hands of Mr. Bercu and of Miss 5099 Feldman during the sole proprietorship and then they were turned over to Sproull, Scholz and then they were turned over to the agents. We can trace them all the way through. Nobody has had the slightest opportunity to tamper with them. You will find too that the checks to cash tie in with these cash authorization slips which tie in with the invoices and all are dated, like this one, for example (indicating) February 6, 1945. It was cashed February 6, 1945, and so you have to start out with the premise that this happened at the time Mr. Lubben said it happened.

5100 You can't take a check to cash like this, and that was dated February 6, 1945, and work backwards to set up all this elaborate set of records that you want at that time.

So, that is just the first one of those transactions. I hope that that shows that the records in the case here are —at least in so far as the sole proprietorship records are concerned—that they simply cannot be successfully attacked as being in any way fictitious or false. They are an accurate set of records kept by a competent bookkeeper.

You saw Miss Feldman. They were kept by a certified public accountant, and the certified public accountant is a man with high professional ethics, whose duty it is to see to it that books are kept properly. When he puts his name on a document, it, in a sense, guarantees that that document is a correct one.

Now, the next set of invoices that Mr. Lubben mentioned, he said he paid $6,183.00 in check on February 7th, and Mr. Lubben said that Mr. Huebner told him at that 5101 time to keep the money rolling, and he could get him a lot of merchandise. That again will check all the way through the cash disbursements books, in the accounts payable book, the purchase book, every one of those documents. Every one of those documents will tie in with each and every one of the other documents.

5102 The next group was checks for $18,000.00—or three checks actually—one for 15,000, one for $18,000 and one for twenty-two.

Mr. Lubben said, with respect to the check for $18,000.00, that that was the one when Mr. Huebner, at the Gotham Hotel, split the money into three piles and said, "This one is for Harold. This one is for Byron. This one is for me. And this one is for the horses."

And Byron Cain said he was in New York at the time, although he was not at the meeting when the money was actually split up.

I would like to point out, too, with respect to this earlier payment that I mentioned, on January 19th, that is the time when Mr. Lubben testified that he sent some flowers, I believe, to Mrs. Cain and Mrs. Sullivan. That is the time he took them to the Bowery, and to the Diamond Horseshoe and to Toots Shor's. That is all recorded on his expense account. Those expense accounts were kept by him in the ordinary course of business.

Here is one of them right here. You can see by the very appearance of that, that it was made up when 5103 it was supposed to have been made up. Here, January 18th. "Fruit basket, Mrs. S., Mrs. Cain, miscellaneous expense, $20.00."

On the 19th, "Dinner, Huebners, Sullivans,"—and I don't know what that name is, but it looks like Kerns, or something—"Berry, Hank, et cetera, Toots Shor's, Sammy's Bowery, above crowd; Diamond Horseshoe, above crowd." And the cost, $165.00 for the evening.

Mr. Sullivan said that he was there, that he had gone to the Bowery and to the Diamond Horseshoe.

I just point this out to show that the opportunity was there. Mr. Lubben said that he made that payment in New York City. The defendants were in New York City. This shows conclusively that not only were they there, they were with him. The opportunity was there for him to make the payment, and these expense accounts all show exactly where he was at all of these periods of time. It shows that he was in New York on the days he said he was in New York, that he was in Chicago when he said he was in Chicago.

And you can check each one of these against the 5104 dates of the checks which were made out to cash, and you will find that when a check was made to cash on one particular day, Mr. Lubben left that day for Chicago, or that there was some party with the defendants in New York. So that there was always the opportunity for the payment to be made.

5105 Now, on this check for $15,000.00—here are three of them which go together to pay up a series of invoices. Here is a group of invoices running from Exhibit 29 to Exhibit 39. The checks which pay those invoices, on the invoice price, are right along with them. Here again, you will see all the markings, the marked up invoices—as Mr. McConnell liked to call them, that he didn't give any permission to Mr. Lubben to mark up—are all here, showing that they were marked up at the time, printed and stamped on the invoices themselves.

Now, here we have a little different type of evidence to support the payment of those cash premiums. You have heard a lot about the so-called cash authorization slips. Well, here is one. Here is one, "Cash, Shotwell, 3-28-45, $15,000.00".

Here is a check, "3-28-45, $15,000.00."

Here is another one, "March 6, 1945, cash, Shotwell, $18,000.00."

Here is a check—"March 6, 1945, $18,000.00."

5106 Now, if you check these particular checks through the cash disbursements book, you will find that they are checks listed as cash, drawn to Shotwell. Thumb through the accounts payable of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and you will find that they are shown as payments to Shotwell.

Here they are. Here is the eighteen thousand dollar one, March 6. There is the fifteen thousand dollar one, March 28. They show here as a payment to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

And here is the so-called recap or settlement sheet for those, or for part of these particular shipments. We don't have all of them. We don't have all of the cash authorization slips. We don't have all the recap sheets. The amazing thing is that we have as many of these as we do, after this number of years, that we have been able to come up with.

But you will find here—you can check each one of these dates, these invoice numbers against the invoices here, 5107 and you will find that they are in complete accord for a period of time. Where the settlement sheet is for the balance of it, we don't know.

But this shows a part of a recapitulation of amounts due and owing in cash at this particular period of time.

As a matter of fact, when that $22,000.00 check—which I believe is right here in front of you, $22,143.13—when that was drawn Mr. Lubben said he paid that money in Chicago, and he also drew another check on the same date. That one is dated May 3rd, I believe. There is another check on the same date for $2,403.00, also dated May 3rd. And he said when he paid these, that these two shipments, which I hold in my hand here, had just come in at that time.

This one is dated April 28th, and this one is dated April 27th.

5108 So they had come in after he had drawn the check for $22,000.00. But he still owed the premium on these. So at that time he drew the check for $2,403.00, which is the amount of the premium shown on these two invoices, the amount of the overage. And at that time he became all even-Stephen, he became all evened up.

He owed no more from that point on. He started accruing new debts, of course, but I mean at that particular point he was all evened up with them.

And you will see here that these shipments are both for Cardinal chocolates. And you will find that on both of them the extensions are 18-3/4 cents. There seems to have been a lot of confusion as to whether it is 18-1/3, 18-2/3, or 18-3/4. But it was 18 and something. That's for sure.

And we have the figure here, 18-3/4, on both of these invoices, and the amounts of the overages. There is $594.00, $1,809.00. If you are good at mental arithmetic you will find that it comes to $2,403.00.

Here again is an example of invoices back in May, 1945, where the amounts are eighteen and a fraction cents on Cardinal chocolates. Mr. Cain said they didn't even put the price on the overages until eighteen—not eighteen months later, it was about thirteen, fourteen months later—it was June of '46, according to him, that they even put this price on Cardinal chocolates. According to Mr. Cain they weren't even selling for premiums at this particular part of the year, and that when they did begin to sell chocolates at a premium it was only five cents, to begin with.

Well, I ask you whether this documentary evidence isn't convincing enough that it was eighteen cents at this particular period of time.

The next payment was $6,459.00. That was made a few days later, on May 9th. Again in Chicago. Mr. Lubben said that at that time Mr. Huebner had a copy of a recap sheet, as he usually did, and that they compared them and put the money into the piles and so forth.

5110 Then there was a payment on or about May 25th. And this can be checked easily, also, against the invoices. Now, it happens that for this particular transaction we have neither a settlement sheet nor a cash authorization slip. But here you have 8,250 pounds of spice buttons. The amount is $825.00. Here are spice buttons and gum drops. The total overage on that is $3,885.23.

And here is 14,610 pounds of gum drops at 10 cents, which is $1,461.00.

You add those figures together, at the 10 cent premium, and you will come up with the amount of $4,455.00. Even though there isn't any cash authorization slip for this particular transaction, even though there isn't any settlement sheet, the mere fact that, on the face of it, this check for cash is for the identical amount as the overages marked on these three invoices. In view of the other circumstances, the practice which Mr. Lubben testified to, that is a strong indication in itself that this check was used for the purpose he said it was, namely, to pay this cash overage. And he said he paid it.

5111 You notice that the check was cashed on or about the date that is shown. Here is the cashier's stamp showing it was paid May 5, 1945.

And at this point of time you can still check all of these transactions through the sole proprietorship books. A complete double entry set of books is in no way questioned or questionable.

Perhaps I should explain what a double entry set of books is. It is not a double set of books in the sense that you are keeping one for yourself and one for the tax collector, or your partner, or somebody. A double entry set of books, of course, is one where you have debits and credits, where for every entry of a debt you have an offsetting entry of a credit. Where you have two columns, like this—two columns, here is the debit column and the credit column, as opposed to a single entry set of books where you have just one column and you show everything in that one column.

5112 Now, we leave the period of the sole proprietorship, and you recall that at this point Mr. Lubben got into partnership with Mr. Giglio. That is when some of his troubles began.

When he left, he left the books and records at the partnership. The result is that we do not have them. Instead of that, we have the carbon copies of the invoices which were prepared at The Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant, at the same time these originals were prepared.

This was a part of that bookkeeping system which Miss Morrill testified about. This is the so-called accounting copy. This is the copy that the accounting department used in making its billings.

And we didn't have the canceled checks. So, you will recall that the young man from the Manufacturers Trust Company brought all of these Recordak copies of the checks with him from New York. You will find that those checks, those Recordak checks, are matched up in 5113 each case to the invoice to which it applies, and is in payment of the invoice amount.

Now, in addition to those, there were, of course, also checks to cash. The first one was the check for $35,536.00.

Now, here is a group of invoices which go to February 28, 1946. You remember that the partnership broke up on or around July 9. Mr. Lubben wanted to pay for these particular transactions with a check. This was after the conclusion of the partnership. He wanted to pay for these transactions by check.

And that is when we come into this period where we have the three checks with the holes cut into them. He said that the checks were refused. You note that those three checks with the holes cut in them are recorded on the back of this settlement sheet, number 3017 for Cain, 3018 for Sullivan, and 3019 for Huebner. There is 3017, 3018, 3019.

And in amounts, he has taken the face amount of the settlement sheet, which is $41,682.10, and it relates to shipments from November through January, and divided that figure on the back, by three, coming up with 5114 eighteen thousand—or $13,894.03.

These checks are for $13,894.03. They were not used to pay this particular set of overages which was due at that particular time. Instead, Mr. Lubben subsequently paid it by this check, which is for $35,536.00. And you will note that the items shown on this settlement sheet, are also shown on this one, except there is an additional one here which increases the amount from $41,000 to $43,000.

See, these items here are duplicated here on this, with the exception that there is a February 28 purchase of 13,892 pounds, which would mean an additional $1,389.00. That, added to $41,000.00, brings it up to $43,000.00.

Now, somebody—we don't know who—has made an adjustment on that. They have deducted $7,535.30. What that means, I have no idea. It may mean that that payment was made. It may just mean that there was a loss in shipments, or some adjustment made.

5115 In any event, the balance is $35,536.00. There is the check to cash for $35,536.00. That again ties in perfectly with the series of invoices dated from November through February. And these are, as we know, Shotwell products—Cardinals, spice buttons, and chocolate covered nuts.

I overlooked, during the period of the partnership—I realized there, after I started to talk to you about that particular transaction, that I had jumped from the beginning of the partnership to the end, without telling you what had happened in the middle.

Well, in November, 1945, there was a payment of $36,148.35 for which the check could not be found. The only thing that could be located was the Manufacturers Trust Company ledger sheet which shows that on that day a check in that amount was cleared through the bank. In other words, it was paid. There is the amount, $36,148.35. We don't know who it was paid out to. Mr. Lubben said it was made out to cash.

But here again is a settlement sheet dated Novem-

5116 ber 27, 1945, and showing chocolate nut meats, Cardinals and spice buttons, in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, the word "Shotwell". All of those amounts, computed on the basis of the overages given, add up to $66,000.00 less an advance of thirty thousand. You will recall that that $30,000.00 advance was what Mr. Lubben said he had taken out of the corn box, that cash box which was kept during the period of the partnership, and it had been paid with that money. So there is no check for that $30,000.00.

The partnership obviously was in the black market. They were in the black market in corn. They were probably in the black market in sugar and many other things. But that is entirely beside the point. To be sure, Lubben was in it. He candidly told you that himself.

But Lubben is not being prosecuted for black market activities. It is entirely beside the point. Whether he paid the money to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company officers is the only thing you have to worry about, not whether Mr. Lubben was breaking the law in so doing

5117 it. He is no plaster saint. But I would like to remind you of this, too—that without people like The Shotwell Manufacturing Company Lubben couldn't have been in the black market. It takes two for black marketing, as well as for other things.

5118 So, anyway, on this settlement sheet there is a balance due on November 27th of $36,148.35. Here is a check, $36,148.35. It may be circumstantial evidence, but it is pretty convincing that that check was drawn to pay this amount of money on this settlement sheet which, in turn, was drawn up to pay the overages shown on this group of invoices. You can check it all through, if you would like to do so.

And here is the settlement sheet—Mr. Lubben called it— that he picked up from Mr. Huebner. It is on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company stationery. You recall that he said Mr. Huebner always had a settlement sheet. Whenever they split up the money Huebner always had a record so that he could check against Mr. Lubben's record how much was being owed at any particular time. And this Mr. Lubben has written on the back of—or on the bottom—"Miss Feldman, these were Huebner's last figures."

Well, now, the defense makes much of the fact that there are no amounts on here, no figures, only weights.

Well, putting a decimal point alongside of a weight 5119 to arrive at a 10 per cent coverage isn't a very difficult proposition, and that is all you need to do with these figures. Spice buttons, for example, 41,970 pounds. You know without looking that it is $4,197.00 on that particular amount.

And then, too, here are figures written here—15,000, 18,000. I don't know whether they have any relationship to the 15,000 and 18,000 dollar checks I have shown you or not. There is no way of telling that. But that is something you may consider, drawing your own conclusions as to whether or not this particular settlement sheet has any relationship to the black market activities which were being carried on, and whether the Shotwell Manufacturing Company didn't keep some sort of a record of that, because here is at least a part of such a record.

They have said that they had none, except for one record. And that was the record that was kept, you recall, by Mr. Graflund, and Mrs. Morrill and Roeser, the records of the amount being put into the cash box. And what happened to it? After Mr. Krane, who was the Intelligence Unit agent who investigated this case, went to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Mr. Gra-5120 lund testified that Mr. Cain twice ordered that that be destroyed. Mr. Cain said that Mr. Gratlund must have been mistaken. Miss Morrill said that she asked him if it was any good any more and he said no.

Well, if it had been any good, if it had actually proven the things that Mr. Cain has claimed here, and that Mr. Sullivan has claimed, if it had established that there had been payouts in the amounts which they claim had been paid out, and if there had only been receipts in the lesser amounts that they claim were received, don't you think that that was the best possible piece of evidence that they had that would prove their point? If they didn't have something to conceal, if that was in any way valuable to them, they wouldn't have permitted the destruction of that record for one minute. They would have been waving it under Mr. Krane's nose the minute he got there to show him that they had a record that was as reliable as the records which I have shown you from Mr. Lubben. But instead of that, they destroyed it. There is only one conclusion to be drawn from that, and that is that it didn't prove the things that they want you to believe.
5121 Now, there has been a lot of discussion about that $35,000.00 check, too, you recall. The invoices to which it applies go back to the period of the partnership. But Mr. Lubben said that when he took over the inventory of the partnership he also took it over at the price which included both the over-ceiling and the regular invoice price. And the defense brought forward a document, a work sheet made by the witness Meyer, I believe it was, who had written on there that that $35,000.00 check was to apply on inventory payment to Eatsum.

Now, if he was paying that check, or the proceeds of that check, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and was thereby reducing the liability that the Eatsum partnership had, it was a perfectly appropriate accounting entry to be made to show that he was paying this on the Eatsum inventory, to reduce the amount of the Eatsum inventory.

If three of us owe each other—I owe you, and you owe me, and you owe me, and two of us adjust the account to the satisfaction of the third one, as long as it is 5122 shown on the record that the account has been properly paid, the actual physical means of completing the transaction are immaterial.

What Mr. Lubben did here, he said, was to pay the $35,000.00 to Shotwell, but since the partnership owed it, he showed it on the books as if it were being paid to the partnership. That is the substance of what the testimony about that particular $35,000.00 has been, from the Government's point of view.

There are a great many more of these various payments. I don't like to bore you by going through them all, one at a time, but there is another one that I think is particularly significant, and that is this particular payment of the March 25th to April 27th date.

Now, this particular settlement sheet is in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, with the exception of the figures along the side, which the witness Strum identified as hers. Lubben did do the ten-cent extension, but when he got down to the 18-¾-cent extension—which, incidentally, is 18-¾ cents a pound—he left it to her. So that particular 5123 settlement sheet was made up by Lubben, in his handwriting. And then the same thing was subsequently typed up.

5124 It compares. Compare it by totals, if nothing else. 19,518—19,518; 14,049—14,049; total 33,567 on that particular settlement sheet.

Now, here is the significant thing about it. It says, "Less payments paid to Frank on way to farm $1488.00."

Now, that is the first payment to Frank, Frank Huebner. Mr. Lubben said it was on the way to his farm in New Jersey.

Now, I want to show you the first invoice I pick up for gum drops, 14,880 pounds. And what is the overage at 10 cents a pound? $1,488.00. So the $1,488.00 paid to Frank on the way to the farm was in payment of this particular invoice.

The next one, "Paid to Frank in Chicago, $14,000.00."

The next, "Paid to Mr. Krasne for Mr. Cain, $1,450.00."

You remember Mrs. Krasne, who said that she received a telephone call from Mr. Cain, and he asked her to pick up some jewelry, and that some money would be brought over. I don't remember whether she said Mr. Lubben would bring it or not, but, in any event, she testified that Lubben did bring it, and that she went to the jeweler's, 5125 picked up the jewelry, paid the jeweler the $1400.00 in cash, and brought the jewelry out here and turned it over to Mr. or Mrs. Cain here in Chicago.

Now, that happened around April, as I recall, she said, the early part of 1946, in any event. She was on her way to Palm Springs at the time. This particular settlement sheet reflects payments in March and April and May.

Now, does that indicate to you that this was made up near the time when Mrs. Krasne was paid that $1450.00? Isn't it too much of a coincidence to think that Mr. Lubben would falsify a record like this and put into it an item, "Paid to Mr. Krasne for Mr. Cain $1,450.00," when we can get Mr. Krasne—or Mrs. Krasne it was in this case—to testify that she did actually receive the money at or about that time for the purpose it says on this document she received it.

5126 Here, also, "Paid to Frank by Hankermeyer, $8,450."

And finally, "The balance $8,179, paid to Frank by Heitmann."

Mr. Heitmann was here, too. Mr. Hankermeyer, you remember, is dead. But Mr. Heitmann was here. He worked for Lubben. He testified that he came out to Chicago, and he made two trips to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant. He had this instruction sheet with him at the time, which explains what he has to do. It says, "First pick up $13,037.25 at Youngstown."

You remember Lubben had a customer at Youngstown. He was selling him black market. This was a part of the black market overage Lubben was supposed to collect.

"They owe us $3,037.25. $10,000 is an advance. You will now have $13,037.25, plus two checks for $4,600, or a total of $17,637.25."

Here are the three checks for $2,300, and I will get back to those in just a moment.

5127 "You owe Frank Huebner, $8,179. Pay him."

Mr. Heitmann testified that when he got into town, he took a cab out to the Shotwell Manufacturing plant, because it was a Friday, and he didn't want to carry that much money around with him. So he paid Mr. Huebner the $8,179.

Now, he also owed Eddie Urban, who was another candy manufacturer in town, $2,408, "April advertising allowance". Advertising allowance in this particular case doesn't mean exactly what it says.

"This leaves $7,050.25. Letter of March 25 to Ed Urban. Pay Ed Urban $1,012.50. This leaves $6,038.05. Now pay Frank Huebner the balance of the money, and make him understand that this is partial payment on the West Coast car of chocolates."

And you find that the $8,179 balance here ties in with the $8,179 instruction that he pay—that Mr. Heitmann was to pay Mr. Huebner, and which he paid him on a Friday.

You recall that he went to the bank on Saturday
5128 with Mr. Urban, he got these checks cashed, which then gave him enough money to pay Mr. Urban what he owed him, and he took the balance of it out to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant and he paid it at that time to Mr. Huebner.

"Make him understand this is a partial payment on the West Coast car of chocolates"—which is one of the so-called unbilled shipments.

Now, we come to the checks for $2,300. They are endorsed by Heitmann and by Urban.

Now, you remember there was some defense testimony to the effect that these two checks were shown on the work sheets made by the witness Meyer, as having been used for 25 barrels of syrup—I believe that was it— 25 barrels of chocolate syrup, or something of that sort. And therefore, they could not have been used to pay any overages.

Well, in the first place the Government doesn't contend that this specific $4,600 went to Mr. Huebner. It was a part of the pot, that's all.

5129 You remember at this point he had $17,000.00. He owed Huebner $8,179.00. This was just a part of the money which made up that $17,000.00. This wasn't earmarked for the purpose of paying the overages to Shotwell.

And furthermore, there were five different checks on that work sheet all for $2300.00, all of them described as used for 25 barrels of liquid chocolate or liquid syrup. In the absence of the original records themselves, it is impossible to tell whether the accountant may have made a mistake at the time he made up his work sheets. Those were some of the sheets which were questioned. He could have gone to Miss Feldman and said, "What are these checks for," and she could have said, "$2300.00, that is what we usually pay for 25 barrels of liquid syrup." I don't know, but in any event, no matter how they were recorded on that work sheet, it doesn't change the situation.

Heitmann testified that he paid $8,179.00 to Huebner at this time on a Friday and the next day he went back after he had gotten some checks cashed and he paid him the balance of $6,038.05, which is on one of the cars of 5130 chocolate to the west coast.

And then there was one other piece of corroboration to Lubben's story of these payments. Do you remember, Jimmie Moran who was Lubben's brother-in-law? Moran testified that on one occasion he made a payment of $17,190.25. Do you recall, he said he took that home to his wife because he wanted her to see how big a stack of money $17,000.00 was all in one piece, and that subsequently he took it to Mr. Huebner at the plant office.

I think it was at that time that Mr. Huebner offered him a ten-cent package of marshmallows. There was also some testimony by Mr. Moran that he had cashed four checks for $5,000.00. Where those four checks are, we don't know. You have his testimony to go by.

In any event, that $20,000.00 is not added to the amount of the overage which the Government claims was paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for this period. In other words, that is a piece of evidence which merely tends to corroborate Mr. Lubben's story that such payments 5131 were being made and that it was being made by checks to cash. The fact that we don't have the checks maybe lessens its weight somewhat, but it is still something that you can consider in determining whether Lubben on the whole is telling the truth to you or whether his story isn't the one that ought to be believed.

5132 You also recall that there is further credibility from Mr. Lubben's story and further corroboration in that Mr. Graflund testified that he received money, or that he knew money was being received, Mrs. Morrill, Mr. Roeser—all of them stated that they knew about cash money coming in.

Lubben testified that he gave money to Graflund, and I think there was some disagreement as to the period of time in which that money was given. Lubben said that he was told by Mr. Huebner to take it down to Graflund, and to tell him it was for the corn syrup, and to keep his mouth shut, and not to say anything about the candy overages. Graflund, I believe, said maybe there were sixty or seventy thousand dollars. That's all he knew about it. If there was $450,000, as the Government now contends, the balance of it, Graflund never heard of.

But in any event, the fact that payments were being made at all is corroborated, not only by Lubben's invoices, Lubben's books, Lubben's checks, and Lubben's testi-5133 mony, it is corroborated by Heitmann. It is corroborated by Moran. It is corroborated by Krasne, and it is corroborated by the witnesses who were employees of the defendants themselves, Mr. Roeser, Mr. Graflund, Mrs. Morrill.

And finally, both Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan got on the stand and they admitted that such payments were being received, so I hardly see how it can be doubted that payments were being received, and in view of the evidence which you have seen, I hardly see how it can be doubted that they were being received in the amounts Mr. Lubben says they were being paid over. The corroborative evidence which supports him in every material circumstance is so great that you almost have to conclude that it is absolute fact.

Now, you remember, too, there were some statements—some testimony about those so-called unbilled shipments. When Mr. Lubben went to Mr. Huebner in the early part of 1946 he was just about ready to break up with the partnership, and he wanted to continue doing business, 5134 so Huebner told him he could get him a lot of merchandise; but it would have to be on a cash and no invoice basis.

As a result of that, he got the shipments shown on the bills of lading dated March through August.

Sam—well, I have found that. I have got them. These are not the ordinary bills of lading of the corporation. The ordinary bills of lading for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company have the name printed right in here (indicating), instead of the ABC Candy Shippers, or in some instances, there is the name of the General Confections, Mr. Lubben's outfit.

5135 Now, you will see, too, that here is an item, a cash authorization slip on one of these unbilled shipments showing chocolate sold to McDonald Candy Company, Bill Barron. McDonald, 1,989 cases, and Barron, 70 cases, and there is a cash authorization slip for $27,322.67 and here is the check dated the same day or the next day, rather. That is dated June 17th and the check is dated June 18th for $27,000.00. The difference of $322.67 is shown on here by an accountant's symbol, meaning that there was a journal entry on page 37 of the journal which we don't have and which reflects an adjustment of some sort.

You remember, too, that Mr. Heitmann's testimony was that he paid money to Frank Huebner and this was part of the shipment on the West Coast car of chocolates. And here are numerous West Coast cars of chocolates, McDonald Candy Company, Medford, Oregon—William Barron at Oakland, California.

Here again is another bit of corroboration for Mr. Lubben's testimony. Here is an item showing candy sent from Shotwell. Here is Eatsum receiving ticket showing that the amount was received and that it had to be 5136 Shotwell merchandise that was being shipped.

Now, during this period of time, in the spring of 1946, Lubben was short of cash, so he had to borrow money and you remember, he tried to pay these overages with those checks which had the names cut out. So, he didn't have much money to pay all of the overages plus the amount of the invoice price for these unbilled shipments by cash, so he had to borrow the money and he borrowed it from Urban and you will see that there are checks here which show that amounts were paid in that way.

Stanley Graflund testified that he knew about these shipments, because they kept a perpetual inventory at the plant. A perpetual inventory is a book inventory. It shows how much you manufacture and how much you sell and how much you have on hand at the beginning and at the end of the month. And then, each month they took a physical inventory which was supposed to correspond with the amount of the book inventory and when the man who kept those records came to Graflund and said there is something wrong, the physical inventory is short some carloads of merchandise that we should 5137 have according to the book inventory," why, Graflund took it up with Huebner and Huebner told him at that time the shipments had been made without bills on the orders of Byron Cain. Yet, Cain later testified that he didn't even know about those shipments until he got back from California which was in April. Yet, these shipments were begun in March.

5138 Now, who is telling the truth? Huebner and Cain—or rather, Mr. Cain also says Huebner told him that he had become so desperate for money for corn that he had to make this sort of deal. The defense claims it was without overages. Well, whether it was without overages or not, the shipments were not put on the books. They weren't put on the income tax returns so at least, to the extent of those particular shipments, all of those unbilled shipments shown by the bills of lading, the books and records of the corporation were false in the year 1946. They knew they were false. They knew that what was on the books or what was not on the books would not go on the income tax returns and they could have had only one purpose and that was to evade their income taxes. There could have been no other purpose. There was no conceivable reason for leaving those shipments off the books of the company for any other purpose whatsoever. There was no OPA involved in those shipments, none in the slightest. There was nothing in the world to pre-

5139 vent them from putting it on the books, collecting the money, if they wanted to, by cash or by check. It would have made their income tax returns correct, but they didn't want to do it that way, and I submit, that there was only one purpose that they didn't want to do it and there could only be one purpose. They had cash in the bank at that time. You remember Mr. Busby—no, I guess it was Mr. Sullivan yesterday was saying that—when I showed him the bank statements, he said that there was an average anywhere from three hundred to four hundred thousand dollars on deposit. There was plenty of money. If they wanted to go in the corn market to buy corn, there was plenty of money. They didn't have to get it from Lubben. They weren't forced to go into the black market, if they wanted to do it in an honest way. If they had actually wanted to buy this corn, if there was such a circumstance ever in existence, there were all sorts of means at their disposal, without having to go into the black market with Lubben for that particular purpose and without having to falsify their books by keeping these bills of lading which are different from 5140 those which they usually keep, and by not running those bills through their accounting department so they didn't show up on the books.

5141 And you will also note that Byron Cain testified that the overages of these particular transactions were only three cents, or five cents, to begin with, and then they went up to five, and ten, and finally to 18-3/4 and that they were forced up to 18-3/4 and ten cents, in June, 1946, when the corn situation got so tight that they had to have more money.

Well, I pointed out to you before, but I would like to call it to your attention again; how in the world did Mr. Lubben know that the corn was going to get short in June, 1946, so that he is going to have to pay ten cents, and 18-3/4 cent overages, so that he could get on his records back in January, 1945?

Well, that is not reasonable. The only reasonable answer is that Cain is lying. That is not true about putting a three cent and a five cent overage, and not starting until the fall of 1945. This whole deal began in 1944, just the way Lubben said it began, and it began at ten cents a pound, gum work, and eighteen cents 5142 and a fraction on chocolate; and it started that way.

It stayed that way all the way through. And what the defense is trying to do now is to show you that there was not as much money collected as the Government said was collected, and was collected—was paid out, so that no income—no income tax. That is their whole defense. And I say, it doesn't hold water, because in the first place, this money was being collected during the whole of the two years, 1945 and 1946. It was being collected in the full amount that Mr. Lubben testified he paid to them, and which his books, which we have here, show was paid to them.

And as for the corn market, we are going to hear a great deal about that in just a few minutes, from the defendants, but I am going to ask you one question: You heard a lot of witnesses, and they told you what the market was like in corn, and how short it was, and how the whole candy industry, and everybody else had to go into the black market to buy raw corn in order to get corn syrup. Did you hear one witness testify that one single red cent had been paid by The Shotwell Manu-5143 facturing Company to get such corn? There may be an inference that such a thing was necessary. Maybe such payments were made, but I would also like to bring this to your attention then:

There was something like ninety-three carloads of corn purchased through the efforts of Shotwell by these various corn syrup refiners. I believe it was ninety-three—ninety-six. That is fairly close, anyway. But, assuming that there was an amount paid in overages for ninety-six cars of corn, it would have to amount to a tremendous sum to overcome the $450,000 approximately that the Government claims was paid during this two years. If any of it went out for corn, a much greater amount stayed with the corporation, and its officers.

By the Court: You have about five minutes left.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, sir.

Well, the defense would like to have it appear, in any event, that this is a question of Lubben's credibility and the truthfulness of his books. It isn't a mere question of that. It isn't a question of one man's word, as I have 5144 already pointed out, but that one man's word is corroborated in every material circumstance by somebody else's word, and by the books that he kept. The bookkeeping is corroborated by Lubben's statement, and not only by that, but by the statements of Mr. Berch and Miss Feldman, by Miss Krasne—well, Miss Krasne corroborated not the books, but at least that one particular settlement sheet I showed you.

Heitmann also corroborated them. He corroborated other portions of the settlement sheet I have shown you. Jimmy Moran corroborated them.

5145 Well, let us look at one other indication of guilty conduct or guilty knowledge on the part of Cain and I bring you now to that meeting at the Club Riviera that was testified to fully by Lubben and corroborated in almost every material respect by Davidson and I believe you know that none of the witnesses were permitted in the court room while any of the other witnesses were testifying, so it was impossible for Davidson to have known what Lubben said on the stand. The only reasonable conclusion is that Davidson was telling his story as he knew it. Lubben was telling his story as he knew it and the two of them together were telling the truth.

Mr. Cain and his attorney, Mr. Grace, have to admit that such a meeting was held. But they tried to show that it was of no significance, that Mr. Lubben just wanted to borrow some money and nothing was ever said about Lubben leaving the country.

I ask you, who has the greater reason to lie? Lubben and Davidson, or Cain? For that matter, Grace, who is a lawyer and who would be subject to severe censorship if it were known that he were a party to 5146 such a deal.

As to the blackmail, well, I think that has been so completely discredited that it is hardly worthwhile to mention it. If Mr. Lubben was a blackmailer, he was one of the most unsuccessful in history. He gave 35—he got $75,000.00 for which he gave a mortgage on everything that he had. Mr. Cain admitted that he was well protected, the mortgage was enough to protect his $75,000.00 investment. So, what is blackmail in that?

Lubben next wanted $50,000.00. Cain sent his bookkeeper and his auditor to New Jersey to look over Lubben's books. If you are going to blackmail somebody, are you going to let them audit your books beforehand and decide whether or not you are a good risk? Of course not.

And Cain testified if there had been an indication from Busby that the books showed Lubben was in good financial condition, he might have given him the $50,000.00. He was a free agent. What in the world is blackmail about that?

As for the story that Lubben called up Morley Cramer's office and said, "You are going to give 5147 me $135,000.00", and then Cramer said when he wouldn't take $135,000.00, he went on down, oh, to a lower sum, I believe it was $20,000.00. And when Cramer wouldn't give him $20,000.00, he said, "Let me have two thousand so I can get my books back from Sproull-Scholz." When he said he wouldn't give him two thousand, he said, "Will you make it one thousand then?"

5148 I tell you, I hope he never turns to blackmail for a profession, because he will starve to death, if that is the way he is going to do it.

Well, I have taken a good deal of your time. There are a great many more things that ought to be said, but I have tried to show you what the evidence is as it relates to the issues of the case. We have tried to give you the facts, and not any inferences, not anything fancy. What you have heard from the stand on the Government's side has been the testimony of disinterested third party witnesses, who have nothing to gain or lose in this controversy. What you have seen are the records which were kept by competent, honest people, back in the days before there was ever any thought that this case would come up.

I fail to see how they can be attacked in any way by some subsequent papers which were made by some accountant, from some records which we don't even have in existence here today.

5149 I submit to you, ladies and gentlemen, that the Government has shown you beyond a question of a doubt that this money was paid, that it was paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company through its officers, that it was income to them, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and that when they failed to put it on their books, and failed to put it on their returns, they had only one purpose in mind, and that was to defraud the United States Government, and to cheat and evade the income taxes, and I hope that when you leave, you are going to carry that thought with you.

I know you are going to do your duty, and bring back a verdict of guilty.

Thank you very much.

By the Court: We will take a recess now for ten minutes, members of the jury.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing, please, while the Judge and the Jury leave the courtroom?

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

5150 By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: I think, members of the Jury, that Mr. McConnell is alloted an hour, so if we go over the twelve thirty time, I trust you will be patient with him. He may finish before, but if he has to go over that time, he has been allotted an hour.

By Mr. McConnell: I thought it was an hour and a quarter, your Honor.

By the Court: It may be that it was. I stand corrected, if that was the arrangement.

Thereupon Mr. McConnell addressed the Court and Jury in argument on behalf of the Defendants:

By Mr. McConnell: May it please the Court, and Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

I agree with what Mr. Lockley said about your attentiveness to this case, and the courtesy that we have received in this hearing. And I think we all do.

A lawyer can't say much about a Judge, but I do want to say that I have appreciated appearing before Judge Nordbye. His handling of this case to 5151 me has been almost an inspiration, and I have never appeared in a case in which I could so wholeheartedly say that the whole handling of the proceeding has been simply admirable. I have enjoyed the case, and I have enjoyed being here.

5152 I am not a criminal lawyer and I approach my task with a good deal of responsibility and a feeling of responsibility that perhaps, in handling a case which is out of my line, that maybe I have done something or said something or taken some attitude with reference to the proofs that the jury might not like or might hold against my client. I hope that is not so. If it is so, I hope that you will not hold it against any of the defendants in this case.

I may have passed some of you in the corridor or not spoken to you or perhaps might have been abrupt. If so, I want you to remember that that is because we are all under the injunction of treating you people absolutely as completely and utterly unapproachable in your deliberations of this case and that is the way it ought to be.

Now, Mr. Lockley has taken the position here that this is a simple, a very simple case, free from any extraneous circumstance and that we should just look at some books and records and what we see on those books and records ends the case. I think he said 5153 that the attempt to weigh that evidence—or the effect of what he said was—to cast doubt upon it or to question the motives of those who made the entries in the books, was a smoke screen and outside the issues of this case.

Now, I think we should bear in mind in a case of this kind, and I am not speaking of any legal principles but just principles that you and I as ordinary individuals know, and after all we are dealing here with a task case, and while there is no issue presented here of the civil liability of these defendants, or of the corporation or whether or not they owe or do not owe money on the civil side of the case, nevertheless—and the Government can never get away from it—nevertheless the Government is a creditor and the Government has a tax claim and we are engaged in a criminal prosecution arising out of that alleged liability.

Now, I represent the corporation, as I pointed out at the beginning of this case in my opening statement, and I said there might be some differences when we got through with the proof as between my position and 5154 the other defendants, but as we have gone through these proofs and as we have reached the end of this case, I want the members of this jury to know and I want the prosecution to know—I want everybody in this case to know that I take my stand and stand or fall on the testimony and the evidence of the individual defendants that you heard in this case.

There is no difference from my point of view. There is no difference in my point of view from these individual defendants and I say that with full knowledge that Mr. Lubben has made it appear and has tried to make it appear that the officers of this corporation were lining their pockets with over-ceiling money, dividing the money up into three piles, and I am going to show you why he said that and it follows logically that it is not a Government idea, not at all—it is Mr. Lubben's idea.

You must have seen from the way this case has fallen into a certain posture. You could not have escaped it in the course of these proofs, that in the center of all the proofs going in this direction and that direction

5155 and the other direction, we find the activities of Mr. Lubben in the black market during the OPA days in this country. He was handling large sums of money everywhere. He was handling those sums of money in cash and the question inherent, lying at the bottom of the case—it can't be escaped, it can't be missed, nobody can miss it, nobody can fail to see it—is the question of the credibility of that witness as against the defendants in this case.

5156 These men are threatened with their freedom, these individual defendants. The government is asking that their freedom be taken away and they be put behind prison bars and I have a perfect right and I will not be deterred by any kind of smoke screens, I have a perfect right to stand here before you people and question the credibility of the witness who is going to do that to the defendants.

I have the right under the Constitution of the United States to confront and to cross examine the accuser who wants to take away a person's liberty and confine that person in the penitentiary. And that is no smoke screen.

Mr. Lubben has a set of books. There is no question about that. Mr. Lubben has a set of books, but what do the books show? Where is the proof of the payments that are on those books except by Mr. Lubben? I cross examined Miss Feldman, the bookkeeper. She didn't know of any payments of her own knowledge. She took Mr. Lubben's word for it. She had to. Cash authorization mumbo-jumbo. This document, that document, the other document—I say mumbo-jumbo be-5157 cause it all comes back to Lubben.

I had Mr. Bercu on the stand here. That eulogy about certified public accountants that we heard from Mr. Lockley—their great public spirit, or whatever it was. Well, you took one look at that fellow and you wondered if you had all your money in the right place. Just one look at the fellow, and he was there. Why? He said why. At the very beginning of this thing he saw and Mr. Lubben saw that handling this amount of cash, he was going to be called into account either one, by the United States government as to what he did with it on his own income taxes, or by his partner in partnership, and he was making up what he admitted on cross examination was a self-serving set of books. It was self-serving and he admitted it. You will recall I objected throughout this proceeding to these books and entries on the ground that they were self-serving. You only have a rule that somebody testifies bookkeeping entries were made in the regular course of business and they are accurate and so forth and they may go into evidence, but the weight of those documents, the weight of those records is always for you people on the 5158 jury. Self-serving—why? In an ordinary set of books, you have statements back and forth, transactions on the books, statements, settlements month by month, which automatically check the accuracy of those books. Here we have nothing except Mr. Lubben's word, Mr. Lubben's word that he made these payments. You approach it, as you come at it from this direction, that direction, the other direction. You come back and you can't escape it. You come back to Lubben. And Lubben is corroborated—Lubben is corroborated, counsel says, in all respects Lubben is corroborated. How? By his own record, those that he makes himself. Why shouldn't they corroborate him? And it is pertinent to ask at this time, what records does he have?

5159 Here is General Confections and they come in here with a lot of memoranda, little memoranda typed up, supposedly representing transactions with Shotwell, and there are three books that can check the accuracy of those records, just three books of original entry made at the time—cash payable accounts, I believe it was, purchases account, and there was another one that I can't remember the technical word for.

But, I got Miss Feldman to admit that those three books would check the accuracy of those recap sheets. Where are they? The receiver took the place over from Lubben. The Government had access to anything by subpoena. Where are they? I am going to ask that question again. I am going to ask it in a more pertinent way, a more direct way later on.

Those are the books of original entry which can show whether or not these memoranda sheets are fabricated and whether or not one of the greatest hoaxes that has ever been put over on a jury has been put on in this case, and I am not charging the Government. They have got a witness who sold them something, who sold 5160 them something and sold it right and they have got it. And they are going to try to send our people to the penitentiary with that sort of evidence.

Now, let us see what it is. He is in the black market. Why is he making records of overages? He gets the money out of the bank on cash checks. Now, what does he do with it? Well, always in these cases when you are trying to get at the truth, some little straw falls which shows the way the wind blows. On cross examination of Mr. Lubben, I got an admission from him which he didn't realize at the time was important and I don't think anybody else did either. He was trying to take the position on those three checks that counsel just got through talking about that the reason he was offering those checks was that he had trouble with his partners and he lost access to the corn box but he was telling you people by a slip of the tongue that the money he was talking about didn't come out of his bank account that he was claiming he made these payments with, but is came out of his corn box and he replenished his corn box with these withdrawals, and what hap-5161 pened? There was $400,000.00 in that corn box and Lubben claims he walked off and left the $400,000.00 with the partnership. I don't care whether he did or didn't. If he walked off and left it, that is where it is, with Giglio, his partner, and if he got it, he got it. $85,000.00 went out of that place on the farm. We had testimony here that fake invoices were sent in covering no goods and money was paid out on them. There was no impeachment of that testimony. What kind of a bookkeeping record is that? What kind of a record is that where they put on the books and records of a company transactions which never occur and they give the money back to the company and a man takes out a commission for cash in a check. Now, what kind of a bookkeeping record is that?

5162 And we had Mr. Meyer come in here who worked on these books seven years ago when the records were intact, when nobody had a chance to do anything to those bookkeeping records. He worked on them and he saw them at that time and he asked for explanations for those cash entries and no recap sheet showed up then, not one, and he showed by entries which were made on the books, that the recap sheets were wrong, that the money went somewhere else, and he gave the exact statement of the account from his work sheet made seven years ago, when it had the accuracy of having the documents available at that time. I don't know how you could impeach a man's proof any better than that, and we haven't any books, we have no books from the partnership. You have the little recap sheets. Anybody could make them up overnight. You don't need a bookkeeping system. You don't need anything. All you need is a typewriter and a piece of paper and that's all, and anybody can make their books correspond to events that he wants to assert.

If he wants to account for cash checks, he can account for them with that kind of a bookkeeping sys-5163 tem. Anybody can do it that can write, anybody can do it that can type. And when you get all through analyzing and talking about the recap sheets and cash authorizations and this and that and the other thing and the books are gone and we can't check them—that is, the partnership books can't be produced here because his partners are under criminal indictment down there—they are his partners, they are not ours. That little fellow that came in here that Mr. Lockley showed had been convicted of perjury, who was he? Ronald Stone, a partner of Lubben. Not our people. He was his playmate down there in that concern. A fine situation. He said Lubben is no plaster saint. That is the understatement of this trial.

Now, I want to come to something a little more intimate and I want you people to understand when I say this that I am saying it in all sincerity and that I am not attacking anybody's religious beliefs because I have lived in a Methodist parsonage all during my up-bringing—Lubben came in here and he said that he had a conversation with Mr. Sullivan and that he had a conversaion with Mr. Cain and he had a conversation 5164 with Mr. Huebner about those three checks which Mr. Lockley just showed you with the names cut out and he told him that he hadn't any access to the corn box any more because of a row he had with his partners and he tendered the checks and I think he said that Mr. Sullivan told him that he wanted the cash because he didn't want to pay the taxes and he wanted to use the money on his driveway, or words to that effect.

5165 Now, at the time the Government had in its possession the expense account of these defendants, which show their traveling allowance. And those expense accounts show that Mr. Cain at that time was out on the Pacific Coast, and couldn't possibly have had that conversation.

And Mr. Lubben comes into this courtroom the next day, after giving that testimony, and he says that he had asked the guidance of the deity in changing his testimony, and he changed the date. He changed the date which unimpeachable evidence would have shown to be false.

Now, I can draw inferences, too. I say that that testimony was not only perjury, I say it was blasphemy, bringing into the deliberations the jury room, the inference that he was in communion with the diety over the testimony he is giving in this case, and correcting a date which he knows he will be impeached on if he comes back here with it, and we have a chance to cross examine on it.

It is the only inference you can draw. The man 5166 was reaching into the jury box, attempting to reach the most sacred attitudes and views of the Jury, in dealing with this situation, to prejudice your deliberations in his favor, and make it appear that his testimony was blessed of God.

And I say that with all sincerity. I wouldn't say a word against a man's religious belief of any kind, character, or description, if I had any thought that it was sincere. But if you think back on that incident you must know in your hearts that it was not sincere, that it was meant to muddy up the very well springs of your consideration of this matter.

Another instance—when he turned and referred to Mr. Cain as many times a millionnaire, in an attempt to prejudice you because of wealth, or his assertion of wealth.

We were faced in this case with a consummate witness, if you take the view that a man has to be destroyed on the witness stand in order for you people to judge whether or not he is telling the truth. We were faced in this case by a confidence man, and a blackmailer.
5167 And I will show you why, and how.

Let's go to that incident down there in Hillsdale, on the porch, where poor Mr. Huebner comes in there, and he wants to get the records. And it was the basis of the Haberkorn deal. Nobody can view and remember that testimony and come to any other consideration, that they were selling him a sealed envelope, sealed and written on. The old confidence game property.

And either he had or he did later make photostats, so he could sell the same documents again. And the documents were turned over to our people, when they got back the mortgage that Mr. Lubben had given on his property.

And Mr. Lockley said if he was a blackmailer, he would starve to death. He wouldn't starve to death as a blackmailer. He got $75,000.00. He gave a mortgage. He got the mortgage back. He didn't give anything to get the mortgage back.

His company went through receivership. His man Dane came in and told how he bought it back for $10,000, turned it over to Nubbel, Lubben's com-5168 pany, for a share of qualifying stock. Back it goes into his corporation, free of his creditors, free of the mortgage, the mortgage in the hands of his sister. That is pretty good. I think he did all right. He didn't pay any tax on that transaction, I am sure. It looked to me like he was doing all right in that deal.

5169 Anyway, I am not concerned about whether or not he was a good or bad blackmailer in that case. I am concerned, and only concerned in that proof, about the attitude of mind that he put the people that were in control of my company in, in dealing with this situation. And I am going to say at the outset, if they had gone to a competent, able, civil lawyer, not a tax lawyer, or anything else, they never would have been in this mess and they never would have made any disclosures, and they never would have had any of this situation that they are confronted with now, in my opinion.

What did they do? Mr. Sullivan went down there in response to a blackmail claim, and he was shown these recap sheets, which he knew were false, he said were faked, and the evidence now shows were faked. They had to be faked because they aren't on the original books. And they were faked, and he knew they were faked, and he knew he was up against one of the best con men in the country. And he knew, and he had enough imagination to know, that the man would make a wonderful 5170 witness, as he has in this court, and he would have his documents and the Government would believe him.

And Lubben talked himself right out of any tax claim against himself. Everybody else is indicted that ever dealt with him. And he knows it. And we were.

And Mr. Sullivan saw that, and Mr. Sullivan saw that discretion might be the better part of valor. And the Haberkorn deal was made, as he said, to try and get him out of his hair.

Now, I am not justifying—and I don't say he should have done it. I don't believe he should have done it, and I think it was a very foolish thing to have done, but I am trying to get across to you the state of mind of my people in dealing with the situation, and in dealing with Lubben, and in dealing, in subsequent dealings, with the United States Government, under blackmail, under coercion of blackmail.

5171 It shows it. He says they made loans. Surplus security. They weren't in the banking business. Anybody listening to that testimony—bring to the jury room here the common sense you have in ordinary affairs—must know that that was a coerced transaction.

And these men were men of standing in the community. Their reputations were involved. Tax investigation men going to all the customers, 16,000 customers, and ruining their business. It wasn't a question of guilt or innocence. It was a question of dealing with a problem, a practical problem which they had before them to deal with.

And I might have done differently. You might have done differently. But that is what they did. And I am interested in it only to show that the things that they did were not the things that a person not under that sort of coercion would have done.

Now, let's go back for a moment. Mr. Lockley says, "Oh, it is all corroborated, back to the very beginning."

This is the funniest tax evasion case I ever saw.
5172 Everybody out at Shotwell knew about this. Graflund, Roeser, Morrill, Ericson. Everybody in the plant.

Now he is going to have you believe that there was something secretive, that nobody knew anything about. But the corroboration of the defense testimony is this, that nobody knew a single thing about it until October of 1945 when the corn shortage started. That is the only time they knew anything about it. Graflund didn't know anything about it prior to that time. When I asked if it was two, three, four hundred thousand dollars that was involved, he thought it was ridiculous. Morrill said seventy or eighty thousand dollars, Graflund said seventy or eighty thousand, during that period of time, spent to buy corn.

And I am not going to spend any time developing the theme. The other lawyers will. You have heard enough about corn. But those were Government witnesses, brought here by the Government itself. And they corroborate exactly the period of time in which these transactions took place. And Mr. Lubben has tacked onto the accounts of these people hundred of thousands of dollars, of 5173 which there is no corroboration whatever out there at the plant of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. The Government's witnesses destroy that corroboration when they limit the period of time to the time that Mr. Cain testified to in this case.

5174 Now Mr. Graflund, a Government witness was accused by Lubben of receiving payments in 1946, after this period of time. Now, Mr. Lubben was quite specific about that, and one of the tests of whether or not a witness tells the truth is the little flourishes, and little furbishings that they put upon a story. A true story needs none of that.

And Mr. Lubben testified that every single payment he made, he made in cash, and he made it to Uhlmer, and it was divided into three piles, and one was taken off for the horses, and the rest—oh, he had the money all over him there, at one time, in different pockets.

But the one transaction that he said didn't happen that way was with Graflund; out at the plant, in 1946. And there was some—$49,000. He was quite specific about it. You remember.

He was told by Huebner to go down and not say anything about the candy, keep that quiet, but to tell him the payment was on corn syrup.

5175 Now, this is the man that the Government is relying on in this case. And Mr. Graflund said he only had one conversation—took one payment in 1945, and he had no such conversation. And Mr. Graflund is a Government witness, sponsored by the Government, brought here as part of their case.

Now, both those men are not telling the truth. One had to lie about it. And I don't think there is any question at all but what the testimony of Mr. Lubben is false.

Counsel sloughed off those four $5,000 checks—a little occurrence he wished he never had heard of. And I think he is well advised, that he never heard of that one. Four $5,000 cash checks out to the Mid City Bank. And we brought the officers in, and if they had a record of the checks, and if they had been cashed, they would have been there on the records—it wasn't there. It didn't happen. It just didn't happen.

But Moran said that it happened. Moran gave you details of how it happened. I think he went out and 5176 got a box of candy. Little flourishes on the testimony. And it never happened.

Now, if those things didn't happen, and that proof is not necessary in this case, why is it here? Why do we have to have that kind of testimony? Why do we have to have that testimony, if it isn't true? And we can prove it, and show you that it isn't true.

Why do we have to have it, to put these people in the penitentiary? And you should ask yourself that question: If none of this testimony is necessary, why is it here? We didn't bring it in. The Government brought it in to sustain this claim.

5177 Well, what other corroboration is there that Mr. Lubben paid the money, except his own word? That is all.

And he had the motive, exactly the same motive, as any defendant in this case would have, to distort the truth. If he couldn't show it went somewhere else, he was accountable for it on his income tax and accountable to his partnership for it. And he had worked out this arrangement with Bercu in order to give the apparent appearance of a bookkeeping record, which Bercu himself said was self-serving. Self-serving to whom, I ask. To the corporation? No, to Lubben. That was who was interested in it, Lubben.

Well, there was $400,000.00 that went out somewhere on these cash checks, that went into the cash box, that got back to Giglio, according to him. We haven't got the books. We can't show where it goes.

Now, what does all this lead up to? What it leads up to is this: This is a criminal case. In a civil case we have the right to trace all these funds and find out where all this money went to determine whether or 5178 not this money did go to him. We can't go and get those records. We are under criminal indictment. Our hands are tied with reference to it.

The issues are narrow. We are not trying Mr. Lubben. No, we are not trying Mr. Lubben, but we are questioning his credibility, the accuracy of his records, and the accuracy of his testimony in this case. And we have a perfect right to so do.

Now, Mrs. Morrill was produced here as a witness in this case. And Mrs. Morrill kept thi. corn box out there at the plant. And Mrs. Morrill testified—and she was a Government witness—Mrs. Morrill testified unequivocally, in no uncertain terms, that every cent of money that came in to that box, which she handled, went out for corn or raw materials.

And the testimony was, too, from Mr. Cain, that Mr. Lubben set this thing up in a manner whereby these overages could be used in this period of time with which to buy corn.

And I am talking now about the intent of the people who were dealing with that out there. If they had 5179 known that, and we could assume that they did—and Mr. Roeser testified here, he is an accountant, he was comptroller, he testified here that he wouldn't have put it on the books in the company. Why? Because it was money coming in from Lubben and going out for Lubben's purposes. It bought corn with which to buy corn syrup with which to supply Lubben's account.

And that is why I said in the first instance, if they had gone to competent counsel in the first place, been able to get the facts, and so forth, properly analyzed, there wouldn't have been even an OPA violation, in the context in which Lubben was operating and in which Mr. Cain testified.

5180 Now, counsel says, "Why, they had all this money in the bank. Why not take it out of the bank?"

Well, officers who take money out of the bank, without charging it to an account, or having an account to take it from, they go to jail.

That is one reason.

You don't take money out of a corporation's trust funds. That money belonged to the stockholders of this corporation. And you have got to have an account to charge it to. And you can't just take money out of a corporation and apply it anywhere you please, particularly in black marketing transactions, if that was a transaction, and charge it against your other stockholders.

Further, the books and records show that they paid, also, $300,000 in taxes to the Federal Government, for which reserves had to be set up.

The mere fact that they have got cash in the bank without taking into account the liability and the charges 5181 against it, doesn't show any such thing as counsel would have you people believe.

Now, we get to something that is very close to me, in my view of this case, and a thing that I feel very deeply and very seriously about. And I think it raises the problem—and I think it raises a question probably that goes beyond, 'way beyond the rights of these litigants, and the particular single issue that is involved in this case.

There is evidence here that there was a disclosure policy of the United States Government which invited those who thought they had done wrong to come in and make a disclosure.

And pursuant to that, Cain, as an officer of this company, came in with statements which we have shown were not true, and couldn't have been true, and were taken upon the largest possible claim that Mr. Lubben could possibly make in this situation.

The old jingle—"Come into my parlor, said the spider to the fly"—enticing you into a situation like that, where you are helpless.

5182 This case is tried after these people have come in, in good faith, and bared everything that they could possibly claim against them, and admitting things that weren't true in order to get a tax difficulty settled, and then to have the Government turn around and say, "No, you are indicted. We will take everything you gave us. We will take all your disclosures. We will take your proofs, and we will turn around and send you to the penitentiary on them."

Now, I say that it is something that weighs deeply with me, because I am ashamed to see my Government take that position with reference to anybody. And if they can do it here, the implications are tremendous. We have Constitutional rights in this country. We have rights against unlawful searches and seizures. We have gone to great lengths to work those things out, to protect litigants. And then the Government invites you in on a promise of immunity, to take your evidence, to take everything you could claim against yourself, and against your corporation, and against the people, and then turns around 5183 and uses it against you.

I say that that is not American, and I say that is a very, very, very real issue in this case, as to whether or not this Jury is going to take that kind of proof and give it any consideration whatever in this situation.

If that isn't an issue, if that isn't a real issue, if that isn't a big issue, if that isn't an issue where the Government stands thus, using that thing, I say it is a shame. I say it shouldn't be.

And the only persons that can stop it is a Jury. That is all.

5184 When these things happen—the genius of our law, the genius of it, that a jury stands between the ordinary citizen and his Government, and I, as a lawyer, have a right to stand here and charge the Government before the jury, and assert these things in favor of the humblest citizen in this land, and the jury is the one that stands between that sort of thing and the result of it. And that is the only difference between what happens in this country and what happens in other countries.

My corporation is not a sinner. Sinned against, yes. Saddled with $101,000.00 in the Haberkorn deal, had admissions made against us under this immunity thing which we find difficult to meet, no chance to readily litigate our civil tax liability, standing here with a threat of criminal prosecution over our officers' heads, I say that is not the way to collect the taxes in this country, no matter how much this Government needs money. That is not the way to do it.

And you are not going to get away from that issue by coming in here with a little act of bookkeeping entries and saying, "A, B, C, D, E—there it is," on Lubben's work papers.

5185 Now, I want to say one thing for one of these defendants and then I am through. I haven't used my hour and fifteen minutes.

I don't represent Harold Sullivan. But I am a lawyer and I know what lawyers have to meet. There is more prejudice against the legal profession, I suppose, than any other profession in the world. And, it may be justified. I don't know.

But a lawyer in a lawsuit has a terrific disadvantage. It is almost impossible for a lawyer to receive the treatment that an ordinary litigant receives in litigation.

There is nothing that Harold Sullivan has done in this case, as I have sat here and listened to this evidence, that any lawyer in the city of Chicago might not have done just as well. And the Government is not only seeking a tax claim. If the Government wins this case that man is defrocked, he has lost his license to practice, he has lost the most precious thing in this world. He has lost the right to practice law. And there is nothing more precious, nothing. No money can buy that right.

Maybe he was foolish. Maybe he should have done
5186 this or done that. He is our officer. He is our corporate officer. We have independent stockholders and we stand behind him. We don't think he did anything criminal at all here, not one thing.

And I can't believe when the scales of justice are viewed by you, where you are weighing guilt and innocence of these individual defendants, as well as of the corporation, where you are taking them from their families—you are destroying the man's reputation, his life, this is a death sentence for Mr. Sullivan, if he is convicted—when you are weighing the evidence in the scales of justice, remember we have in one scale a preponderance, the presumption of innocence, and they must prove this case beyond a reasonable doubt, that weight should go in the scale.

And another thing should go in the scale. The old picture of justice is that of the Goddess of Justice holding scales in her hand, with a blindfold.

And if you have seen perjury going into one of these scales, if you have seen it, if you have seen it here, you can adjust these scales, in the measure of your justice, 5187 in your jury room.

And in leaving this case I want to leave this thought with you. You have seen Lubben. You have seen his compatriots. You have seen the people he dealt with. You have seen the nature of his business.

5188 I just want to leave this thought with you. With all your responsibilities here, you are going to have to live with this case the rest of your lives, and you have got to live with yourselves, and your own conscience. And I will just say this, I would hate to go to my little child's bed with the idea that I had sent Harold Sullivan, or Byron Cain or Frank Huebner to the penitentiary on the testimony of David G. Lubben.

I submit, while it is impossible to demonstrate it to a legal certainty, mathematical certainty in an argument of this kind. I submit that on all the evidence there is no evidence that these people deliberately, with wilful intent set out to defraud the Government of income tax. They didn't do it. They did foolish things. Sometimes, as I see what they have done, I think maybe they should have been tried on a lunacy charge, but not with the intent to evade Federal income tax.

And I submit, on this record, that not only the corporation, but all of these defendants should be acquitted.

Thank you very much.

5189 By the Court: We will be in recess now, members of the jury, until two o'clock this afternoon.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain seated while the Judge and the jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Wednesday, October 14, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Wednesday, October 14, 1953
2:00 o'clock p.m.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Kirby: As I am to understand it, I am to go one hour. I may run over a little, in which case, Mr.
5191 O'Brien will relinquish his time.

And thereupon Mr. Kirby addressed the Court and jury in argument on behalf of the defendants:

By Mr. Kirby: May it please the Court, and Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

Today we are having the arguments of counsel on the case. Tomorrow we will have a day off, and then Friday, the Judge from his experience, and from his impartial position in the case, will give you instructions.

I want to confine myself to precisely within the bounds of what I consider to be the instructions which you will be given by the Court, and in no instance do I plan to go beyond the exact and the precise rules of law which you will hear from the Judge on Friday.

Now, one of the first instructions that I want to call to your attention, will be given to you substantially as follows:

The question of the civil liability of the Shotwell corporation for taxes, is not in this case at all. You will be 5192 instructed that what you find by way of your verdict will not have the slightest effect one way or another, on whether the Government will or will not collect one dollar.

You will be instructed that the only thing you are concerned with is whether the defendants had a personal, and a malicious and a criminal intent. That is to say, you aren't concerned with the collection of the revenue of the Government at all. You are only concerned with a tentative proceeding, only a tentative proceeding.

Now, that the Court will instruct you.

I might say in passing, that on the question of a civil collection of its cases, the truth is plain, that the corporation has offered to pay whatever amount is submitted to it by way of a bill, and pay it in advance, and then pursue the normal course of litigation with respect to the propriety of the charges against them, and deductions against them, and I will tell you that this corporation certainly has the money to pay any bill that could be presented to it.

5193 So that that question of the collection of the taxes is not in the case. What you have in this case is a question of whether you can find that these defendants had a criminal, a knowing, a wilful intent to be criminals with respect to the tax laws, and the Court will instruct you and I beg your closest attention to this when you hear the Court read it to you, that before you can convict, you have to find, as a matter of fact, and beyond all reasonable doubt, not that there is a dispute about the collection of taxes at all, but that these men knowingly set out and planned and intentionally schemed to defraud the Government of taxes due to it with the malicious, with the malignant, with the wilful purpose—and if you don't believe that, and if you don't believe that beyond all reasonable doubt and if you don't believe that to the exclusion of every possible hypothesis, that what they did maybe they did in the course of business without a malignant intent to defeat the Government's revenue, you must acquit and the Court will tell you that.

Now, viewed in that light, the issue you must decide 5194 here—I want to pass now to what I conceive will be the instruction given to you by the Court as to how you should weigh and how you should charge the evidence. Whom are you to believe? Whom may you disbelieve?

What are the rules that will be given to you? Well, one of the rules that will be given to you, in substance, is this: That if you believe that any witness in this case has wilfully told a lie on the stand about any matter material to the issues, you may disregard that witness's testimony in its entirety, except as you may find it corroborated by others.

Now, applied to Lubben, for example—you could apply it to other witnesses, but I am going to key it to him for a moment. That instruction of the Court is going to mean this to you: That if I can demonstrate to you here or if you already have a conviction in your mind that Lubben lied on any material matter in the case, you don't have to send these people to prison simply because Lubben got up and said many things. You can say, "We will not believe that man at all except in so far as he is corrobor-5195 ated."

On the search for corroboration, I have my brother Lockley's word about where I may look. I may look at Jimmie Moran and Heitmann and I am going to look at them, but absent corroboration that convinces you, you may disregard Lubben's entire testimony if you think it is false.

5196 Another thing which the Court will tell you, which is a part of our great tradition of the law, is that so far as documents or books or memoranda are concerned, you can apply the same test there.

The Court will instruct you that if you believe any of these books and records have been falsified or are untrue, you may disregard the memoranda in their entirety except as there is other corroboration. And cross examination after cross examination proved there is no corroboration for those books whatever, except Lubben's word.

So, to take an example, they have some pieces of papers here that I am going to talk about and if you think we have been able by the evidence to demonstrate to you the falsity in any material respect of any of those documents, the Court will instruct you that you are at liberty to disregard all of them as false—all of them as false, and this is a criminal trial. This is a punitive proceeding. This is not a tax collection proceeding and you must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt and to the exclu-

5197 sion of every reasonable hypothesis that these people are guilty of precisely what they are charged with or—I don't demand it of you, but I tell you that the Court will instruct you you must find them innocent.

We lawyers live the heartbreaks of a court room, We know the cruelty inherent in a criminal trial when we stand and fight for your life. But we also know that a day comes when a judge will tell you those rules of law and we also know that a day comes when we can go down the evidence with you and ask your judgment as to whether we have not shown there are instances of falsity which require you to give the defendants that presumption of innocence and acquittal.

5198 I would like the jury to appreciate that this is a case which involves claims by Mr. Lubben of some four hundred thousand or more undefined dollars, and I would like the Jury to notice that I hold in my hand the documents on which he must stand or fall, because those are the pieces of paper, those pieces of paper, on which his whole story depends.

My brother Lockley fled in his argument from strength, and he went over here and with quite marked charm, opened these books. These are from the proprietorship, and he would take a check and he would say, "It is in the book". He would say, "Because he put it in the book, he was trying to be honest; because it is in a book like that, and because I can show it to you, you can believe it."

The inference, I assume, is that if it wasn't in the book, you shouldn't believe it. That is the inference.

My brother Lockley stopped walking up to here, in his talk, as he ran out of books. For all the rest of the case, after a short period in the first few months, there are 5199 no books. There is nothing more, this is all there is. There is nothing but this kind of stuff.

Now, what about the books in the first period, the proprietorship period?

Mr. Lockley pointed out to you, he took these invoices and he said, "You see this invoice, you see they marked it up."

Let me tell you that in the partnership period, and in the General Confections period, which are the important periods here, that type of proof does not exist because Feldman, Lubben, Berch, Hausman, they all testified they didn't do that.

If doing that is an indication they are trying to keep books, I submit, their failure to do it in the critical periods of this case is an indication that you cannot rely in those periods.

Another thing Mr. Lockley said was: "Here it is in the accounts payable book." Where is the accounts payable book of General Confections? Lubben had it. He had it. Nobody else had it. It was just Lubben, and 5200 he had the power to throw it away, burn it up, or hide it. It would prove or disprove, but it isn't here.

My brother Lockley walked up and showed you cash purchases. That was for just a little while. Where are the rest of them? Where are they for General Confections? They aren't there.

Lockley showed you the accounts payable—I mean, the cash disbursements book for just a little while. Where is the rest of it? It isn't here. No, it isn't here, but the affirmative proof is that they did not post any Shotwell matters to those books when they did have the books.

Now, the question is asked whether Mr. Lubben would have posted a given amount to the books at an early stage, when that is the same amount which appears later on, when he is talking about the difference in rates per pound. Well, Mr. Lubben gave an affidavit to the Government, and we asked about them—we asked him about it, at page 1412 of the record, and he admitted that he gave an
5201 affidavit to the Government, in which he said the price was this, at the beginning, and he named the same five and eight cents a pound. He said that. It is right in the record at page 1412. They can open the same books I can. Why has he got it marked up some other way?

5202 Well, let me go back for a second to these books in the proprietorship period. When Miss Feldman was a witness on the stand, I asked her whether the effect of doing what Mr. Lockley outlined, the marking up of the invoice and putting it in the accounts—in the purchases book and then in the accounts payable book and then in the disbursements book at the larger figure, whether that didn't have the effect of building up higher charges on the books than could otherwise have been put there, and she said, "Yes." I said, "So when you got that amount of money piled up on the books, you could take out not the smaller amount which is invoiced, but the larger amount?" And she said, "Yes, you can take out more out of your business. You can get more money out of it by posting more than you could if you posted the invoice amount."

And I asked her, "How did you take it out?" And she said, "This went to the supplier and this was the check to Lubben to cash."

In other words, he says, "Why would he post his books up like that?" Why would he? I asked Miss Feldman the effect of it and she said the effect of it was just 5203 as I described, that he was building up a large amount on his books so he could take it out in two checks, one to himself in cash. Now, that would be a simple thing.

Let us just take an example. One of you jurors works for Western Electric. Suppose Western Electric was shipping to Mr. Lubben in San Juan, Puerto Rico—not today because he is around here, but suppose they were shipping down to him and an invoice came down to him. He could take that invoice of Western Electric and mark it up. It is the easiest thing in the world to do. He has a purchase book there. He could tell the girl to put it in for the marked up amount. It is not difficult at all. Is there anybody from Western Electric standing and seeing him do it? He is a completely independent agent. He can do anything he wants. He says, "Now charge it against them in that larger amount." He can do that. There is nothing difficult about that at all. Then he can draw two checks. One of them he will mail to Western Electric for the smaller amount, the other one he will take to a bank 5204 in San Juan, Puerto Rico, get the money and put it in his pocket and then insist from then on he gave that money to somebody at Western Electric and he can do it.

5205 Now, Western Electric, let us say, is too big to touch, but you people on the jury aren't all too big to touch and your people's people aren't all too big to touch and God help you if they ever have to come and defend themselves at a time like that, and when they have to defend themselves, the lawyer is weak but the jury is strong. And they could do that. Some of you people have families in business. It could be done to you time after time after time.

And what did Bercu say about it? Bercu said, and he is the fellow that was telling about how they had this system all built up, Bercu said even that early—and I will read what he said. He was very much concerned with the question of his, that is, Lubben's ability of being able to prove to the Revenue Department in case of an examination that he, that is, Lubben, had actually paid out the amounts and hadn't merrily pocketed them, so he was worrying about who he could say was pocketing them and he was taking steps to protect himself.

Now, in that period, when he was posting every single item as if he had paid an overage on it, there was an 5206 interesting transaction which took place about which Mr. Lubben was caught, I think, in a demonsfrable falsehood. Lubben had testified that he had paid a certain $20,000.00 and he said he paid it to get Cardinal chocolates started coming to him. It was a pump priming $20,000.00 because he said Cardinal chocolates were very desirable and he wanted to get them started to him.

I took some invoices and an adding machine tape and on cross examination made him admit that in the spring of 1945 before he ever paid that $20,000.00 at all, he had secured 60 tons of Cardinal chocolates already from Shotwell.

Now, that means if the first payment he made to get Cardinal chocolates was that $20,000.00 payment and if that 60 tons of Cardinal chocolates came before he made that payment, that he was not paying overage on Cardinal chocolates before that twenty thousand, but he had every pound of it posted up on that sacred 18⅔ cents a pound, every pound of it, and that is false too, and I will tell you why.

There is a United Chocolate Refiners Company
5207 in Mansfield, Massachusetts, and Lubben took Cain and Huebner to see Augie Nelson, their sales manager, and made arrangements under which United Chocolate Refiners shipped two cars of 55,000 pounds chocolate each, or 110,000 pounds of chocolate to Shotwell early in 1945 and it was one of those trade deals. United was a subsidiary of the United Drug Company, United Cigars. The deal was 110,000 pounds of solid chocolate to go to Shotwell. Shotwell would ship at ceiling, that they got the ceiling and Shotwell would ship to Lubben at ceiling 120,000 pounds of coated chocolate

That isn't a solid chocolate. It has a filling. They aren't giving him back all the chocolate, of course. They are just giving him back a part of it. And then Lubben was in a position to sell that to United Cigar Stores.

Now, when chocolate was hard to get, Lubben had testified he did make trade deals for Shotwell on chocolate. He had testified that he got it and there was no overage at all, and this is the biggest one of all put on those books—he charged Shotwell an overage as if it was paid out in cash.

5208 Now, I don't know whether he had to pay any overage out in cash to anybody else, Angie Nelson, or anybody else, I can't tell you, but he himself testified he never paid any overage on chocolates to Shotwell before that twenty thousand pump priming operation, and he already had 60 tons which now on his books he claims he paid 18⅔ cents a pound on. How can you believe him?

And there was a witness by the name of Wellington Cramer—Morley. Cramer, a great big, honorable fellow, and Morley Cramer came here and testified that Lubben told him that in the early '45 days, when they were up in Boston, Lubben came and said, "I just got two cars of chocolate from Angie Nelson for the Shotwell people." Now, it ties in just as tight as can be that he admitted, himself, Lubben did, that he took these fellows to Angie Nelson. He testified to that, Cramer testified Lubben told him, "I got two cars of chocolate from Angie Nelson." Cain testified about what the deal was. Lubben testified the first overage he paid on chocolate was the twenty 5209 thousand dollars which he paid in June. All this other is in March, April and May.

Now, that twenty thousand dollar check, incidentally, is one of the items which Mr. Lockley called to your attention this morning as being such unimpeachable verity, as it would sustain a conviction.

Now, one of the things that we tried to do here in the case, and I personally am not too sure we have succeeded very well, we have tried to show you by such evidence as we can get from the accountant's work papers, having in mind that when accountants are working on books, they transcribe a lot of things that they see, so they are not too pretty a paper—they are handwritten, and so on—but they are made up at the time, and they show what was seen at the time, see?

Now, one of the papers that did go into evidence, and it is from a period when these books were showing that these checks were going to suppliers, and not to Lubben, not to his pocket, and not to a cash box at all—one of them was a currency income account which is Exhibit 5210 31 for the defense, and it shows, one, two, three, four, five, six suppliers, as against whom there are charges on the books that they got the money; but you can see that the checks went right straight into the cash box—the cash box being another word for Lubben's pocket.

Now, while we are on the subject of that cash box, and while we have been shown the sheets that indicate there was such a cash box, let me remind you that Lubben testified there was no such thing as a cash box, in the proprietorship period, no, sir. So, we brought in a little fellow by the name of Stone, Ronny Stone. The Government brought out that Ronny who was anything but an attractive character in my book, was a man who had pled guilty to perjury, and they did not cross examine Stone about a single word of his testimony. It apparently was sufficient to them that Stone was a bad character by reason of something that happened on a bail bond, some years ago.

Well, whose bad character is he? He is Lubben's. 5211 Lubben testified here that Stone, in the partnership deal was on his side. He was his fellow. Stone testified he was with Lubben for a period of two years.

And we had sheet after sheet in Lubben's own handwriting, with Ronny Stone's name written out as handling this money in the cash box. So, whose fellow is he? He is Lubben's.

5212 And I am reminded of a little story. I ran into a fellow here in town. I never did represent him but I met him and I said to him, "For God's sake, how did you happen to hire that lawyer?"

"Well," he said, "I have always been in kind of bad businesses and when I came to Chicago and I hooked up with this partner of mine, he said to me, 'Well, this is going to be a crooked business so the first thing we need is a kinky lawyer.'"

Stone may be a kinky lawyer, but he is Lubben's kinky lawyer. He is the kind of fellow Lubben wanted around and kept around.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to Mr. Kirby's statement. Mr. Stone is not Mr. Lubben's lawyer and you are misstating the testimony.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, he was disbarred by that time so I guess that he wasn't formally acting as a lawyer. He testified he was buying sugar ration certificates without the sugar—or rather, he testified that he was buying sugar without the sugar rationing stamps. Incidentally, Lub-
5213 ben denied that that happened. First he said it happened once and then I showed him sheets in his own handwriting and he admitted it happened several times, and finally he said, "Well, maybe several times."

So that Stone came in here and gave the lie to Lubben from his own knowledge of what took place. Now then, I want to go to certain of the specific transactions as to which Mr. Lockley went into when he got down to this type of proof, and this is the type of proof that exists for the greater, greater portion of the trial, and it is the only type of proof that exists for the critical period between the fall of 1945 and the summer of 1946.

5214 Now, the first item that he talked about was a check for $35,536.00. Lubben testified that that money went to Shotwell. We put on Meyer, the accountant, and Meyer had a notation as to that $35,536.00 and he said it was charged to Fatsum.

There was an argument between Mr. Lockley and himself, but Meyer insisted that the story that Lubben is telling here from the stand today was not told to him then. And if Lubben had told him that story then it would have been posted differently than it was.

Now, Mr. Lubben now comes in and he says it was paid on some overages in connection with Shotwell deals. And what is his proof? This is his proof. He has got a sheet—let me go through this, and back up just a little more, because these two connect together—this is the sheet, this exhibit here, 14-C, which Mr. Lockley said tied into those three checks with the holes in them.

Then he said, "Well, they didn't pay that forty-one thousand, so they carried it forward on to this, and they added some more to it, and they got a total of $43,071.30."

So then what does that fit? Now, what they are 5215 trying to fit is this check for $35,536.00, the one that is in such serious disrepute. I don't find it here right now.

Now, $35,536.00 doesn't fit $43,071.30 at all. So what does Lockley say? He says, "They subtracted $7,535.30." He said, "For what reason, I do not know." He said he didn't know. They subtracted it to get $35,536.00.

Now, as far as I am concerned, it is just as reasonable to say that they wanted to lay this $35,536.00 off on Shotwell. So they took this sheet and they just subtracted until they got an even figure and said, "That is money that went to Shotwell."

But the trouble is that when they were trying to explain these checks to their accountants they didn't have that piece of paper. It didn't exist. He was asking them for it and he said it did not exist.

So he posted it to Eatsum, which is where it belonged.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, Mr. Kirby, I am afraid I have to correct you again on your recollection of the facts.

It was not that it did not exist, it was that he did not 5216 see it. There is a considerable difference.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, that poses an interesting question in the case. If he asks for it ten times and they didn't show it to him, Mr. Lockley wants to argue it existed—if he plagued the man about $35,536.00—a not inconsiderable sum—Mr. Lockley wants us to believe Lubben could have given an explanation, because it existed, but he didn't want to. And he doesn't want to argue that this didn't exist.

Well, you argue that it exists and you tell the jury a good sound reason, when this man is being asked about that $35,536.00 why he didn't produce this.

So Mr. Lockley pulls out a certified audit of Sproull-Scholz and he said, "Well, you certified this, didn't you?"

Meyer said, "I did."

Lockley said, "You are a reputable man. You wouldn't put anything in there that isn't right, isn't that right?"

And the fellow said, "Yes."

5217 So Mr. Lockley put it in evidence without objection on my part, because right in the back of it is a study of this whole Eatsum accounts receivable situation. It gives a review of the whole thing. It shows that the balance at the time of the audit was $20,777.67, and that's with the $35,536.00 charged just exactly the way Meyer on the stand said it was and not against Shotwell.

So what do we face today? Today we face a situation where they say these fellows should go to prison because they got that $35,536.00 which until now has been a secret.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I am going to have to object to counsel's continuous reference to the defendants in this case having to go to prison. I made no objection to Mr. McConnell's saying it, because he is a state court practitioner—

By the Court: That isn't a matter that is subject for argument. The Court will determine what the disposition should be, by way of any punishment, in the event the jury finds these defendants guilty. The jury is not to 5218 be concerned with that matter. That is the responsibility that the Court has.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me point out that these two—the three checks made out with the holes in them, as to which the testimony was so surprising, and this $35,536.00 tie together. If one is bad, the other is bad.

Now, another payment, and the next one that was talked about by Mr. Lockley was the one that relates to this Exhibit 63-A, and it shows on it two payments, one is thirty thousand and the other $36,148.35.

Lubben said he got the thirty thousand from the cash box. We had the cash box sheets, the corn box sheets, and I handed Lubben the corn box sheets, and I said, "Show me where you got the thirty thousand," and he couldn't do it. And those sheets showed the "ins" and "outs" and it did not show the thirty thousand out. He was caught flat-footed with those sheets.

So what is the next item on that sheet? $36,148.35. And that is an interesting figure. We have had a lot of testimony about that. And one reason why I took as much 5219 time on it as I did is this. The only book of the whole partnership that is turned up at all is the one that has that loans and exchanges item in it. And I put witness after witness on the stand here and I ran that down until I think that it is in absolutely solid. And I am just going to go through it real quickly.

That $36,148.35, Mr. Lockley said they don't have the check. So he said he doesn't know who the check was made to, but Lubben said it was to cash and that it went to Shotwell.

Now, here is the November 30th account by Bernard Bercu. It shows the $36,148.35, just below the line "Lubben".

5220 Then on the recapitulation of that same thing, made by the accountant Hausman, it shows the $36,148.35 again. It shows a total against Lubben, charged against Lubben personally, mind you, of sixty-five thousand. And then under the checks which are charged against Lubben for that is $36,148.35. It marches on right straight through the books, and it is always charged against Lubben right on up here until the end of February, 1946.

He has an explanation for it. His explanation is, "Well, they would have taken it out of the books." But Hausman said they made those entries, taking it off the books and charging it against the supplier, if that was the right thing to do, every month. And this is on for six months, and it is never taken off and charged against Shotwell. It is always charged against Lubben.

And then what happens to it? Here is a sheet, 66-W, and in that money charged against Lubben is included this $36,000.

The balance on that loans and exchanges account is $113,150.17.

5221 So what is the accountant's question way in the next year? What is the question he asks? Loans and exchanges—"what shall we do with this amount? Charge it off against the capital?" That would mean against Lubben. "Or charge the purchase account? Slough it off onto a supplier?"

At six months later, before they even had a question of where to slough that off, and they finally sloughed it off against Shotwell.

So that this sixty-six thousand—the thirty thousand he could not find from his own cash box sheets—the thirty-six is charged against him personally, and it stays on his books against him personally, and it never comes off. An accountant asked later on whether it should be sloughed off or not, not knowing what to do with it six months later.

Now, then, another item is two checks for $2,300 each. This is an instance of the Court's instruction—and if you find that a document or a part of it is false, you may disregard it in its entirety.

5222 Lubben felt, and Heitmann testified specifically, to two checks for $2,300 each, which they said they cashed, and gave to Shotwell. And they are right in here, to cash. The checks, two of them, total forty-six hundred. He said it is part of a pot; I don't care whether it is part of a pot or not. That is what they testified, those checks, they said that money went to Shotwell.

5223 But when you look at the accountant's work papers for those two checks, they didn't go to Shotwell at all. He says, "Maybe there is some confusion." If there is some confusion, if there is doubt about it, why were Feldman and Heitmann and Lubben so insistent that there was no question at all about it.

Now, then, there is a $12,235.00 payment that they testified about, too. Now, that payment is another example—I don't find the sheet here now, but I will tell you about it. That $12,235.00, if it is to be handled the way they say it should be handled, is on the books twice, because they have got it on the books in anther instance, according to the work papers of Meyer, in a different way. So it is a duplication. It is false, one way or the other.

Now, then, we come to the four checks for $5,000.00 each. And that is Jimmy Moran, to whom you were referred for corroboration of Lubben. Jimmy Moran is his brother-in-law. Lubben was explicit, positive, and so was Moran, that he took four checks, that he went in this bank, that he cashed all four at one time, that he took the 5224 cash, and that he took it out and he gave it to Huebner. There just couldn't be any doubt about that at all.

But the bank, as Mr. McConnell has told you, testified that no such transaction took place. And they checked their sheets.

And another thing, the bank in those days had to give statements to the Federal Reserve Bank of any unusual check transactions like that, large checks, for cash They made a record of it. And there was no such record made.

Well, the bank might be mistaken. Maybe they cleared General Confection's books here. I gave Feldman the bank statement and she couldn't find them. I showed Meyer, who examined them, and he couldn't find the four. Those four checks don't exist.

And this Jimmy Moran, to whom we were referred for corroboration, is a convicted liar.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to the statement that Mr. Moran is a convicted liar. I don't know what you mean by it. In any event, it is misleading.

By Mr. Kirby: I think it is misleading. What I meant to say—

5225 By the Court: I suppose it is a matter of argument. But the word "convicted"—

By Mr. Kirby: On this record he is convicted of it.

So then what is the next payment they say was made. That's the $17,190.25 check. That check is dated December 4, 1946. Lubben went to a great deal of description as to how he was being pressed for money, and so on, in December of 1946. So he came out and gave this to Jimmy Moran and he said to Jimmy to cash it when he let him know he had the money in the bank.

5226 So Jimmie Moran waited around until December 20th. And of all the preposterous stories I ever heard, this is it. Here is a check for $17,190.00 which is sixteen days stale, made on a New York bank, presented by a man who is a complete stranger to the bank, and he said he got the money.

How did he get the money? He couldn't get it from the first fellow, so he went away. He packed up a five-pound box of candy. He came back and he hid behind a post until he could see a different teller come in. He went in and he slipped him the five-pound box of candy, and he walked out with the $17,190.25.

Now, that is just unbelievable. What is the key to it? The key to it is that this fellow Urban's and Lubben's names are on the back of that check. And they are the fellows that got the money. This Jimmie Moran never saw that $17,190.25. And he was just trying to help out Dave Lubben.

But he lied. And he lied with Lubben's knowledge. And his lie is Lubben's lie.

5227 Now, what are the next payments they talk about? The next ones are payments which total, supposedly for corn syrup, some $49,000.00. And supposedly he gave that money to Graflund in late 1946.

Well, Graflund denied that flatly. Graflund had already testified that he knew nothing of any transactions, except candy transactions. No corn sugar at all. No corn syrup at all.

Now, then, that testimony is unbelievable. It is flatly contradicted and it never did happen.

There are other instances of the falsity of the Lubben books and the Lubben story. Take this fellow, Bert Rock, who testified, as McConnell said, about how all that money was paid to him and how he just got two per cent so he could pay the check cashing costs.

5228 Now, let me go—and I am going to have to ask your indulgence to let me run a few minutes over my time, because I want to get to some other matters. Those matters that I have just talked to you about relate to this—as I have said, you will have an instruction from the Court, that if you believe a person has lied, has told you an untruth, or if you believe that the books are false in any respect, that his memoranda can't be believed all the way down the road, then you may disregard them in their entirety. That's the instruction the Court will give you. And I think after you have listened to my explanation, and your own listening on the jury of what happened with respect to these transactions, they just are not believable.

Now, what is unbelievable about them? What is unbelievable about them is simply this: Here is a fellow who is doing some business with these people, but he is loading everything on them—everything on them, everything on them, and why? Because he doesn't want to get stuck for the money himself.

5229 One of the exhibits that they put in was this final audit report of General Confections. General Confections supposedly gave Shotwell hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars. But according to the way Lubben ran his business, according to his own audit reports, which the Government put in evidence, his total profit—his total profit was $11,312.32. Do you believe that? That he gave hundreds of thousands of dollars to Shotwell, out of the cash that was in his pocket, and he only kept $11,312.32?

And let me say this: These things here, and these memoranda, they are not on General Confections books. That was testified to by Mr. Meyer, the man that made this up. If they were, if they are to be believed, General Confections lost more than a hundred thousand dollars. That would wipe out all this profit and another hundred thousand dollars more.

How fantastic a story can they give to a Jury? It is incredible. But he has got the chance to do it, because our people did some business with him.

5230 Now, they did business on account of the corn syrup market, which Mr. Lockley is critical of.

I am going to read, to shorten the discussion about that, what the Government said about it:

"Shortage of corn became very evident when free corn could not be accumulated in deliverable position to satisfy July and September, 1945, futures in Chicago,"—and so on.

"The ceiling price value of corn per 100 pounds was low in comparison with that of other grains."

And I will skip a sentence, and they get to this—the Government, mind you:

"The basis for a black market was laid in the fact" Not that Shotwell's men were malignant, not that they were criminals. Let me read it over to you again:

"The basis for a black market was laid in the fact that the ceiling price undervalued corn both in relation to other grains and livestock."

5231 That black market wasn't caused by the malignancy of these men. The Government itself says it was caused by the undervaluing on their own price ceilings. Then it goes on, and they talk about the corn, and they say:

5232 "These measures made it practically impossible to obtain free corn or wheat in regular marketing channels."

Then again the government says:

"The black market in corn, which it was claimed as early as January, 1946, made supplies short in regular channels of trade, still continued. In addition, the Commodity Credit Corporation"—that's a governmental agency—"began paying premiums"—we have heard about premiums here—"of 30 cents per bushel for corn on April 22nd and for wheat on May 3, 1946. Board of Trade of Chicago representatives visited Washington, arguing that in effect the government was conducting a black market in these grains."

So the proof with respect to Shotwell and the corn syrup purchases I think has satisfied you that they did make purchases. These, for example, are invoices all marked up with corn charged against corn purchases, the company that sent the corn products to us. And they testified repeatedly.

Now, the quantity of corn syrup that Shotwell bought and used in 1945 and 1946 was in excess of sixteen 5233 million pounds. Now, Mike Cohen said that if you figured out what the corn cost you, in getting corn on these corn deals, it ran to about three cents a pound.

Now, let's winnow it down to the smallest possible amount that Shotwell would have had to have spent for corn, the absolute minimum amount they would have had to spend for corn alone. In the ten months from September till June, '45 to '46, Shotwell purchased 7,400,000 pounds of corn syrup. Now, suppose they got half of that quota free. Although everybody testified quotas meant nothing in that period, suppose that Robinson, Adam, all those people who said that quotas meant nothing in that period, are wrong. Suppose that half of what they used in that period they got in that way. It still would leave three and a half million pounds that they would have had to buy—

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please,—

By Mr. Kirby: —one hundred and five thousand—

By Mr. Lockley: I am going to object to this testimony on the ground that there is nothing in the record which supports any of the suppositions counsel has just indulged in. His argument is not based in any way—

5234 By the Court: I am unable to pass on that. I don't know. I assume if there is no basis for the statement as to what the record discloses you can point that out on your rebuttal.

By Mr. Kirby: I believe on this question of the corn products that that would be the minimum that they could possibly have spent. Why, that is only a quarter of their purchases in those two years, and that would be over a hundred thousand dollars. And the Court will give you an instruction to the general effect that in deciding whether or not the Shotwell Company did pay out this money in the purchase of corn, or other raw materials, you can consider evidence, which would be called circumstantial evidence, that is to say, if they had to get it, and if everybody had to pay in order to get it, that they did, too.

5235 Now, everybody that worked on the matter, everybody that testified about it, said this, the total amount of money that came in was paid out.

The Court will instruct you that so far as an income tax case like this is concerned, if you believe that the money which came in was paid out to acquire raw materials, at least to the point that there was no substantial amount left, you must acquit, because there is no tax due.

And the Court will go further and the Court will instruct you that the individuals must be judged by what they individually knew, and that if anyone of these individuals honestly and in good faith believed that the money that was coming in was coming in necessarily for these raw material deals, and was going out in all those raw material deals, if that person honestly believed that to be true, then even if it wasn't true, he cannot be convicted and he must be acquitted.

If a person believes that these moneys were coming in to buy corn, and that they went out to buy corn, and he believes that in good faith, he must be acquitted. And you will be so instructed by the Court.

5236 Now, I am going to now turn myself to the specific questions that relate to the defendant Harold Sullivan. The first thing that they talked about with respect to Harold Sullivan was a weekly expense account of Lubben. And there is a reference there about going to dinner, and a fruit basket for Mrs. Cain, but the entry that has moment—having in mind that the question is who was doing what with cash—is this Bowery bank, safety deposit. Lubben was renting a safety deposit box. I don't care about this candy for Mrs. Cain. You look at that safety deposit box that that thief was renting.

The next thing he said about Sullivan, besides that he took him to dinner, was when he said he took these checks with the holes cut out of them up to Sullivan's office. He abandoned that. That was in February. He said finally, when he got back after his consultation with the Lord, that it didn't happen. But he said he was there in August and September of '46. And he said Sullivan was talking to him about the driveway, and he was spending money for the driveway.

5237 Well, there shouldn't be the slightest question in your mind who was telling the truth about that, Sullivan or Lubben, because the driveway on that old Sullivan homestead is the same as it was when Harold could first see, and he didn't spend a dollar on it. And that is that trimming to give credence that stamps the liar Lubben.

He wants you to believe he is a reasonable fellow. He wants you to believe his story. He says, "Oh, Harold said, 'I don't want checks, I want cash. I need it for that driveway.'"

Well, sometimes little things in a fellow's background stand him in good stead, and that homestead, in its very age, stands Harold Sullivan in good stead, to put the lie to Lubben.

Now, Lubben never mentioned seeing Harold Sullivan again, never once. Harold had to come and tell you the truth about the shakedown and the blackmail and the things of that sort. And he wanted him out of his hair. And he got him out of his hair.

As soon as Busby saw and came back and reported to Harold Sullivan that this immense list of charges
5238 had been built up, as soon as Harold Sullivan realized that there were these charges, he did not wait to get a jury to pass on those charges, no. He had his people go right straight to the Government then and there. And they offered to pay whatever this liar Lubben said he had ever given them. They said, "We don't believe it. He is a liar. You can't trust him. But we will pay you now on the front end. We spent money on corn. But you say you won't deduct it. Well, we think you are wrong and we are going to litigate it, but we will pay you and in the civil courts we will have our remedy."

And finally they are offended because after two and a half years of pleading with the Government to get a bill he writes a letter to Jim McCahey, one of his old friends.

And what does he say in the letter? Trying to dirty a man up.

He said, "We had been violating the OPA and we did business that we regret, and we have been trying to get a bill out of the government for two and a half years, and I think it is high time we get a bill. As far as the Shotwell Company is concerned, I have been connec-5239 ted with it for twenty years, and they were always a loser until '42, and since then we have paid four—" or two million, how much was that, Harold, of tax?

By Mr. Sullivan: Two million seven hundred thousand.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. "—two million seven hundred thousand in taxes to the government."

And do you think a letter like that, dragged out of a man, indicates he is a tax dodger? Quite the contrary.

He wants a bill. And he has paid $2,700,000.00 already.

5240 As a matter of fact, for the years in question, '45 and '46, Shotwell Company paid almost $900,000 in taxes, already.

Now, the Court will instruct you that the fact that Harold Sullivan, or anyone of these other people, were officers of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company—and Harold was not Vice President until the middle of '46—the Court will instruct you that that alone is not enough to convict.

The Court will instruct you that before a person can be held, simply because they are an officer, it must be shown that he affirmatively knew that there was a false return being prepared and filed, and that if he didn't have that direct personal knowledge, or supervision of it, he must be acquitted.

And what is the fact with respect to the knowledge of the defendant Sullivan, on that issue? Morrill, an estimable and fine lady, she testified that she signed one of the returns. She said Sullivan did not handle the return or have anything to do with it. She said that as far 5241 as she was concerned, all the money that came in was paid out for raw materials, and there was no net taxable income.

And the Court will instruct you that if it was all paid out, there is no net taxable income, and that Morrill was right.

Graflund, who signed the return, said he never talked to Sullivan about either return. Graflund also testified that there was no net taxable income to the corporation, and that he had so told Harold Sullivan.

Roeser said that he had never talked to Sullivan about the income tax return.

Busby, the CPA, said that he had first talked to Harold Sullivan about the income tax return in January of 1948, a year and a half after the '45 return was filed, and almost a year after the '46 return was filed.

Now, Sullivan's own testimony is uncontradicted, and he is entitled to credence, and there is no dispute of this whatever, first, that he never saw these returns before he saw them here in Court; second, that although he knew there were some transactions in the black mar-

5242 ket, he had checked with people in the corn field, and in the confectionery field, and he found that you had to go into the black market. Like the book from the Government says, the Government was creating the black market, and was in it. He found that out, and therefore, he assumed it had to be done.

But as to the precise handling of the money one way or the other, he did not handle the books. So far as he was concerned, he was confident that those people at the plant, who had been there when he came in there, were handling the things, and could handle them right. So far as he is concerned, that is true today. He has confidence in them, and he believes they did handle it right.

And there is no knowledge on his part but what every penny of the money that came into that plant was spent for corn. And if he believes that in good faith, he must be acquitted. And you will be so instructed by the Court.

5243 He not only believes it, but you have heard Graflund say he believed it, Roeser believed it, Morrill believed it. Everybody that had anything to do with it, except Lubben.

Well, I have taken a few minutes more than the time to which I had originally intended to address myself. I don't know about these kinds of cases, folks. You all have to have a lot of respect for your Government. You have got to start out with a lot of feeling of confidence in them.

But, you know, that isn't the issue here. The issue is: Have they proven beyond all reasonable doubt that these men, and my client particularly, Harold Sullivan, that they had a malignant intent—not to violate the OPA law; the Court will instruct you that an intention to violate the OPA law is not equivalent to intent to violate the tax law at all; the Court will instruct you on that—the question isn't whether they were forced into it, and had gone into it with one out of their many customers, the question isn't whether they picked a bum one to have 5244 anything to do with—because they surely did—the question is really whether they were people with a criminal intent to do wrong.

Now, you can't conclude that they did, unless you first conclude that everything Lubben is telling is the truth.

Now, as I said, you have got to respect your Government. And you come to a thing like this with some kind of an initial feeling of respect for the Government in the case. But there is one thing happened in this case that I wish you people would keep in your mind. You will be told by the Court that if you have any reasonable doubt as to the truth of any of the essential elements of this case, you must acquit.

5245 Now, can you have a reasonable doubt? Well, the man who has worked more on this case, I think, than anybody else, is this fellow, Charley Mammel. He is a career man in the Internal Revenue Department.

And I asked him on the stand, I said—what did I say? Imagine, this fellow has been working on this for years. You people in the Jury have got to decide what you should believe and what you shouldn't believe. Let me tell you what this fellow, who has worked on it for years, said, at page 2850. I put the question to him, just as bluntly as I could. I said:

"You don't say to me that Lubben told the truth, or that Lubben lied?"

And what was his answer:

"Well, I don't know."

And no man conscientiously looking into this attempted proof could give you any other answer than that. That is, you cannot believe, you can't have confidence in this man Lubben.

You can't say to yourself when you pass on the guilt or innocence of these people, "I know, I know 5246 beyond a reasonable doubt." You have got to say, "I don't know."

And our system of law, under our system of law, if you say that, you must acquit,—that acquittal which is more valuable than anything in the world to these defendants.

They can't beg you for it. I am not ashamed to beg you for it.

Thank you.

By the Court: We will take our recess now, members of the Jury. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and Jury leave the courtroom? This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

By the Court: Will you remind me, Mr. O'Brien, what time I allotted you?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it was an hour, but I will try to do better than that.

5247 Thereupon Mr. O'Brien addressed the Court and Jury in argument on behalf of the Defendants:

By Mr. O'Brien: May it please the Court, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury?

I, too, like Mr. McConnell, am unused to and am wholly unexperienced in criminal cases. My experience has been confined to civil cases, in which rights of property and civil rights of people, and companies, are involved.

5248 There have been some of those, of course, which involve money, great and small, but I have never had the experience of being in a matter in which penal charges and sanctions are invoked and I don't mind saying to you and to the people of the court room that it scares me somewhat and I hope I am able to overcome that so as to be able to be of some assistance in the relatively brief time that is allotted preliminary to your deliberations in this case. Although I have not been in such matters, I have some feeling and thought about criminal cases in general. We have matters which by the unanimous opinion of all civilized men are regarded as wrong in themselves. They do not depend upon the enactment of some legislative body to make them wrong. Rather, those enactments are a recognition of the views entertained by all men as to their wrong. Murder, for example. We have other things, however, which do not involve matters wrong in themselves but which are declared by statute to be wrong and are provided for punishment in the same way as if they were in themselves crimes.

Among such matters we had the prohibition law,
5249 we had, more recently, the Price Enforcement Act, and we have here and now and have had for some time the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code for the violation of which there are, as you know, severe penalties.

So, while offenses may differ in their nature as to whether they are good or bad in themselves, they may have in common the punishment or severity of sanction, and that is the thing which makes a hearing of this sort one of particular concern.

In such a proceeding there is a constitutional right to a trial by jury. Every man accused of a crime, whether in one sense or the other, is entitled to that trial and under the rules in effect in this court, he can't even waive a jury trial without the consent of the Government and the consent of the court as well.

When the Government is the plaintiff in cases of this sort, as it always necessarily must be, you know and I know that it is common to hear the plaintiff referred to as the Government, meaning the United States, but in my humble opinion, the United States as plain-5250 tiff in this action is just another party to another piece of litigation, no different than that between any plaintiff and any defendant and the only branch of the Government that makes any difference at all is the judicial branch as constituted by the Court and by you members of this jury, to which the executive branch here, plaintiff and the defendants alike, appeal and rely for the determination of justice in this case.

5251 Now, of course, I know that we have been here, an even month, or more, during which time you folks have been confined and taken away from your everyday affairs, and I quite agree with the Court, that while that deprivation is in no way compensable in a monetary way, that a great service and duty is being performed, and I, too, have observed the close and patient consideration which you have given to the testimony in this somewhat complex, and very much prolonged case.

We are here then, all of the defendants, accused of an attempt wilfully to evade and defeat taxes due from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as claimed by the United States.

I think of the addresses that have been made in the case. I know that you have heard the evidence. I know that all I can do at this time is to remind you all of some of the parts of that evidence which I consider important on particular points, but I would like to start at the other end of the thing, if I may, and remind the Jury of the situation in January, 1948, 5252 when Mr. Busby returned from his trip east with Mr. Graflund, and met with Mr. Cain at his home, having learned during that trip, that which he did not know before, namely, that there had been overages payments, and having inquired about that of Mr. Cain.

It was admitted that there had been some overage payments. Mr. Busby inquired as to why he had not been informed, and he was told, and you know what he was told. But when he was told that, he told Cain and Sullivan both that contrary to their past opinion, and to their then impression, there would be a tax due to the Government, because it was the law, and it was the holding of the Commissioner, as he understood it, that they could not deduct, that they could not offset against those premium receipts, the premium payments which they had made to acquire goods used in the manufacture of material. That was known. That presented a different situation. It was only shortly before that that Mr. Sullivan, I believe, had rejected the demands for a fifty thousand dollar loan. That was 5253 one thing. It was one thing to be exposed as a dealer, or a participant in any black market, but the notion that these folks would owe a tax, and did owe a tax to the Government was something of another nature, and they didn't tarry on that.

They told Mr. Busby to go in, but only after Mr. Busby explained to them this voluntary disclosure policy, which was briefly stated from the stand by the former Commissioner of the Internal Revenue, Mr. Dunlap, as being substantially this:

That the Treasury held out an invitation to all people who had filed erroneous returns, or fraudulent returns; that if they would come in and tell the Department about it, before the commencement of an investigation, that then they would be immune from criminal prosecution, but would be liable to pay such additional assessments as might properly be determined, after investigation by the agents, the Treasury agents, of the books.

Having been told of that, they sent Busby immediately.

No time was lost. He first went in on a hypothetical 5254 basis, without naming names, and assured himself that the policy was still in effect. He came back and told them it was, and then he went in and revealed the name, and later—they were not certain whether it was in January that Mr. Cain went back with him. The thought was that he did. But in any event, and it is a certainty that they both went in on March 3rd or 4th of 1948, and they sat down and talked to Mr. Sauber, who was the present Director in that area—at that time, the Deputy Collector—and they told him, repeated to him, with Mr. Cain there, what Mr. Busby had said.

Mr. Busby and Mr. Cain together on this last visit, told Mr. Sauber the nature of the transactions. They told him that they did not know at the time the amount of money involved in order to be able to prepare an amended tax return.

Mr. Sauber said that it was unnecessary, indeed inadvisable, to put in an amended tax return, under those circumstances.

5255 Mr. Sauber told them also, and correctly, according to the then ruling, that they could not deduct any premium payments. They had said that they didn't know what that amounted to nor could they tell precisely to whom they were paid. Mr. Sauber said it made no difference, even if they had receipts, even if they could prove it to a penny and name the people, they couldn't have one dime of credit for it.

So he said he would send, or the agent in charge would send a field agent to examine their books, to make an audit, to determine what the amount involved was and to assess a tax.

Now, I ask the jury to bear in mind that at that time, although Cain and the other folks did not regard that as fair, it didn't seem either fair or logical, nevertheless, from the Government's point of view, for which they had to take the word both of their auditor and the tax authorities, the agents, they did owe a tax.

But, I want to call this to your attention: In the 5256 interval of time that elapsed between then and the time of the indictment or shortly after, every court in the land which had occasion to pass upon the question, agreed that such premium payments could be offset and could be deducted and the result was that by September of 1952, the Commissioner himself acquiesced in that. What is meant by that: whereas theretofore he had compelled each taxpayer who claimed such deduction to litigate it out, by his acquiescence he no longer compelled any taxpayer to litigate it out but disposed of it on that basis, wherever such payments and to the extent that such payments could be shown to have been made.

I mention that particularly so that you will know that there is no inconsistency in the position of the defendants here in telling you on the one hand that at the time they went in to Sauber and admitted there was a tax—there was no inconsistency in doing that—and saying now as they said in the beginning that when those items are offset, there is no additional income, there is no additional taxable income and they do not now owe a tax. And I believe that the Court will 5257 have occasion to instruct you according to its views on that subject and if the Court does, I ask you to relate it to what I have just said.

Now, that isn't all. Remember Mr. Dunlap's description of the policy is just as simple as I put it: "Go in and tell them and you have immunity. "He said, "Go in and disclose yourself as one of those who owes a tax, whose return is incorrect."—at least from their viewpoint. That is the disclosure. You disclose yourself as one in that group and that is precisely what they did but they didn't see an agent for six months after or until the agent came out July 30th.

5258 Indeed, it was Mr. Lima who took the stand for a short time here. He came out, but in the meantime, in an effort to be of such preliminary assistance to him as they could, they retained, especially aside from his regular auditing work, they retained Mr. Busby, to get up figures on receipts.

Now, that is an operation which took some time. Their attention was focused on receipts—not on disbursements or payouts, which were completely irrelevant anyhow. If you could give the Government an adequate picture of the receipts it would afford them a basis for levying, or assessing an additional tax, and you would put yourself in a position where, as they say, you could get a bill and pay it, and end the matter.

Now, what to tell them? What to do, and how to approach it?

By that time, as the Jury knows, they had acquired information as to Mr. Lubben's actions. They knew what Lubben's claims were. They had seen some of those papers in February of 1948, and indeed, had 5259 picked up a package of them, at the time the Haberkorn deal was concluded, so that they knew. They got other figures, as they say, from Mr. Lubben's accountant, or his then accountant, Sproull-Scholz, that further revealed the claims which Mr. Lubben was making.

Now, they had two alternatives. Maybe there were more. They had no lawyers, still had no representation. They were ashamed of this situation, as I believe Mr. Cain testified, and as you can see of everyone who had anything to do with these dealings. Even the people from the refineries are, or were, hesitant about talking about them. But, they could take, or try to ascertain the true and correct figures, limited in the way that the people from the company had mentioned. They could put those in, and they could have a controversy with the Revenue, which would last, I assure you just as long, and longer than the one here has; or they could take, if they didn't care about the money, they could take the greatest possible amount that Lubben could claim, according to the information they had before 5260 them, as to what his claims were, and they could assemble the data on that basis, and turn it in to the agent, or give it to him when he arrived there, as a starting point from which to investigate. And that is precisely what Mr. Cain instructed Mr. Busby to do.

It was heard, as Mr. Busby said,—although Mrs. Morrill may not have been at that conference, I think he said—but Graflund, and Roeser and Huebner approximated, or estimated what the amount was. But Mr. Cain said, "Now, put them all in. Take the whole thing. Set it down at the very utmost that that dangerous man can claim."

And that, Busby proceeded to do. Indeed, if you look at that exhibit, Government Exhibit 189, I believe it to be, those sheets, as you could see when I was examining Mr. Busby, the column on the right hand side is headed, "Lubben's figures." It is not "Shotwell's figures." It is "Lubben's figures." And it is those figures on that right hand column, which are carried into the totals that the witness was interrogated about.

5261 So, they took those figures, the top on receipts. When Mr. Lima came out, they gave them to him and then the audit of the books was supposed to start.

5262 Now look at it this way: When they handed or when Mr. Busby handed Lima the figures on those receipts, did he say to him, "These are the true and correct figures?" He did not. Rather, he told him and indeed the documents on their face showed the fact to be that they were the over-all of the figures. Did anybody at Shotwell say to the Government, "Look, please take these figures. Don't bother about the audits. Settle up on those?" No, there was nothing of that kind. On the contrary, they importuned the agents to get a field man out there and to get started, and when he came, they not only gave him the figures to form the basis for that start, but they cooperated with him and supplied the agents with everything that was available.

Now, they talk about these figures which Mrs. Morrill and Roeser kept in the cash box, of the ins and outs of the box. They say unless there was some sinister purpose, those would not have been destroyed. Well, the situation was as you can clearly see from the testimony, that the amounts on those papers and in the minds 5263 of those people bore such little relationship to the total that Lubben claimed that there would have been no point. They formed no factor in the situation, they were so far below.

Now, if you took the true figures, as I said, and handed them to the Government and said, "That is it," you would be litigating with them for years to come. That was the reason they took the high amount and the figures that these people had bearing no relationship to it.

Here are all these people—Mrs. Morrill is still with the company. Graflund has his own business. Mr. Roeser is with another company and Hogan and the other people who are ex-employees of the company are no longer working for this company, but they take the stand and they tell you what those sheets contained. They tell you what Roeser did, that here were the ins, the date, and the amount, here is an amount paid out and underneath that is a balance and the amount paid out also carries a date. In no instance did those figures show who the money was paid to. They didn't name 5264 people. There were no names whatsoever.

Mrs. Morrill, Roeser and Graflund all say that. So I see nothing of significance in the fact that once the disclosure was made and it was made on that basis, when Mrs. Morrill inquired of Mr. Cain as to whether there was any point in keeping these memoranda on her own, he said, "No. Do with them what you will." He never asked her to keep them. He never asked Roeser to keep them. He never looked at them. Neither did anyone else.

5265 But in those figures that they did give Mr. Lima, that they gave to the Government, they gave them sufficient receipts on which to assess a tax that would be equal from anywhere to two to three times the amount that was really due, if they had taken the figures and assessed the tax and ended the whole matter. I have never been able to find out and I have heard no testimony to explain why it was that they didn't do just that. So much for the disclosure situation as such, except this: As Mr. McConnell said, now that the indictment comes that is the first news that any of the defendants had as to the claim or amount of the claim that the Government was asserting—not that it is asserting a civil claim either—but it says that is the amount of the tax these people sought to evade. The first information of that came in the indictment and then as we come to trial, these sheets prepared in reliance on the voluntary disclosure policy, prepared on the basis which I have stated and which has been testified to by Mr. Busby, are put in evidence here as an admission on the part of the company, not as to what was the total of Lubben's claim but an admission that these 5266 were amounts actually received by Shotwell and those are amounts that we are trying to evade and were trying to evade tax on.

Now, that, as Mr. McConnell says, is not fair. Those documents cannot be used for purposes of such an admission unless the jury is willing to take them that way and in my judgment when you take the basis on which they were arrived at, the circumstances under which they were taken, I believe that in all fair play the jury will not accept those papers as any such admission.

Now, then, we come to the claim—I may say that during our opening statements I think all of us made it clear or tried to to the jury that the corporation did receive overages and did have unbilled shipments through the period of October, 1945, to July of 1946. There was no denial of that. The question here, as far as those moneys are concerned, is whether what admittedly so came in, went out. Because, if it went out, if it had to be expended for corn syrup or for raw corn, according to what has been shown and argued, then the amount spent to procure those items, they being all the amounts that cleared 5267 through the box, that is a deduction and offset against the receipts themselves.

Now, the jury will remember that in the early days of the box, in order to refurnish the money, they had to get from the corporation some $14,550.00 which was done, the cash was put in the box. I think Mr. Roeser so testified. And the charge was made to this miscellaneous officers and employees account where the item hung in suspense. When the box was closed in July of 1946, the balance in the box was taken out, deposited to the corporation bank account and then it was credited to that miscellaneous officers and employees account, enough to substantially wash out the advancements which had initially been made. All I am trying to say is that the sum of $14,000.00 or $15,000.00, whatever it was that remained in the box at the time it was closed or was in there at the close, was not a profit on the box operation but was an amount that had to go back to reimburse the company for the money originally advanced from its own bank account.

5268 So that we have got a situation in which the moneys that admittedly came in, went out for the cost of goods and do not represent taxable money either, whether they were included in the books or reflected in the returns or not. Had they been put in there on that basis, it would not have made one dollar of difference taxwise, the tax would have been precisely the same. But Mr. Lubben says he paid more money and he paid money over a greater period, and there is where the dispute centers.

Our people say "No". He says, "Yes". And therefore it is necessary to get down to some of the factors to which you will want to give consideration in deciding whether Mr. Lubben told the truth.

In the first place, Mr. Kirby has reviewed some of the items and has reminded you of the evidence which caused us to say that Mr. Lubben's testimony as to the payment of those items is untrue. There is no need for us to repeat those. Mr. Lubben's motive was has been referred to on the cash checks or the cash that he was taking 5269 out of his companies. He has got to have some place to charge them. He either retained it in whole or in part or he paid it out in whole or in part, so naturally, he says he paid it out. That is the only position he could take unless he filed an income tax return and paid tax on it and there is no showing in this case that that is a fact. We did try to show the income tax returns but there was objection to them and it was sustained.

The self-serving system has been alluded to by Mr. McConnell and I don't know that it would be too helpful to the jury for me to dwell on it much further here except there are a couple of things I remember about it that I think you would remember.

They did establish the system. Bercu and Miss Feldman and Lubben and the general idea, or the specific idea of that system was that they were to pay the invoice at the printed amount, there would be a check for that, and, then, as Mr. Bercu has testified, simultaneously they would draw a check for the supposed amount of the overage, 5270 Mr. Lubben would get that cashed, get the money and he was supposed to pay overage in that amount. Now, in the instances where they actually did that, in the early days of the proprietorship, if you were to take that same book that Mr. Lockley called your attention to, when it comes to the pay-outs, the charges to purchases, you will find under the names of Gum Products, Two Star, and other suppliers, you will always find two entries—as he put it, Mr. Bercu, in dual form, one following the other, evidencing a simultaneous payment, a check with a printed amount for the invoice, a check for the cash, both right together, and that follows all through up and down the line on those suppliers.

In the case of Shotwell, you won't find it that way. When you look at that ledger, you never see those simultaneous entries according to the system. You find, as Mr. Kirby said, when they got an invoice in, they charged purchases, entered it up in the purchase book, entered it up in the accounts payable book, built up a sum, but 5271 when they paid, they paid the Shotwell invoice in the printed amount and charged Shotwell accounts payable, but you will never find hooked into that invoice the amount for the cash overage on that invoice simultaneously made as was contained here. Rather, when those checks were drawn to cash, they were carried in suspense in the different companies, and every once in a while when they got around to it they would charge them off to a supplier putting a good round sum in there and then when it became necessary for Lubben to do it, he got up this memoranda, marshalled all this memoranda, tried to get enough of them, put enough of them together to closely approximate the amount of a check and prove it out on a pound basis.

The trouble with those memoranda—when you take them to the jury room and look at them as they are now made, you will see they won't fit. They won't even do that. Not only are they not separate and in a dual form as I mentioned, but if you try to get any aggregate of the amounts of those invoices, you will never come out even with any check charged to Shotwell right on the books except 5272 in the very instance of that $10,869.00 check in the proprietorship.

5273 Now, Mr. McConnell has spoken of Miss Feldman's position, her lack of knowledge of what really occurred, with respect to payments. Everything she did was done at Mr. Lubben's direction. Neither did she acquire any accounting or receipts from Lubben.

That brings me to another thing. This partnership with Giglio-Stone, et al. There was some dispute here as to why Lubben left that partnership. The difference in the operation of the partnership was that it had a cash box, and that whenever Lubben ever wanted to take cash out of that box, to make these payments, it will be plain, I think, to the Jury that there was a strong likelihood that he would be accompanied by Mr. Loperfido, or Mr. Livorsi, or someone else who didn't want any receipts, but he just wanted to see what was being done. That is a lot different than sitting there and having the girl draw you a check going to the bank, and getting the money, or taking off and saying what you did with it. The dif-

5274 ference is between those operations and the effect of those different modes of operations on Lubben, would be quite apparent. He didn't like that system. He says that he would like to do with it as Mr. Bercu said, and he pulled out.

What did he do? He went back to General Confections where he was all on his own. He had nobody compelling him to do it in any particular way. He kept a cash box. He drew cash checks. He did not change the invoices. He did the thing exactly in the way it had been done in the partnership while he was there, keeping no record.

In other words, it just can't be true that he left Eatsum, and left that partnership to have freedom of action in doing the thing in the way that his accountants thought best. He did no such thing. Indeed, the records, I should say, that are available here for General Confections are almost as bad, or as deficient as in the case of the partnership itself.

Now, there has been some reference to items in the proprietorship. I will speak about that, and of the cash
5275 box. There I interrogated witnesses, different witnesses, including Lubben, confronting them with the cash box sheets, made them admit that he had—that there were dual entries for Two Star, Commodity Trade, Mike Cohen, Eiger, on the ledgers in double the invoice price, and the cash price, and then the cash box sheets, those are the amounts supposedly paid out as overage to these people—the cash box sheets would show that really the money went—it not only went into the cash box, but whatever came out of the cash box for payment to Two Star, Eiger, Commodity, Mike Cohen, or anyone else whose name was shown, was a fiction and device. The fact that the money was in there showed the entry on the books was untrue, that it had not been paid out for overage.

Now, over there at General Confections, when they took off for the first few months, from March to August, Miss Feldman was not there. Frieda Seiderer was there, and Mr. Lubben testified when he was identifying these various cash authorization slips, and memoranda, he just testified generally that while Miss Feldman was away, Frieda 5276 Seiderer took care of these things.

Well, Frieda Seiderer, obviously, had nothing to do with it. Whatever was done, if anything was done at the time, was done by Mr. Lubben, with the extension of a couple of figures which Mr. Lockley called attention to this morning.

Now, that reminds me, that even during the partnership time, and all these times when Miss Feldman was supposed to be making memoranda, Miss Feldman testified that she would keep track of each shipment in a little handwritten memoranda that she made. She would accumulate those until she had a batch, and then she would type them all up on a sheet, throw the original memoranda away, use the sheet with a cash authorization slip, to get the amount of cash required, and that was the end of the transaction.

But, when you look at these papers, you don't find typewritten sheets for great parts of this period. You 5277 don't find longhand memoranda either, of Miss Feldman. You find, by and large, memoranda made in the handwriting of Lubben, which is entirely contrary to what their testimony has been as to the method and form, but that is the proof which is here, not hers, but his.

5278 Now, Mr. Cain testified that in June of 1948, at or about the time of the candy convention this chap Tobias who had been the last of the auditors at General Confections told him that Lubben had been doctoring his books, had been charging large amounts of money to Shotwell and that he thought that Cain ought to know about it. Cain so testified.

Mr. Tobias was here. He was here under subpoena. The Government did not put him on the stand to refute that statement of Mr. Cain's. I can only assume, and I think the jury too is entitled to assume that Mr. Tobias, had he been able to refute it, would have been placed on the stand and would have done so.

By the Court: Are you watching the time, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, Judge, I am.

Now, there is also memoranda and other papers which Lubben had with him when he met with Harold Sullivan and Huebner in New York and on one of which occasions he had Carry with him. Carry was the chap from the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company and Carry was also 5279 connected with the Budget Factors who did the factoring after the General Commercial Acceptance outfit finished, where they left off.

Carry and Lubben exhibited these papers to Sullivan in connection with the demand for the $50,000.00 additional loan, and following that, as he said, they made the Haberkorn deal and then some of these papers were turned over, these slips and things of which the Government has photostats here, but that is along about February or March of 1948 and then when it gets into August of 1948, according to Lubben, but late in June of 1948, according to Mr. Grace and Mr. Cramer, Lubben is trying to get $135,000.00. He is going to leave the country. He is going to take Dane with him. They had already made this trip to Haiti. Mr. Cramer tells about it, and Carry, Davidson and Lubben all came up to see Cramer in that connection. Davidson did not sit in on the conference, but the other two did.

That demand was made. Cramer thought it was a lot of money. Lubben got Cain on the telephone and made 5280 the demand for his participation, whereupon Mr. Cain had told him that they had made a disclosure and they were not interested. Then Lubben turned to Cramer and said, "Boss, you are in."

Now, Morley Cramer came here from Boston to testify that. He has no connection with Shotwell or any of the defendants. His situation must be well understood by the Government, since he too had dealings with Lubben. No one contends—neither Davidson nor Lubben come back or are brought back to tell you that what Cramer said was untrue and yet they were available and that could have been done, had they been able truthfully so to assert.

Neither is anyone brought by the Government to contradict Mr. Cain's testimony pertaining to the chocolate transaction, the two cars obtained from the concern at Mansfield, Massachusetts, which Mr. Kirby reminded you of not long ago. Now that, it seems to me, and I agree with McConnell on this, but it really is the province of the jury—Mr. Lubben goes so far in his statements as to what transpired not only as to amounts but the substantial 5281 matter, the matter of dividing, having Huebner divide money into three piles on every occasion, not once but all the time—having himself sent by Huebner down to the company comptroller Graflund, to give him moneys which he is to tell him are for corn syrup but "For heavens sake, don't let them know about the candy because Graflund knows nothing about that."

And Graflund is the chap who had charge of the candy, or the overage box from the time that Howard Roeser left early in February down to the time that the corn box was closed out. Now, it is just not conceivable that any such thing happened and a series of those incidents, I agree with Mr. McConnell, would tend to make anyone distrustful of Lubben's testimony, quite aside from the solid items to which Mr. Kirby referred and quite aside from his mode of proceeding, his motives, and the way he kept his books.

I think; coming back to the receipts which came to the corporation for overages and unbilled shipments, when 5282 you get right down to it, the collection of corn syrup invoices is the best objective evidence there is as to what it cost the company to procure the syrup. There is one thing in this whole complex record which is undisputed and that is that over that period of time you could not get corn syrup unless you procured the corn. Lubben himself said that, although he left room for argument.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien, but I am going to have to object to your misstating the evidence. There is no evidence whatsoever that the only way you could get corn syrup was by obtaining corn because during that period of time you are referring to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company got corn syrup without obtaining corn.

5283 By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I think I am entitled to my recollection as evidence, without interruption.

By Mr. Lockley: But not to misstate the evidence, if your Honor please.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not misstating it.

By the Court: The Jury will have to determine the accuracy of Mr. O'Brien's statements.

By Mr. O'Brien: Surely.

Neither am I undertaking then to tell the Jury what the evidence is. The Jury heard the evidence, and I am merely reminding them at this point of it, and I think I can do it accurately.

Lubben testified there was no corn syrup procurable, unless you procured the corn, except in the cases of those who had allocations. That is number one.

Mike Cohen said the same thing, and Mike told how much money you had to pay to get the corn, what the market was, what the overage was. Indeed, it is in his testimony that you find the basis of that cost. Everybody, the refiners, everybody who was produced here to

I tried to prove in this record through the witness Andrews, what amount of corn syrup we had bought in 1941, so you folks could figure out what allocations, if any, you thought we had in 1945 and 1946.

Mr. Lockley objected to that, so you don't have all those figures, but you can allow up to a full 80 percent allocation. You could assume that, and you can take the quantity of corn syrup that these people have during the years 1945 and 1946, and you have to find that it cost them—that they had to procure the corn for that, and that the amount was at least twice what Mr Kirby contended 5285 on the basis of the testimony of Mike Cohen, of Earl Pratt, and of Mr. Godfrey, as to what the going prices were, to say nothing of Lubben's testimony, and the testimony of the other people.

Now, finally, I would like to say this: I don't see how there can be the slightest question about those two things: That to get corn syrup, there being no free corn, you had to provide the corn; and second, it cost money to do that at the very minimum—and the very minimum would be the amount that Mr. Kirby said. That would easily use up the money, the receipts that came to that corporation from October to July of 1946.

But now, finally, I think of this because we don't make the evidence, we just listen to it. And we listened to Mr. Lubben describe several ways something different than what the Government is contending here. Bear in mind that this is not even a tax case against Mr. Cain, Mr. Huebner, or Mr. Sullivan. Their personal returns are not involved here. The charge is that they aided and 5286 abetted with willful intent, they aided and abetted this corporation in escaping or evading the payment of taxes which the corporation owed. It is the corporate returns only that are involved.

Now, if Lubben said that he came to these people and said he gave them the money and he just left it there, that would be one thing, that might be compatible, or consistent with the claim that Mr. Lockley and the Government is making; but Lubben is never content to let anything rest in any such simple way. Lubben said that he intended this money for these men. Every time he gave Huebner, whether in New York or in Chicago, the money was divided into three piles, one for Frank, one for Harold, one for Byron—skimmed some off the top which went into his pocket—that was for the races, that was for the horses—but the plain meaning that Lubben intended to be conveyed by that was that these men were getting the money, and Huebner was getting a third, although his stock holdings were quite nominal—he was getting a third of the money.

5287 If you are to believe what the man said, it isn't only that. That might be treated as a joke. Maybe he was just having fun, but when he sends out three checks each in the sum of $13,000.00 specifically payable to Cain, Sullivan and Huebner respectively, what does he mean by that? Doesn't that evidence intention on his part of something? Does he mean by that that he thinks the men ought to have the money rather than the corporation or is it that he is trying to get an endorsed check back with their names on it? What is it? He certainly didn't make a check out to the corporation. Did he think the money was going to them? Again, he made a statement to the Government, a sworn statement, on which I cross examined him and on which he testified from in large part on direct, but he left out a few things in there and so I asked him, well, why? Well, he forgot. I said, "Well, is it true that when you learned about this disclosure you said to the people who told you of it, 'Well, what does the Shotwell Company make a disclosure for? I gave the money to these men first.'" And Lubben said, "Yes."

He did say it. That was what he said.

5288 Now, in spite of what the Government contends, if in the face of all the things that appear through Lubben's testimony, the improbabilities, the untruths, the impeachments, if this jury was really going to believe what Lubben said and you believe it all, then I say you will not and neither will Mr. Lockley be able to predicate additional income to this corporation on that testimony because that testimony, if believed and literally taken and by some stretch of the imagination if any one or more of you believe that, it would represent income to these individuals and not to that company, as I think the Court will direct, and if you find that the income which did come to this corporation was spent not only as the defendants say but as all those people, Roeser, Morrill, Graflund and the rest have said, then this corporation would owe no tax, there is nothing before you on anything else and the defendants would be acquitted.

Thank you.

By the Court: Members of the jury, I think Mr. Lockley is to have a half an hour. All right, Mr. Lockley.

5289 By Mr. Lockley: That was the time which has been allotted to me.

By the Court: I thought the jury would like to know that we will hold them over.

All right.

And Thereupon Mr. Lockley Addressed The Court And Jury In Closing Argument On Behalf Of The Government.

By Mr. Lockley: I will try not to take all of the time if it is at all possible to do so because I know sitting there and listening to somebody else doing the talking is not entirely the easiest job in the world.

There are a few comments I want to make, though, on the closing statements of the three counsel for the defense. Half an hour, of course, is nowhere near enough to try to show to you the utter falsity of the premises upon which a good many of their inferences have been based. They accept, in part, the testimony of the Government's witnesses. They reject in part the testimony of the Government's witnesses. They feel that all of the witnesses who have testified favorably for the defense, even though they were called by the Government are hon-

5290 orable people; that those people who have testified unfavorably are liars and blackmailers and dangerous men and they speak specifically of David Lubben.

5291 Mr. Kirby demonstrated very strikingly the whole practice of the defense in this case, when he was making his closing address. He had just one defense, and that was to be as offensive as possible about David Lubben. He called him every name in the book. And not one of them is deserving.

I will tell you who David Lubben is. He is an honest, honorable American citizen, who is down here doing his duty, just the way you people are doing your duty. And he said from the stand here, "I am getting nine dollars a day for doing this." And that is what he is getting paid as a witness, and that's all he gets, and not another single solid cent. He is no informer in this case. He has nothing at all at stake. His taxes are settled. He has nothing to gain, and nothing to lose, no matter what happens to these people.

He was the fair haired boy, you remember, back in 1945, when they were giving him a lot of candy, and he was giving them a lot of cash. But today, he is called upon to do his duty as a citizen, and sit on the stand under oath, 5292 and tell the truth, he is every kind of a liar and blackguard they can think of.

Well, he is no such thing. David Lubben, you saw him, you heard him.

You heard Mr. McConnell struggle with him for about four days and try to shake him in any material way in his testimony. Was he successful? Not in the slightest. And I will tell you why.

Because, Lubben is telling the truth, and you can't shake a story when a man is telling the truth. He didn't have to fabricate. These weren't just amplifications, and little details that he added on. My God, the man would have to have an imagination that would make him one of the finest novelists of all time, if he could sit up here and think up stories as he went along.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lockley and I for once in the case are in agreement.

By Mr. Lockley: That is not so. People who are actually lying on the stand and who are caught in their lies—well, Byron Cain and Harold Sullivan, and the 5293 people who they also thought were very fine, honorable people, and who testified for the defense, who are they? Ronald Stone? A disbarred lawyer, convicted of perjury. Are you going to believe anything that that man says?

Louie Roth? He is under indictment himself, and he refused to testify on his constitutional rights. This man Meyer, his accountant—you heard Mr. Meyer sit here on Friday afternoon and tell you about all the checks to cash that had been drawn by Mr. Lubben, and which were questioned, questioned on his books—Mr. Meyer wanted to know all about those checks to cash, because there was something improper about it.

You recall I came back here Monday morning, after I had an opportunity to look over these documents, and what do we find? About 75 percent of them aren't checks to cash at all, although that was the inference he left with you. He did deliberately mislead this jury, to try to have you think these were all checks to cash. They didn't 5294 know what had happened to them. Here they are.

They are not checks to cash. They are checks to Myron Roth, to David Lubben, and to Our Lady of Bethlehem Academy. You can go down the whole list of them, and what happened to them? Here it is on the other side. It tells you "Start of petty cash fund."

Here is a charge to the payroll account.

Here is a charge to the inventory.

Here is a charge to donations.

There is an explanation for every one of those checks.

5295 If you can believe that man Meyer, you can believe David Lubben on anything he tells you. Meyer is not only a liar, he is a paid liar.

And that fine fellow—I think that is what Mr. Kirby called him—that fine fellow Morley Cramer, that fine fellow Morley Cramer was also a great black marketeer.

You look through there and you will find as many payments to him as to Shotwell. You look through the books.

He had nothing to lose—I think that was what Kirby said, or perhaps it was O'Brien—he had nothing to gain by coming here. Of course he did. Morley Cramer could help to tear down David Lubben. He is going to make himself look that much better. Maybe he can get his income tax problem settled, too.

By Mr. Kirby: I understand you have accepted a settlement from him.

By Mr. Lockley: Perhaps they have.

How about Mr. Sullivan? They want to talk about liars.

You caught him redhanded on the stand, lying about that Gotham Hotel occasion when Lubben was supposed to 5296 have gone up with these marked up invoices. You just heard Mr. O'Brien tell you that there was no marked up invoices during the period of the partnership. There were no marked up invoices during the period of General Confections. What period is left? The sole proprietorship period. It is the only time when they used that system of marking up the invoices.

And just where were the invoices of the sole proprietorship at that time? Sproull-Scholz had them. They had them because Lubben owed them a bill for accounting and they were holding them in hock. I don't know just how proper that is, for an accountant to do it, but Sproull-Scholz—that fine man who testified for the defendants, he was holding them.

Obviously then if Sproull-Scholz had them Lubben couldn't have had them. And if Lubben didn't have them, Harold Sullivan was lying. And he knows it. And there is no way of checking it, because it is Sullivan's word against Lubben's word.

Sullivan quite conveniently made a long distance call to Cain so that Cain could get in on the act and testify to.

5297 And Cain? Well, somebody is certainly lying—there is no question about that—about the Club Riviera. Cain either has an awfully short memory or else he is lying about that one. You recall that Mr. Grace in large part corroborted what Mr. Cain had to say. And we proved to you that Grace is a liar. He said he had never been to Dan Bolick's office. And we showed you three sheets from this record which was kept in the office of Dan Bolick and they are dated right at this time, June and July, 1948, when Cain and Grace and Lubben were talking over these matters at the Club Riviera. Why else would Grace go to Bolick's office, except to talk about settlement of the Shotwell case? And why would Grace go to Bolick's office? Bolick is the head of the Intelligence Division in New York. This is a Chicago case.

For only one reason, because he expected to use political influence. That is the same reason that Sullivan wrote a letter to McCahey. Did he think McCahey was going to give him a bill so he could settle his cases? What possible reason could he have had? That is the only one.

Now, they also talked to you about this so-called 5298 voluntary disclosure. Well, the Court will give you an instruction on what the voluntary disclosure policy is. And he will tell you that there are certain elements to that policy, one of which is timeliness. The taxpayer has to make his disclosure before the Government finds out about it, before the Government starts making an investigation.

And, secondly, it has to be a bona fide disclosure which admits liability.

Well, what did these defendants say? They said, "Yes, we got some of it in, but we paid all of it out." So what were they attempting to accomplish by making one of these so-called disclosures? It was going through a useless gesture. They were trying to do just exactly this. They were trying to save themselves from criminal prosecution by making an admission that they had received the money. And then they were trying to save themselves from getting taxed by claiming that they paid it all out again. And that is exactly what they did.

Let me show you the figures. These are Mr. Byron Cain's. You see the figures up here. He has got milk, 5299 30,000; corn syrup, 12,000; cocoa bean deal, 30,000 dollars.

Have you heard anything about a cocoa bean deal here? Of course you haven't. Mr. Cain said there were no such things. He sat down in five minutes and dreamed this up. And why in the world would he dream it up, if it wasn't true? For just one reason. He was going to mislead the United States Government at the time he was making his voluntary disclosure.

And did he do so? He certainly attempted to, because look at this, which was turned over by Mr. Busby, the accountant, to the Revenue agent who came in to investigate the case. It contains exactly those same figures, exactly. Chocolate, 45,000; milk 30,000; and so on. They come up with the ridiculous figure of $5,898.00 left in the pot, after they got through. And they admit not even that was reported as income. This doesn't agree with this amount. I think they claim $338.68 to balance. I don't know what that is. Somebody's figure that they must have gotten out of a balance some place.

5300 And here, too, while we are on the disclosure period, here are some figures which were prepared by Mr. Busby. And this will also tend to put the lie in Byron Cain's teeth, as to how much they were paying in overages, or receiving in overages, during 1945. Right here, this sheet shows 1944. And look at this. This is in Huebner's handwriting. Ten cents all the way down the line.

Now, don't you think that if they were actually only paying three cents,—or receiving, I mean, three cents in those days, they would put down three cents? Why should they charge themselves with a greater amount than they actually received in?

Because Lubben said so? They said Lubben claimed it. Claimed what? What do Lubben's claims have to do here? Lubben wasn't around when they prepared this. Lubben was out of business by that time. Lubben wasn't around when they prepared any of these figures at all. He went out of business in February of 1948, if you remember.

They didn't even start preparing this until later.
5301 They wanted Lubben to come to Chicago, you recall, because Byron wanted to talk to him. He didn't have enough money to come.

The true fact of the matter is that they actually did receive ten cents in 1944, and they did receive it in the early part of '45. And they received 18⅔ cents on chocolate in 1945.

It is simply ridiculous for them to stand up here and say, "We were just black marketing a little bit. Not as much as the Government claims, just a little bit."

Mr. Kirby attacks the Government's evidence, these documents. To be sure, we don't have a complete double entry set of books for every period of the partnership and the corporation. Thank God, somebody kept books, even this kind of books. You know where we would be if Lubben had kept the sort of books the Shotwell Manufacturing Company kept, don't you? And had destroyed them immediately afterward, the way they did?

If he had gotten their permission, he wouldn't have 5302 kept those records at all. He didn't get permission to mark up their invoices, and, believe me, he didn't have permission to keep those books. Because if he had, if he had spoken to them about it, before he did, in 1947, or 1948, they would have gotten hold of them. You notice they did get hold of a good many of them.

Did they get them from Lubben? No, they went to Sproull and Scholz. That is where they got a lot of their information. They got a lot of it from this man Tobias.

And while I am speaking of Tobias, Mr. O'Brien mentioned that we had him here and we didn't call him.

He overlooked one important thing. The defense also had him subpoenaed, and they didn't call him, either. I don't know why they had him, but the Government had him for an entirely different reason. We had no necessity for calling him.

5303 Mr. Kirby also mentioned that on this audit statement which was prepared by Sproull-Scholz it shows an $11,000.00 profit. Well, I am not surprised. I hadn't checked the figures, as a matter of fact, so I don't know if that is the correct one or not. But assuming that it is. You recall that this is the audit statement for late 1947—February 28, 1947, and it shows that Lubben was in just exactly the kind of financial condition he said he was in. Remember, he went to get a $75,000.00 loan from Byron Cain. If he only had that much profit he needed a loan and he subsequently went broke a year later.

So it doesn't prove anything, that the man had that sort of a profit. Don't forget, Lubben was selling in the black market, but the reason he went broke is that he paid half a million dollars to these people, had nothing left over after he got through with them.

And that black market again. Mr. Kirby talks about the Government having paid premiums in the black market for corn. Well, the black market, I suppose, was in existence, in corn. There was a black market in existence 5304 in a lot of things, as we all remember from those years, in tires, in gasoline, in butter, in meat.

Did that force us to go in the black market? No. You just went without. Or you did with a little less. And they could have done the same thing. They were getting corn syrup, they were getting sugar on allotments under their government contracts. They could have gotten by. Maybe they wouldn't have added any millions, but they could have kept going. But they weren't satisfied with just getting by. They weren't satisfied with just keeping within the law. What they wanted to do was to build a candy empire. What they wanted to do was build up their business until after the war, when they would have a great many customers. They were going to build and expand —a plant on the East Coast and a plant on the West Coast.

You remember Mr. Cain talking about that on the stand.

He said that was one of the reasons that he gave the $75,000.00 loan.

And you heard Mr. Kirby making all sorts of suppositions about supposing that the defense had bought so much corn in those black markets and supposing that corn had cost so much, why, then based upon all those 5305 supposes it would have probably cost the Shotwell Manufacturing Company so many thousands of dollars in the black market.

Well, taking all these supposes out, what do you have left? Do you have the testimony of one single, solitary individual who says he sold any corn, or arranged the sale of any corn for Shotwell in the black market? Do you know of one single dime that was paid to one single person for a single grain of corn in the black market? No.

These people are well educated. They are well experienced business people. Do you think for one minute that they are going to let a hundred thousand or four hundred thousand, or any other amount of money be paid out without knowing, having the slightest idea of where it is going? It just isn't sensible. If they knew who got that money, if they had paid it out, I should say they would know who got it, and if they know who got it they would have them here.

There is only one conclusion, and that is that if any was paid out at all it was so small that it just doesn't support their case.

5306 There were only ninety-six cars of corn that I recall were testified to from the stand that could conceivably be connected with those so-called corn deals. There is no guarantee that they paid a dime in the black market for any of that corn. They may have gotten it for friendship. They may have gotten it for any other reasons.

But they did arrange the purchase of ninety-six cars of corn. I think the testimony was that there was from two hundred to seven hundred dollars premium, based upon what period of time it was. Well, assume that they paid $200.00 a car. That's around eighteen hundred, nineteen hundred and sixty dollars, or something of that sort—nineteen thousand, rather,—nineteen thousand dollars that they would have had to pay out for those ninety-six cars of corn. That still leaves them an awful lot of money left in the kitty from what they even admit Mr. Lubben paid them.

And assume there was as high as $700.00 paid a car for corn. And that would have been very unusual.
5307 It wouldn't have been charged on all ninety-six cars. Assuming that it was, though, that would be around $63,000.00. That still leaves a great deal of money left over.

But the thing that you have to remember is that they haven't proved a dime of it. They tear apart the Government's case on what these records prove and don't prove, and then come in and expect you to believe something just on faith, just because they tell you "That is the way other people were doing it, therefore we want you to believe we did it that way, too." That is not proof. It is guesswork.

Now, the Government's good faith was questioned by Mr. McConnell on this voluntary disclosure policy. The facts, however—now twisted, weasled—tend to show that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company never really intended to make a voluntary disclosure. I just didn't want you to get the impression that these people had been led into revealing something which was contrary to their rights as citizens of this country and then had that 5308 information used against them. That is not so. They were not. They have been given every possible protection that the Constitution and the laws of the United States allow them.

The Government has made available to them all of its records in this case. They have had every opportunity to examine them before they were brought here in the court and showed to these witnesses and made available to the jury. And you will have an opportunity to see them.

In no way whatsoever have they been deprived of any of those rights. And when Mr. McConnell said that the Government was guilty of bad faith, I think that he was over-stating his case and he didn't really mean what he said.

He said one other thing. He said that you have to live with your conscience. I agree with that. We all do. One of the things that a conscience requires us to do is to do your duty. We have a duty here. As the Government prosecutor, I have a duty to represent the public to 5309 the best of my ability. The defense counsel have duties to represent their clients. The Judge, of course, discharges his duty as the arbiter and in giving you the instructions.

And now the duty passes to you, as the jurors, to decide the truth and the falsity of the facts in this case. I ask you to do that duty without regard to prejudice, without regard to sympathy, without regard to color or position in any way whatsoever. I want you to cut through the Gordian knot of complications which the defense have wound about this case and cut it down to the simple issues that I tried to explain to you this morning, and on my opening statement.

If you will do that duty, if you will see that duty, there is only one conclusion that you can come to, and that is that all of the testimony you have heard, and the records which you will have an opportunity to examine, point to but one thing, and that is the unquestioned guilt of all three of these defendants, and I believe that you will come back with a verdict of guilty as to all three individuals and the corporation.

5310 Thank you.

By the Court: Well, members of the jury, as I told you, we will be in recess now until Friday morning at ten o'clock. Friday morning at ten o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing until the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess until Friday morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause to Friday, October 16, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

Chicago, Illinois, Friday, October 16, 1953, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENT:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. William T. Kirby,

AND THEREUPON the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Clerk: No. 52 CR 143, United States versus The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

5312 By the Marshal: This Honorable Court is now in session pursuant to adjournment.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, may I at this time request permission to substitute photostatic copies of Exhibits 1, 1-A, 2, and 3, which are the income tax returns of the corporation, and the excess profit tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien: No objection.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, may I ask you and Mr. Lockley, I don't know if the instructions go to the Jury, or do they not?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think so.

By the Court: They don't.

By Mr. O'Brien: No. 2—

By the Court: This isn't for the record.

(Discussion off the record).

By the Court: Mr. Reporter, will you indicate in the record—I don't believe I made a formal ruling on the exhibits. I will receive them in evidence, and they are 49, 50, 51, and 52. I receive them in evidence as Exhibits.

5313 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Defendants' Exhibits 49, 50, and 51 and 52.)

By Mr. Lockley: And 156 and 156-A, your Honor.

By the Court: Government exhibits?

By Mr. Lockley: 156 and 156-A, Government exhibits.

By the Court: They will be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibits 156 and 156-A.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Let us see what these are.

By the Court: I think I should say this to the audience here.

You know, a charge to a jury is rather long and rather involved, and, I would assume, quite uninteresting to an audience.

I merely say that to you because I have instructed the marshal to keep the doors closed, and no one will be permitted to leave or enter during the charge. And maybe some of you might like to leave at this time. It will be 5314 no discourtesy to me, if you leave, because I appreciate full well a charge to a jury is nothing very interesting to an audience.

But, be that as it may, the Marshal has been instructed to keep the doors closed, and no one will enter or leave until the Court has completed his charge.

Thereupon The Court Charged The Jury:

By the Court: Well, members of the Jury:

The testimony in this case is closed. Counsel have completed their respective arguments and summations, and it now becomes the duty of the Court to instruct you as to the law which may be applicable.

I take it that you understand; but it is my duty to remind you that under the law, you are constituted as the sole judges of the facts. And you have been sitting here now for over a month listening to this testimony, and observing these witnesses in order to enable you to determine the facts of this case.

The Court does not take it upon himself to make any comment upon any disputed issue, or express any opinion one way or another as to what your verdict should be, because if the Court did that, he would be trespassing, 5315 so to speak, upon your rights as jurors, for it is your sole responsibility to determine what the facts are, and from the facts as you find them to be, and from the law as given to you by the Court, you are to determine the guilt or innocence of these defendants.

The Court, as you have observed, presides during the trial and passes upon the competency and relevancy of the testimony, and then at the close of the trial, instructs the Jury as to the law.

It is your duty, of course, to take the law as the Court gives it to you, and apply it to the facts as you may find them to be. You will observe, therefore, that you have a duty to perform which is just as necessary and just as important as the duty which rests upon the shoulders of the Court, because to all intent and purposes, you are now sitting as the judges of the facts.

Now, during this charge, the Court will endeavor to summarize for you the respective contentions of the parties as the Court understands them for the purpose of clarify-5316 ing the issues of fact which will be submitted to you, but any summarization, or deductions from the evidence which the Court may make, are merely his best recollection and understanding. They are not binding on you, and should not be accepted by you unless they coincide with your own recollection, and understanding of the testimony.

You will understand that this matter comes before the Court upon an indictment returned by the Grand Jury of the United States in which it is charged in two counts that the defendants have committed certain offenses against the laws of the United States. The indictment is not any evidence of guilt; it is merely a means by which the defendants are brought into Court to answer the charges made. Nor does the indictment give rise to any presumption of guilt, and must not be so considered by you.

Under our laws, every defendant who is charged with a crime is presumed to be innocent. Now, that presumption remains with him throughout the entire trial, until that time, if that time is reached, that the Government has 5317 established his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The defendants here are entitled to the benefit of that presumption, and it is for you to determine, members of the Jury, whether or not the guilt of any of the defendants has been established beyond a reasonable doubt.

When the Court uses the term "reasonable doubt," and instructs you that the burden rests on the Government to prove the defendants' guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, the Court does not mean that it is incumbent upon the Government to prove a defendant's guilt to a mathematical certainty, or beyond the peradventure of doubt. A reasonable doubt does not mean a whimsical or fantastic doubt. The term "reasonable doubt" is probably self-explanatory, and is sufficiently clear, and lucid without any additional explanation on the part of the Court.

However, if after a full and fair consideration of all the evidence and testimony in this case, there is in your mind a lasting and abiding conviction of the guilt of any defendant named in this indictment amounting to a moral 5318 certainty, then you may say to yourselves that as to such defendant you have been convinced beyond a reasonable doubt.

On the other hand, if you do not have after a full and fair consideration of all the evidence and testimony, an abiding conviction of the guilt of any defendant charged herein, amounting to a moral certainty, then the guilt of such defendant has not been established as the law requires, and it would be your duty to return a verdict of not guilty as to such defendant or defendants.

The indictment, as I informed you, is in two counts. The first count charges:

"That on or about the 15th day of March, 1946, at Chicago, Illinois, in the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, a corporation, BYRON A. CAIN, President and Treasurer in 1945 and 1946, HAROLD E. SULLIVAN, Attorney in 1945 and 1946, and Executive Vice President and Attorney in 1946, and FRANK J. HUEBNER, Vice President in 1945 and 1946, of the corporation, did 5319 wilfully and knowingly attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the taxes due and owing by the corporation to the United States of America, for the calendar year, 1945, by filing and causing to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue, for the First Internal Revenue Collection District of Illinois, at Chicago, Illinois, false and fraudulent tax returns wherein they alleged the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year was the sum of $561,064.42, and that the total amount of tax due thereon was in the sum of $370,638.95, whereas as they then and there well knew, the net income of the corporation for the said calendar year, was the sum of $738,210.65, upon which net income the corporation owed to the United States of America, a total tax of $534,288.89."

5320 The second count makes the same formal charges as to the same defendants as is contained in the first count, except the violation is alleged to have taken place on or about the 15th day of March, 1947, with reference to the 1946 taxes allegedly due and owing the United States, and it is charged in the second count, that these defendants did wilfully and knowingly attempt to evade and—defeat and evade a large part of the taxes due, and owing by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company to the United States, for the year 1946, by filing and causing to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue at Chicago, Illinois, a false and fraululent tax return wherein they alleged that the net income of the corporation for the calendar year was the sum of $1,202,917.18, and that the total amount of tax due thereon was the sum of $450,012.98, whereas, as they then and there well knew, the net income of the corporation for said calendar year was the sum of $1,526,490.47, upon which net income the corporation owed to the United States of America a total tax of $579,970.83.

5321 You are instructed that an attempt to evade income tax for one year is a separate offense from an attempt to evade the tax for a different year.

The indictment in this case, therefore, charges separate offenses for the year 1946— 1945 and 1946, for the wilfull attempts to evade and defeat the corporate taxes of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

The Government contends, through the evidence which has been offered, that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, during the period in question was engaged in the manufacture of candy and marshmallows in Chicago, Illinois; that Byron A. Cain was President and Treasurer in 1945 and '46, Harold E. Sullivan was a Director and Attorney in 1945, and Executive Vice President and Attorney in 1946, and Frank J. Huebner was Vice President in 1945 and 1946; that one David Lubben was in the candy business in New York, and that during the first six months of 1945, he was the sole proprietor of a concern which did business under the name of Eatsum Food Products Company; that Lubben did business under that name from about May, 1944, until June 1, 1945.

5322 The Government contends that the Eatsum Food Products Company became a partnership on or about June 1, 1945, when Lubben and one Giglio became partners under that name with certain limited partners on each side, and that the partnership continued in the candy business until about March 6, 1946, when Lubben left, and organized a concern known as General Confections, which was a corporation, with Lubben owning most of the stock, and the General Confections carrying on a business similar to that of Eatsum Food Products Company; that the Reserve Trading Company was a subsidiary of the General Confections, and that these two concerns, General Confections, and Reserve Trading Company continued in business until some time in March, 1948, when General Confections went into receivership.

The Government contends that Lubben was a jobber doing business with Shotwell late in 1943, or early in 1944, and that when Lubben purchased the Eatsum Food Products Company from the Burry Biscuit Company early in 1944, or thereabout, the Government contends that 5323 Lubben requested Frank J. Huebner of the Shotwell Company for an increase in the quota of the candy alloted to him by that company, and that later in 1944, an arrangement was made through Huebner, whereby Shotwell would increase Lubben's quota if a cash premium or overage would be paid by Lubben for merchandise shipped to him by Shotwell.

At this time, candy was under an OPA ceiling price. The Government contends that this arrangement with Lubben and Huebner was agreed to, and that premiums, or overages, which Lubben agreed to pay were in excess of the ceiling price established by the OPA.

5324 The Government contends that from late in 1944 the arrangement for premium payments with Lubben and the Shotwell Company was carried on with reference to all candy shipped by Shotwell to the Eatsum Food Products Company; that during the proprietorship, that is, when Lubben was the sole owner of Eatsum, the Government contends that when invoices were sent by Shotwell to Eatsum the ceiling price of the merchandise was stated on the face of the invoice, but that when the invoice reached Eatsum, Lubben or his bookkeeper would add to the invoice the amount of the premium or overage and then enter the full amount of the invoice plus the overage in the purchase book record and the accounts payable record of the Eatsum Food Products Company.

The Govenment contends that Eatsum would forward a check to Shotwell for the face amount of the invoice and then at some later time a check to cash totaling at times the overages on several invoices would be entered by Eatsum in the cash disbursements book and the check cashed and the proceeds generally turned over to Lubben, who then arranged for the payment of the money to the Shotwell Company.

5325 The Government contends that in the year 1945 the first payment by Lubben was at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York when Lubben had a conference with the defendants Cain, Sullivan and Huebner, and that at that time a payment of some $19,000.00 was made to Huebner alone, when Sullivan and Cain were not present, and that this payment was made for overages due the Shotwell Company on merchandise which had been shipped.

And it is the Government's contention that from time to time thereafter during the existence of the proprietorship Lubben received candy shipments from Shotwell with the invoice noting the ceiling price, and that in accordance with the practice of Eatsum during that period, there would be noted on such invoice the amount of the overages which Lubben had agreed to pay and the transaction handled substantially as above outlined.

The Government contends that substantial cash payments were made to Huebner for the Shotwell Company by Lubben throughout the first six months of 1945. Usually the cash payments, according to the Government, were made by Lubben to Huebner, either in Chicago or New York.

5326 And it is contended that when the payments were made to Huebner he generally followed the practice of counting the money and checking the amount with a record that he kept and the cash would be divided into three piles by Huebner, with the statement on the part of Huebner that one pile was for Byron, referring to the defendant Cain, one was for Harold, referring to the defendant Sullivan, and the third was for him, and that Huebner would skim off some of the money from each pile stating that this was for the horses, or words to that effect.

The Government contends that during the proprietorship of Eatsum by Lubben in 1945, $105,473.86 of over-ceiling payments was paid to Shotwell on candy sold by Shotwell to Eatsum, and that all of such payments were made in cash.

Now, the Government contends that when the partnership was formed Eatsum discontinued the practice of entering in pencil the overage due Shotwell on the invoices which Shotwell forwarded to Eatsum, but that the payment of overages continued by cash payments to Shotwell generally through Frank J. Huebner.

5327 The Government contends that the Eatsum partnership paid to Shotwell for overages on candy sold by Shotwell from June 1, 1945, to November 27, 1945, a total of $71,672.35, and that this sum added to the $105,473.86, which the Government contends represented the overages paid up to June 1, 1945, makes a total of $177,146.21 for the overages paid Shotwell from Eatsum as a partnership —Eatsum as a proprietorship and Eatsum as a partnership during the year 1945.

The government contends that during 1946 the Eatsum partnership continued to pay overages to Shotwell but early in March Lubben, after some disagreement with Giglio, left the partnership, and there had accrued on account of overages some $41,682.10 due Shotwell from the partnership which was unpaid at the time Lubben left, and it was shortly after Lubben left the partnership, according to the government, that he came to Chicago with three checks, identified as Government's Exhibits 14, 14-A and 14-B, each in the amount of $13,894.03, payable to Byron Cain, Harold Sullivan and Frank Huebner, and that Lubben conferred with Huebner and Cain and told them that he was leaving the partnership but wanted to take 5328 care of the amount that was due Shotwell.

The Government contends that at this time Huebner and Cain refused to accept the checks for the overages, and that later the amount of the three checks, totaling some $41,682.09, was, according to the Government, paid to Huebner and Cain by Lubben in cash from the funds of the General Confections on or about March 29, 1946.

After General Confections was organized by Lubben in March, 1946, the Government contends that that concern continued the over ceiling payments upon merchandise sold by Shotwell, by making cash payments to the Shotwell Company substantially in the same manner as had been done during the proprietorship, and the partnership of Eatsum Food Products Company, except, as I remember, that no notations of the overages were made on the invoices.

Now, the Government contends, members of the Jury, that most of the payments made by General Confections were made to the defendant, Huebner, either in New York or at the Shotwell factory in Chicago. Some of the 5329 payments, according to the Government were made by one James Moran, a brother-in-law of Huebner—of Lubben, and one William Heitmann, a factory superintendent, or assistant factory superintendent for General Confections.

During 1946, when General Confections and Reserve

Trading Company were doing business with Shotwell, the Government contends that corn syrup was bought from Shotwell at a premium price and that overages were paid to one Stanley Graflund of the Shotwell Company, who was comptroller for Shotwell, and that these payments were made to Graflund at the request of Huebner.

It was during the period that General Confections was dealing with Shotwell, according to the Government, that Huebner arranged with Lubben to make shipments for General Confections without any bills or invoices, and that it was at this time that shipments of candy were made by Shotwell on bills of lading noting the shipper as the ABC Company, to several of General Confections customers, and on these so-called unbilled shipments alone, the Government contends that the over ceiling payments made 5330 to Shotwell total some $65,532.18; that including the $1,450 payment made by Lubben, on jewelry at Mr. Cain's request, the over ceiling payments made by Eatsum and General Confections during the year 1946 total payments of $211,193.90 were made, and that these premium payments, added to the premium payments made on the unbilled shipments of $65,532.18, results in a total of $276,728.08, which, according to the Government, represents the total over ceiling payments made by Shotwell—made to Shotwell by the Eatsum Company, General Confections, and Reserve Trading during the year 1946.

These figures, members of the Jury, may not be to the cent correct, but they are approximately, as I remember the evidence that was introduced on behalf of the Government.

Now, the Government contends that these defendant officers, and directors of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company knew that the premium payments made by the Eatsum Food Products Company, General Confections and Reserve Trading were not entered on the books of the Shotwell Company, and knew when the auditor, which they hired 5331 to audit the books of the Shotwell Company, and to assemble the data for the 1945 and 1946 income statements of the Government, that the auditor in preparing and filing such income tax statements would not include or consider as a part of the income of the company the premium payments which were made during these years.

It is the Government's position that defendants purposely and intentionally handled these premium payments in a manner so that there would be no book record of them, and that they would not be reflected on any income tax statements, and that their plan and scheme was to wilfully and intentionally attempt to defeat and to evade a large part of the taxes due the Government by the Shotwell Company for the two years in question by having the Shotwell corporation file a false and fraudulent tax return.

And it is the Government's position that for the year 1945, the tax due the United States from the Shotwell Company was $149,430.92 more than the tax which Shotwell paid for that year, and for the year 1946, according to the Government, the tax due the United States from the Shotwell Company was $105,155.94 more than the tax which Shotwell paid for that year.

It is the position of the Government that while most of the payments were made to Huebner for the Shotwell Company, Cain and Sullivan, as well as Huebner, were aware that the payments were not entered on the books of the company, and that each of these defendants knowingly and intentionally aided and assisted, and caused the Shotwell Company to file false and fraudulent tax returns for the years in question.

The Government contends that in August, 1948, when it was learned that Government inspectors were inquiring into Shotwell's dealings with Lubben, that Cain suggested to Lubben that he leave the country, and go to South America, and absent himself from this country for a period of a couple of years so that he could not be called upon to testify in any tax proceeding which might be instituted against Shotwell by the Government, and that Lubben refused to comply with that suggestion.

As heretofore stated, the Government contends that Huebner was the one with whom Lubben primarily dealt, and to whom he usually paid most of the overages which were due Shotwell under the agreement, and that Huebner stated from time to time to Lubben that if he, Lubben, kept the money coming by way of overages, that merchandise from Shotwell would be forwarded to him, but that without such overages Shotwell would not be able to ship any substantial amount of candy to him.

It is the position of the Government, as the Court understands it, that from the various records of Eatsum and

General Confections introduced in evidence, and the oral testimony as to the payment of overages, it has established beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a substantial amount of taxes due the United States from the Shotwell Company for each of the years 1945, and 1946, over and above that which was reported and paid by the company, and that each individual defendant, including the Shotwell Company, wilfully and intentionally attempted to 5334 evade or defeat such tax in payment thereof, by filing or aiding, assisting, or causing to be filed false and fraudulent returns for such years.

Well, members of the Jury, that gives you in a very summary, and somewhat sketchy way, the Court's understanding of the Government's position herein. Obviously, I have not intended, nor attempted to repeat or summarize all of the details of the testimony which may bear upon the Government's contentions, and of course, members of the Jury, if your recollection of, or deductions from, the testimony differs from mine, you will disregard what I have stated and depend entirely upon your own recollection and deductions, because it is your recollection of the testimony and the contentions of the parties which must govern, not mine.

Now, each of the defendants has entered a plea of not guilty, and that places in issue, each and every essential element charged in the indictment.

Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan have taken the stand in 5335 their own behalf, and considerable testimony has been offered by the defense to refute the charges made against them.

At the outset, members of the Jury, in attempting to present to you defendants' position and contentions, as I understand them from the evidence, it may be helpful to call to your attention some of the salient, that is, the important matters which are not in dispute.

The defendants admit that a considerable amount of merchandise was sold by the Shotwell Company to the Eatsum companies, and to General Confections during 1945, and 1946. They admit that for a period beginning with the latter part of 1945, and up to on or about July 1, 1946, Shotwell, with the knowledge of all of these defendants, sold candies to these concerns at a price which was in excess of the OPA ceiling price on the candy sold.

They admit, or, at least, do not deny, that these overages were paid by the Eatsum companies, and General Confections through Lubben in cash, and that the overages were not entered on the books of Shotwell, though defendant Sullivan contends that he did not know the overages 5336 were not entered on the books.

They contend that the 1945 and 1946 income tax returns of Shotwell do not reflect these cash payments which were made to the Shotwell Company. They deny, however, that the cash payments were made in the amounts testified to by Lubben, as being made to Shotwell, by way of overages.

It is the defendants' position that these cash payments, or cash overages paid by Lubben, and his companies, first commenced on or about September or October, 1945; that at that time there was a shortage of corn throughout the United States, and that was occasioned by the ceiling price the Government had placed on corn, which resulted in the corn raisers finding it more profitable to feed their corn to their livestock than to sell it on the market.

Corn, according to the defendants, was an important factor in the candy industry, because from corn, corn syrup, and corn starch are obtained and widely used by candy manufacturers. They contend that corn syrup was in unusual demand during this particular period by such 5337 manufacturers because of the shortage of sugar. The refiners of corn were, according to the defendants, unable to purchase any raw corn on the market, and hence, had to cut down their quotas to their customers.

Defendants contend that the situation became so critical during the period in question, that is, between September-October, 1945 and July 1, 1946, that a practice grew up whereby those who needed corn syrup would buy the raw corn on the so-called black market, that is, pay over ceiling prices for the corn, and arrange for the shipment of the corn to the corn refiner, who paid the ceiling price to the jobber, but agreed to refine the corn into corn syrup, and other by-products, and to allocate from the corn supplied by the particular supplier, a certain amount of the corn syrup and corn starch. The remaining by-products of the corn, such as syrups, starch, etcetera, would be used by the refiner to supply his customers who had quotas to the extent that the refiner could meet the quotas.

This situation, according to the defendants, in order
5338 to keep their factory from closing down, because of the lack of raw materials, induced them to arrange with Lubben a plan for cash overpayments for candy sold, and to use the cash overages for the purchase of raw corn to be shipped to the refiners, and thus obtain the required corn syrup, and other by-products necessary for the operation of their candy factory.

Apparently it is conceded that the only customer with whom Shotwell had such an arrangement for overages was Lubben. It is the position of the defendants that every dollar of the cash overages received from Lubben were utilized for this purpose, that is, for the purpose of buying raw corn, and having the corn shipped to the refiners, and to obtain the necessary corn syrup for the manufacture of their candy. And the defendants contend that in carrying out their plan, the money was not deposited in the regular bank account, or reflected upon their books, but was placed in a so-called cash box, which was kept and maintained in the Shotwell factory, and where the cash overages 5339 received from Lubben were placed, and sometimes the company's safety deposit box at the bank was also utilized for the safekeeping of such cash.

Now, the defendants contend that a record of the "in and out" transactions of the cash box was maintained by some of the Shotwell employees, and that during the corn shortage from September-October, 1945, until July, 1946, all of the cash overages deposited in the box were withdrawn from time to time in order to effect the raw corn purchases.

Defendants Cain and Sullivan have testified that none of the cash overages were ever diverted to them for their own personal use, and that not one single penny of the cash payments by Lubben was retained by them.

Defendants contend that Lubben's books, as to the cash payments to Shotwell, or whatever records he may have in that regard, are not reliable or trustworthy, and that they are replete with inaccuracies. And there is testimony with respect to certain specific items which the defendants contend indicate that instead of the money coming to Shotwell, as Lubben has testified, certain checks to cash were used for other purposes.

5340 They contend that Lubben was dealing heavily in the black market during 1945 and 1946 with many concerns and drew out during that period large sums of cash money from Eatsum and from General Confections, and that in handling so much cash and in making so many cash payments, his testimony as to the portion which was paid to Shotwell through Huebner is not reliable.

Defendants contend that Lubben, by reason of his financial difficulties, induced Mr. Cain and Shotwell—and the Shotwell Company, I should say, to assist him, first, in obtaining the $75,000.00 loan by guaranteeing the note which Lubben gave to the Sterling Bank at New York, where the loan was obtained, and that later, when it appeared that the $75,000.00 loan did not relieve Lubben's financial stress, he attempted to obtain an additional $50,000.00 loan direct from Shotwell.

Defendants contend that at that time the $75,000.00 loan was in default, it having been reduced to some $66,000.00 or $67,000.00, and that no further payments were made, and that when Mr. Cain had Busby and Graflund examine the books of General Confections in order to determine 5341 whether or not a further loan should be made they found the financial condition to be such that a $50,000.00 loan was not justified.

Then it was, according to the defendants, that the arrangement between Lubben and Shotwell resulted in the so-called Haberkorn deal, whereby Shotwell bought the Haberkorn factory, and whereby the obligation to the Sterling Bank was liquidated in this deal by Shotwell, in that the Shotwell Company reduced its claim against General Confections from the $66,000.00 or $67,000.00 due on the Sterling Bank note to some $30,000.00.

Defendants contend that thereafter General Confections went into receivership in March, 1948, and that Lubben wanted the Shotwell Company, or Mr. Cain, to assist him further financially, but that Mr. Cain refused to consider any further financial aid or help. On account of this refusal, it is defendants' position that Lubben's testimony regarding the over-ceiling payments must be construed in light of all these circumstances.

Defendant Cain denies that he ever requested Lubben to go to South America, as Lubben testified, and de-5342 fendant Sullivan denies that he ever had any conversation with Lubben where he asked Lubben whether or not Lubben was keeping records of the amount of over-payments made to Shotwell. Cain admits that Lubben advanced $1,450.00 for the jewelry that Mrs. Krasne brought to Chicago for him, but he contends that this was not an advance for overages, but was a mere personal transaction between him and Lubben, and that he repaid that $1,450.00 in cash to Lubben at a later date.

Cain admits that he made certain statements at a court hearing as to the Shotwell Company's tax statement being false for the years in question, and that the overages paid by Lubben might total some $400,000.00, but it is his position that these alleged admissions and the testimony read from the transcript of the court hearing must be appraised in light of his understanding of the law in 1948 when the so-called disclosure to the government was made by him and Mr. Busby, the accountant.

It is Mr. Cain's position that at that time he was informed that the government would not allow as an offset to the over-ceiling payments received for merchandise the 5343 premium payments made for raw materials in the manufacture of the merchandise thus sold; that is, that the overages paid for raw corn should not be included in the income tax computations as an expense of doing business because it was a payment made in violation of law.

Therefore, it is Cain's contention that he assumed that Shotwell did owe some taxes on account of the overages received from Lubben, even though at all times he contended that the money received did not aggregate Lubben's figures and had been used to buy raw corn, and it was thus an expense of doing business.

It is his position, as I understand it, that by reason of his then understanding of the law he indicated a willingness to file an amended return and pay any tax which the government computed to be due.

5344 Cain contends that his submission of any temporary figures to the Government as to the amounts of money received from Lubben and its disbursements for various items connected with Shotwell's business, was merely a plan to get the matter settled, and to pay any tax that the Government concluded was due from Shotwell, and that he, in good faith, assumed on account of his understanding of the so-called voluntary disclosure, that there would be no criminal prosecution if a disclosure was made of the tax liability before any investigation was made by the Government.

These defendants contend that the reason the over ceiling payments received from Lubben and the over ceiling payments made for raw corn were not recorded on the books of Shotwell was because both these types of transactions were violations of the OPA Law, which existed at that time, and would subject them to criminal, as well as to civil penalties, in the event such facts were disclosed in their books.

They contend that they did not wilfully or inten-
5345 tionally attempt to defeat or evade any taxes due the United States, because they assumed in good faith, that the over ceiling payments received were offset by the over ceiling payments made for raw corn, and they assumed that such receipts and such payments would offset one another, so as not to affect the net income of the company, and hence, that it would not increase the income tax over the sums which Shotwell did pay for these years.

They contend that the first time that they knew of the Government's ruling as to the Government's refusal to recognize over ceiling purchases, for raw materials as an expense of doing business, was when Mr. Busby informed Mr. Cain, after he had inspected Lubben's books, and learned of these over ceiling transactions, and that as soon as it was learned there would be a tax due the Government, under the Government's ruling, they notified Mr. Busby to make a complete disclosure to the agent in charge of the Internal Revenue Department here in Chicago.

Consequently, summarizing the defendants' position as I understand it, while they admit that they violated the 5346 OPA Law in receiving overages, and paying overages, to suppliers of raw corn, they contend that all the monies received from Lubben were utilized for the purpose of buying raw corn which was refined into corn syrup and that they never wilfully intended to violate any tax laws, or to defraud or defeat the Government out of any income taxes due for the years 1945 and 1946, or either of them.

Now, members of the Jury, I make the same statement with reference to the summary of defendants' position and contentions in this matter as I did with reference to the Government's contentions.

Obviously, I have not attempted to cover any detail of the defendants' testimony, or every contention herein. My only purpose in attempting to summarize the position that the Government takes, on the one hand, and the defendants on the other, is to crystallize and clarify, if possible, the fact issues which you will be called upon to determine, and if my summation of defendants' position herein, does not coincide with your understanding of the testimony, or 5347 your deductions from the testimony, then you may disregard what I have stated and depend entirely upon your own recollection and understanding of the testimony, and the deductions to be drawn from such testimony.

The pertinent portion of the United States Statute involved in this case reads—and possibly, I might read the entire statute. While some of it doesn't necessarily pertain to this matter, I will not read any portions that are disconnected.

The indictment is brought under this statute:

"Any person required under this Chapter to collect, account for, and pay over any tax imposed by this Chapter, who wilfully fails to collect, or truthfully account for and pay over such tax * *"

And then comes the portion which pertains to the charge made here:

" and any person who wilfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat any tax imposed by this Chapter, or the payment thereof, shall" be guilty of a violation of law.

5348 The term "person" as used in the law, of course, includes a corporation. And the statute also says that:

"The term 'person' as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs."

And then there is another section of the law which you may consider, which provides as follows:

"Whoever commits an offense against the United States, or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission is a principal;" and:

"Whoever causes an act to be done which if directly performed by him would be an offense against the United States, is also a principal and punishable as such."

The crime with which these defendants are charged 5349 in each count of the indictment involves two principal elements: First, there must have been a tax due under the applicable revenue act from the Shotwell Company to the United States for the years in question over and above that which the Shotwell Company paid; and, second, there must have been a wilful and intentional attempt to evade or defeat such tax or the payment thereof.

The attempt to evade or defeat the tax must be a willful attempt, that is, intentionally done, not something that happened accidentally or through oversight or misunderstanding of the law. The act must be done with the intent that the Government should be defrauded of the income taxes due from the taxpayer.

Now, intent is a state of mind and it is not possible to look into a man's mind to see what goes on. The only way you have of arriving at the intent of any defendant in this case is to take into consideration all the facts and circumstances shown by the testimony and exhibits which have been received in evidence herein.

5350 Direct proof of wilful intent is not necessary. It may be inferred from the acts of the defendants and such inferences may arise from a combination of acts, although each act by itself may seem unimportant. It is a question of fact, members of the jury, to be determined from all of the evidence.

You will observe, therefore, that the first question which you should determine is whether or not you are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt from all of the evidence that there was due from the Shotwell Company for one or both of the years named in the indictment, an income tax in an amount substantially greater than that reported and paid by the Shotwell Company to the Government for such year or years; that is, members of the jury, if the Shotwell Company paid the taxes due the Government for the years in question then, of course, that will end this case and your verdict must be one of not guilty as to each one of these defendants.

So you will readily understand that your first prob-5351 lem will be to determine from the evidence the amount of overages which were paid to Shotwell during 1945 and 1946. And I charge you that regardless of what the Commissioner's ruling was in 1948, or prior thereto, as to the nondeductibility of overages paid for the cost of goods sold, the law is now settled that such an expense is deductible in computing income taxes. Hence, if all the overages paid to Shotwell by Lubben and his companies were paid out by the Shotwell Company for raw corn in procuring syrup and other by-products of corn for the manufacture of candy during the years in question, then no tax in addition to that which was paid by Shotwell was due to the United States and each of these defendants must be found not guilty.

Well, what amount did Shotwell receive by way of overages during 1945 and 1946? You will remember that the Government contends that the total overages in 1945 amounted to $177,146.23 and in 1946 the total overages paid to Shotwell amounted to $276,726.08. There does not appear in the record, as I remember it, any direct testimony for the defendants as to the total overages which they 5352 admit Lubben paid, except they contend that Lubben's figures as reflected in the testimony are grossly exaggerated.

First, members of the jury, it would seem to me that you would want to consider at what time did the overages begin? Lubben contends that Huebner required him to pay overages in the latter part of 1944 and that the overages were paid during the entire years of 1945 and 1946. The defendants contend that the first payment of overages did not take place until September or October of 1945. Who is giving you a correct version of that? The testimony offered by the Government, or that offered by the defendants?

It would be important for you to determine when the overages began, because defendants contend that there were no overages paid, except during the period of the corn shortage, which was from September-October, 1945, to about July 1, 1946, while the Government contends that these payments which were made by Lubben had no relation to the so-called corn shortage, but were paid to Shotwell months before there was any critical shortage of corn syrup.

5353 Well, you have seen Lubben on the stand and had an opportunity to observe him during the days that he was subject to direct and cross examination. You have heard the other testimony and written records offered by the Government which it is contended substantiate Lubben's testimony as to the times when the over-ceiling payments were made and as to the amount.

And you have heard the testimony offered by the defendants in this regard, and their records and exhibits offered by them, which they contend discredit Lubben's testimony, and the records offered by the Government in this regard. The truth as to when the overages began, their duration, and their amount is a matter, and an important matter, which you will have to determine from all the evidence introduced.

You will remember that the defendants contend that no complete records of the amount of overages paid by Lubben are available, in that Shotwell did not attempt to keep any records, except the notations made as to the cash put in and taken out of the cash box, and that that record is no longer in existence.

5354 The testimony as to what happened to the records of the "in and out" transactions of Shotwell's cash box is in dispute. Stanley Graflund, the former comptroller of Shotwell, says that this record was destroyed on orders from Mr. Cain. Mr. Cain denies that any such orders were given. In any event, we do not have the written record which defendants contend was maintained and which noted the "in and out" transactions of the cash box.

Well, whatever the amount of the overages may have been which were paid to Shotwell, what disposition was made of such receipts by Shotwell? Were they all paid out for raw corn during the latter part of 1945 and up to about July 1, 1946, as the defendants contend? If that is true, then there was no additional tax due the United States over that which Shotwell paid. You have heard the testimony as to the alleged corn purchases and the records in evidence which pertain thereto. You have heard the testimony with reference to the shortage of corn during the period beginning the latter part of 1945 and up to July 1, 1946, and 5355 the alleged practice which prevailed with reference to raw corn, and shipping the same to the refiners in order to obtain corn products.

Moreover, you have heard the testimony as to the allocation of corn syrup to those who had quotas, including Shotwell.

Defendants contend that the records of the corn refiners available do not reflect all the Shotwell purchases for raw corn in that the memoranda and other records kept by the corn refiners of raw corn shipped by the supplier to the refiner were not in all instances retained. Therefore, the defendants contend they do not have available all of the written records as to the raw corn purchases by Shotwell. However, they contend that from time to time packages of money were taken from the cash box and delivered to various purchasers—or delivered to various persons, I should say, and that such deliveries of money were in connection with corn purchases.

The Government, on the other hand, contends that if any of the overages were used by Shotwell in the purchase of raw corn, such purchases were a relatively small part 5356 of the overages paid by Lubben, and that the greater part of the overages was never used for that purpose.

You may consider, members of the jury, all direct and circumstantial evidence which may bear upon that question and determine in light of all the evidence whether or not any over-ceiling premiums which Shotwell received were used for the procurement of corn to obtain corn syrup, and other products, during the years in question, and if so, to what extent. If Shotwell received more in overages than it paid out for raw materials in 1945 and 1946, what about the balance? Where did it go? What light does that throw, if any, upon the intent of the parties with reference to the charge made in this indictment?

Well, members of the jury, you will have to determine the true, the believable and the plausible and reasonable facts in that regard from all the evidence which you have heard. It is not necessary for the Government to prove an attempt to evade or defeat the exact sum of 5357 taxes charged in the indictment. In other words, if the overages received by Shotwell as income constituted income of that corporation during the years in question and if only a part of it was used for the purchase of raw corn for the business of the corporation, and if you find by reason thereof that there was a substantial part of the taxes due the Government during 1945 and 1946, or for one of these years, which was due and which was not paid by Shotwell, then as to such year or years, if any of these defendants wilfully and knowingly attempted to evade and defeat such tax as charged in the indictment, then such defendant or defendants would be guilty as charged.

Apparently it is not disputed that when merchandise was sold by Shotwell to the Lubben companies, and upon which an overage was paid, it was the custom of Shotwell to forward to the Lubben companies an invoice which noted the ceiling price of the particular candy which was sold and that an understanding was had between Lubben and Shotwell that the amount of overages would be paid in cash. The entire selling price, therefore, included not 5358 only the invoice price but also the invoice price plus the overage.

There is testimony by Lubben that Huebner stated that the overages were to be divided among the three defendants, Cain, Sullivan and Huebner. However, the defendants deny that any money was diverted to the pockets of these defendants, or that there was any plan or scheme whereby these overages were to be divided or, rather, diverted from the income of the corporation into the pockets of these three individual defendants.

You will understand, however, that the only issue on trial before you is that contained in the indictment which charges the defendants with attempting to evade income taxes owed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation. The indictment does not accuse the individual defendants, Cain, Sullivan and Huebner, of attempting to evade income tax owed by them personally, nor is such issue before you.

Any cash payments by way of overages made by Eatsum, Reserve Trading Company, General Confections, may be considered in support of the Government's case only 5359 if such constituted taxable income to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. But payments to a corporation, and received by it, for goods sold by it on the so-called black market, do constitute revenue for tax purposes.

I see it is eleven-fifteen, members of the jury, and while I do not have a great deal left in my charge, I think probably you would like a short recess. I think we will take a short recess. We will be at recess for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and jury leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: Well, continuing, members of the jury, from where I left off when we took our recess, in determining the issues of this case you have a right to take into consideration the manner in which such transactions involving overages were entered on the books of the 5360 Lubben companies in so far as they were entered and you have a right to take into consideration any records kept by Shotwell and also the testimony regarding the suggested division of the overages which were paid, together with all other facts and circumstances which may throw any light as to whether or not these overages constituted income to Shotwell.

I charge you that to the extent that you find from the evidence that any cash payments for overages were received by individual defendants for their own benefit, then to such extent such payments would constitute income to such individual defendant and did not constitute taxable income to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

These defendants are not charged with the violation of any OPA law, and an intent to violate the tax laws cannot be proven simply because there was an intent to violate the OPA law, or any other Federal law.

5361 The fact that the OPA laws were admittedly violated may be considered by you in so far as such circumstances may throw light upon the conduct of the parties, their failure to keep adequate books and records of the overpayments, and to explain or throw light upon their conduct in handling these transactions, and with reference to the question of intent or lack of intent to wilfully violate the tax laws.

The fact, if it be a fact, that the defendants, or some of them, committed offenses against the price control laws of the United States creates no presumption that such defendant or defendants committed the offenses here charged against him or them.

Now, some testimony, members of the Jury, has been introduced about a disclosure made by Mr. Cain and Mr. Busby to the Revenue authorities, when it was learned from Mr. Busby that Lubben's books upon examination by Busby, and Graflund, reflected certain over ceiling payments to Shotwell. It appears that Busby advised Cain as to the necessity of a disclosure to the Revenue 5362 authorities, because of the failure of the 1945 and 1946 income tax returns to disclose these over ceiling payments, and their disposition.

You heard the testimony as to the visits made by Cain and Busby to one Mr. Sauber, who was connected with the Internal Revenue Department, and the statements made by Cain and Busby with respect to the over ceiling payments received, and their alleged disposition for raw materials by Shotwell.

You have heard the testimony regarding Cain's alleged admission as to the falsity or incompleteness of these tax returns, and his explanation as to why, in his opinion, at the time he assumed they were false and inaccurate.

There has also been received in evidence work sheets and data compiled by Mr. Busby, and certain data compiled by Mr. Cain with respect to an alleged tentative compilation of the overages, and the disposition of such receipts by Shotwell, for raw materials, and the nature and character of the disposition, which was allegedly made.

5363 All of the testimony should be considered by you, that is, all that testimony should be considered by you in view of the circumstances, and understanding of the parties in so far as it may bear upon any intent of the parties to wilfully violate the income tax laws or their good faith, or lack of good faith in the matter.

Any admission by Mr. Cain as to taxes due the Government at that time from Shotwell must be considered in light of his understanding of the law at that time, that is, that overages paid for raw materials in violation of the OPA law would not be recognized by the Tax Income authorities at that time as an expense of doing business.

Now, it is not necessary for you to determine the effect of any so-called disclosure, except in so far as it may throw light upon the conduct of the parties, and the objects and the purposes which they had in mind in doing that which they did do, during that period, and in so far as it may throw light upon the intent of the parties and their good faith, or lack of good faith.

5364 Whether immunity should be granted because of any so-called disclosure depends upon many facts and circumstances which are not for you to decide.

From the fact that we are here to determine the guilt or innocence of these defendants in this criminal case, it must necessarily follow that no immunity has been granted, and any alleged disclosure has not freed these defendants from criminal prosecution.

The so-called disclosure policy of the Government which may have been evidenced by certain statements of the Treasury Department was primarily promulgated for the purpose of obtaining from various defrauding taxpayers confessions of their fraudulent attempts to defeat their income tax, and to make a disclosure to the Government of such fraud, and to honestly disclose the amount of the tax due, and to aid and assist the Government in all matters pertaining thereto. Whether a disclosure within the meaning of the so-called disclosure policy of the Government in order to grant them immunity from criminal prosecution has been made, is a matter for the Court to determine 5365 and not for the Jury, and the only purpose, the only purpose of admitting any testimony regarding any alleged disclosure of the defendants with respect to their income tax for 1945, and 1946, is to enable the Jury to understand that the defendants contend that they attempted to make a disclosure and that certain statements and admissions were made to the Government on the assumption that they had made a disclosure.

Consequently, any reference to any voluntary disclosure may be considered by you only in so far as it may throw light or bear upon the conduct of the parties during the time that the alleged disclosure was made, and whether they intended to violate the income tax laws.

The fact that the defendants may have assumed that their disclosure granted immunity to the Shotwell Company, and to the individual defendants herein, is no defense in this proceeding, and as I have stated, and I repeat again, it is only material in so far as it may bear upon the intent of the individual defendants, or the intent of the Shotwell Company to violate the income tax laws, and their 5366 good faith, or lack of good faith in doing that, which they did do in reference to their alleged disclosure, and in so far as it may have a bearing upon any of the acts, admissions, conduct, etcetera, which may have taken place during such alleged disclosure.

Any statement or act of any of the defendants not in the presence of another defendant is not binding upon the absent defendants, even though one or more of the defendants were mentioned in the conversation, nor are such matters competent evidence against any other defendant not present. I have limited, you will observe, certain evidence during the trial, from time to time, as being competent only as to certain defendant or defendants, that is, by way of example, what Mr. Huebner, or Mr. Cain may have said or done in the absence of Mr. Sullivan, would not be binding or competent as to Mr. Sullivan. Likewise, what Mr. Huebner may have said or done not in the presence of Cain, would not be binding on Cain, and what Mr. Cain may have said in the absence of Huebner would not be binding on Huebner.

5367 But in so far as the corporation is concerned, these three individual defendants were either directors, or officers of the corporation during 1945, and 1946. A corporation is a legal entity in the eyes of the law, and must act through its Board of Directors and officers, who under its By-laws are charged with certain duties. When such officers are carrying out the duties assigned to them by the corporation and are acting in the course and scope of such duties, they are acting for the corporation, and their acts and statements thus made are binding on the corporation.

The only way a corporation can function is through its duly appointed representatives, and whether or not that which was done or said by any of these individual defendants was binding upon the corporation is for you to determine, and if you find that they in doing that which they did do, were acting in furtherance of their duties as such officers or directors, or attorneys, then to that extent their acts are binding upon the corporation.

5368 In order to find the Shotwell Manufacturing Corporation guilty of an attempt to evade taxes, you must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt not only that there was a tax due and owing, but also that the corporation had knowledge of its obligation and wrongfully and intentionally intended to evade payment.

As I have stated, a corporation is a legal entity. Since it is impersonal, it must have officers and agents to act for it. And a general rule is that any act done, or admission or declaration made within the officers' scope of authority is binding upon the corporation. This, in substance, I have already said to you.

However, if an officer or agent has a personal interest in any transaction which is adverse or inconsistent with that of his corporation, then the officer or agent's conduct, admissions or declarations cannot be considered as a corporate act, and if in this case, it appears that any officer was acting for his personal interest, and such interest was adverse to the interests of the corporation, then such statements, declarations, or admissions; or 5369 acts, would not bind the corporation. It is for you to decide from the testimony what these individual defendants did or said as officers, and then determine whether they were acting in the interests of the corporation, or their own personal interests, adverse to the corporation.

Therefore, if you find that the individual defendants, or any of them, in any transaction or transactions, had a personal interest adverse to that of the corporation, then in such transaction or transactions, whatever guilty knowledge or wrongful intent, if any, was possessed by that defendant or defendants, with respect to such transaction or transactions, cannot be imputed to the corporation.

The mere fact that any of the defendants was an officer or director of The Shotwell Company during a portion or all of the time here involved is not in and of itself proof of any wilful or knowing attempt to defraud the Government. A director or officer is not bound by the act, or representations of other officers, or employees, until it is shown that he knowingly and wilfully intended to adopt such act or representation. Nor is an officer or director criminally 5370 accountable for the acts of other officers, unless such acts were done at his direction or under his control. The mere fact that a defendant was an officer or director of the company does not charge him with the knowledge of the contents of the books and records of the corporation, and he cannot be charged with knowledge of any of the entries of said books in absence of proof of actual knowledge.

Now, you will remember that the income tax returns for 1945 and 1946 made by Shotwell were not signed by any one of these defendants, nor prepared by them. The evidence indicates that the accountant, Busby, prepared the tax statements from the books of the company, and Gladys Morrill, the office manager, and Stanley Graflund, either Secretary or Comptroller, signed the returns. The fact that none of the defendants herein prepared or signed the returns may be considered by you in so far as that fact may have a bearing upon the charges made against them in this indictment, and their intent to wilfully evade or defeat any tax due the Government.

5371 However, even though any individual defendant did not prepare or sign the tax return, if the facts and circumstances disclosed by the evidence establish beyond a reasonable doubt that any defendant wilfully and intentionally aided, assisted, or caused the corporation to file a false return for the years in question, with an intent to evade or defeat such taxes, or the payment thereof, then such defendant is guilty of the charge made in this indictment.

If you find from all of the evidence that at the time of the filing the corporate tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946, respectively, any individual defendant or defendants, believed that all unreported income of the corporation for those years had been disbursed for unreported expenditures for raw materials, then you must find such individual defendant or defendants not guilty because there would be no intent to evade income tax of the corporation, even though you also find that all of such unreported income of the corporation defendant—or the corporate defendant had not been, in fact, so expended.

5372 Since each of these individual defendants is charged with wilfully and knowingly attempting to defeat or evade a large part of the taxes due and owing to the United States from the Shotwell Company, by filing or causing to be filed a false or fraudulent income tax return for the corporation, the corporate defendant, you would not be justified in finding any defendant guilty unless you were satisfied by the evidence, beyond and to the exclusion of a reasonable doubt, that he aided, assisted, or caused erroneous income tax returns to be filed by the corporate defendant in a wilfull and knowing attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the taxes, which were due and owing the United States from the corporate defendant, and which such individual defendants knew were so due and owing.

The question is, therefore, members of the Jury, whether you are convinced from all the evidence that there were taxes due the Government for the years in question in amounts substantially higher than those reported and paid by the corporation to the Government, and whether 5373 you are convinced from all the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that there was a wilful attempt by the defendants, or any of them in such years to evade or defeat any substantial part of such income tax by filing or causing to be filed a false and fraudulent return for the corporate defendant for the years in question.

There has been some reference to trade deals. Well, if you find from the evidence that there were trade deals by which the corporate defendant sold some of its merchandise at ceiling in return for the sale to it by the customer, or some third party, of raw materials, at ceiling prices, you are instructed that no income to the corporation resulted therefrom.

Now, the burden of proof in this case, members of the Jury, rests upon the Government. I have informed you that the Government must establish the guilt of any defendant beyond a reasonable doubt, and it is for you to determine in light of all the evidence, whether or not the Government has sustained that burden. You have seen the witnesses on the stand. You have had an opportunity 5374 to observe them. You have a right to make use of your own common observations, and experience, as men and women in the affairs of life, and consider all the evidence in the light of your common observations and such experience, and ascertain where the truth may be on any material fact in this case.

You have the right to take into consideration the frankness, or lack of frankness of the witnesses, their candor, or lack of candor, the reasonableness or unreasonableness of their statements, the opportunity or lack of opportunity of knowing that about which they have testified, the interest or lack of interest which they may have in the outcome of this proceeding; and from all these facts and circumstances together with all the other facts and circumstances, of the case, decide whether or not the Government has sustained the burden of proof.

It is not sufficient for the Government to establish the probability that the facts charged are more likely to be true than the contrary, and you have no right to entertain the opinion or assert the argument that the defendants, 5375 or any one of them are probably guilty of the crime charged, or else the Government would not have gone to the trouble or expense of this trial.

The fact that the Government is a party does not give it a higher standing in court than any other litigant. In other words, members of the Jury, you should consider all of the evidence in light of these instructions, and bring in such a verdict as the evidence and the law fairly and honestly justify.

If the Government has sustained the burden of proof as to Count 1, or Count 2 of the indictment, or both of them, in the manner in which the law requires as to any defendant, then a verdict of guilty should be returned as to such defendant, even though such defendant may not have profited personally by the fraud. If the Government has not sustained the burden of proof as to either Count, as to any defendant, then your verdict should be one of not guilty as to each count, as to such defendant.

And not only are you the sole judges of the facts,
5376 but you are the sole judges of the credibility of the witnesses.

You are not to accept the testimony of any witness simply because it is sworn to, or follow it blindly wherever it may lead you. The law anticipates that you will weigh and scrutinize all the testimony in order to determine where the truth may be.

You men and women are from different walks of life. You have had experience in your own private affairs, and you have observed the conduct of men and women in various phases of human activity. Apply to the testimony your good common sense, and analyze, weigh and scrutinize all the testimony and determine the truth.

I charge you that if you find that during this trial any witness or witnesses have wilfully testified falsely with respect to any material matter, then you are at liberty to disregard the entire testimony, except in so far as such testimony may be corroborated by other credible testimony.

5377 Various books and records and memoranda have been introduced in evidence. If you believe from the evidence that any of such books, records or memoranda have in any way been falsified then you should scrutinize carefully all of the other books, records and memoranda of that person or corporation in order to determine whether the remainder of the books and records or other memoranda are dependable and worthy of belief.

Now, there are two classes of evidence recognized and admitted in a court of justice, upon either of which juries may lawfully find an accused guilty of crime. One is direct evidence and the other is circumstantial evidence. Circumstantial evidence may consist of any acts, declarations or circumstances admitted in evidence, or the reasonable and convincing inferences to be drawn therefrom as to any defendant tending to prove the crime charged or tending to connect such defendant with the commission of the offense charged.

The Government has offered both direct and circumstantial evidence. And while a conviction may be had 5378 upon circumstantial evidence alone, where a conviction of a criminal offense or any element thereof is sought by circumstantial evidence, the Government must not only show by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the alleged facts and circumstances are true, but it must appear that such facts and circumstances are incompatible with any reasonable hypothesis other than the guilt of the defendant. Unless there is substantial evidence of facts as to any defendant which excludes every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt, such defendant must be acquitted. Evidence of facts that are as consistent with innocence as they are with guilt is insufficient to warrant a conviction. In order to warrant a conviction on circumstantial evidence all the circumstances must be consistent with each other, consistent with the hypothesis that the accused is guilty, and inconsistent with the hypothesis that he is innocent. Where the conclusions from the circumstances proven permit any rational conclusion of innocence, there is not sufficient proof of guilt. If you find upon an impartial consideration of all the evidence in the case that the

Now, in closing, members of the jury, may I call to your attention that when you were examined by the Court as to your competency and qualifications to act as jurors in this case each one of you answered, and I think frankly, the questions which were put to you by the Court, and you were accepted as jurors because it was assumed by both sides that you were competent and qualified to act as jurors. You indicated to the Court that you felt that you were free from any prejudice and free from any passion or sympathy and that you could decide this case fairly, honestly and impartially upon the evidence and the law that the Court would give to you. And, of course, it would be improper for you to disregard the answers that you gave to the 5380 Court when you were interrogated as to your competency as jurors.

Now, the Court has not intended during the trial of this case, and does not intend to express any opinion as to any matter of fact disclosed by the evidence, and if the Court has, you are at liberty to disregard such opinion, and it is your duty to do so, if it does not coincide with your own recollection.

During the trial certain evidence has been stricken and I have tried to indicate to you when upon motion of any party the answers of any witnesses have been stricken. Such statements which have been stricken are not evidence in the case and must not be so considered by you.

During a trial of this length it is inevitable that there will be frequent objections by attorneys on either side to questions that are asked or answers that may be made by the witnesses. Of course, it is the right of the attorneys on either side to object to the introduction of testimony and the mere fact that the Court has overruled objections or sustained objections; or if during the trial the Court 5381 has admonished counsel, if the Court deemed that the remarks of counsel or questions of counsel were improper, you should not assume to infer therefrom that the Court has expressed any view one way or another as to the merits of the Government's position or as to the merits of the defendants' position. The Court has endeavored to be entirely impartial during the trial and you are not to assume by reason of any ruling that the Court has made that that indicates any view of the Court one way or the other as to what your verdict should be.

Of course, a finding of guilt cannot rest upon pure conjecture. It must be based upon substantial evidence, which leaves an abiding conviction that the accused is guilty. And when you go to your jury room you must keep in mind in passing upon the guilt or innocence of the defendants, each of the two counts of the indictment constitutes a separate charge, and each count of the indictment should be considered by you in arriving at the guilt or innocence of the defendants separately. Under the evidence you must 5382 find the defendants guilty or not guilty as to each count of the indictment, and these instructions apply as to each count of the indictment just as though the defendants were not charged in the other count. You will find the defendants guilty or not guilty on either of the counts of the indictment as under the evidence and these instructions you conclude that it is your duty to do.

In considering your verdict, if you find after due deliberation that you cannot agree on the guilt or innocence of any defendant or defendants and cannot agree on the guilt or innocence of the other defendants—I think that probably is—I will read that again. I think I inadvertently misread it.

In considering your verdict if you find after due deliberation that you can agree on the guilt or innocence of any defendant or defendants and cannot agree on the guilt or innocence of the other defendant or defendants, you are instructed that you may render your verdict as to the defendant or defendants upon whose guilt or innocence you can agree.

5383 Now, a defendant is under no obligation to testify in his own behalf. He may do so, if he chooses. However, his neglect to testify does not raise any presumption against him or any of the other defendants and I instruct you that you shall not consider the failure of any defendant to testify in the case, nor shall you draw any presumption of the guilt of any defendant because of his failure to testify.

During the trial you have heard certain witnesses who have testified to the good character and reputation of the individual defendants. Such evidence is competent in so far as it may tend to show that he would not be likely to commit the crime alleged against him in the indictment. If the jury believes from all the evidence that prior to the alleged commission of the alleged crime any defendant has always borne a good reputation as a man of honesty and integrity among acquaintances and in the community, it is a fact to be considered by the jury with all the other evidence in the case in determining the guilt or innocence of these defendants, and the good reputation of the defendant or defendants for honesty and integrity may be 5384 sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt as to any defendant's guilt.

You will remember that during the trial certain summaries have been made by witnesses which purport to summarize for your benefit what certain exhibits and certain testimony establish. Of course, such summaries are entitled to weight as evidence only to the extent that you choose to give weight to the testimony of the witnesses or the books and records upon which the summaries are based. If you choose to disregard as evidence all or part of the testimony of such witnesses or the correctness of such books and records, then you must likewise disregard so much of the summaries as are based upon the testimony of such witnesses and the books and records which you decide to disregard.

Some reference has been made to the civil liability of the corporate defendant for taxes due for the years 1945 and 1946. Well, of course, we are not concerned with that question and it is not an issue in this matter, and the outcome of this case in your hands in no way affects the rights to proceed against the corporation for any taxes due in 5385 civil proceedings if the Government believes that additional taxes may be due the Government from the defendants.

I have already indicated that these counts constitute a separate and distinct charge against each defendant and that it is necessary that you consider each count of the indictment separately and that you consider the guilt or innocence of each defendant separately as to each count. In reality, it is just as though you were trying eight separate cases, because we have four defendants, and we have two counts as to each. You must take up and consider separately each of these cases as you find the evidence bears upon each of them. Your verdict, of course, must be unanimous as to each count and as to each defendant regarding whom you render a verdict.

I take it, members of the jury, that it is not necessary for me to remind you that this case is important. It is important to the Government. It is important to these defendants. It is the taxable income of individuals, partnerships and corporations which forms the principal revenue for the 5386 support of the Government. The wilful violation of the income tax laws of the land is, therefore, a matter of great concern to the Government, and those guilty of such an offense and proven to be guilty should be speedily found guilty by a jury chosen in such trial.

On the other hand, this case is of no less importance to each of the defendants who is charged with a serious crime and if he is not guilty or if his guilt is not established you should, of course, not hesitate to return speedily a finding of not guilty as to such defendant or defendants.

There has been a great deal of testimony presented in this case, and a vast amount of books and records. There may be, members of the jury, considerable testimony which has only a remote bearing upon the salient, that is, the controlling issues of this case. I am anxious that you be not misled or confused by collateral issues or matters which are of no particular materiality or help in determining the real issues of this lawsuit. Although this case has taken a long time to try and there is a mass of evidence for you to consider, the controlling issues are 5387 not complicated. Ask yourselves what in light of the evidence was the amount of the overages which were paid by Lubben and his companies to the Shotwell Company and received by that company as income during 1945 and 1946? Did such payments constitute income to the Shotwell Company in light of these instructions? What amount of overages which were paid to the Shotwell Company, and which constituted income to that company, were paid by Shotwell for raw corn during 1945 and 1946? If all the overages received from Lubben and his companies by Shotwell were paid out for raw corn by Shotwell during 1945 and 1946, that ends this case and you should return a verdict for each of the defendants of not guilty, because the transaction would result in no taxable income to the Shotwell Company.

On the other hand, if all the overages paid by Lubben and his companies to Shotwell, and which constituted income to Shotwell within the meaning of these instructions, were not paid out by Shotwell during 1945 and 1946 for raw corn and there remained from these transactions in-5388 come to the Shotwell Company during those years in a substantial amount which resulted in a substantial taxable income due the United States which was not reported in the 1945 and 1946 tax returns, or either of them, and if it appears from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that any defendant wilfully, knowingly and intentionally attempted to evade or defeat such tax for 1945 or 1946, or both, by filing or causing to be filed a false and fraudulent tax return, then as to such defendant and for such year or years you should find such defendant guilty.

Now, you have no interest in this case, except to see that justice is done, and you are now sitting here as the servants of the law. Put aside all collateral matters and all prejudice or sympathy you may have one way or another. And if you return a verdict of guilty, members of the jury, as to any of these defendants, you are not concerned with the punishment that the Court may mete out. Your only duty is to determine whether any of the defendants is guilty or not guilty of the offense charged in each of the two counts of the indictment.

5389 The exhibits which have been received may be taken by you to your jury room and may be used by you in your deliberations.

Your first duty will be to elect a foreman, or a forewoman, and then proceed to deliberate upon the case.

Your verdict must be unanimous. The clerk has prepared a form of verdict which reads as follows:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, the Shotwell Company" and then there is a blank, and you will have your foreman write in word "guilty" or "not guilty," as you may find it to be, because the verdict then goes on to read:

"as charged in the first count of the indictment."

Then the verdict goes on to read:

"and we find said defendant" then there is a blank, and your foreman will write "guilty" or "not guilty"—"as charged in the second count of the indictment."

I take it you will have no difficulty in understanding how to make out that verdict.

5390 Then the verdict goes on to read:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Byron A. Cain,"—then there is the blank, and you will write the word "guilty" or "not guilty." And then the verdict goes on to read: "as charged in the first count of the indictment. And we find said defendant"—of course, that is Byron A. Cain—blank—you will insert therein "guilty," or "not guilty"—"as charged in the second count of the indictment."

Then the verdict goes on to read:

"And we the jury find the defendant, Harold E. Sullivan"—blank—you write therein, "guilty," or "not guilty"

—"as charged in the first count of the indictment. And we find said defendant"—referring to Harold E. Sullivan—blank—and you write therein, the word "guilty" or "not guilty"—"as charged in the second count of the indictment, and we the jury find the defendant, Frank J. Huebner"— blank and you write therein the word "guilty" or 5391 "not guilty"—"as charged in the first count of the indictment, and we find the said defendant"—referring to Frank J. Huebner—blank—insert therein the word "guilty," or "Not guilty"—"as charged in the second count of the indictment."

That verdict then will be signed by your foreman. And I understand the practice in this District is that each individual juror will sign his name to the verdict that you find.

Well, members of the jury, my charge has taken a long time. Perhaps too long. I suppose the purpose of the Court primarily is to try to make an intelligible charge to the jury so that you may clearly understand the issues which you are going to try, and that you may proceed intelligently to determine this law suit. I know that you will try to do a good job. After all, you have been sitting here for over a month. The Government doesn't pay you a great deal. Many of you have been here at a sacrifice, I know. But the great compensation that you receive from jury service, is to know that you have done a good job, that you have been honest, that you have done what you honestly 5392 believe the evidence and the law as the Court gives it to you, require.

And if you have that satisfaction, then you will have something that will remain with you for a long, long time, and far more valuable and far more lasting than the remuneration that you receive from the Government.

Now, Mrs. Blondin who has been our alternate juror, and who has been very faithful in serving as such, now that we have twelve jurors who seem healthy and able to carry on, we, of course, are in a position to excuse Mrs. Blondin. I want to thank you, most sincerely, for your attention, and your aid and help that you have given us in this case.

I would suggest to you that you don't talk to anybody about it, till after you are through, after the jury returns a verdict. Then I don't care. If anybody asks you how you have decided, Mrs. Blondin, you simply say, "I don't care to make any comment." I think that is the better way to handle it. Thank you.

In any event, the Marshal who is here in attendance will arrange to show you where you should go, to take care 5393 of your per diem and your mileage. Thank you.

(Alternate juror Rose E. Blondin was thereupon excused.)

Now, then, counsel may call to my attention any errors that I have made in my summation of facts, or any errors that I may have made in my statements of the law.

And as you know, the rules require that that must be taken care of before the jury retires.

By Mr. O'Brien: Out of the presence of the jury, Judge.

By the Court: Out of the presence of the jury.

I haven't any objection if you want to retire to my Chambers, if you think that is more convenient, and you can then make such record as you think you should. And the jury may remain in their seats, because, I take it, it will take only relatively a few minutes.

(And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in Chambers, outside the hearing and presence of the Jury:—)

5394 By Mr. Lockley: I might say at the outset, your Honor, that the Government has no comments to make on the charge.

By the Court: You might start in, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

On behalf of the defendant Sullivan, I have these exceptions and suggestions. The Court early in the charge spoke of payments to Shotwell as money due to Shotwell, foreclosing the issue which is raised by later instructions as to the question of fact as to whether they were or were not income to Shotwell.

Another point is that the Court stated in its summary of the Government's case that Lubben had a conference at the Pennsylvania Hotel with Cain, Huebner, and Sullivan early in 1945, and that then the money was paid to Huebner alone. There was no testimony, so far as I recall it, of a conference with Sullivan on that occasion. There was the statement that they went to dinner, but a conference would be quite a crucial matter, and my memory differs from that of the Court.

The Court referred in its summary to payments to 5395 Huebner, and his saying that they were for Harold Sullivan and the others, and that happened more than once in the Court's summary, without the Court saying that such evidence was not competent against Harold Sullivan, and I state now generally that the Court knows my view that an instruction cannot cure the situation with respect to Sullivan.

I attempted to cure that at the close of the Government's case by my motion for a severance, and by the remarks I made then.

But I think when the Court undertakes to summarize the evidence as the Court did, and states evidence as if it was equally applicable to Sullivan, which is not applicable to Sullivan, under the Court's own ruling, that that gives the Jury the idea that they may consider it against him, and it is is not cured by your later instruction, because certainly they don't think you are going to call to your attention evidence which they shouldn't consider against Sullivan.

Another exception is that you tied in one of your points, the knowledge of the failure of the books to record these payments, to a knowledge of their being omitted from 5396 the income tax report. And that is particularly important to me, because—

By the Court: I don't understand that.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you please read that statement?

(Record read.)

By the Court: Well, I think I stated that the defendant Sullivan said that he did not know that the books did not record the overpayment received.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, you did, but my point was that at one point, you tied a knowledge of how the payments were, or were not being entered, to a knowledge that they didn't go on the income tax report, tied the two together.

Now, another point is that in the summary you made of the defendants' case, there was an entire omission of any evidence, or any contention of the defense as to how these deals did start in that early period with Lubben, not any mention, for instance, that the shipments of candy were explained by the defense as having been occasioned by trade deals, as indeed Lubben said the first shipments were, so that we come up—

5397 By the Court: May I suggest that you make it short because you can protect your record by not arguing. Otherwise, we will be here—

By Mr. Kirby: Then on the question of the disclosure material, there were four separate occasions that I will just group in one, as saying to your Honor that you talked of the disclosure material and the statements and the admissions of Cain as being competent upon the issue of intent, when, of course, the admissions and statements and the writings are not admissible on any such issue, as against the defendant Sullivan at all.

By the Court: Well, of course, you must remember the defendant Sullivan became a part of the so-called disclosure in that he said he recommended a disclosure be made, and, therefore, I assumed you would want me to include that generally, because he specifically stated that when he learned of the situation, he was insistent that a disclosure be made.

By Mr. Kirby: That is true, but these documents, like 186, 189-A, and those admissions, made at the disclosure hearing, those are not competent against him at all, but in your charge were treated as though they were.

5398 By the Court: Didn't I expressly state that to the Jury when they were received?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby: In summarizing the testimony, so far as the defense was concerned, as to the amounts received, I felt that the Court wholly omitted the testimony of what I call the second team at Shotwell, Graflund, Morrill, Roeser, and those people, as to the essence being that everything they knew of that came in, did go out.

By the Court: I thought I made that repeatedly as to the contentions of the defendants, and in very specific language that every single penny that came in by way of overages was paid out. I don't think the Jury could possibly be misled or mistaken in any statement I made in that regard.

By Mr. Kirby: With respect to the question— and I only have a couple more—about the overages, whether they did or didn't belong to the corporation, or whether they did or didn't get paid, for example, to the individuals, your Honor, I thought was speaking of what the contention of the defendants on it was, when actually the real test, as I conceive it, is: Did the Government prove the 5399 receipt of the income by Shotwell corporation and if their evidence, taken as given from the stand, was weak on that issue, as taken by the statement of the contention of the defendants—

By the Court: I gave the instruction pertaining to it verbatim.

By Mr. Kirby: That is true, but I am talking now about your summary.

5400 By the Court: That is the only instruction that was submitted to me upon the question.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor goes further than the instruction. You are making summaries of the evidence.

By the Court: Let's not argue that.

By Mr. Kirby: I am excepting to that.

By the Court: Just state your exception.

By Mr. Kirby: My final point is that in the very last summary that your Honor made, where you compressed it down, I did not feel that that was complete.

That is all.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby: And I want the Court to know that, as you do, as people look at a long trial like this, there are going to be divergencies of views between them and I urge these, not to be captious, but quite sincerely.

By the Court: All right. Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am primarily interested in that instruction 22, Judge, and I have a note on it here. 22, 5401 as I heard it, was given in substance, but with some—

By the Court: It was given verbatim.

By Mr. O'Brien: But with some interpolation.

By the Court: No, I followed your 22 as you modified it, Mr. O'Brien, in accordance with my understanding.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, there was the statement that I heard, which was the interpolation, "but payments to a corporation do constitute revenue for tax purposes when sold for premiums on the black market."

By the Court: That is an entirely different place. To let the jury understand that the mere fact that payments were black market payments, that, nevertheless, they constitute taxable income, if they were income to the corporation.

By Mr. O'Brien: In my notes that is really the only thing of any significance, over and above what Mr. Kirby said.

Now, you had a note that I asked you to make, Dick. Would you state it for the record? Whatever you have got there, state it.

By Mr. Wattling: The first point we had was the 5402 initial instruction with respect to reasonable doubt.

I believe your Honor used the term there until—

By the Court: You just take your exceptions and do not argue, because we haven't enough time.

By Mr. Wattling: "Until the Government proves the guilt of the defendants beyond a reasonable doubt."

We object to that as permitting an inference by the jury that at some time during the trial the burden of proof might have shifted from the Government to the defense.

With respect to Instruction 22—

By Mr. Johnson: That was on the presumption of innocence, not reasonable doubt.

By Mr. Wattling: But the presumption of innocence continued.

By Mr. O'Brien: Go ahead. You state it.

By Mr. Wattling: The next one is with respect to Instruction 22. We think that in view of the fact that your Honor emphasized in the summation of the evidence, that is, during the course—about the middle of the charge, that the jury must determine what overages had in fact 5403 been paid to Shotwell by Lubben. Then a little later, they must also determine as to whether there was a balance of overages which were not paid out for goods.

We think there that in view of the emphasis on those issues for the jury to consider, you should also charge them that in addition they must consider not only what overages were paid by Lubben, but what portion of those overages, on the basis of the Government's evidence, constituted taxable income to Shotwell.

By the Court: I think you will find, if you followed me, that I used that very same modification, and which constituted income to Shotwell.

By Mr. Wattling: Then with respect to the thing as to the balance, or any balance that might have existed, over and above, from the overages over and above what was paid out for corn, there should be the instruction as to what they must determine, what portion, if any, of that balance, if any, constituted taxable income to Shotwell.

By the Court: All right.

5404 By Mr. Kirby: One final point, Judge, that I didn't think of. The evidence with respect to what a disclosure was, was ruled out, and then your Honor gave a summary of the policy.

By the Court: Say that again, please.

By Mr. Kirby: The evidence that was tendered, like the Wenchel document, as to what the disclosure policy was, was ruled out, and then your Honor gave a summary of what—

By the Court: I stated at the time that I—this isn't for the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

By the Court: Now, for the record, I did receive those records in evidence, but only for the perusal of the Court, in so far as the Court could utilize them in stating what the disclosure policy was, in so far as I deemed it necessary for the jury to understand it in my comments.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I am not sure that our suggested instructions 45 and 47 were given.

By the Court: They were combined—

By Mr. O'Brien: In substance.

By the Court:—the best I could. They were duplicitous, I thought, and I dictated what I thought was a fair 5405 summary of 45 and 47. I remember them very well because I put them aside and I tried the best I could to summarize what I thought you included in those two instructions.

(And thereupon the following further proceedings herein were had in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: Now, then, will the clerk swear the marshals who are going to have custody of the jury?

Will the marshals come forward.

(Thereupon the marshals were duly sworn.)

By the Court: May I say to counsel that I think it would be very helpful if you could sort of collaborate in getting these exhibits in order and getting them in such shape that they will be available to the jury. And the jury may retire now and we will send in the exhibits as soon as you have them in proper order. Thank you.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will adjourn until the returning of the jury.

(And thereupon the jury retired to con-of their verdict; and the following further proceedings were had outside the hearing and presence of the jury:)

5406 By Mr. Kirby: I was just wondering about the time. We were considering how long the jury should stay out.

By the Court: I assume—

This isn't for the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. Kirby: Judge, the exceptions that we made in there, may they also be considered made on behalf of the corporation, as though Mr. McConnell were here, too.

By the Court: Surely.

By Mr. O'Brien: They were made for everybody.

By the Court: That may be so understood.

(Thereupon, at approximatey 12:30 P.M. of the same day, October 16, 1953, the court was in recess until proceedings were resumed at 4:30 P.M.)

5407 * * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143) * *

Before Nordbye, J. and J., Chicago, Illinois, Friday, October 16, 1953, 4:30 o'clock p.m. Court convened pursuant to the recess.

PRESENT:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

AND THEREUPON the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Marshal: Will the Foreman sit in the front seat, please?

You were the Foreman all the time?

5408 By the Juror Leroy J. Ryan: Yes.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: Members of the Jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?

By Foreman Leroy J. Ryan: Yes, sir; we have.

By the Court: Will you hand it to the Marshal, please?

(The Foreman handed the Verdict to the Marshal; the Marshal handed the verdict to the Court; the Court handed the Verdict to the Clerk.)

By the Clerk: "We, the Jury, find the defendant Shotwell Manufacturing Company guilty as charged in the first count of the indictment, and we find the said defendant guilty as charged in the second count of the indictment."

"And we, the Jury, find the defendant Byron A. Cain guilty as charged in the first count of the indictment, and we find the said defendant guilty as charged in the second count of the indictment."

"And we, the Jury, find the defendant Harold E. Sullivan guilty as charged in the first count of the indictment, 5409 and we find said defendant guilty as charged in the second count of the indictment."

"And we, the Jury, find the defendant Frank J. Huebner, guilty as charged in the first count of the indictment, and we find the said defendant guilty as charged in the second count of the indictment."

By the Court: Members of the Jury, is this your verdict; so say you all?

By the Jury (In Chorus): Yes.

By the Court: The Court thanks you for your services in this case, members of the Jury.

By Mr. O'Brien: May we have the jury polled?

By the Court: You may have the jury polled.

By the Clerk: As each juror's name is called, will you please rise and respond to the following question:

Francis R. Schubert, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Francis R. Schubert: Yes.

By the Clerk: Ethel A. Gassen, was this and is this now your verdict?

By the Juror Ethel A. Gassen: Yes.

5410 By the Clerk: Jean F. Lawler, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Jean F. Lawler: Yes.

By the Clerk: Ruth L. Schiller, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Ruth L. Schiller: Yes.

By the Clerk: Anthony F. Massaro, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Anthony F. Massaro: Yes.

By the Clerk: Helen Sajewski, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Helen Sajewski: (Juror nods.)

By the Clerk: Arthur Amodeo, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Arthur Amodeo: Yes.

By the Clerk: Harry Marschak, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Harry Marschak: Yes.

By the Clerk: LeRoy E. Jasch, was this and is this now your verdict?

By Juror John E. Jasch: You mispronounced the name. It is John.

By the Clerk: John E. Jasch?

By Juror John E. Jasch: Yes.

By the Clerk: Stanley M. Grzywacz, was this and is this now your verdict?

5411 By Juror Stanley M. Grzywacz: Yes.

By the Clerk: And so say you all; this is your verdict.

5412 By the Court: The Court thanks you for your services in this case, members of the Jury.

By Foreman Leroy J. Ryan: He did not poll me.

By the Court: Didn't you poll the foreman?

By the Clerk: LeRoy J. Ryan, was this and is this now your verdict?

By the Foreman Leroy J. Ryan: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I am sorry, I assumed you had.

Well, I start again to express my thanks for your services in this long case. And the marshal tells me, of course, that this will end your jury service, and he will look after you in so far as your mileage and your per diem is concerned.

We will take a recess for about ten minutes, but the defendants will remain in the court room and perhaps Mr. Lockley will be good enough to come into my chambers.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

(Court and counsel retired to chambers.)

(Jury retired. Court and counsel retire to chambers, 5413 after which the following proceedings were had in the court room:)

By the Court: The record may indicate that the clerk informs me that one of the jurors wasn't polled, and I have talked to Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Kirby, attorneys for the defendants, and they have informed me that it is not necessary for the entire jury to be brought back, but only the juror who was not polled. And I gather that I am correctly stating counsel's statement to me. Therefore, Mr. Clerk, you may poll the juror that you forgot to poll.

By the Clerk: Margaret M. Capinegro, was that and is this now your verdict?

By Juror Margaret M. Capinegro: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Thank you.

Now, Mr. Lockley, I would like to see you.

The defendants will remain in the court room for the time being.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Whereupon the Court and counsel retired to chambers, after which the following proceedings were had 5414 in the court room:)

By the Court: Well, gentlemen, I am going to impose sentence tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. And the defendants may be released on their present bond, I take it.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, the Government has no objection to that.

By the Court: Until that time and they will present themselves here tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, your Honor, about the motion for a new trial and arrest of judgment—

By the Court: I don't believe that I will defer sentence by reason of any motions that may be made. My practice is to impose sentence and then thereafter if counsel makes motions with reference to a new trial, good and well, but I don't follow the practice of deferring the imposition of sentence merely because counsel tells me that they are going to make a motion for a new trial. And that is the practice that I intend to follow. So we will be in adjournment now.

5415 By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask this, your Honor— I don't want to detain you—but on the present bail—I have not ascertained what that is—but I should like to make a motion before the time is too late to continue the bail.

5416 By the Court: Well, I don't assume there will be any objection to that, or any difficulty in arranging matters with reference to bail, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir; we have no objection to continuing the present bail.

By the Court: Very well. The Court will be in adjournment until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

By Mr. Kirby: That last remark applies to even after tomorrow, with respect to the question of the proceeding tomorrow, doesn't it, on the bail question?

By the Court: Of course that is a matter that Mr. Lockley will have to consider. I don't even know the amount of the bail. Anything that is satisfactory to Mr. Lockley is satisfactory to the Court. And if he tells you that the present bail may stand, even after sentence, that is entirely satisfactory to the Court.

By Mr. Kirby: Is that what you say, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: May I make my mind up on that tomorrow morning, when the time is appropriate?

5417 By Mr. Kirby: In the case of the defendant Sullivan, you have a reserved motion for acquittal. I would like to be heard upon that, your Honor. The rules do provide that that, of course, can be reserved until after the verdict, and your Honor did make an indication of your feeling on it, but did reserve the ruling until after the verdict.

And I would like to be heard tomorrow morning on that motion for acquittal.

By the Court: I will give you an opportunity to be heard.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor.

By the Court: Very well. We will be in adjournment until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will recess until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon the hearing in the above cause, was adjourned until the next morning, being Saturday, October 17, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

5418 * * (Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Before Nordbye, J. Chicago, Illinois, Saturday, October 17, 1953, 10:00 o'clock a.m. Court met pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENT:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. William T. Kirby

AND THEREUPON the following further proceedings were had herein:—

By the Clerk: No. CR 52 143, United States versus Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Disposition.

5419 By Mr. Kirby: The Court said last evening that I might bring up the motion of the defendant Sullivan for acquittal, which was reserved under the provisions of Rule 29-B, this morning, and I will address myself directly to that, if I may, your Honor.

Now, in the case, at the conclusion of the Government's evidence, I made a motion for acquittal, and your Honor ruled on it, in the following language at page 3058 of the record:

"In so far as the defendant Sullivan is concerned, and his motion for acquittal, the Court must consider the testimony in the record as to him, in the most favorable light, in support of the charges made in the indictment. Whether on this record the Government has established his guilt of the offense charged beyond a reasonable doubt is for the Jury to determine.

"Lubben's testimony as to his conversation with Mr. Sullivan is not denied or controverted in the record.

5420 The Court cannot say on this record that such testimony should be disregarded. The mere fact that Lubben changed his testimony as to the time the alleged conversation took place does not justify a motion to strike the entire testimony.

"Lubben contends that everything he related in his first testimony regarding the conversation is true, except as to the time when it took place. None of this testimony, or any of the reasonable inferences to be drawn from other facts and circumstances, disclosed by the evidence, are controverted.

"The Court is well aware that there must be more than a scintilla of evidence involving defendant Sullivan in order to justify a finding of guilty. Whether he intentionally and wilfully with guilty knowledge intended to defraud the Government of any income tax due from Shotwell for the years 1945 and 1946, as charged, is, at this time, at least, a question for the jury to determine, and not for the 5421 Court to decide as a matter of law."

Subsequent to that, the defendant Sullivan testified specifically with respect to the alleged conversation which Mr. Lubben had first said took place in February of '46, and then in August or September of '46.

Mr. Sullivan testified quite clearly, and that indeed was not contradicted, that the testimony was false.

In particular, he illustrated the driveway incident, that is to say, Lubben's contention that what Mr. Sullivan wanted the cash for was for the fixing of a driveway, was impossible.

Now, the Court will also recall that on this question of whether that testimony of Mr. Lubben's as to its having happened in September and October, is to be given weight, the Court will recall that Mr. Lubben was very specific in his testimony as to the occurrences, and the payments in August, September, and October. He identified particular checks, he said who went with them to Chicago. Those were the periods in which James Moran was introduced, or one of those periods, in which Heitmann was introduced, 5422 show just exactly who made the trips to Chicago in the late '46 period, and to whom the money was paid.

For instance, that is when the payment to Graflund was testified to. That was very specific in Mr. Lubben's testimony. And in no place did it leave room for this so-called conversation in August, September, or October with Mr. Sullivan.

So, that, on that I think, while it is certainly true that the case stood as your Honor described it with respect to no denial of that, at the end of the Government's case, that is not the situation at the moment.

Now then, your Honor, in yesterday's summary of some of the circumstances made reference to one other meeting which Mr. Lubben had testified to, and that was an early January, 1945, meeting. And just for a second, let me call the Court's attention to the record at page 491 where this took place.

Mr. Lockley said to Lubben:

"Q. You say it was in New York City?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When?

"A. January 19, 1945.

5423 "Q. And who was there?

"A. Mr. Huebner.

"Q. And what happened?

"By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, the defendant Harold Sullivan not having been there, there is no way he can meet this type of proof, and I ask you to instruct the jury that it must be disregarded so far as the defendant, Harold Sullivan, is concerned.

"By the Court: I will instruct the jury that it is only binding upon the defendant Huebner, in that he was the only defendant alleged to be there, and what took place is only binding—or relevant, rather, I should say, to the defendant—competent as to the defendant Huebner."

So that the testimony with respect to the Government's proof as to Harold Sullivan is just as limited as your Honor indicated it was on the ruling on the motion at the close of the Government's case, and I think has been completely overcome by the proof that was introduced, and 5424 by the inherent facts of that situation, with respect to the driveway, and by the fact that Lubben when he did testify about those fall months, completely left out any testimony with respect to Sullivan on that.

Now, I just went to those particular points quickly, because you had adverted to them in the prior ruling.

Your Honor, another thing that I do want to call your attention to, as to the difference in the proof at the time of the Government's case closing, and all of the proof closing, is that it has been held repeatedly that the intent in an income tax case may be testified to by the person accused, and this person's testimony is competent testimony which must be considered, and that it cannot be disregarded. Indeed, since that is one of the crucial questions in the case, and since the only testimony specifically on the absence of intent or the existence of the intent, is Mr. Sullivan's, it should be given—I am sure is given—some important weight.

Now, to go directly to some of the points that I wish to make in the light of the proof, I think that your Honor's instructions were completely accurate in that in order 5425 to convict any of the defendants it was necessary that defendant know of the falsity of the returns. Now, for the defendant Sullivan to have knowledge of the falsity of the returns in this case would require proof by the Government, upon whom, of course, the burden exists, would require proof, affirmative proof that Sullivan knew two things: First of all, he had to have a knowledge of an amount coming in, in excess of an amount going out, because if he didn't have that knowledge, he could not have knowledge of the existence of a tax due.

Now, the second thing that they would need to also prove, would be not only that he had knowledge that more was coming in than was going out, but that he knew that that excess was not being carried on the books. Those two things they would need to show affirmatively.

Now, as to the first point, as to the knowledge of Sullivan's part, that an amount was coming in, in excess of the amount being paid out, the persons—first, no one has testified that he did have knowledge of an amount coming in, in excess of what was going out. As a matter of 5426 fact, the persons with whom he would logically have talked, or from whom he could logically have secured information, the persons in the plant, such as Mrs. Morrill, they testified in each case that their knowledge was that the amount that came in, did go out.

Now, there is not the slightest showing of fact that Harold Sullivan did not, and could not, as he testified, have relied upon those people. Gladys Morrill said that so far as she knew the quantity, everything that came in went out. Graflund, who was actually the man who was there as the comptroller, he testified that so far as he knew everything that came in went out.

Roeser, who had been a prior comptroller to Graflund, testified that so far as he knew everything that came in went out. And Harold Sullivan himself, testified to that.

Now, there is an absence of any proof to the contrary.

Now, is it unreasonable—or let me put it this way, is there a necessary inference that Harold Sullivan had to know there was more coming in than was going out, when the 5427 proof is that his knowledge was exactly the same, so far as the quantum that was left, as those people that were actually handling the money in the plan?

Now, the second thing is: Not only is there a complete absence of proof of that essential element of the Government's case, the proof that they must introduce, that he knew of an excess, but they have to go further. They have to show that he knew that that excess was not being reported for income tax purposes.

Now, what is the proof on that? The proof on that is that when they came to close the box, there was some $15,000 in the box, and that that $15,000 was deposited in the bank account of the corporation, as shown on the corporation's books. It went to clear out an account which had been charged for $15,550.00, which had been taken out of the corporation, charged against the company at a time when they were short of money, and that was put in the cash box.

Now, that transaction is unquestioned, your Honor, and it is shown on the books. And there isn't anything in the record to indicate that Harold Sullivan knew any more 5428 but what when they did come to the end of this transaction, that the money that remained was put into the books of the corporation to clear up that outstanding account, and that it was so entered.

Now, then, is there any proof to the contrary that he knew more? Who could have told him he knew more? Gladys Morrill, who worked on the books, she said she never discussed with him how that was being handled. The same thing is true of Graflund. The same thing is true of Roeser.

Now, if the Court please, I submit with sincerity, that you cannot take the testimony of those witnesses and ignore it. That testimony is in. Much of it was put in, in the Government's case, and there is nothing to the contrary.

Now, then, to just review those two points. First of all, it would have to be shown beyond all reasonable doubt that he had a knowledge that there was an amount coming in, in excess of the amount going out. Now, there is an absence of that proof. And there is proof to the contrary.

5429 And, secondly, there would need to be proof beyond all reasonable doubt that he had a knowledge that such an excess, if one existed, was not on the books and that they were trying to defeat the income tax law. And as to the knowledge of the excess, I don't think you can impute to him a knowledge that there was an excess, or what happened to an excess. Certainly the testimony is to the contrary.

Now, then, let me go to the next point. I have been talking, at the moment, of the knowledge of the falsity of the returns. And I will conclude it by saying that the testimony that Harold Sullivan did not know what was going in these returns and did not affirmatively have anything to do with them is just as explicit as anything could be. The people that did sign the returns expressly said they never took them up with him.

Now, I want to go to the question of intent. Intent, as I view it at this moment, is this question, and that is: Is there proof that Harold Sullivan was personally doing some affirmative act to effectuate a cheating of the government of its income tax? Your Honor, as I pose the ques-

5430 tion the answer springs to mind: There is no proof at all. There must be some affirmative act that he is doing to cheat the government of its income tax or there is an absence of proof of intent to cheat the government of its income tax. We can't build a third inference. We cannot say, first, there is a knowledge, we infer a knowledge on his part that more came in than went out. And then we are going, on that first inference, to build a second inference, that he must have known that it wasn't being properly entered on the books, and on the second inference draw a third inference, and that therefore he must have been intending to cheat the government out of its income tax.

Your Honor is aware that inferences may come from facts, but your Honor knows that an inference cannot be built upon an inference, and a third inference is never built upon a second inference.

If the Court please, a difficulty in this case, and a grievous difficulty in this case has been that the proof, competent, material and admitted by the Court, so far as the defendant Sullivan is concerned, is just exactly like Cunningham predicted early last spring; that is to say, it was practi-5431 cally nonexistent, except as it could come out of Lubben's testimony. And I think we have disposed of such proof as Lubben made on these issues of knowledge of the amounts, and all of that.

But we are met with this situation, that he is tried and that your Honor has, by the necessities of the posture of the case, admitted evidence for purposes not related to and, indeed, not competent to Sullivan. And what has happened, I submit, is this: That this difficult question as to Sullivan, which your Honor I know feels in his heart exists, that difficult question as to Sullivan is decided very rapidly by a jury and I think unquestionably the verdict shows from the speed with which it was reached that they lumped these people together, that they lumped the knowledge of everybody together, and that the jury did not pay that cautious attention to this very, very delicate question of proof that the jury might otherwise have paid.

Now, under those circumstances that illustrates perfectly the wisdom of the drawers of the criminal rules when they said that the Court could permit the jury to consider the case but still reserve its discretion to grant an 5432 acquittal even after a verdict of guilty.

Now, the different cases that bear upon the questions to which our minds are turning your Honor knows and I am going to only refer to a very few. There is a Seventh Circuit case, United States vs. Littberg, it is in 175 F. 2d, at page 20, and it says:

"An inference may not properly be relied upon in support of an essential allegation if an opposite inference may be drawn with equal consistency from the circumstances in proof."

And I urge the Court that if the people who have testified did say that they did not come to an inference there was more money around there than was paid out, that inference is just as reasonable, it is just as permissible an inference, so far as Harold Sullivan is concerned, to say that he did not know there was more as to infer that he did know there was more, because there is not a shadow of proof, or a word of proof that Harold Sullivan saw a single one dollar bill, not the slightest proof he knew of the amounts in any way. There just is an absence of proof on that.

5433 Now, speculation cannot support—or cannot supplant an absence of proof when the government must prove its case.

There is a case, Foster vs. United States, 178 F. 165. In that case a man was a big stockholder, but the circumstances in proof showed that he was not possessed of personal knowledge of the things that the government was claiming were the essence, the gist of the claim, so that though he knew the general tenor of the business there was not sufficient proof and it was held an acquittal was required as to him.

The case on the knowledge of the falsity, which is quite specific in an income tax matter, is the Lurdling case, 179 F. 2d—

By the Court: Again.

By Mr. Kirby: Lurdling case, 179 F. 2d, 419. Now there the defendant was convicted for violation of Section 145-B—the same one that is involved here—and on appeal it was reversed and it was remanded for a new trial. And the Court said:

"The act here involved is the filing of an inaccurate return. In the complexity of successive tax laws, many 5434 thousand of taxpayers do that innocently. Such filing is unlawful, however, only if made wilfully, with knowledge of its falseness and with intent to evade taxes. There is no presumption that may be drawn from the act itself—both knowledge and wilfulness must be established by independent proof, direct or circumstantial."

In Hargrove vs. the United States, 67 F. 2d, 820—that again was an income tax case and the Court there said:

"The Court here fell into the error of not distinguishing between the elements of an offense, where the statute simply denounces the doing of an act as criminal, and where it denounces as criminal only its wilful doing. In the first class of cases, especially in those offenses mal prohibita, the law imputes the intent.—(Citing cases)—Had the prosecution here been under such a statute, the charge of the Court would have been unexceptionable. In the second 5435 class of cases a specific wrongful intent, that is, actual knowledge of the existence of the obligation and a wrongful intent to evade it, is of the essence."

Now, applying that language to this case, there must be, the Court says, actual knowledge of the existence of obligation, that is, actual knowledge on Harold Sullivan's part that there is this unaccounted for surplus of dollars, actual knowledge, and there is not proof of that in this case.

Then, secondly, there must be not only that knowledge of the obligation, but a wrongful intent to evade that obligation. And there is a complete absence of proof that he knew that.

Now, those cases as to the intent are bottomed upon the Supreme Court case of United States vs. Murdock, 290 U.S. 389, which laid down the rule of the necessity for wilful intent in tax cases. And it says:

"Congress did not intend that a person by reason of a bona fide misunderstanding as to his liability for the tax, as to his duty to make a return, or as to the adequacy 5436 of the records be maintained, should become a criminal by his mere failure to measure up to the prescribed standard of conduct. And the requirement that the omission in these instances, must be wilful, to be criminal, is persuasive that the same element is essential to the offense of failing to supply information."

There remains only the question of whether circumstantial evidence exists which could supply these omissions of proof. I think not. But as they said in 193 F. 2d, 907:

"It is still the law that there can be no conviction of crime on circumstantial evidence unless the only possible inference to be derived from it is that of guilty. There must be evidence which forecloses and makes impossible any other conclusion."

Now, I certainly feel that you cannot say that the evidence in this record forecloses and makes any conclusion possible except the knowledge of Sullivan of the excess and a knowledge of Sullivan that it was not going on the books, 5437 and a knowledge of Sullivan that the net of it was not being reported, and a knowledge of Sullivan that he was himself affirmatively doing some intentional act to defraud the government of its revenue. There is nothing in the testimony that would make you assume this to be a man who would start out to cheat the government, from the time he went to the Army for the government down to the time when he, as he testified,—this company, since he has been there, has paid $2,700,000.00 in taxes, when, before that, the company never paid any. There is nothing to make you take the contrary inference. The reasonable inference is that the circumstances are just as compatible with a reasonable hypothesis of innocence as with a hypothesis of guilt.

Now, your Honor is familiar with the cases that hold wherever there are questions of circumstantial evidence involved that the proof must exclude every other reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt. And I want to refer to the Van Gorder case, 21 F. 2d, 939. That was not an income tax case, but the defendant was charged with the theft of two keys from the post office and with receiving stolen government property. In reversing the lower court 5438 and holding that the trial judge should have directed a verdict on the defendant's motion for acquittal the court said:

"In order to sustain a conviction of a crime on circumstantial evidence it must be such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt of the accused. The facts proved must all be consistent with and point to his guilt only and inconsistent with his innocence. The evidence in this case utterly failed to exclude every other hypothesis but that of guilt. The hypothesis that one of the clerks in the post office who was present there on the evening of January 17, 1924, picked up the keys which the substitute letter carrier left lying on the table outside the money order department, dropped or laid them elsewhere, whence they had been transferred by him, or others, until they had come to the possession of the defendant, the hypothesis that some thief had stolen them, and lost them and then the defendant had innocently found them, or that in 5439 many other ways without the theft of the defendant they had come to his possession is, under all the evidence, as probable in the face of the legal presumption of the defendant's innocence and the requirement that his guilt be proved by the government beyond a reasonable doubt before his conviction than the hypothesis that he was guilty of the crime."

Now, there is a case, the Gasomiser case in the 7 Rules Decision at 712, and they say this, on this question of the reserved motion for acquittal, and I think that that case has been quite extensively cited, even though it is only in the Rules Decisions—they say:

"While we might agree with the verdict of the jury as evidencing the adoption of one or more reasonable hypotheses, and believe that the guilt may have been established beyond a reasonable doubt, yet in view of the evidence I cannot say that, even assuming the truth of all the circumstantial evidence, the verdict of guilty was based upon 5440 the only reasonable hypothesis, or in the words of the rule that there is excluded every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt, I cannot say that a juror individually or collectively could not have arrived at a different conclusion. I must, therefore, grant the motions of each of the defendants for judgments of acquittal. This case clearly shows the value of the procedure preserved by Rule 29-B of the Rules of Criminal Procedure. Under such rule the court may allow a jury to pass upon the facts for a possible affirmative verdict of not guilty for a defendant and at the same time, after proper reservation, maintain its jurisdiction to direct in a proper case an acquittal as a matter of law."

And in United States vs. Standard Oil Company, 24 F. Supp.—that is the case that Judge Stone had in Madison and in which they appealed on Judge Stone all the way to the Supreme Court, even making him a defendant in the Supreme Court. In that case Judge Stone said this, 5441 and it was sustained all the way up to the Supreme Court:

"The constitutional right of a defendant to a trial by jury recognizes that all questions of law have been decided by the court and questions of fact by the jury. It is just as important that the defendant be given the benefit of one as of the other and if he be denied one or the other his constitutional right to that extent has been denied. In the careful and full review of the record and study of the briefs filed before and after verdict the Court was definitely of the opinion that as to most of the defendants dismissed by the order of July 19 last there was no substantial evidence indicating participation in the conspiracy and that as to others the evidence adduced was clearly as consistent with innocence as with guilt, which raises a question of law for the Court, and in such circumstances it becomes the duty of the Court to grant the motion for a directed verdict.
5442 To do otherwise is clearly error. The following cases hold that where the evidence is as consistent with innocence as with guilt it is the duty of the court to direct a verdict for the defendant."

And it then goes on citing the cases which give the rule applied by the Court in that case to the effect that it is not enough that there be a hypothesis which the jury could adopt, it must be that there is no reasonable hypothesis at all consistent with the facts and consistent with innocence.

Now, your Honor, I shall not take your time further. I do know that it poses a question of difficulty, and it is a matter of grievous moment, and I actually feel that the proof as to Sullivan is so slight that if treated alone, would surely—and if it stood on its own, if it were a separate matter entirely, it would just overwhelmingly persuade the Court to grant the motion.

We have the difficulty, of course—all of us; I do—in separating this set of facts from that set of facts. But we have got to do our best. And I have done my best to 5443 make it plain to the Court that there is not that quantum of proof which justifies the Court in denying the motion for acquittal.

5444 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, your Honor is well aware that on a motion of this nature, the sole duty of the trial Judge is to determine whether there is substantial evidence taken in the light most favorable to the Government, tending to show that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. And in the case of United States vs. Storr it was said that in a tax fraud case, the weight of the evidence, the credibility of the witnesses, and conflicts of the testimony were questions for the jury, and therefore, the trial Judge, in considering the defendant's motion for a judgment of acquittal, would not have been concerned with these matters.

I refer you also to the Seventh Circuit Case of Yeoman Henderson, 193 Fed 2d, 867. Now, considered in the light most favorable to the Government, many of the analyses that Mr. Kirby has made of the evidence this morning, must be resolved against the defendant.

In this case, we have these particular items which tend to show specifically the defendant Sullivan's knowl-5445 edge of what was going on in the corporation, and his participation in it, and his intent.

First, of course, is the testimony of the witness Lubben. In the light of the verdict of the Jury, we must consider that testimony as the true testimony—that Lubben talked to the defendant Sullivan at his office; that Sullivan made some comment to him at that time as to whether any record was being kept of the cash payments which were being made. This indicates that Sullivan had guilty knowledge at that time, that these cash payments were not being recorded on the books and records of the Shotwell Company, and that he was aware they were not being recorded on the income tax returns. The evidence to the contrary that Mr. Kirby cites, the lack of improvements to the driveway, for example, must be considered as having been rejected by the Jury. The Jury believes Lubben's version of that testimony, and that is the only version which may be taken into consideration by your Honor, in determining whether there is substantial evidence to support the verdict.

5446 Likewise, the testimony of Mr. Ericson that there was a conference or a meeting in the spring of 1946, when the defendant Sullivan and other defendants were present together with Lubben, and it was decided at that time that there would be certain shipments made without invoices, that clearly indicates that Sullivan knew that those invoices—the proceeds from those shipments, would not be recorded on the books of the company and they could have only had one possible reason, and that is that they were also not reported on the income tax returns.

There is the defendant's own admission that he knew in 1945 and 1946, for that short period of time, that candy was being sold in the black market. He admitted on cross examination that for purposes of violating the OPA regulations, it was necessary to leave those particular transactions relating to corn purchases and money received for that purpose, off the books and records.

And when asked whether it didn't have to be left off for income tax purposes, he sought refuge in the answer, "I don't know."

5447 You must take into consideration, too, the conflict of his testimony respecting the meeting at the Gotham Hotel, when he said that Lubben had displayed to him certain marked up invoices.

In view of the Jury's verdict, it is appropriate to examine that the Jury believed he was lying at that time, and they believed that if he was lying then, he was lying also when he said he didn't know whether or not those transactions were being recorded on the books and records.

Also, Mr. Kirby relates, or refers to the testimony of the defendants, that the money was going out, and that the defendant Sullivan thought that all of the money received was subsequently paid out.

It must be assumed that the Jury, in view of its verdict, believed that the money was not paid out. As a matter of fact, your Honor will recall that there was a complete lack of proof other than by inference, that any such money had been paid out, and the Jury, by rejecting that testimony, must be assumed to have concluded that Sullivan only lied when he thought—when he said he thought 5448 the money was all paid out, but that he knew it was not.

Furthermore, Sullivan's defense is a general denial that he knew what was happening as to the books and records, and the income tax returns of the company. The Jury was entitled to infer from the fact that he was receiving a thirty-thousand dollar a year fee, as its attorney, that he actually knew more about the business, and he knew more about the income tax returns than he admitted to.

Mr. Kirby refers to the absence of specific proof of wilfullness. I do not consider it the Government's burden to prove a positive act of wilfullness on the part of the defendant in an income tax return. Intent, as your Honor knows, usually cannot be proved by specific evidence. It is something that must be inferred from all of the facts and circumstances in this case, and intent in this particular instance is inferred from the fact that Sullivan was a high placed officer in the corporation, that he knew there were black market transactions going on, that he knew the direct results of those black market transactions was that there was no record made on the books of the company, and transactions off those books and records from which he knew the returns would be prepared, then he was as responsible for evading the taxes as the corporation, as if he had prepared the return with his own hand.
5449 that he knew as a consequence of that, none of them were being reported in the income tax returns, that he knew about the unbilled shipments, that he knew in general that the books and records upon which the accountant relied in preparing the income tax returns were not complete, and if he had part of the responsibility for keeping certain

Sullivan also knew that there were certain corn deals going. He testified, as a matter of fact, that he personally attempted to purchase corn from some of these brokers as a legitimate transaction, and that he was unable to do so, after Huebner had spoken to him. That indicates further that he had a far greater knowledge in the affairs of the business than he has admitted up to now.

While in the New York conference on January 19th, it is true that Mr. Sullivan was not present at the time the money was actually passed to Mr. Huebner, the Jury 5450 was entitled to infer from the fact that he was in the city, that he was at the hotel, at the time when the transactions were going on, that he had some personal knowledge of what the transactions all amounted to; and then there is also the testimony of the various witnesses, Morrill, Graflund and Roeser, that they only performed the act which led to the failure to putting these receipts on the books, at the direction of the three defendants.

At this late date, they are unable to say whether it was the defendant Huebner, the defendant Cain, or the defendant Sullivan, but the Jury was also entitled to infer from Sullivan's position in the company, that he was directly responsible, together with the other defendants for having kept those matters off the books, and likewise, off of the income tax returns.

In view of the requirement of the law that the evidence be considered in the light most favorable to the Government to sustain the verdict, your Honor, it is the Government's position that it has borne its burden, and that the motion for the defendant should be denied.

5451 By Mr. Kirby: Going quickly down the items relied on by the government, the first that Mr. Lockley referred to was Lubben's testimony that Mr. Sullivan asked whether records were being kept by Lubben. Mr. Lockley says that indicates a guilty knowledge on Mr. Sullivan's part that the matter was not going on the books of Shotwell. Even if that inference be true, which I do not agree, because he is not asking about at all, it certainly doesn't jump to the next position that it did not go on the income tax returns. There is no question about Sullivan having known that they were violating the OPA. But the Court said, in his instructions, and it certainly is true, that an intent to violate the OPA is not equivalent to intent to violate the income tax laws. And an act done for that purpose, which is a purpose which is consistent with innocence, under the income tax law, although pointing to guilt under the OPA law, but that circumstance, that explanation, that is, that it was done to keep it off for OPA purposes, if that be a reasonable one, then that is one to be accepted.

Now, the next point that he talked about was that 5452 Ericson said that Sullivan attended a conference about unbilled shipments. Well, Mr. Ericson said that he assumed Mr. Sullivan attended the conference. On cross examination Mr. Ericson was asked whether he knew it or he was only assuming it. Well, he said, "I assume it. I don't know that he was." And that is not adequate proof.

The next is this question of the defendant's admission that he knew of the violation of the black market. And I have already referred to that.

The next is the Gotham Hotel meeting and Mr. Lockley says, as to that, that the jury must have believed that he was lying about that meeting with Mr. Lubben. I can't see that that follows at all. It is hard to take a general verdict and figure out what it would mean on a particular thing like that.

Then he relies particularly, I thought, upon this, that is, that the jury, he thinks, believes, from its verdict, that the money was not paid out. Now, that doesn't follow at all. It might very well be that the jury believed that there was money paid out. But the jury might have believed there was not as much paid out as came in. But than Mr.
5453 Lockley has not addressed himself at all to any proof that would show Harold Sullivan would know whether more came in than went out. The proof is to the contrary. The proof is by all the people that handled it that what came in, so far as they knew, did go out and that Harold Sullivan's extent of knowledge was the same as theirs.

He said that Sullivan's defense was merely a general denial and that Sullivan's earning $30,000.00 a year allowed the jury to infer that Sullivan knew more than he admitted. Well, the rule, of course, is, as I will now cite it from Fletcher Encyclopedia of Corporations:

"A corporate officer, without regard to his position, is ordinarily not criminally liable for corporate acts performed by other officers or agents of the corporation."

And then at another place:

"It is essential to criminal liability of an officer that he actually and personally do the acts which constitute the offense or that they be done by his direction or permission."

5454 And you cannot assume that just because a man occupies a post, and is a lawyer, and does get paid, that he is engaged in a criminal activity.

Now, he refers finally to Graflund, Morrill and Roeser, and he says that they say that they did acts with respect to the keeping of the books at the direction of some one, of the three, but that he concedes that they said they couldn't say which one of the three. I think the proof went even further than that. That is weakness enough in his proof, but I think it went further. I asked each of them specifically whether Harold Sullivan instructed them in any way with respect to the keeping of the books or the income tax returns and they specifically said that he did not.

Now, it gets down to this, I think. I think the summary of the government's position is that from Sullivan's knowledge of the OPA violation there can be inferred a knowledge of an income tax violation and that from the fact that Sullivan was an officer there follows the inference that he was a person actively participating with guilty and wilful knowledge.

But, as I said to the Court earlier, they must prove, in order to show a knowledge of the falsity of the returns, 5455 they must first show that he had a knowledge that there was more coming in than was being spent. And then they must show that he had a knowledge not only that that was so, but that the excess was not going on the books. They have to show that that closing transaction was to him known to be an inaccurate closing transaction. And then on the intent they must show that he was personally doing some affirmative act.

5456 By the Court: Well, gentlemen, in so far as the motion for the defendant Sullivan for an acquittal, the Court will take that under advisement and file an order in due time.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, could I have leave to file a written brief on the subject?

By the Court: Well, you have probably given me such cases as you have in mind, and I have made a note of them. If you have anything in addition, you might do so.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor.

By the Court: I would like to have available to me Lubben's testimony as to Sullivan, Ericson's testimony, and Sullivan's testimony. I haven't the record, and while I have kept rather complete notes, I would like to review those parts of the record. Any testimony by Lubben wherein he refers to Sullivan, as either talking to him, or Sullivan being present, I would like that. I don't mind if you send me the excerpts rather than the transcript, if that is more convenient.

And then I would like to have Ericson's testimony, the portion of it that referred to Sullivan, and I would like to have the complete transcript of the defendant Sullivan's testimony.

5457 By Mr. Kirby: I will get all of that up to you, your Honor, together with my cases, and would it be satisfactory if I had it to your Honor by Friday next?

By the Court: All right. I am ready to dispose of the other matters, of Shotwell, and Cain, and defendant Huebner.

By Mr. O'Brien: If your Honor please, I would like to file a written motion along the line that I orally presented yesterday, the first part of it being that imposition of sentence be deferred pending the filing of the motion for acquittal, on which your Honor expressed your position—

By the Court: I will deny that portion of your motion.

By Mr. O'Brien:—the second part being we should like, in view of the length of the record, an additional five days beyond the time provided, beyond the five provided by the rules.

By the Court: I have no objection to granting that portion of your motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: The third portion of the same motion, I believe, was orally covered yesterday, and acquiesced in by Mr. Lockley, and has to do with the continuance of 5458 the bail until the hearing, and determination of those motions, or until the failure of such defendant to file a motion within the time provided.

By the Court: I don't know whether Mr. Lockley wants to be heard on the question of bail.

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor. The Government is satisfied to continue the present bail for all purposes.

By the Court: Well, now, Mr. O'Brien, have you any other motions that you want to present to me now?

By Mr. O'Brien: No motions at this time, your Honor.

By the Court: Then I am ready to impose the sentence on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and while Mr. McConnell isn't here, I assume you, in his absence, are authorized to represent the corporation?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, your Honor. He so stated, I think, in both our presence.

By the Court: Well, I will hear you with reference to anything you may desire to say on behalf of the corporation before I pronounce sentence.

5459 By Mr. O'Brien: I do not think that any of the matters which I have in mind to say for the individuals, are appropriate in respect of the intangible entity of the corporation itself.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, have you the statute that covers the penalties, so that I may be accurate in my statements?

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I do not have it. I know what the penalty is, but I am afraid I do not have the statute with me.

By the Court: I think I know, but I would like to have my memory refreshed. In so far as the Shotwell Company is concerned, I understand the law provides for a maximum of ten thousand dollars on each count.

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, it is considered and adjudged by this court that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, as punishment for the crime of which it was duly convicted by a verdict of the Jury, that as to the first count, it shall pay a fine in the sum of $10,000 and costs, and as to the second count, the Court imposes a fine of $10,000 and costs.

5460 I may state, in so far as the costs are concerned, that the United States Attorney, or Mr. Lockley, will present to the Court a proposed bill of costs, and I assume the Court will have to determine what part of the costs proposed to be taxed should be taxed, and when I determine that amount, it will be added to the fine that I have imposed.

Of course, the costs will not be duplicated as to the first and second counts. It will be applicable, of course, to both counts. I haven't yet determined the exact way that I will enter that, but I didn't mean, of course, to have a duplication of costs. It means that I am imposing a fine of $10,000 as to each count, and costs as will hereafter be determined, assessed, and entered as part of the judgment.

5461 Now, then, I am ready to impose sentence on the defendant, Byron A. Cain.

By Mr. Byron A. Cain: If the Court please, I would like to make this statement to you and in no way do I admit any guilt in this matter. I feel that we have a situation here that could be a little unfair. Frank Huebner was an employee of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. He owned less than 300 shares of stock.

By the Court: The last part I didn't hear.

By Mr. Byron A. Cain: He owned less than 300 shares of stock. Any actions that Frank Huebner took with regard to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company were taken with either the approval of Mr. Shotwell, Mr. Sullivan, or myself and I ask your Honor to be as considerate of him as the government has been of Miss Morrill, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser and all of the rest of the employees of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Thank you, sir.

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien, is there anything you want to say on behalf of Mr. Cain before I pronounce the sentence?

Mr. Cain, you will stand here, please.

5462 By Mr. O'Brien: These are factors, your Honor, which I would like to expressly commend to your attention:

First, as the record shows, Mr. Cain's primary business is that of a real estate broker, a real estate occupation, for the practice of which he has and requires a license which will be lost should the conviction here be maintained.

Second, and special to Mr. Cain and to this case, Mr. Cain is the president of the Uptown Federal Savings & Loan Association and that position will likewise be lost.

Third, from the inception of the matter, I suppose surely since 1948 and more particularly from the time of the indictment, there has been unusual publicity and consequent conditions which the defendant Cain and the other defendants as well in the case have had to encounter over and above those reactions which normally occur. They have unquestionably suffered seriously from that—Mr. Cain, personally, I know.

As far as the civil aspect of the matter enters into the consideration of the case, there is no doubt, none whatever on this, but that Mr. Cain as well as the other people, 5463 but particularly Mr. Cain, has been willing at all times to pay the tax or to have the corporation pay the tax or whatever it took or takes to get done that liability, such liability or deficiency as the agents might reasonably or properly impose. There has been no effort at that on the part of the government because, as your Honor knows, while the criminal matter is pending, there is no attempt at all to make a disposition on the civil side, or of the civil side of the tax problem.

Now again and separately beyond the question, Mr. Cain—

By the Court: I think you may sit down for the time being, Mr. Cain, if Mr. O'Brien has a lengthy statement. I don't see why you have to stand up.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't want to be lengthy, Judge, but I am trying to say what occurs to me as being pertinent.

Mr. Cain has had a long and honorable record in every community in which he has resided, and in this community. He is a family man, as the testimony shows. He has four children of whom three are minors, the ages respectively being 9, 11 and 16. He has one boy who has attained his majority and who is married but the others, all of 5464 them, are in school.

He has never had any kind of trouble or difficulty other than this. Now, your Honor knows the nature of the proceeding here. I don't see that anything that I can say about it would even refresh the Court's recollection on anything that would be worthy of consideration, except perhaps for one thing, that we are not confined to technical evidence, but refer only to matters as to which the Court could almost take a judicial knowledge, or have a judicial knowledge. There have been many of these matters; many of them have been disposed of. This case has gone on to indictment for reasons which are none of my concern and for reasons which are unknown to me in relation to the many other matters which have been disposed of without going that far.

I think that that covers the matters which I think your Honor would want to take into consideration and which perhaps you have taken into consideration in so far as Mr. Cain is concerned, except one thing, and I am not clear on just how much is pertinent, but the only other thing that I recollect is that there was that newspaper item about 5465 the assessment of a large deficiency in another matter against Mr. Cain. I do assert with knowledge of the facts, based upon inquiry which I have made directly of Mr. Cain's lawyer in that matter, that the assessment there made is not based on any audit of Mr. Cain's books or study of the circumstances, but arose because of his unwillingness under all of the circumstances to give the Revenue a waiver of the time within which it must assess and this large assessment followed. Then, in the Tax Court at Washington, Mr. Cain's attorney, Daniel Taylor, asked for what I would term a bill of particulars, which the Court there ordered within sixty days, the government taking the position that until it looked at his books and studied the matter, it would be unable to state how the deficiency as assessed was arrived at.

Those, I think, your Honor, are the pertinent facts in my position.

By the Court: All right. Mr. Cain.

Now, Mr. Cain, is there anything you care to say in addition to what Mr. O'Brien has said before I pronounce sentence?

By Mr. Byron A. Cain: Nothing, your Honor.

5466 By the Court: Well, you have had a fair trial. You have been represented by able counsel, and in my opinion, the verdict of the Jury is just and fair. And under those circumstances, I feel I have no other alternative but to impose a substantial sentence, and that I will do.

It is considered and adjudged that you, Byron A. Cain, as punishment for the offense as set forth in the first count of the indictment of which you have been duly convicted by the verdict of the Jury, that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States, to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States for a period of three years, and to pay a fine in the sum of $5,000.

It is considered and adjudged as to the second count of the indictment, of which you have been duly found guilty by a verdict of the Jury, that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States, for a period of three years, and pay a fine in the sum of $5,000.

5467 It is further ordered that the sentences, that is, the sentences to a penal institution, shall run concurrently and not consecutively.

That will be all.

Now, Mr. Huebner. Now, I have no objection if Mr. Huebner wants to sit down, if you have a rather lengthy statement, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you very much, Judge.

Just sit down for a moment, Frank.

The statement is not lengthy, if the Court please.

The situation as to Mr. Huebner, again is that he is a family man, but in his case, his children are grown, and as Mr. Cain indicated, he was and has been for many years, an employee of this company. Mr. Cain did not say how many years, but I am informed that he was an employee for well over 25 to 30 years—was it not, Frank?

By Mr. Frank Huebner: Twenty-one.

By Mr. O'Brien: Twenty-one years at the company, and he was there when these folks came in, and again, Mr. Cain did not say, but it is the fact that the stock which he had, he had before these folks acquired any interest.

5468 He does not have independent means. Mr. Huebner is presently working at a candy company as a superintendent, running the candy plant, ever since the Shotwell Company has closed, and sold its assets to someone else. And his family—he lives with Mrs. Huebner—has been and is dependent upon his earnings from that source. The people for whom he is working have had such confidence, and do have such confidence in him, that they retained him in the face of this proceeding. They have given him leave of absence, so to speak, to be here, and would welcome him back to his position, if he should be available.

I do not know any fact which would make Mr. Huebner's situation different than that of Mrs. Morrill, Graflund and Roeser. True it is that as the superintendent, and as the operating person there, there were moneys that he received, but I think also some of the other people signed the returns, just as he did. Those are technical things.

All I can say to the Court is you know the nature of the operation. It was not confined to the top officials, but 5469 the lower echelon of people were active also to the extent that was required.

Mr. Huebner was one of those, but he was on the operating, or firing line end of that company, as your Honor can observe. Now, Mr. Cain has himself stated, and I may add that on Mr. Cain's part it was wholly voluntary, without any suggestion of any kind from me, and I think he has expressed correctly the feeling which he has as to Mr. Huebner's position in that whole situation, and I can't do any more.

By the Court: Now, Mr. Huebner, is there anything you desire to say before I pronounce your sentence?

By Mr. Frank J. Huebner: No, your Honor, I haven't.

By the Court: Well, you haven't taken the stand. Of course, I haven't heard your testimony, and I don't know just what your position is with reference to all of the testimony that has involved you in this matter.

I believe that Lubben told the truth on the stand.
5470 I was impressed with his testimony, and if I had been the Jury, I would have returned the verdict as to you, just as the Jury did.

I understand that you are not a man of any great means. I don't intend to impose a very substantial fine, for that reason, but I am going to impose a substantial penitentiary sentence. I have debated, somewhat, as to whether I should make any distinction between you and Mr. Cain as to the length of the sentence. It has been very difficult for me to decide that question.

From Mr. Lubben's testimony, you were as heavily involved in this scheme as any one of the officers, and certainly acted as a go-between with Lubben, and handled substantially all of the cash.

5471 As to your guilt and as to your participation in this scheme to evade and defeat the United States from its taxes, it seems to me, that the testimony is overwhelming. Well, I merely make that statement to indicate my own views. Lubben was haled as a blackmailer and haled as a very dishonest man. I saw no evidence in the case which indicated that he was trying to blackmail anybody. True, he was in dire financial straits and he may well have come to Mr. Cain and to Shotwell, realizing all the money he had paid to them on the black market, and I assume he may have thought that there was some obligation on Shotwell to help him out when he was in dire financial straits. Well, I don't consider there was any blackmail. My opinion is that Lubben tried to tell the truth. That doesn't mean that he may not have been mistaken in some matters. This happened many years ago. He had to search his memory carefully, but, by and large, I was convinced by the sincerity and I believe by the truthfulness of his testimony.

Well, Mr. Huebner, it is regrettable that a man who has borne a good reputation and who has never been in trouble before has to come before the Court as you and 5472 Mr. Cain have now, involved in a serious charge of this kind, but you had a fair trial and you have been represented by able counsel and as I have indicated before, I am of the opinion that the verdict is a just one.

And if we are ever going to have any recognition by the citizens of this country with reference to the payment of their income taxes without fraud, and to stamp out schemes and plans to evade the payment of their just income tax, it seems to me the Court must mete out reasonably severe sentences.

And, of course, you men were making a great deal of money. Shotwell was in a good financial condition. It had no reason to go out on the black market and obtain all this money from Lubben. There was no danger of Shotwell having to close its doors because of its inability to get raw corn. I haven't any doubt that some of this money went for raw corn. Undoubtedly it did, but the large bulk of the money that Lubben paid to the Shotwell Company never went for raw corn. Where it went to, I don't know. At least, it didn't go for raw corn.

Well, there isn't much I can say to you, Mr. Huebner, 5473 that will lessen the stigma or lessen the blow that will necessarily go along with the sentence that I am going to impose.

As I have indicated, I am not going to impose a very heavy fine because I don't believe you are a man of means, and in view of a fairly substantial sentence, I believe the ends of justice will be met by the sentence which I am about now to impose.

It is considered and adjudged that you, Frank J. Huebner, as punishment for the offenses as set forth in the first count of the indictment on which you have been duly convicted by a verdict of the jury that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States for a period of three years and pay a fine in the sum of $1,000.00.

It is further considered and adjudged that as to the second count of the indictment of which you have been duly convicted by a verdict of the jury that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States for a period of three years and to pay a fine in the sum of $1,000.00.

It is further ordered that the penitentiary
5474 sentences that I am imposing will run concurrently and not consecutively.

Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I am advised by the Marshal that the defendants have never surrendered to him for such measures as are required by the Attorney General. I now move that the Court require them to surrender themselves so that the Marshal may take such action as is required by him by departmental regulations.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I discuss that, briefly, with your Honor when we are finished here? Will your Honor withhold his ruling on that motion until I can discuss it with you? I will be through presently, Judge. I just have a couple of odds and ends.

Judge, I think you have our exhibits 96, 97 and 98. Those were the ones produced by Mr. Schwartz, these disclosure documents that you put in evidence at record 4907 for the limited purpose of your instruction.

5475 By the Court: I don't think I have, Mr. O'Brien, but if I have that exhibit, I will, of course, make a search. I didn't run across it.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is 96, 97, and 98. If I gave them back, would you check it?

By Mr. Lockley: I didn't have them.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I last saw them with your Honor, but they may have been handed to one of our people. If you have them, fine.

No. 2, I requested instructions; are those filed of record?

By the Court: They will be filed.

By Mr. O'Brien: They will be filed.

By the Court: I am waiting for the reporters to return to me my copy of my charge, and I have ruled on every request, but there is one request that I felt I should have my charge before me, so that I could more accurately rule.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: And they borrowed it yesterday, and they haven't yet returned it, but if they will do it, this morning, I will do so.

By Mr. Roy Fuller: It was returned to your secretary this morning, Your Honor at 9:30.

5476 By the Court: I will see, of course, that it is filed with the Clerk, and rulings noted on all of your objections.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I think it is now an appropriate time to remind you of the fact findings and conclusions of law which your Honor said—

By the Court: Yes. I will file within due time, my formal memorandum on your motion to suppress, in that when I denied your motion I reserved the right to file a memorandum of findings of fact and conclusions of law. I am not sure just what is a better way to dispose of it, but in any event I will file a suitable order by way of a memorandum or finding of fact, and conclusions of law, with reference to that motion.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

That leaves one other thing only, Judge.

Mr. Huebner told me this morning that he would like to visit his son, Captain Frank Huebner, at Fort Benning, Georgia, to go Monday next, and to be back within the week. That would require permission, in view of this situation, and the bail.

5477 By the Court: I don't think there will be any objection to his trip to visit his son, if he desires to do so.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection by the Government, your Honor, no, sir.

By the Court: Now, then, I haven't been advised by counsel—well, maybe you have—you have asked me for an extension of five days in addition to the statutory time within which to file a motion for a new trial, is that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir, for both the new trial, and arrest of judgment, the statute, the rules cover.

By the Court: You, I suppose, are asking for a stay until I have heard that motion?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: And that the defendants be released on their present bond?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Well, the statute requires you to make a motion within ten days, is it, or five days?

By Mr. O'Brien: For a new trial, Judge?

By the Court: Yes.

5478 By Mr. O'Brien: It requires it within five days of yesterday.

By the Court: Then you are granted a period of ten days within which to make your motion, right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Under your order, yes.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And would the Clerk make a minute order on that?

By the Court: Yes, the Clerk may make an appropriate minute.

By Mr. O'Brien: And then as to the other part, a stay pending disposition of such motion, if filed, within the time ordered.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And on present bail to continue, as Mr. Lockley says.

By the Court: I understand Mr. Lockley has no objection to the continuance of the present bail, and that may be so ordered.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is only one other thing that we might do while the Judge is here, because it is difficult—we might have a gap when you get to Minneapolis.

5479 I had in mind to ask your Honor—let me say this: On any appeal, we should have to supply a new bond, if your Honor was permitting bail, as I understood Mr. Lockley to say, for all purposes I would assume he would include appeal. But even so, we would have to put up a new bond, and terms, conditions and amounts would have to be prescribed by your Honor.

5480 By the Court: Well, it seems to me that if you were going to take an appeal, you might indicate to Mr. Lockley and to Mr. Calihan or rather, they might indicate to you what bond they are going to recommend.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: And we might have that determined now and then it seems to me that any Judge here can approve the bond without having it forwarded to me, in the event I have ordered a bond in a certain amount.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. Well, that would seem entirely —I hadn't thought of it, but it is such a routine thing, that the judge verify the security, that we could take it before any judge or court, I would assume.

By Mr. Lockley: I think, your Honor, that—

By Mr. O'Brien: You tell me the amount and—

By Mr. Lockley: I say, your Honor, I think that normally after a conviction, bond is increased.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think that it makes a great deal of difference in this particular case, but $5,000.00 would be satisfactory with the government.

5481 By the Court: Well, very well. I gather then, that the defendants may be released on their present bond. If I deny them motion for a new trial and you take an appeal, the Clerk's minutes may show that I ordered a bond in the sum of $5,000.00 and that that bond may be presented to any available judge here for approval without the formality of sending it to me.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, Judge.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, your Honor, with respect to the defendant Sullivan, may all of the same orders appear—apply, I should say, in the event the motion for acquittal is denied, but with the time being extended?

By the Court: If the motion for acquittal is denied, then I will impose sentence on defendant Sullivan and I will make such order then. I think I will make such orders then as I think necessary.

By Mr. Kirby: We can take it up then. The only problem that it presents is this: That the statute with respect to a motion for a new trial does key it, your Honor, to the date of the verdict and therefore, could we have an extension—

By the Court: Well, I haven't any objection to an 5482 order extending your right to make a motion for a new trial within ten days after I impose sentence on the defendant Sullivan, if I deny your motion for acquittal.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor. That will take care of the record. Thank you.

By the Court: Now, then, I know of no reasons why these defendants shouldn't comply with the regulations of the Marshal's office with reference to fingerprinting or any other formalities which the Marshal is under orders to obtain. And they may go to the Marshal's office at such time as the Marshal—as is convenient to the Marshal and comply with the formalities.

Is there anything further you gentlemen want to discuss with me before I leave the bench?

By Mr. Lockley: Just one thing, your Honor. I will not be back, I hope, next Monday, and I just want to say goodbye to you.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge leaves the court room.

This Honorable Court will recess.

TRANSCRIPT OF FURTHER PROCEEDINGS

had in the above-entitled cause before the Honorable Gunnar H. Nordbye, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota, sitting as one of the Judges of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, in his court room in the United States Court House, at Chicago, Illinois, on December 7, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock a.m. pursuant to notice and adjournment from the last prior proceedings had herein, on October 17, 1953.

5484 PRESENT:
Hon. Otto Kerner, Jr.,
United States Attorney,
(U. S. Court House, Chicago 4, Ill.); by Edward J. Calihan, Jr., Esq.,
Assistant United States Attorney, on behalf of the United States.

Vincent O'Brien, Esq.,
(105 S. LaSalle St., Chicago 3, Ill.)
William T. Kirby, Esq.,
(One N. LaSalle St., Chicago 2, Ill.), on behalf of Defendants.

5485 By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. Harold E. Sullivan, disposition.

By Mr. Kirby: Good morning, your Honor. I have a motion which I now wish to file captioned "Motion for Entry of Order as to time for filing a motion for a new trial."

The point is, your Honor, that the Clerk's docket, through inadvertence, did not show your Honor's advice to me that the motion for a new trial with respect to Harold Sullivan might be filed at any time within ten days after any action by your Honor on the motions that were then pending.

I talked wth Mr. Calihan at the time about it and he mentioned the matter briefly to the Clerk but it is something which I think needs to be cured by a nunc pro tunc order and I don't imagine there would be any objection.

By Mr. Calihan: No objection.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, your Honor, I should like to, if I may, address myself to the motion for a new trial. I am sure that the Court appreciates that a motion for a new trial can be granted even in cases where there has been a ruling adversely on a motion to acquit and even where the Court has indicated the Court's finding that there was evi-5486 dence sufficient to go to the jury.

The cases have all said, as Judge Holtzoff said in United States vs. Robinson in 71 F. Supp., in setting the verdict aside itself, as distinguished from granting an acquittal:

"... in setting the verdict aside the Court merely grants a new trial and submits the issues for determination by another jury. It is appropriate that in the latter instance the Court should have wide discretion in the interests of justice."

The Court reviews many cases and then says:

"The foregoing discussion inescapably leads to the conclusion that a judge may set a verdict aside as contrary to the weight of evidence and grant a new trial, even if there was substantial evidence requiring him to submit the issues to the determination of a jury."

That same rule, the wider discretion and the granting of a new trial was approved by our Seventh Circuit in the Applebaum vs. U. S. Case, 274 F. 43 at page 46.

5487 Now, the Court has already had my motion for a new trial for approximately a week and so is familiar with it. By arguing this more than certain of the grounds assigned in the motion, I do not waive any of the others or mean to minimize them. First, your Honor, let me speak of certain rulings that were made on the trial. A number of question rulings are specifically set out in my motion for a new trial and in that which was filed by Mr. O'Brien and by Mr. McConnell and I do not repeat them here verbatim nor do I waive any of them in this argument. But, your Honor, I do specifically want to speak of the limitations of the cross examination of Lubben because limitations are mentioned specifically in our motion and are of special importance, for he was the key witness, indeed, the only witness of any importance as to the defendant Sullivan.

I will read from two income tax cases recently sent back for new trials because of undue limitations on cross examination of the principal government witness. The first case is the case decided by the Fifth Circuit early this year, 1953, Montgomery vs. United States, in the Fifth Circuit, 203 F. 2d, 887. This was a prosecution against a sheriff

5488 under Section 145(b) of the income tax law. A witness testified that he paid some cash to the sheriff and then the defense sought to extensively cross examine the witness as to his handling of cash, especially in respect to payments to others and the Court ruled that out with the view they were not concerned with the cash to others but only cash to this defendant. The defense said it was important, as you said here, that they be permitted to go into this man's deals so that it could be shown what credibility could be attached to it. On appeal this position of the defense was sustained, the Court saying at page 890 that the Court should

"... accord the defendant the benefit of cross examination however searching. Cross examination of a witness is a matter of right (citing cases). Indeed, cross examination, as has been often observed, is the surest test yet devised to the truthfulness of a witness' testimony, and its allowance is especially important..."

and this language is applicable to Lubben, sir, and I will repeat:

"... and its allowance is especially important in the case of a witness who is himself an admitted violator of the 5489 law. We think the action of the Court was an undue restriction on the defendant's right to cross examine this witness."

Another income tax case under 145(b) was decided in 1951 by the Third Circuit, United States vs. Augustine, 189 F. 2d, 587. In that income tax case, an important question was what had happened to some $236,000.00 in cash which supposedly had been paid to a man by the name of Valetta. Valetta was dead when the trial came on but a man by the name of Ceasare was a witness and Ceasare had handled Valetta's affairs and knew of all his various financial transactions. The witness was asked about how Valetta handled this case, about his going to the horse races, about his betting a lot of money, how the man generally handled his affairs. The cross examination on those questions was denied and this was held to require a new trial, the Court saying—having in mind, sir, this is an income tax case:

"His credibility was a critical point for the defendant's case. Likewise the unhappy financial situation outlined by the witness in his history of Valetta was open to 5490 further development and perhaps some prodding. It is possible, had the inquiry been permitted to widen out, that some of this witness' testimony could have been shaken. If it could, the defendant was entitled to shake it. If this were a collateral point, extended cross-examination of the witness would not have been so important. But the heart of the case was whether defendant had paid the money over to Valetta."

Much as in this case, your Honor: The heart of this case is whether Lubben paid money over to the Shotwell Company. Going on with the quotation:

"Ceasare's testimony made this appear extremely unlikely. The answer to defendant's questions might have raised the inference that Ceasare was mistaken, or deceived by Valetta or that Ceasare was lying about Valetta's financial condition. We conclude that the cross-examination was unduly restricted and that the likelihood of this cause being prejudiced to defendant necessitates a new trial."

They compare Alford vs. United States, 282 U. S. 687.
5491 That last case was a case which holds that cross-examining the key witness was a matter of right and that there is, of course, no obligation to protect such a witness from being personally discredited.

Now, your Honor will recall various grounds on which we sought to go into Lubben's financial transactions in the black market, his own handling of the cash, his own income tax reports and a number of those visits, upon which your Honor indicated that we were not trying matters of Lubben; we were trying matters of these people and the cross-examination of the witness of the Government terminated on those lines. Your Honor, it is particularly important as to Sullivan that Lubben be cross-examined on points which tend to destroy his credibility. Your Honor knows that the Government's attorney said that without Lubben, the case against Sullivan was practically non-existent.

Your Honor knows that there was only one conversation testified to by Lubben in his direct evidence sought to be used to hold Sullivan in this case. I say to your Honor that the tests which are applied to a witness by the courts where that witness has much to gain for himself by his testi-5492 mony—when that witness by his own testimony is engaging in practices which are violations of the law and expose him to possible prosecution under the income tax laws, the tests are very, very strict.

McGinnis vs. United States, 256 Fed. 621, at page 625, states a rule which I think is still more strict:

"We feel required to say that the uncorroborated testimony of this perpetrator of a crime confessed under oath, and not supported by other witnesses, with a possible hope of immunity from punishment, is not only insufficient to establish the guilt of the plaintiff in error beyond a reasonable doubt, but that it presents no substantial evidence of it."

Having in mind then that test and that there is only that piece with respect to the defendant Sullivan, it is particularly important that I urge upon your Honor a review in your mind of the restrictions upon the cross-examination of Lubben to which objections were made in the conduct of the trial.

As I say, your Honor, other matters relating to ad-5493 mission and exclusion of evidence are sufficiently covered in our motions and I do not waive them. I am sure the Court has them in mind.

I want now to pass to the instructions given by the Court. We shall not discuss all of the points made in our motions and of course, waive none of them, but each point that we will discuss here, mentions an error which was called to the attention of the Court as required by the rules after the charge and before the retirement of the jury. That will be true of each of these things that I mention.

I, of course, am much better prepared with the citations today, your Honor, and I hope to be more lucid, but the objections under the rule were properly saved. If I may, I am first going to refer only to the general rules which indicate not only the great, great power of the Court in the federal system but also the careful duty of the Court when it seeks to instruct. The Supreme Court in Bollenbach vs. U. S., a 1946 case, 326 U. S. 607, at page 612, says this:

"...'in a trial by jury in a Federal Court, the judge is not a mere moderator, but is the governor of the trial 5494 for the purpose of assuring its proper conduct and of determining questions of law.'"

Citing cases.

"'The influence of the trial judge on the jury is necessarily and properly of great weight,' Starr v. United States, 153 U.S. 614, 626,... and jurors are ever watchful of the words that fall from him. Particularly in a criminal trial, the judge's last word is apt to be the decisive word. If it is the specific ruling on a vital issue and misleading, the error is not cured by a prior unexceptional and unilluminating abstract charge."

My exception started at page 5394 of the record, your Honor. I will, as we go through, refer to the specific exceptions, if you would like.

The Court: Just as you wish.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I have a little advantage over the Court in that I know which ones I will refer to, so perhaps I can refer to the page easier than your Honor. And that Supreme Court, in that case, after remarking that a specific good instruction is overbalanced by a bad instruction—I am not stating that correctly, so I should 5495 read the language again:

"If it is a specific ruling on a vital issue and misleading, the error is not cured by a prior unexceptional and unilluminating abstract charge."

And the Court says that

"a conviction ought not to rest on an equivocal direction to the jury on a basic issue."

Because otherwise you "transfer to the jury the judge's function in giving the law."

Now the first instruction that I wish particularly to question is the instruction with respect to the presumption of innocence. May I point out that paragraph number 16 in the new trial refers to an instruction of yours which begins at transcript 5316.

By the Court: Was any exception taken to that?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Court: On what page?

By Mr. Kirby: I don't find it. Here is my memory of the matter: Not to contradict this record, when we discussed in chambers the questions—

By the Court: Well, I don't believe there is any pur-
5496 pose in referring to the informal discussions. I merely want to know whether or not an exception was taken to that portion of the charge. If you want to argue it generally, good and well, I have no objection, but I was interested in knowing if you had taken an exception to it.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me tell you how it arose.

By the Court: There is no use referring to an informal discussion. The record speaks for itself. The Court's charge speaks for itself. Whether you took any exception will appear in the record. If you want to argue notwithstanding, if you didn't take some exception and there was some error, good and well.

By Mr. Kirby: In this case this one instruction, my memory is not clear on it and I will tell you how it arose.

By the Court: I am not interested in that. Just tell me what your trouble is.

By Mr. Kirby: I will tell you what my trouble is. When we were discussing instructions, I read your Honor's instruction in an income tax case in Minneapolis and in those instructions there had been a reference to the presumption of innocence continuing until such time as the proof beyond all reasonable doubt convinced—5497 By the Court: Until such time, if that time was ever reached, that the Government established their guilt.

By Mr. Kirby: That is correct. Your Honor's memory is precisely fine. And I had said in the course of our discussion that I didn't want to see that kind of an instruction. Now why, when you gave that kind of an instruction I didn't actually preserve it in the record, I can't tell you. It must have been that I was thinking of the same thing your Honor is now thinking yourself, and here is the instruction at transcript 5316, your Honor:

"Under our laws, every defendant who is charged with a crime is presumed to be innocent. Now, that presumption remains with him throughout the entire trial, until that time, if that time is reached, that the Government has established his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt."

By the Court: That is a good instruction.

By Mr. Kirby: In Lurding v. United States, Circuit Court of Appeals Sixth, 179 Fed. 2d 419, which is an income tax trial under 145-B, I will read this language:

5498 "... Again, the Court instructed the jury that 'the law in addition to that presumes all persons innocent of the offense with which they are charged until such time as the proof produced by the Government establishes their guilt to the exclusion of a reasonable doubt.'"

And then the Court goes on:

"It is difficult to apprehend what interpretation may be placed by the jury upon the phrase 'until such time.' If it carries to the mind the connotation that guilt is established at the conclusion of the Government's proof, then the burden of proof has been shifted to the defendant. The presumption of innocence remains throughout the trial and it may well be that a juror's conviction of guilt upon consideration of the Government's proof alone is either completely shattered or diluted by a reasonable doubt when the defense has had its say. Such inept phrasing should be zealously guarded against, unless accompanied by some instruction that directs a consideration of all the evidence.

5499 "Reversed and remanded for new trial in conformity herewith."

The next instruction that I wish to call the Court's attention to is the one which appears at page 5361 that talks about the violation which was involved in this case of the OPA laws and I think that the instruction as a whole, while it has a good opening and a good closing paragraph, has a middle paragraph which would permit the jury to consider the violation of the OPA laws might be considered to show intent to violate the income tax laws.

By the Court: Did you take an exception to that?

By Mr. Kirby: At page 5395 we were referring to the tying of the knowledge of the failure of the books to record payments. That is the closest, I think, we come to that because you see, your Honor, discussing the failure to record the payments as being connected with an attempt to avoid liability in connection with the OPA laws—the part on page 5361 to which we particularly direct our attention is this: After an opening paragraph about the violation of the OPA law, you say:

"The fact that the OPA laws were admittedly vio-
5500 lated may be considered by you insofar as such circumstances may throw light upon the conduct of the parties, the failure to keep adequate books and records of the overpayments, and to explain or throw light upon their conduct in handling these transactions, and with reference to the question of intent or lack of intent to wilfully violate the tax laws."

And then the next paragraph is good:

"The fact, if it be a fact, that the defendants, or some of them, committed offenses against the price control laws of the United States creates no presumption that such defendant or defendants committed the offenses here charged against him or them."

The preceding paragraph was good:

"These defendants are not charged with the violation of any OPA law, and an intent to violate the tax laws cannot be proven simply because there was an intent to violate the OPA law, or any other federal law."

But, between the two paragraphs, your Honor, the two paragraphs that do say it is conclusive and it 5501 is not a presumption, is the paragraph to which we except and that is, to just summarize it, you say: "The fact that the OPA laws were admittedly violated may be considered by you . . ." And I will skip some language.

". . . and with reference to the question of that intent or lack of intent to wilfully violate the tax laws."

Now in the Montgomery case, Montgomery v. United States, 203 F. 2d 887 which was an income tax prosecution under 145-B, the Court speaks of the difficulty faced by the Court when mention of another federal violation or a state violation comes up in a trial, and the Court says in that case which involved payment of a graft to the sheriff:

"We think, however, that the jury should have been cautioned that the evidence was admitted only to the light that it might throw on the federal offenses on trial, and that no inference of guilt could be drawn merely from the commission of other offenses different in character. In short, the jury should not convict the defendant of 5502 income tax evasion because they concluded that he was a grafter."

The Lurding case we have already referred to is another income tax case. It talks about the running of a gambling establishment, which, of course, was in violation of the laws and there wasn't an instruction in there which spoke of that and then said that although they weren't being tried for that—just as your Honor has said here—this language appears:

"You may consider that fact along with the other testimony."

And then the Court says:

"It is true that it was immediately pointed out that operating the handbook is not the offense for which the defendant is being tried, though by this caution itself the operation of the handbook was placed upon the defendant ... It is established law, for which citation seems unnecessary, that no inference of guilt may be drawn from the commission of other offenses different in character from that with which the defendant is charged, unless by course of conduct or similarity of technique it tends to establish guilt of the crime charged. Running a gambling establishment, tolerated by community opinion even though 5503 prohibited by local law, is a far cry from violating federal law in respect to taxes. The jury should not have been permitted to consider the handbook operation for any purpose other than as a source of income."

The next instruction I wish to refer to is the question about the money paid out by Shotwell and in the exception that I took at page 5398 I say this:

"With respect to the question—and I only have a couple more—about the overages, whether they did or didn't belong to the corporation, or whether they did or didn't get paid, for example, to the individuals, your Honor, I thought was speaking of what the contention of the defendants on it was, when actually the real test, as I concede it, is: Did the Government prove the receipt of the income by Shotwell Corporation and if their evidence, taken as given from the stand, was weak on that issue, as taken by the statement of the contention of the defendants—"

And then the Court said:

5504 "I gave the instruction pertaining to it verbatim."

And I said:

"That is true, but I am talking now about your summary."

That is, not the abstract of instruction, but the summary, and the Court said, "That is the only instruction that was submitted to me upon the question." And I said, "Your Honor goes further than the instruction. You are making summaries of the evidence."

And your Honor said, "Let's not argue that." And I said, "I am excepting to that."

Now, let me get to that question, about the overages and the discussion of it in your Honor's summary and what the proof was about it. My point 26 is the one which particularly refers to that in the motion for a new trial. At page 5354 I will read what your Honor said about that money being paid out. I think, your Honor, that I should say that the burden of proof on that issue, which was the key issue, is rather convincingly placed upon the defendants by the Court. Now at page 5354:

5505 "Well, whatever the amount of the overages may have been which were paid to Shotwell, what disposition was made of such receipts by Shotwell? Were they all paid out for raw corn during the latter part of 1945 and up to about July 1, 1946, as the defendants contend? If that is true, then there was no additional tax due the United States over that which Shotwell paid . . ."

And at page 5356 your Honor says this:

"You may consider, members of the jury, all direct and circumstantial evidence which may bear upon that question and determine in light of all the evidence whether or not any overceiling premiums which Shotwell received were used for the procurement of corn to obtain corn syrup, and other products, during the years in question, and if so, to what extent. If Shotwell received more in overages than it paid out for raw materials in 1945 and 1946, what about the balance? Where did it go? What light does that throw, if any, upon the intent of the parties with reference to the charge made in this indictment?"

5506 Much later, some thirty pages later, at page 5386, which is your Honor's final, concluding summation, I think, of what you considered to be the controlling issues, you say this:

"... I am anxious that you be not misled or confused by collateral issues or matters which are of no particular materiality or help in determining the real issues of this lawsuit."

Your Honor, before I finish reading that, I am going to read the cases that state my point and then you can better see whether your charge fits them. I think that would be a little more sensible. In Boatright v. United States, an Eighth Circuit case in 1939, 105 F. 2d 737, that was a mail fraud case. The Court said that if a judge undertakes to sum up the evidence, he must do so with great care. Then the Court, the trial court had given this charge to the jury:

"On the other hand if you should find or believe from the evidence in this case that these defendants did not devise an artifice or scheme to defraud; that they did not make false and fraudulent representations or promises; that if such were made, there was no intention on their part 5507 to defraud, and no intention on their part to obtain money or property by means of the representations made, then it would be your duty to find either one or both of them not guilty, according to what you believe, or either one of them, according to what you believe, if they were without fraudulent intent."

As to the instruction, the Court of Appeals said it required a new trial, saying:

"The defendants complained that this shifted to them the burden of proving their innocence. It was, of course, incumbent upon the Government to prove every essential element of the offense charged. Unless the Government thus established the guilt of the defendants beyond a reasonable doubt, they were entitled to an acquittal. But this instruction placed upon the defendants the burden of convincing the jury that they did not devise a scheme, that they did not make false representations, that they did not intend to defraud, that they did not intend to obtain money by 5508 false pretenses. The instruction we think was erroneous."

In an income tax case under Section 145(b), Nicola v. United States, 72 F. 2d 780, there were instructions given, one of them being what is called the 4th contention instruction with respect to when commissions were earned on the sale of certain printing, and the Court said this, that the time when the allotment had to be made effective, the allotment of the earnings, was very important in the case and the Court said this at page 788:

"Before the jury could find the defendant guilty, the Government had to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had not made the allotment when the negotiations for the sale actually began. The defendant did not have to prove himself innocent by showing that he had made the allotment. He could stand mute until the Government had established his failure thus to make the allotment beyond a reasonable doubt. But the effect of the charge was that unless he had firmly established that 5509 he had made the allotment to the Point Company at some one of the towns mentioned, the jury could find that he had not made it and so was guilty. This placed upon him a burden which the law does not compel him to bear and was not cured by the instruction in the beginning of the charge that the defendant was presumed to be innocent until proved to be guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Court also said in that case that:

"Where two instructions are given to the jury, one erroneous and prejudicial, and the other correct, it is impossible to tell which one the jury followed and constitutes reversible error. When an erroneous instruction has been given, it is not cured by a subsequent correct one unless the former is withdrawn."

There is a recent case decided this spring by the Fifth Circuit, Price v. U. S., 200 F. 2d 652. It was a case where an important question in the defense was the question of whether a certain lawyer had actually been empowered to act as an agent and the Court charged the jury:
5510 "If you find and believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that counsel, George T. Wilson, was empowered and authorized to act as agent for the purchaser of these stocks, the defendant would be entitled to an acquittal."

As to this, the Court said at page 655:

"If the defendant did not know or have reason to believe that the mails would be used in the transaction, then the fact, if it be a fact, that the attorney who actually mailed the letters represented the purchasers would be a complete defense, where in that event the defendant would not be guilty of causing the securities to be carried through the mails. Admittedly, the parts quoted and that we have referred to as appellant's 4th contention was erroneous in placing the burden on the defendant to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the lawyer was authorized to act as agent for the purchaser. The burden was, of course, on the prosecution to establish the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt... The Government argues that the erroneous charge was cured by other parts of the 5511 Court's charge. We cannot speculate as to which part would be accepted by the jury, nor can we say with fair assurance that the jury's verdict would not have been different had the burden of proof on this question not been misplaced (Citing cases). For the error in so charging the jury, the judgment is reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial."

Now then, in the light of those cases, your Honor, let me read the part which, at the end of the case, you said was the controlling part, starting from 5386:

"... I am anxious that you be not misled or confused by collateral issues or matters which are of no particular materiality or help in determining the real issues of this lawsuit. Although this case has taken a long time to try and there is a mass of evidence for you to consider, the controlling issues are not complicated. Ask yourselves what in the light of the evidence was the amount of the overages which were paid by Lubben and his companies to the 5512 Shotwell Company and received by that company as income during 1945 and 1946? Did such payments constitute income to the Shotwell Company in the light of these instructions? What amount of overages which were paid to the Shotwell Company and which constituted income to that company, were paid by Shotwell for raw corn during 1945 and 1946? If all the overages received from Lubben and his companies by Shotwell were paid out for raw corn by Shotwell during 1945 and 1946, that ends this case and you should return a verdict for each of the defendants of not guilty, because the transaction would result in no taxable income to the Shotwell Company.

"On the other hand, if all the overages paid by Lubben and his companies to Shotwell, and which constituted income to Shotwell within the meaning of these instructions, were not paid out by Shotwell during 1945 and 1946 for raw corn and there remained from these transactions income to the Shotwell Company during those years in 5513 a substantial amount which resulted in a substantial taxable income due the United States which was not reported in the 1945 and 1946 tax returns, or either of them, and if it appears from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that any defendant wilfully, knowingly and intentionally attempted to evade or defeat such tax for 1945 or 1946, or both, by filing or causing to be filed a false and fraudulent tax return, then as to such defendant and for such year or years you should find such defendant guilty."

I respecfully submit to the Court, that last, in substance, the quotation of the statute is correct, but your Honor, having in mind the great weight that is correctly and necessarily attached to these instructions, when you state you are going to summarize the controlling issues and then you say that if the defendants have paid out that money then they go free, I think it comes within the condemnation of those cases which I have read.

If the Court will bear with me, on the placing of the 5514 burden upon the defense, relating to an instruction at Transcript 5348—this next point relates to the aiding and abetting statute. I don't find an exception to it in the charge. We had discussed it when we were talking about the instructions but it is not in the last exceptions, your Honor. It relates to the statutes which your Honor read, you see. Your Honor at page 5347 and 5348 referred to three statutes that would bear on the guilt of these defendants.

Now, the first one that you referred to, your Honor, appears on page 5347 and you say:

"The indictment is brought under this statute:

'Any person required under this chapter to collect, account for and pay over any tax imposed by this chapter, who wilfully fails to collect, or truthfully account for and pay over such tax * * *,'"

And then you go on and you say:

"And then comes the portion which pertains to the charge made here:

'* * * and any person who wilfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat any tax imposed by this 5515 chapter, or the payment thereof, shall * * *' a violation of law."

And then you refer to the term "person" and then you say at Transcript 5348:

"And then there is another section of the law which you may consider, which provides as follows:

'Whoever commits an offense against the United States, or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission is a principal;' and:

'Whoever causes an act to be done which is directly performed by him would be an offense against the United States, is also a principal and punishable as such.'"

Now, your Honor, you first cited the statute on page 5347 which is a misdemeanor statute. It is not a felony statute. If the jury found them guilty under that, there could not be a conviction of a felony. That is Section 145(a), your Honor; not 145(b) at all. And then the final statute your Honor refers to, the aiding and abetting statute, I do believe there is an aiding and abetting statute which relates to income tax, but that is not it. So that, the statutory 5516 references which were made for the guidance of the jury, I humbly point out to the Court, are in error in two out of three instances.

I now want to address myself to the instructions—yes, the instruction as to trade deals. The exception was taken in this language, after the charge at page 5396, and I said this:

"Now, another point is that in the summary you made of the defendants' case, there was an entire omission of any evidence, or any contention of the defense as to how these deals did start in that early period with Lubben, not any mention, for instance, that the shipments of candy were explained by the defense of having been occasioned by trade deals, as indeed Lubben said the first shipments were, so that we come up—

"By the Court: May I suggest that you make it short because you can protect your record by not arguing. Otherwise, we will be here—"

And then I went on to another point.

5517 The instructions with respect to the trade deals, if the Court please, we seek to criticize them, because I believe that the Court erred when it summarized the Government's contention and when it summarized the defendants' contention in leaving out all reference to the start of these transactions as having been occasioned innocently by trade deals, although such trade deals were unquestioned, at least in the beginning, and were important then and the trade deals were most crucial as to the time of when any cash payments actually did start. Your Honor gave instructions with respect to the Government's contention as to how this started out, at page 5322, and you said:

"The Government contends that Lubben was a jobber doing business with Shotwell late in 1943, or early in 1944, and that when Lubben purchased the Eatsum Food Products Company from the Burry Biscuit Company early in 1944, or thereabouts, the Government contends that Lubben requested Frank J. Huebner of the Shotwell Company for an increase in the quota of the candy alloted to him by that company, and that later in 1944, an arrangement was 5518 made through Huebner, whereby Shotwell would increase Lubben's quota if a cash premium or overage would be paid by Lubben for merchandise shipped to him by Shotwell."

Then it summarized the defendant's position at page 5336 where you said:

"It is the defendants' position that these cash payments, or cash overages paid by Lubben, and his companies, first commenced on or about September or October, 1945;"

And then you referred to the corn situation, and so on, and then:

"This situation," you said, "according to the defendants, in order to keep their factory from closing down, because of the lack of raw materials, induced them to arrange with Lubben a plan for cash overpayments for candy sold, and to use the cash overages for the purchase of raw corn . . ."

and so on.

At page 5353 you stress the matter and you say:

5519 "The truth as to when the overages began, their duration, and their amount is a matter, and an important matter, which you will have to determine from all the evidence introduced."

And on the preceding page you had said this:

"It would be important for you to determine when the overages began, because defendants contend that there were no overages paid, except during the period of the corn shortage, which was from September-October, 1945, to about July 1, 1946, while the Government contends that these payments which were made by Lubben had no relation to the so-called corn shortage, but were paid to Shotwell months before there was any critical shortage of corn syrup."

Now, your Honor did refer to trade deals. Their importance in the case, as we believe them to be, is in connection with how this stuff started.

By the Court: What did you say?

By Mr. Kirby: Sir?

By the Court: What things started?

5520 By Mr. Kirby: How any transactions with Lubben started. You see, as your Honor says, the time when the overages began to be paid in cash was a crucial period. Now, there is a lot of proof, so far as the defense is concerned, that the early deals with Lubben were trade deals. Indeed, that proof would bring the trade deals down until the period of the corn shortage. Having in mind that that was what the defendants', their proof, would substantiate, now let me read what the Court did say about trade deals. I mean, this is the only reference I am aware of—

By the Court: Wasn't that the only requested instruction that I received with respect to trade deals?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, this is not an instruction that we tendered, the one I now read to you. However, I feel your Honor, that we did not tender any summation for you to give. The summation is not ours to submit. The question whether the summation is or is not correct, is not added, but whether we did or didn't give it to you. This is what your Honor said at 5373:

"There has been some reference to trade deals. Well, 5521 if you find from the evidence that there were trade deals by which the corporate defendant sold some of its merchandise at ceiling in return for the sale to it by the customer, or some third party, of raw materials, at ceiling prices, you are instructed that no income to the corporation resulted therefrom."

Now, let me just for a second refer to certain instances in the record where the trade deals assumed much more importance than that. First of all, at Transcript 421—

By the Court: Was there any exception taken to the Court's failure to go further into the analysis of trade deals?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, and I read that at the beginning of this point here.

By the Court: What page was that again?

By Mr. Kirby: At 5396 where I say:

"Now, another point is that in the summary you made of the defendants' case, there was an entire omission of any evidence, or any contention of the defense as to how these deals did start in that early period with Lubben, not 5522 any mention, for instance, that the shipments of candy were explained by the defense as having been occasioned by trade deals, as indeed Lubben said the first shipments were, so that we come up—"

And then I proceeded, on the Court's instruction, into further points. Now, your Honor, here were the points which could have been mentioned and I think quite properly belonged in. Lubben at 421 of the transcript explained that the first deal with Huebner to get more chocolate or candy of any kind was as a result of a trade deal. Lubben at transcript page 1172 again was discussing the early deals and this question and answer series appears:

"Q. And nothing was paid to Shotwell for that candy other than the regular invoice price?

"A. That is correct, sir.

"Q. So Shotwell got the candy and—or Shotwell got the chocolate and you were able to sell the candy, and that was a perfectly legitimate transaction, is that right?

"A. I was made the Shotwell broker in the New York territory, New York City.

5523 "Q. But that transaction did not involve overage?

"A. No, sir; it did not."

Another question of the overage, particularly with respect to the defense, was early in 1945 when there was some 60 tons of chocolate candy and 55 tons of chocolate, as the defense contended, involved in a trade deal. This question was asked of Lubben on cross:

"Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, meet with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner in Boston in early 1945 so that you might introduce them to Mr. August Nelson of the United Chocolate Refiners?"

And he said he did. I don't contend that Lubben admitted that he did not give money for that chocolate deal. Indeed he says that he paid money, but it did support the defense in the contention that that was what was going on in early 1945 and it is quite important to Sullivan, if the Court please, that there is understandable and explainable proof in the record of how these transactions were going on, exclusive of cash, during the early period. Now, there is Hogan's testimony at 3212. There is Cain's testimony.
5524 There is Bond's testimony at Transcript 3331, and Cramer's testimony at 3362, all of which relate to the trade deals.

Now then, I want to get to my final points with respect to the instructions and they all relate particularly to the failure to distinguish and define the proof as to Sullivan alone. At the conclusion of our having heard the Court's charge to the jury, we retired to chambers and I there made this objection at page 5395:

"But I think when the Court undertakes to summarize the evidence as the Court did, and states evidence as if it was equally applicable to Sullivan, which is not applicable to Sullivan, under the Court's own ruling, that that gives the jury the idea that they may consider it against him, and it is not cured by your later instruction; because certainly they don't think you are going to call to their attention evidence which they shouldn't consider against Sullivan."

5525 Now, let me refer to some of the type of evidence which your Honor had said should not be considered against Sullivan. I will read from the transcript at page 491, Mr. Lubben's direct examination:

"Q. You say it was in New York City?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When?

"A. January 19, 1945.

"Q. And who was there?

"A. Mr. Huebner.

"Q. And what happened?

"By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, the defendant Harold Sullivan, not having been there, there is no way he can meet this type of proof, and I ask that you instruct the jury that it must be disregarded so far as the defendant, Harold Sullivan, is concerned.

"By the Court: I will instruct the jury that it is only binding upon the defendant Huebner in that he was the only defendant alleged to be there, and what took place is only binding—or relevant, rather, I should say, to the 5526 defendant—competent as to the defendant Huebner.

"By Mr. Kirby: That's right. I'm glad to have the Court's instruction, because I don't want the jury to think there is anything improper in making that type of objection.

"By the Court: It is perfectly proper for you to make that type of objection.

"By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor."

And then he goes on and he says that it took place at the Pennsylvania Hotel in early 1945 and then he starts out to tell of a conversation about the payment of the money and dividing of it in piles and then I say, at page 494:

"By Mr. Kirby: May that conversation, in view of its having been in the absence of the defendants Cain and Sullivan, be—"

And then the Court said:

"If Mr. Huebner was there alone that conversation is competent only as to him."

Now, I just read that, your Honor, because that same thing happened throughout the trial. There were instances, of course, when the objection was not made because the one time that it had been made plain that objections 5527 didn't have to be made all the time. There wasn't any misunderstanding so far as Court and Counsel were concerned, as to the limitations which we were seeking to maintain. Now, let me just read to the Court—this is the instruction, the abstract instruction, if I may say, which your Honor gave at Transcript 5366. Well, if I did that, I would be reading it out of order. Let me read it in the order in which it actually took place and that will be more accurate. At Transcript 5325 and thereafter through a series of references that I am going to read to the Court, you summarized the evidence in the case with no distinction whatever that the evidence, or that most of the evidence which we were referring to could not be considered as to the defendant Sullivan at all, and at 5325 this is what you said:

"The Government contends that substantial cash payments were made to Huebner for the Shotwell Company by Lubben throughout the first six months of 1945. Usually the cash payments, according to the Government, were made by Lubben to Huebner, either in Chicago or New 5328 York. And it is contended that when the payments were made to Huebner he generally followed the practice of counting the money and checking the amount with a record that he kept and the cash would be divided into three piles by Huebner, with the statement on the part of Huebner that one pile was for Byron, referring to the defendant Cain, one was for Harold, referring to the defendant Sullivan, and the third was for him, and that Huebner would skim off some of the money from each pile stating that this was for the horses, or words to that effect.

"The Government contends that during the proprietorship of Eatsum by Lubben in 1945, $105,473.86 of overceiling payments was paid to Shotwell on candy sold by Shotwell to Eatsum, and that all of such payments were made in cash."

And then at Transcript 5328 I might say—well, I will go along:

"After General Confections was organized by Lubben in March, 1946, the Government contends that that con-
5329 cern continued the overceiling payments upon merchandise sold by Shotwell, by making payments to the Shotwell Company substantially in the same manner as had been done during the proprietorship, and the partnership of Eatsum Food Products Company, except, as I remember, that no notations of the overages were made on the invoices.

"Now the Government contends, members of the jury, that most of the payments made by General Confections were made to the defendant, Huebner, either in New York or at the Shotwell factory in Chicago. Some of the payments, according to the Government, were made by one James Moran, a brother-in-law of Huebner—of Lubben, and one William Heitmann, the factory superintendent, or assistant factory superintendent for General Confections."

And then you go on and you talk about the Krasne item, for example, the Krasne jewelry item, and you total up the payments in general—having in mind, if the Court please, that you are now summarizing what they can consider 5530 without it being limited in any way as to the defendant

Sullivan. And after that, your Honor, you come then to Transcript 5333:

"It is the position of the Government, as the Court understands it, that from the various records of Eatsum and General Confections introduced in evidence, and the oral testimony as the payment of overages, it has established beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a substantial amount of taxes due the United States from the Shotwell Company for each of the years 1945 and 1946, over and above that which was reported and paid by the company, and that each individual defendant, including Shotwell Company, wilfully and intentionally attempted to evade or defeat such tax in payment thereof, by filing or aiding, assisting, or causing to be filed false and fraudulent returns for such years."

But, let me read, in summary fashion, what that instruction could be taken to mean—that by some of the oral testimony as to the payment of overages and the records, 5531 it has been established beyond a reasonable doubt that each individual defendant committed the crime and the great bulk of that was not admitted against Sullivan at all.

At Transcript 5356, the Court was quite explicit and you said this:

"You may consider, members of the jury, all direct and circumstantial evidence which may bear upon that question and determine in light of all the evidence whether or not any overceiling premiums which Shotwell received were used for the procurement of corn to obtain corn syrup, and other products, during the years in question, and if so, to what extent. If Shotwell received more in overages than it paid out for raw materials in 1945 and 1946, what about the balance? Where did it go? What light does that throw, if any, upon the intent of the parties with reference to the charge made in this indictment?"

At Transcript 5358 you say:

"Any cash payments by way of overages made by 5532 Eatsum, Reserve Trading Company, General Confections, may be considered in support of the Government's case only if such constituted taxable income to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. But payments to a corporation, and received by it, for goods sold by it on the so-called black market, do constitute revenue for tax purposes."

At Transcript 5359 you say:

"Well, continuing, members of the jury, from where I left off when we took our recess, in determining the issues of this case you have a right to take into consideration the manner in which such transactions involving overages were entered on the books of the Lubben companies insofar as they were entered and you have a right to take into consideration any records kept by Shotwell and also the testimony regarding the suggested division of the overages which were made, together with all other facts and circumstances which may throw any light as to whether or not these overages constituted income to Shotwell."

5533 Now Your Honor—

By the Court: Of course, that last statement, as to whether or not the payments constituted income to Shotwell, the testimony with regard to the suggested division of the overages, that was one of the matters which you called my attention to. If the payments were made, that would be income to Shotwell, of course, and the testimony of Huebner as to what was done with the money was a pertinent factor in order to determine whether or not the money did constitute income to Shotwell, isn't that right?

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I don't concede that when you admit that testimony with reference to Huebner it brings it in. But in these instructions and perhaps in the argument this morning, you were saying it may be considered, if you will forgive me. I just don't think it can be considered for any purpose, and in your instruction—I was under the impression it was not going to be received.

The Court: I merely call your attention to it. I am not carrying out your line of thought. I thought I should call your attention to the language with reference to the suggested division of these overages which was used there, 5534 insofar as the question as to whether or not this money constituted income to Shotwell.

By Mr. Kirby: I appreciate the contention you make on this, of whose income tax are we trying, yes. Now, if the Court will forgive me, in the instructions which I have just read to you in connection with this point, there are, it seems to me, seventeen different points on which a proper objection may be made that those things are not in evidence against Sullivan at all. But, you are treating them and you are given more credence and you are given more confidence and you are given more attention properly so than anybody else when you make your summary.

Now then, after that had occurred, we then come to page 5366 and you give an instruction in the abstract.

By the Court: 56 or 66?

By Mr. Kirby: 66. That is some forty pages after the other material started. You say this and this is a good instruction:

"Any statement or act of any of the defendants not in the presence of another defendant is not binding upon the absent defendants, even though one or more of the 5535 defendants were mentioned in the conversation, nor are such matters competent evidence against any other defendants not present. I have limited, you will observe, certain evidence during the trial, from time to time, as being competent only as to certain defendant or defendants, that is, by way of example, what Mr. Hubner or Mr. Cain may have said or done in the absence of Mr. Sullivan, would not be binding or competent as to Mr. Sullivan. Likewise, what Mr. Huebner may have said or done in the presence of Cain would not be binding on Cain, and what Mr. Cain may have said in the absence of Huebner would not be binding on Huebner."

I think I must have misread that latter part.

"And what Mr. Cain may have said in the absence of Huebner would not be binding on Huebner."

By the Court: I think the stenographer inadvertently omitted the word "not." Likewise what Mr. Huebner may have said or done not in the presence of Cain.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

5536 By the Court: My own record indicates the word "not" and I think that is an inadvertent omission.

By Mr. Kirby: I mention that the instruction which you gave at that point was correct. Now then, I submit, however, that a correct abstract instruction is not effective to overcome the damage which is done by a specific instruction which might be in error and I think that is doubly true where it is in the summary which an experienced judge gives to the jury of what they should consider. Now, they were told throughout all of that which I have read to you things that they could consider to determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant. And those things were not in evidence and they will follow you, your Honor.

Now, the Supreme Court in Lutwak v. United States, 344 U.S. 604, spoke of the great care that it is necessary to have where there is evidence which is admissible for certain of the defendants but not as to others and they say at page 618:

"The Court must be careful at the time of the admission and by its instructions to make it clear that the evi-5537 dence is limited as against the declarant only."

And then it says a little later on:

"In the trial of a criminal case for conspiracy, it is inevitable that there shall be, as there was in this case, evidence as to declarations that is admissible as against all of the alleged conspirators; there are also other declarations admissible only as to the declarant and those present who by their silence or other conduct assent to the truth of the declaration. These declarations must be carefully and clearly limited by the Court at the time of their admission and the jury instructed as to such declarations and the limitations put upon them. Even then, in most instances of a conspiracy trial of several persons together, the application of the rule places a heavy burden upon the jurors to keep in mind the admission of certain declarations and to whom they have been restricted and in some instances with specific purpose."

5538 A Supreme Court case, Krulewitch v. United States 336 U.S. 440, has this language in the opinion of Mr. Justice Jackson at 453:

"As a practical matter, the accused often is confronted with a hodge-podge of acts and statements by others which he may never have authorized or intended or even known about, but which helped to persuade the jury of existence of the conspiracy itself . . . The naive assumption that prejudicial effects can be overcome by instructions to the jury (citing cases) all practicing lawyers know to be unmitigated fiction."

That case and that language is particularly cited, but in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in a case of this year, United States v. Konovsky, 202 F. 2d 271, in MacFarland

v. The United States, the Circuit Court of Appeals, the District of Columbia, 174 F. 2d 538, the Court said at page 539:

"In a charge to a jury, considered in its entirety, correctly states the law, the incorrectness of one paragraph, or one phrase standing alone ordinarily does not constitute reversible error; but it is otherwise if two instructions 5539 are in direct conflict and one is clearly prejudicial, where the jury might have followed the erroneous instruction. (Citing cases) A conviction ought not to rest on an equivocal direction to the jury on a basic issue."

In the case of Price v. United States, 200 F. 2d 652, the Government argues—this is a quotation.

"The Government argues that the erroneous charge was cured by other parts of the Court's charge. We cannot speculate as to which part would be accepted by the jury, nor can we say with fair assurance that the jury's verdict would not have been different had the burden of proof on this question not been misplaced."

In Drossos v. United States, an Eighth Circuit case in 1924, 2nd F. 2nd 538, the Court said that other general instructions did not cure it, saying:

"But that is not the rule where two instructions are 5540 directly in conflict and one of them clearly erroneous and prejudicial, such as is presented here, for the jury will assume that the instructions are all correct and will as likely follow the incorrect as the correct instruction."

And the case was reversed for a new trial.

The point which I have just addressed myself to, your Honor, was general. I now want to come to the circumstantial evidence instructions which you gave. It is part of the same point, namely, that you did not distinguish and define the proof as to Sullivan alone. At Transcript 5349—or let me say this: The Court's instructions with respect to circumstantial evidence, and circumstantial evidence is of immense importance to the Sullivan case—its instructions I believe were in error because those instructions would allow the jury to believe that they might consider acts, declarations or circumstances that relate to others. They might consider them against Sullivan even though they were not admissible as to Sullivan.

By the Court: Didn't I grant your request as to circumstantial evidence almost verbatim?

5541 By Mr. Kirby: Yes, you did when you gave the abstract charges.

By the Court: Well, that was the only request I was given.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, your Honor, you gave general instructions and I did except to this.

By the Court: You are talking about circumstantial evidence?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: I say, the only request of circumstantial evidence that was given by me that I recollect was substantially verbatim as you requested.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the instruction I gave you was circumstantial evidence must exclude every other hypothesis but that of innocence and that you gave, and that I am sure no one need question.

By the Court: It is about as strong as the English language could make it.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I want to read to the Court something which is just about as strong as the English language could make it which I did not request and which tells the jury that they can consider against him matters which are not in the evidence against him, defendant Sullivan.

5542 Now, let me refer to Transcript 5349 and you say this:

"Now, intent is a state of mind and it is not possible to look into a man's mind to see what goes on. The only way you have of arriving at the intent of any defendant in this case is to take into consideration all the facts and circumstances shown by the testimony and exhibits which have been received in evidence herein."

And at transcript page 5350:

"Direct proof of wilfull intent is not necessary. It may be inferred from the acts of the defendants and such inferences may arise from a combination of acts, although each act by itself may seem unimportant. It is a question of fact, members of the jury, to be determined from all of the evidence."

And then at transcript page 5377 you said:

"Now, there are two classes of evidence recognized and admitted in a court of justice, upon either of which juries may lawfully find an accused guilty of crime. One is 5543 direct evidence and the other is circumstantial evidence. Circumstantial evidence may consist of any acts, declarations or circumstances admitted in evidence, or the reasonable and convincing inferences to be drawn therefrom as to any defendant tending to prove the crime charged or tending to connect such defendant with the commission of the offense charged.

"The Government has offered both direct and circumstantial evidence..."

Let me just call your attention to just one little bit of evidence which was not admitted against Sullivan but which under those instructions is one of the types which they might consider against him and which would be terribly harmful.

At transcript page 443 Lubben was testifying and he said this:

"A. Mr. Huebner told me that his partners, Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan, were always looking for more money, a lot of cash.

He says, 'If you can keep the cash coming, I can give you a lot of merchandise.'

5544 "By Mr. Kirby: I object to that, if your Honor please. It is not binding on the defendant Sullivan.

"By the Court: All right. That was understood. But it is only binding on defendant Huebner and not binding on defendant Sullivan."

That was a particularly vicious fact, if one might call it such, in the evidence that Sullivan was one of those who was hungry for money and who was always demanding it and having in mind that there was one, and there were many others in which your Honor's ruling was it shouldn't have been considered, let me repeat in the language at page 5377:

"Circumstantial evidence may consist of any acts, declarations or circumstances admitted in evidence, or the reasonable and convincing inferences to be drawn therefrom as to any defendant tending to prove the crime charged or tending to connect such defendant with the commission of the crime charged."

In the brief your Honor has studied, you know full well the rule of the income tax cases that the intent or any 5545 intent from circumstantial evidence is quite a serious problem in an income tax case because of the strict proof that must be made.

I want to cite one additional case, one that was cited early this year by the Fifth Circuit, Wardlaw v. United States, 203 F. 2d 884. There was an instruction there in general language that a person was presumed to intend the natural consequences and effect of the things that he did. In other words, it was intent presumed in that fashion, and as to that, the Court said at page 887:

"We think the exception was good and the giving of this charge was prejudicial error. The intent involved in this offense is not inherent in the act itself, but is a specific intent involving bad purpose and evil motive and that specific intent must be proved by or clearly inferred from the evidence. See authorities footnote 2, supra.

"We find it unnecessary to pass upon the other specifications of error. The judgment of a conviction is reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial."

5546 I mention that case because this question of intent is so critically important and some of the evidence in this case, if it was allowed to be used against Sullivan, would inevitably have a prejudicial effect on him and on that issue, among others, but you can see that the instruction you gave was quite broad. You said they could draw their conclusions from anything in the evidence.

Now, it has been your Honor's custom to take a recess at approximately this hour. I would say I have approximately fifteen minutes more. Would you prefer to take a recess now or shall I continue?

By the Court: Do you want a recess?

By Mr. Kirby: I feel I have been imposing on the Court's patience.

By the Court: Not at all.

By Mr. Kirby: I think it would be better to take a recess.

By the Court: If you want a recess, we will take one. If you don't, we won't.

By Mr. Kirby: Since you put it on my shoulders, we will take a recess. Thank you.

(Recess taken.)

5547 By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Kirby: The next point, your Honor, relates to the instructions that were given with respect to the Cain disclosure, admissions and documents. At page 5397 after your Honor's charge, I made this exception:

5548 "By Mr. Kirby: Then on the question of the disclosure material, there were four separate occasions that I will just group in one, saying to your Honor that you talked of the disclosure material and the statements and the admissions of Cain as being competent upon the issue of intent when, of course, the admissions and statements and the writings are not admissible on any such issue, as against the defendant Sullivan at all.

"By the Court: Well, of course, you must remember the defendant Sullivan became a part of the so-called disclosure in that he said he recommended a disclosure be made, and, therefore, I assumed you would want to include that generally, because he specifically stated that when he learned of the situation, he was insistent that disclosure be made.

"By Mr. Kirby: That is true, but these documents, like 186, 189-A, and those admissions, made at the disclosure hearing, those are not competent against him at all, but 5549 in your charge were treated as though they were.

"By the Court: Didn't I expressly state to the jury when they were received?

"By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

"By the Court: All right."

Let me refer to the actual proceeding with respect to the Cain testimony at the disclosure hearing and these documents, at transcript 2903, in chambers and out of the presence of the jury where this took place:

"By Mr. Kirby: Are you offering it against the defendant Sullivan or only against the defendant Cain?

"By Mr. Lockley: Well, those are only the defendant Cain's admissions. I would assume it is only admissible against the defendant Cain.

"By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. I am sure it is correct. There may be more limitations but that one certainly exists."

Then at transcript 2923 later, still out of the presence of the jury, we were talking about the same question and the Court said this:

"By the Court: Now, of course, we have the other 5550 question. You have already indicated that it is not offered with reference to the defendant Sullivan."

At transcript 4527 on the cross examination of Cain this took place, Mr. Cain made this answer:

"A. This was prepared as a memoranda for them to use outside of that sheet, that we recorded very carefully all of the income that we were charged with on Lubben's books.

"Q. For what purpose was it to be used?

"By Mr. Kirby: Well, I object on the ground we have certainly gone over that to exhaustion.

"By the Court: Well, the exhibit is not admissible as to your client.

"By Mr. Lockley: Q. Well, was Exhibit 185 used for the purpose of preparing Exhibit 186, if you know?

"A. I don't know.

"By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me, Mr. Lockley. I would assume, your Honor, not only that the exhibit is not admissible against my client but all of the testimony with respect to it is not admissible.

5551 "By the Court: I think that necesarily follows.

"By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, your Honor."

In rebuttal, the government put on Lima and Busby to identify disclosure documents and this took place on direct examination of Mr. Busby at transcript 4986.

"By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 189-A, B, C, D, and E in evidence.

"By Mr. Kirby: I object, and I ask that the jury be instructed that neither 186 nor this, if it were to be received, would be binding on the defendant Sullivan, or any evidence against him at all.

"By the Court: Yes, it may be so understood, and the record may indicate that 186 was not received as to the defendant Sullivan."

Later, in Busby's direct, this took place at transcript 4998:

"By the Court: It may be received in evidence. And I understand that you make your objection, Mr. Kirby, to its competency as to Mr. Sullivan.

"By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

5552 "By the Court: I will sustain that objection.

"By Mr. Kirby: And will you instruct the jury with respect to that?

"(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 189-A, 189-B, 189-C, 189-D and 189-E.)"

Now, let me read our objection 21 in the motion for a new trial, to be specific:

"The Court erred in its summary of the defendant's position particularly when the Court discussed with the jury the Cain admissions made orally and in writing, such errors consisting not only in the summary itself not stating fully the situation relating to such admissions orally and in writing, but further the jury would assume from the Court's including those matters in general discussion of the position of the defendant that such matters were binding upon or admissible against or could be considered in connection with the defendant Sullivan, although such matters had expressly not been offered by the govern-5553 ment with respect to the defendant Sullivan and were not in any way competent or in the record as against him."

In Point 30 which we make, it reads as follows:

"The Court erred in its instructions with respect to the disclosure and particularly in stating that such evidence (which had not been received with respect to the defendant Sullivan) might be considered as to the intent of the defendants, including Sullivan, to violate the income tax laws."

And then Point 31 says:

"The Court erred in its instructions with respect to the so-called disclosure and its effect, particularly as it might affect the defendant Sullivan."

Having in mind, your Honor, that those were the rulings that were made in the course of the trial and those were the objections made in our motion, let me read what your Honor said at transcript 5342. This is in the course of your advising the jury what the defendants' contentions were.

You say:

5554 "Cain admits that he made certain statements at a court hearing as to the Shotwell Company's tax statements being false for the years in question, and that the overages paid by Lubben might total some $400,000.00, but it is his position that these alleged admissions and the testimony read from the transcript of the Court hearing must be appraised in light of his understanding of the law in 1948 when the so-called disclosure to the government was made by him and Mr. Busby, the accountant."

And then at page 5361 you say:

"Now, some testimony, members of the jury, has been introduced about a disclosure made by Mr. Cain and Mr. Busby to the revenue authorities, when it was learned from Mr. Busby that Lubben's books upon examination by Mr. Busby, and Graflund, reflected certain over-ceiling payments to Shotwell. It appears that Busby advised Cain as to the necessity of a disclosure to the revenue authorities, because of the failure of the 1945 and 1946 income tax returns to disclose these over-ceiling payments, and their disposition.

5555 "You heard the testimony as to the visits made by Cain and Busby to one Mr. Sauber, who was connected with the Internal Revenue Department, and the statements made by Cain and Busby with respect to the overceiling payments received, and their alleged disposition for raw materials by Shotwell.

"You have heard the testimony regarding Cain's alleged admission as to the falsity or incompleteness of these tax returns, and his explanation as to why, in his opinion, at the time he assumed they were false and inaccurate.

"There has also been received in evidence work sheets and data compiled by Mr. Busby,"—

Those are the exhibits 186 and the 189 series on which, your Honor, the rulings I specifically called to your attention—

"and certain data compiled by Mr. Cain with respect to an alleged tentative compilation of the overages, and . . ."—

That was 186—

"and the disposition of such receipts by Shotwell for 5556 raw materials, and the nature and character of the disposition, which was allegedly made.

"All the testimony should be considered by you, that is, all that testimony should be considered by you in view of the circumstances, and understanding of the parties in so far as it may bear upon any intent of the parties to wilfully violate the income tax laws or their good faith, or lack of good faith in the matter.

"Any admission by Mr. Cain as to taxes due the government at that time from Shotwell must be considered in light of his understanding of the law at that time, that is, that overages paid for raw materials in violation of the OPA law would not be recognized by the tax income authorities at that time as an expense of doing business.

"Now, it is not necessary for you to determine the effect of any so-called disclosure, except in so far as it may throw light upon the conduct of the parties, and the object and the purposes which they had in mind in doing that 5557 which they did do, during that period, and in so far as it may throw light upon the intent of the parties and their good faith, or lack of good faith."

In the Seventh Circuit, as recently ruled, in the case of United States v. Haupt—I shouldn't say "recently." It was in 1943. 136 F. 2d, 661, as to situations like the one which I have just called, I believe, your Honor's attention to, where admissions could be—where there could be confusion, and you have in mind, your Honor, that what I have read to you about the use of those disclosures and admissions does not in a single instance say they can't be used against Sullivan but quite affirmatively says they can be considered as to all parties, in the plural.

In that case, in 671, the Court says this:

"Defendants urge that they were deprived of a fair and impartial trial as guaranteed by the Constitution. At this point it seems appropriate to emphasize that no principle is more firmly embodied in our system of jurisprudence than that a person shall not be deprived of life or lib-5558 erty except upon a fair and impartial ascertainment of his guilt. Of the many rights guaranteed to the people of this republic, there is none more sacred than that of trial by jury. Such right comprehends a fair determination, free from passion or prejudice, of the issues involved. The right is all-inclusive; it embraces every class and type of person. Those for whom we have contempt or even hatred are equally entitled to its benefit. It will be a sad day for our system of government if the time should come when any person, whoever he may be, is deprived of this fundamental safeguard. No more important responsibility rests upon courts than its preservation unimpaired. How wasted is American blood now being spilled in all parts of the world if we at home are unwilling or unable to accord every person charged with crime a trial in conformity with this constitutional requirement."

Page 672—this, incidentally, was a treason trial with 5559 several defendants. The Court said:

"We shall briefly refer to some of the more compelling grounds upon which we think defendants' contention must be sustained. As already shown, there were introduced in evidence fourteen statements, the length of which it is difficult to describe."

And then they go on to talk about them and they say:

"As there is no dispute but that such statements, or at any rate most of them, were of a highly incriminating nature, no purpose could be served in relating their contents. They were not only incriminating as to the defendant by whom made, but in the main equally incriminating against other defendants. True, as the government asserts, such statements were offered in evidence only against the defendant by whom made, and the Court instructed the jury accordingly. A reading of these statements, however, leaves no room for doubt but that they were damaging not only as to the defendants against whom offered but as to all 5560 others. We doubt if it was within the realm of possibility for this jury to limit its consideration of the damaging effect of such statements merely to the defendant against whom they were admitted. We have equal doubt that any jury, or for that matter any court, could perform such a Herculean feat."

Then they say that:

"A study of the record, however, is convincing that it is not sufficient as to one and perhaps to more of the defendants. This is so, even though it is assumed that the incriminating statements were properly admitted.

"We express this opinion in connection with our conviction that the guilt of individual defendants was not determined merely on evidence properly applicable to such defendant. If we indulge in the rather violent assumption that the verdict of guilty as to all defendants was not produced by passion and prejudice, it must have been the result of the inability of the jury to segregate from the mass of evidence introduced that relevant to in- 5561 dividual defendants and properly limit it thereto. Such was the inevitable result, under the circumstances of this case, of a joint trial."

And they reversed, saying in the course of the reversal that the only way the matter, once called to the Court's attention, could safely be handled would be by a severance.

Now, let me just call to the Court's attention and I will refer to it a little bit more later—

By the Court: Do you suppose we could have had some misunderstanding about the time? You said about fifteen minutes.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. Well, I am afraid I was mistaken because I had forgotten the length of this citation, your Honor. It certainly won't be more than a final fifteen minutes. I will make it less. Yes, I will make it less.

Now, your Honor, in that Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals case they hold that even where the instructions were most careful there, nevertheless it is a violation to that defendant's rights where admissions of others are read to the jury in the case where he alone is involved.

5562 Of course, we have the position here, as I have stated it, that the instructions, I feel, did not properly delimit it to Sullivan.

Now, the Supreme Court of the United States has granted certiorari and has written extensive opinions in three recent cases where the question arises as to the admissibility or the effect upon a jury of statements in the nature of admissions by one defendant. And they have indicated in those three cases that it is the most dangerous kind of a thing for a defendant to meet. They have indicated that it is almost impossible and they have indicated that certainly nothing but the most careful and minute instructions and if any reference to such admissions must be given, that they can't be considered against these other defendants. Those three cases are Blumenthal v. United States, 332 U.S. 539, Krulewitch v. United States, 336 U.S. 440, and Lutwak, et al, v. United States, 344 U.S. 604.

In Blumenthal v. United States, that was a prosecution of five for a conspiracy to sell whiskey above OPA price and certain admissions by some of the defendants were put in the record and the Court said at page 551:

5563 "Whether or not the evidence stripped of those facts is sufficient to sustain the charge, a preliminary question arises upon the trial court's disposition of the admissions. They supplied strong confirmatory or supplementing proof to show, not only the connections of Goldsmith and Weiss with the scheme, but also its existant and illegal character. If, therefore, it was shown or even were doubtful that the admissions had been improperly received as against Blumenthal, Feigenbaum and Abel, reversal would be required as to them."

Then at page 559 the Court said:

"The grave danger in this case, if any, arose not from the trial court's rulings upon admissibility nor from its instructions to the jury. As we have said, these were as adequate as might reasonably be required in a joint trial."

If you will forgive me, I will state, your Honor, that the instructions which were given there are quite explicit and there were three distinct places at which the Court made either abstractly or distinctly references to those ad-5564 missions and specifically instructed the jury that they were not to consider them against these other persons and I do not say that is not true of our record here. The Court said:

"The danger rested rather in the risk that the jury, in disregard of the Court's direction, would transfer, consciously or unconsciously, the effect of the excluded admissions from the case as made against Goldsmith and Weiss across the barrier of the exclusion to the other three defendants.

"That danger was real. It is one likely to arise in any conspiracy trial and more likely to occur as the number of persons charged together increases. Perhaps even at best, the safeguards provided by clear rulings on admissibility, limitations on the bearing of evidence as against particular individuals, and adequate instructions, are insufficient to ward off the danger entirely. It is therefore extremely important that these safeguards be made as impregnable as possible."

5565 In Krulewitch v. United States that I referred to, they say:

"A co-defendant in a conspiracy trial occupies an uneasy seat. There generally will be evidence of wrongdoing by somebody. It is difficult for the individual to make his own case stand on its own merits in the minds of jurors who are ready to believe that birds of a feather are flocked together."

And at page 458:

"Few instruments of injustice can equal that of implied or presumed or constructed crimes... The most odious of all oppressions are those which mask as justice."

In that case, that is the case where the Court said that the assumption that the jury will disregard it, all practicing lawyers know it to be unmitigated fiction.

In the Lutwak case they say that:

"The Court must be careful at the time of the admission and by its instructions to make it clear that the evidence is limited as against the declarant only."

In United States v. Konovsky, the Seventh Circuit case of this spring, 202 F. 2d 721, the failure to restrict 5566 properly admissions of another was held to require reversible—was held to require a new trial.

Now, your Honor, if the Supreme Court in three recent cases has gone to the extent that it has to warn what impregnable barriers must be created against misunderstanding by juries, then I think that underlines the force of our objection here which is that in so many words the Court said to this jury that—and I will read some of it just for a second here—after referring to the Cain admissions and testimony and documents and the documents of Busby, all of which had been ruled out, in the very next sentence you say:

"All this testimony should be considered by you."

"All the testimony should be considered by you, that is, all that testimony should be considered by you in view of the circumstances, and understanding of the parties in so far as it may bear upon any intent of the parties to wilfully violate the income tax law or their good faith or lack of good faith in the matter.

"Any admission by Mr. Cain . . ." and so on.

5567 Now, your Honor, we come to the last point and that is that I feel it would be proper to grant a new trial to Sullivan for the errors assigned, and also because that is the only way he can fairly be given a trial. That is the only way your Honor can grant him a severance. A severance was requested in this case as soon as the evidence showed the necessity for a severance and granting a new trial is the approved way to grant such a severance.

Your Honor will recall that in the record at 3087 at the conclusion of the government's case I pointed out that you had ruled much of the evidence not binding on Sullivan, and that there was practically nothing in the case at that time against Sullivan and I did say that we wanted to go to the jury and your Honor at page 3090 said in part:

"You certainly have a right"—that is, to rest, "but I know of no way that a severance can be granted at this point of the trial, a severance such as you have outlined to me."

And then I said:

"I see no other way to do it."

At another point your Honor said, at 3089:

5568 "Your motion for a severance isn't timely. If there was any merit to your motion for a severance, it should have been made before we started the trial."

In the Haupt case, 136 F. 2d 661, the Court pointed out that before the evidence was in, a motion for severance had been made and it had been overruled and the Court said that on the evidence then before the Court they couldn't say that that discretion was in error. But the Court did, in view of the evidence after it was in, when it saw how important these admissions and these so-called confessions to this one defendant were, the Court then said, after that proof was in:

"... we are unaware of any procedure which the trial court could have devised, other than a severance, by which these incriminating statements could have been introduced against the defendants making them, without seriously prejudicing the rights of other defendants."

"We think," the Court says at a later page,

"that if these facts had been known to the trial court 5569 at the time the motion for severance was made, it would have been an abuse of discretion for the trial court to have refused a severance. When presented again in the motion for a new trial when all of these facts and circumstances were known to the Court, it was likewise an abuse of discretion to overrule such motion and thus refuse to remedy this prejudicial procedure."

And there is a very long discussion in that case, I might say, of how the damaging effect of these admissions was brought out when the trial was on.

Hale v. United States and one more case are the last two I will cite. The Hale case is an Eighth Circuit case in 1928, 25 F. 2d 430. That was a trial of two men for murdering an Indian and the statement of one had been admitted. There had been a motion for a severance but it was overruled. The Court pointed out that an instruction had been given to the jury that the evidence was not to be considered as against Hale. At page 438, the Court said:

"The Court so stated when it was admitted, and again in its charge; but it is inconceivable that the impression 5570 made upon the minds of the jurors could have been removed by these formal remarks of the Court."

And at page 439:

"The balance of the statement or confession would not be binding upon Hale, and if admitted would leave upon the minds of the jurors a lasting impression to his prejudice. The unavoidable mischief of a joint trial is thus made clear."

The Court finally said:

"Upon the entire record we feel that the application for severance should have been granted, that in any event, the admission of the statement of Ramsey, with its attending circumstances, may have operated to the prejudice of the defendant Hale, and that in the interests of justice a new trial should be granted."

The final case, U. S. v. Decker, 51 F. Supp. 20. In that case there had been a denial of an acquittal motion. On a motion for new trial it was called to the Court's attention that statements against the defendants other than this one man had been put into the record and that there wasn't 5571 too much proof about this one man and that the effect of considering those statements as to the others would be clearly prejudicial and so on and the court said that even though there was evidence which would justify the Court in denying a motion for acquittal, still when it appeared from the trial that the evidence which was attributable to this defendant could not or was not by the Court kept clear in its charge, the proper way to remedy that was by a severance granted by a new trial.

Your Honor, I shan't attempt to summarize the matters that we have covered. I want to apologize when I stated to the Court that I had called your attention to the errors in the session in chambers before the jury retired. I was in error as to a couple of them because those occurred in the discussion when we were working on the instructions. However, as to each of these points that I have just now mentioned and particularly this one about the admissions, which I called your attention to the four instances when it was done. Now, on a motion for a new trial, the discretion of the Court is extremely broad in the sense that the Court can right any situation that needs righting, right then and there. You don't pass upon the guilt or innocence 5572 of the defendant but you determine whether he is to be permitted to have a trial free of the matters complained of in the motion for a new trial.

I think, if the Court please, that I have read to the Court cases from the Courts of Appeal and from the Supreme Court of the United States, and I ask you not to take anything that I say as an individual but I ask you to pay the closest heed to what they have said. It is true, if the Court will bear with me, that in the summary that you made of this case, you inevitably had the rapt attention of the jury. They hung on your every word and were influenced by your every word and I think this argument this morning demonstrates that there were some instances in which they secured advice and guidance, well meaning as it was, from the Court which the Court should not have, in fact, given to them and which should result in the granting of a new trial.

In saying that, I fully concede that the Court's summary was an attempt to aid the jury, but that is what makes it all the more dangerous.

By Mr. Calihan: If the Court please, I do not intend to argue at any great length. I have sent Mr. Crane 5573 upstairs for a volume and I ask the Court's indulgence for a few moments until he returns.

I might state, at the outset, your Honor, that I view the argument of counsel for the defendant Harold E. Sullivan, as falling within two categories:

First, comment is made regarding Lubben's testimony, and second and most important is the discussion at great length of the Court's charge or instructions to the jury.

In so far as the Court's rulings on the trial with reference to Lubben is concerned, the government contends that there is absolutely no error. Counsel stated in the Montgomery case and in the Augustine case some error on the part of the Court in refusing to allow defense counsel to explore other deals. Now, I believe that is a matter of discretion. I don't know how multiple these deals were but if the Court will recall, as to Lubben, he had in excess of $12,000,000.00 in dealings in candy involving numerous parties and exploration of each and every such detail would have made the trial almost a marathon, and I believe that the Court in limiting the extent of the cross examination was indeed very liberal in spite of the limitation that counsel complains of.

5574 I believe that this Court allowed a wide latitude. Mr. Lubben was on the stand six and a half days. It can be scarcely complained that counsel was restricted to any great degree. In any event, in view of the Judge's knowledge of the case of what went on, I believe there was no error in this restriction. As to the Court's instructions, at the outset I would like to recall or bring to the Court's attention his words to the jury at transcript page 5314.

"The Court does not take it upon himself to make any comment upon any disputed issue, or expess any opinion one way or another as to what your verdict should be, because if the Court did that, he would be trespassing, so to speak, upon your right as jurors, for it is your sole responsibility to determine what the facts are, and from the facts as you find them to be, and from the law as given to you by the Court, you are to determine the guilt or innocence of these defendants."

And further on:

"Now, during this charge, the Court will endeavor to summarize for you the respective contentions of the 5575 parties as the Court understands them for the purpose of clarifying the isues of fact which will be submitted to you, but any summarization, or deductions from the evidence which the Court may make, are merely his best recollection and understanding. They are not binding on you, and should not be accepted by you unless they coincide with your own recollection, and understanding of the testimony."

This admonition was repeated. The Court's attention is directed to page 5346 of the charge wherein you state:

"Obviously, I have not attempted to cover any detail of the defendants' testimony, or every contention herein. My only purpose in attempting to summarize the position that the government takes, on the one hand, and the defendants on the other, is to crystalize and clarify, if possible, the fact issues which you will be called upon to determine, and if my summation of defendants' position herein, does not coincide with your understanding of the testimony, or your

EXHIBIT A

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

EASTERN DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, -vs- THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BYRON A. CAIN, HAROLD E. SULLIVAN and FRANK J. HUEBNER, Defendants.	No. 52 CR 143

STATE OF ILLINOIS }
COUNTY OF COOK } ss

BYRON A. CAIN, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of the defendants' foregoing motion to dismiss.

Affiant further says:

1. During all of the year 1948, and continuously since, affiant was President and Treasurer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, one of the defendants deductions from the testimony, then you may disregard 5576 what I have stated and depend entirely upon your own recollection and understanding of the testimony, and the deductions to be drawn from such testimony."

Now, I believe that the charge as a whole is fair. We cannot overlook the fact that the jury here sat for 23 days and listened to evidence. I cannot believe that it can be successfully contended that all of that can be swept away by the remarks of this Court in a period of several hours.

Now, specifically going over some of these points raised by counsel, I note that some objection was made as to a shifting of the burden. I believe that the government proved a prima facie case of the receipt and a failure to report. Now, the comment by the Court as to whether or not the defendants paid it out was something relating to the affirmative proof offered by the defendant. I see no impropriety there.

I further want to call the Court's attention to another point raised by Mr. Kirby that the Court was in error in citing the statute. I have Section 145 here and I state that the testimony or the charge at 5347 which your Honor read is correct. That introductory portion is from 5577 Section 145(b), as your Honor correctly stated it.

Now, with reference to trade deals, there was no evidence of trade deals involving Shotwell. There was a good deal of conversation about trade deals, but I think there was no testimony offered in this trial regarding any payment of moneys or any such transactions. It is true that Lubben testified that he first became a broker for Shotwell through a chocolate deal but any other reference to such deals had no connection with Shotwell, and I believe that the Court properly treated the subject of trade deals in his argument.

Now, as to the defendant Sullivan, I don't believe that anyone was more diligent in his objections and in his protection of a client's rights than was Mr. Kirby on behalf of the defendant Sullivan. I don't believe an opportunity—and I shouldn't use the word "opportunity"—I don't believe an occasion arose that Mr. Kirby did not protect the record in so far as the defendant Sullivan was concerned and I believe your Honor repeatedly called this matter to the attention of the jury. I believe that it was adequately covered in the charge.

5578 After a time, in connection with the case involving multiple defendants, it becomes impossible to go to the lengths to which Mr. Kirby would have the Court believe should have been gone into in this cause.

As to the disclosure material, when the Court made reference at page 5397 of the charge, with respect to that matter, I can submit to your Honor that you were referring to what good would have come from the disclosure. Certainly it was not a matter entirely brought out by the government. I believe that the defendant had an interest in bringing forth the fact that in their good faith they sought to disclose the matter here and come forward as good citizens and taxpayers and that there was a benefit to be derived from such a disclosure.

I believe at another point toward the end, Mr. Kirby indicated that motion was made for severance or was asked for as soon as it became evident it was a necessity. I have it noted. I don't know whether that is true or not. I have been interested along here to note that counsel for the 5579 defendant relies greatly upon certain statements made by Arthur B. Cunningham, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. I believe at one point, in application for additional time, your Honor, Mr. Cunningham made the statement that most of the case, if not all, as to the defendant Sullivan, rested upon Mr. Lubben's testimony. I believe at that point it was quite evident that the situation as to Sullivan was of such nature as might require some different handling of it.

Now, the Court will recall when Mr. Kirby argued the Haupt case, 136 F. 2d 661, it was my understanding—correct me if I am wrong, Mr. Kirby—a motion for a severance was made at the close of the government's case.

By Mr. Kirby: In the Haupt case they said that on a motion for a new trial that is the right place to grant the severance and that is what I relied on.

By Mr. Calihan: In that Haupt case the motion for severance was made prior to trial. There was no such timely motion in this case. I submit, in view of that, the Haupt case cannot succesfully be urged in this matter.

Based upon the whole record, your Honor, upon the 5580 charges, we respectfully submit that the defendant Sullivan was given a fair trial; that there was no undue prejudice which attached to his trial and that, therefore, the motion for a new trial should be denied.

By the Court: Gentlemen, I may say in passing that in so far as the motion for severance was concerned, I think there have been few lawsuits tried in which the defendants weren't so fully apprised of the government's case as in this one. You took the deposition of Davidson and Feldman and Heitmann, Tobias and several others. You had access to all of the evidence that the government was going to offer. There wasn't a single thing of surprise in this lawsuit.

You gentlemen of the defense, and rightfully so, prepared yourselves so that you knew almost to every item the testimony that the government was going to offer. Consequently, when you say the first time that it became apparent that Sullivan should have moved for a severance was at the close of the trial of the defendants' presentation, it seems to me that that can hardly be sustained by the record in this case.

Be that as it may, I merely observe that in passing 5581 because it seems to me, Mr. Kirby, in his long contact with this case, was surely aware of the apparent picture that the government was going to present.

By Mr. Kirby: The things that I think may have hurt us most grievously were these admissions which Mr. Cain made in the disclosure and we then insisted it just shouldn't go in.

By the Court: When you stop to consider that, what admissions did Mr. Cain make? He made the same admissions that he made here at the trial and the same admissions that Mr. Sullivan made, in other words, that they had received ceiling—over-ceiling payments in 1945 and 1946 and in order to enable Shotwell to take advantage of buying raw corn. They assumed in good faith they were not violating the income tax law because all of the moneys they obtained from Lubben were used for the purpose of buying raw materials, one offsetting the other. That is in substance what Cain admitted in his disclosure. Yes, he said he assumed it was fraudulent if it was true, as the government contended, that these payments of raw materials were not proper offsets and to that extent and if that was true, the situation presented a fraudulent return.

5582 His statement with reference to Exhibit 186 et cetera was to the effect that they were merely gotten out in order to get rid of this matter and Shotwell, regardless of the fact that they denied they owed the government any taxes—but if the government wants to take the position that these payments of raw materials were not deductible, Shotwell was willing to go along and of course reserve their right to make a demand for the return of these taxes, of course, if it appeared later on that the government's position was incorrect.

Most of the matters which Mr. Kirby has referred to here were represented heretofore at various times in the trial, that is, at the close of the government's case, at the close of the defendants' case and on defendant Sullivan's motion for acquittal. I see no reason why I should now make any extended statement regarding my views in this matter at this time.

5583 My view is that the motion for a new trial will be denied and an order to that effect may be entered. I do reserve the right, however, to file a memorandum which will be made a part of my order denying the motion for a new trial in the event I deem it advisable and necessary to file such a memorandum. But I now make the tentative order in denying the motion for a new trial and of course the exception is reserved as to defendant Sullivan.

Now then, this matter with reference to sentence, the defendant Sullivan may come forward.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I want to make a motion for Harold Sullivan for judgment for acquittal notwithstanding the verdict.

By the Court: Well, I take it the motion may be filed. I have heretofore ruled on the motion for judgment of acquittal and I take it that you are now making this motion in order to be entirely sure that you are proceeding in accordance with the proper procedure, am I not correct?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it is not a former matter but the grounds I assign are the same as those grounds made 5584 in the motion of defendant Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain and Frank J. Huebner, which your Honor has heretofore considered.

By the Court: The motion will be denied and exception will be allowed.

By Mr. Kirby: And I make a motion for Harold Sullivan to arrest judgment and this on the grounds set forth in the motion of the defendants Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Byron A. Cain and Frank J. Huebner to arrest judgment.

By the Court: The motion will be denied and exception will be allowed.

By Mr. Kirby: I now make a motion—now comes the defendant Harold E. Sullivan and moves under Rule 32(c) of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, that a presentence investigation be made and under Rule 32(a) of the sentence procedure, that probation be granted.

By the Court: Well, the matter of presentence investigation is entirely within the discretion of the Court and in view of the fact that the Court has heard the entire testimony in a long, protracted trial and has heard defendant Sullivan's testimony, I don't believe there is a necessity 5585 for a presentence investigation and my motion with reference to probation will be reflected when I impose sentence. My order with reference to probation of sentence will be reflected when I impose sentence.

Mr. Kirby, is there anything you desire to say on behalf of Mr. Sullivan before I pronounce sentence?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, your Honor. The question whether evidence exists enough to convict—

By the Court: If it is going to be rather lengthy, I don't have any objection, but if Mr. Sullivan wants to, he may sit down.

By Mr. Kirby: He can stand right here.

(Continuing) And the question of whether a new trial should be granted, we have passed. We come to the question of a sentence and the question of what would be fair in a sentence.

I want to call to the Court's attention what must be in his mind. Namely, that there have already been two of three defendants sentenced in this case. I would say to the Court that we have studied, you have, counsel for the 5586 defendants and myself have studied in the briefs already filed the quantum of proof and I think, for myself at least, it is plain that I feel that the quantum of proof is light. Your Honor used the language "paucity of proof" with respect to the defendant Sullivan. I don't mean to imply that your conclusion was less than firm. Indeed, I am sure from the language of your opinion, that it was. But now I would certainly not think there is that equality of proof as to this defendant that would require any equality of sentence.

That is not only true because the proof is fairly fragile as to Harold E. Sullivan, but it is also true because a verdict of conviction is much harder on a lawyer than on anybody else. Any punishment must be measured against the fact that his punishment already has been extreme. I can see no requirement of justice to ignore the quantum of proof and the punishment in effect already involved from the charge and the trial itself. I have confidence that your Honor has carefully thought out those matters, fully thought them out before I even mentioned them for your attention this morning. We get differences about the 5587value of proof and we get differences about the quantum of proof. Those differences are sincerely held but it is true, I submit, that the question of the quantum of proof here, the liability of the proof here is a grievous one as to this defendant, and that is also true as to the questions we have raised in our motion for a new trial this morning.

I have no other statement to make. I certainly feel that in my conduct in this case I have had your Honor's constant attention. I have had your Honor's agreement when you thought I was right. I have had your Honor's disagreement when you thought I was wrong but I am in one place in a better position than your Honor to judge and that is the severity of the punishment already imposed. I know more about it than you do and I assure you it is grievous and does not call for harshness upon the part of the judge.

By the Court: Mr. Sullivan, is there anything you care to say in addition to what counsel has said, before I pronounce sentence?

By Mr. Sullivan: If I may, may I read the statement, your Honor?

By the Court: You may.

5588 By Mr. Sullivan: Your Honor, you have asked me if I had anything to say before sentence was passed. Needless to say, in my wildest dreams I cannot realize that I would have had to answer such a question.

I am 58 years of age. I have strived all my life and I believe successfully, to warrant the confidence of all of those with whom it was my privilege to contact. I have been particularly zealous to deserve a good reputation all these years.

My early life was normal. I was taught those things that were to do—that had to do with good citizenship and my obligations to my fellowmen, my God and my country. I was practically left an orphan, my mother having died when I was three years old and my father when I was eight, but through the kindness of my older brothers and sisters, I was cared for.

When World War I started, I enlisted in the Army, subsequently saw active service in seven major battles of that war, and pardon me for saying so, I at no time ever shirked my obligation as a soldier.

When I was discharged from the Army, I was given 5589 a 100 per cent disability discharge because of being gassed in action in the Argonne Forest. My night school studies were interrupted for two years when I served in the Army and upon my discharge, I resumed the study of law and was admitted to the bar in the State of Illinois in 1921.

I have been a practicing attorney ever since. For the past nineteen years I have been honored by the judges of the Circuit Court of this county by serving as a Master in Chancery of that court and as evidence of my standing with the judges of the Circuit Court I was reappointed as Master in Chancery last December even after indictment was returned against me in this case.

In the practice of law, there are times when business opportunities manifest themselves. Shotwell was one of them. Over a period of eight years, something in excess of $1,700,000.00 was paid to the United States Government in income taxes, whereas for the ten years previous, preceding our assumption of control, nothing was paid to the Government. I was principally the attorney for the company, Violations of the OPA rules and regulations 5590 during 1945 and 1946 were not confined to Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the confectionery industry. There was no confectioner who remained in business at that time who didn't violate the OPA in some form or another.

During the years 1945 and 1946, the company paid income taxes aggregating $827,652.00 to the Government. This income was only possible because we did get the raw materials needed to keep our place of business open. Since my troubles began in 1948 in this case I have been under investigation by several departments of the Internal Revenue Bureau. They have left no stone unturned to obtain evidence against me, and what happened? What did they produce? Nothing but the few words by Lubben, a few lines out of a record of over five thousand pages long.

Lubben said he talked to me only once and even then he changed his story about this conversation. This I deny ever took place. Who is Lubben? He was singled out by the Kefauver Committee as one of the creators of the black market in which we and other firms were forced to trade.

5591 He was walking in the street carrying immense amounts of cash, profiteering on the war at a time when most young men of his age were in the uniform of the United States Army or Navy.

Admittedly not a man of means, in 1944 he handled over $1,800,000.00 in cash in a little over two years' time. He has not yet, he testified, paid any income tax for those two years although Shotwell paid $827,652.00 in income tax during that same two years.

Who were his associates? His original partner was Roland Stone, a convicted perjurer. His later partners were Giglio and Loperfido. This is the man with the few words that are all that exist in the Government's case against me.

I do not believe that my service to my country should be ignored and my future ruined simply on such unreliable and contradictory testimony.

In conclusion, permit me to indelibly impress upon your Honor that I am not guilty of the crime charged in the indictment.

By the Court: Well, Mr. Sullivan, you take it upon yourself to attack the credibility of Mr. Lubben. Of course twelve jurors believed he was telling the truth. I believe he was telling the truth. With all of the background 5592 that you have illustrated in your statement, of course you men in Shotwell took him to your bosom and did business with him during a period of some years.

5593 Whatever his shortcomings might be, he seemed to be the fair-haired boy during those years when Shotwell saw fit to take advantage of his offers and when he paid over premium prices.

Be that as it may, I don't know of any case I have ever had in 30 years' experience that I have given more consideration to than yours. I cannot think of any case in 30 years' experience that I have given more consideration to than I have to yours, Mr. Sullivan. I suppose that is in some measure due to the fact that you are an attorney at this bar; that you have had a long and I believe respected career and I know of no record in your past that bears a blemish.

On the other hand, you stood trial in this matter, which you had a right to do. You have been represented by very eloquent and very competent counsel and you have had a fair trial. In my opinion, even though the evidence may be comparatively speaking scantier or at least not as complete as it was with reference to Huebner and Cain, I think there was evidence in the record beyond a reasonable doubt to sustain the jury's verdict. At least, as I have indicated in my order denying the motion for acquittal and after 5594 prolonged and protracted consideration, I have concluded that I should not disturb it and under those circumstances, I have no other alternative but to impose sentence. I have also given considerable consideration as to whether or not I should make any distinction as between you and Cain and between you and Huebner in so far as the disposition is concerned. My opinion is that all three of you are equally culpable and that I can't make any distinction, with reference to the gravity of your offense. True, Shotwell has paid a great deal of money to the government but we all recognize that that isn't any excuse for you men to enter into a scheme to aid Shotwell in defrauding the government out of moneys that are rightfully due to it and it hardly is a defense to indicate that merely because in the past Shotwell didn't pay any taxes and for a while paid very large sums, that that should have any bearing upon the gravity of this offense of which you have been found guilty. I don't say that to castigate you. I don't think it is the Court's business to indulge in any castigation when a man is about to be sentenced.

I have given your matter my best consideration; I 5595 have done the best that I could. I believe that I am honestly doing what is right and fair in the light of the evidence and law. That being my opinion, I say I have no other alternative but to impose sentence upon you.

It is considered and adjudged that you, Harold E. Sullivan, as punishment for the offense as set forth in the first count of the indictment of which you have been found guilty by a verdict of the jury that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States Government to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States for a period of three years and it is further considered and adjudged that you will pay a fine in the sum of $2500.00 and the fine to be a committed fine.

It is further considered and adjudged that as punishment for the offense as set forth in the second count of the indictment of which you have been duly convicted by verdict of the jury that you shall be confined in a penal institution of the United States to be selected by the Attorney General of the United States for a period of three years and to pay a fine in the sum of $2500.00, the fine to be a committed fine.

5596 It is further considered and adjudged that the penal sentences that I am imposing will run concurrently and not consecutively.

Well, gentlemen, I believe that is all.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, your Honor I now move in the manner with respect to the other defendants that the present bail be continued until the filing of notice of appeal within the time allowed by law. May such bail be in the amount of $5,000.00 after the filing of notice of appeal?

By the Court: Well, I assume the United States Attorney's office has no objection.

By Mr. Calihan: No objection.

By the Court: I have no objection, of course, to such arrangement and I will sign the order.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I am sorry—I have showed this to Mr. Crane and Mr. Calihan.

By the Court: Mr. Cain—

By Mr. O'Brien: It is just mechanical.

By Mr. Calihan: There is no objection, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I thank you, Judge.

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

EASTERN DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

-vs-

THE SHOTWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BYRON A. CAIN, HAROLD E. SULLIVAN and FRANK J. HUEBNER, Defendants.

No. 52 CR 143

STATE OF ILLINOIS }
} ss
COUNTY OF COOK }

BYRON A. CAIN, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause, and that he makes this affidavit in support of the defendants' foregoing motion to dismiss.

Affiant further says:

1. During all of the year 1948, and continuously since, affiant was President and Treasurer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, a corporation, one of the defendants in this cause, and that his co-defendants, Harold E. Sullivan and Frank J. Huebner were, respectively, Executive Vice President and Vice President of said corporation, and that Leon J. Busby was a member of the firm of Busby & Oury, certified public accountants employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as its regular auditing firm during all of the year 1948 and for some years prior thereto.

5598

2. That during the month of January, 1948, affiant and other officers of the defendant corporation acting in behalf of said corporation and in their own behalf as officers thereof, delegated Leon J. Busby to communicate with a responsible officer or agent of the Treasury Department of the United States for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was still in effect the published policy of the Treasury Department, of which affiant had theretofore become aware, pertaining to the disclosure of omissions or misstatements in income tax returns, and if so, to ascertain in a preliminary way the requirements of such policy without disclosing the identity of the person by whom such disclosure might be made.

3. That thereafter, but during January of 1948, the said Leon J. Busby reported to affiant and to other officers of the defendant corporation that he had communicated with one Ernest J. Sauber, Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at Chicago, Illinois, who had told the said Busby that said policy was still in force and effect and that he was a proper person within the requirements of said published policy to whom such a disclosure might be made, and had further informed him that the requirements of such policy as to such disclosure would be fulfilled if the person in question would come forward before investigation had been initiated and acknowledge the incorrectness of his return, and that, in such event, there would be immunity under the Bureau's policy from criminal prosecution but that such tax, interest and penalties, if any, as might properly be due under the facts would be assessed.

4. Thereupon, affiant and other officers of said corporation in their behalf and on behalf of said defendant, during January, 1948, pursuant to said policy, directed said Busby to reveal to said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue the identity of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company as the person whose returns for the years 1945 and 1946 contained omissions or misstatements - those being the years in question at all times mentioned in this affidavit - and to inform him in a general way of the nature of said misstatements and omissions and to ascertain from him whether the preparation of amended returns for those years by said corporation should be then attempted, or whether their preparation and filing should be deferred pending an inspection of the books and records of the corporate defendant by agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

5. That thereafter and during the month of January, 1948, the said Busby reported to affiant that he had again communicated with said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and had revealed to him, pursuant to defendants' reliance on the policy aforesaid, that there were omissions and errors contained in the returns of said The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946 and of the general nature of said misstatements and omissions, and that he had inquired as to whether such communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and as to whether the preparation of amended returns for those years should be undertaken at that time; that said Busby further reported to affiant that said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue informed him that said communications constituted a sufficient disclosure and assured said Busby that he was the proper person to accept such disclosure and that no attempt should be made to file amended returns for those years because said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue would inform the office of the Agent in Charge to the end that the latter office would assign an agent to make such inspection and investigation as might be required, but that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had further recommended that an attempt be made in the meantime by the officers of the corporation to approximate the extent of the omissions and misstatements based on their then recollections of the matters giving rise to said omissions and misstatements.

6. That thereafter according to his best present recollection, affiant himself during January of 1948, either alone or in the company of said Busby, and again to a certainty in the forepart of March, 1948, in the company of said Busby called upon said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue and was informed by him that the information communicated to him as such Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue by said Busby constituted a sufficient disclosure and that he had made appropriate inquiry to ascertain whether any prior investigation had been initiated and had learned that there had been none and that there was none pending, and that the said disclosure was therefore timely within the Department's requirements, and further that the said Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue had talked to Mr. Ralph Johnson, a squad chief in the office of Mr. E. C. Wright, the Internal Revenue Agent in Charge at Chicago, and that Mr. Johnson had indicated that he would go forward with the matter.

7. Thereafter the defendants and other representatives of the corporation, at their request, in reliance upon said policy and in reliance upon the representations aforesaid, commenced a course of cooperation, and solely for that purpose specially retained accountants who, commencing in 1948, and for a period of approximately four years, assisted the Internal Revenue agents in their inspection and examination of the books and records of the corporate defendant, and assembled for them such data and compilations as were requested, at an expense to the corporate defendant of approximately $70,000.00 or more; and that the examination by such agents of said books and records has extended over a period of approximately four years and was still being conducted at the time of the return of the indictment in this proceeding, and that much of the data and many of the compilations so prepared and furnished by said accountants were not available, in the form requested and supplied, from the books and records of the corporation.

8. That the defendants immediately following said disclosure and with the partial assistance of said accoutants thereunto specially directed - all in reliance upon the policy and representations aforesaid, including the representations as to the sufficiency and timeliness of their said disclosure - commenced the preparation and compilation of the preliminary approximation which the said

Sauber had recommended as averred in paragraph 5 hereof; that indispensable to the making of said statement was data and information not contained in the books and records of the corporate defendant but in the minds of the individual defendants, which the individual defendants well knew they could not be compelled to reveal and which they knew they had a constitutional right to withhold, but which, in reliance on the matters aforesaid, they supplied, with the result that such tentative apprdximation or statement was completed and reduced to writing and furnished to the said agents at or about the time of their first appearance for the purpose of inspecting the books and records of the corporate defendant. Affiant further avers that the said statement, among other things, showed that the net balance as a result of the operations therein reflected was $5,898.00, which sum had been deposited in the corporate defendant's bank account during the year 1946, and had been given effect to in its income tax return for that year. Said statement is in the possession of the plaintiff and was exhibited and otherwise used by the Government in the proceedings before the Grand Jury which returned the indictment in this proceeding. From time to time, and on request of agents of the Department of Internal Revenue, the individual defendants furnished said agents with other and more detailed and accurate information regarding the said omissions and misstatements known to them, but which were also not contained in the books and records of the defendant corporation, which information the defendants knew they were privileged not to reveal but did reveal in continued reliance on the policy and representations aforesaid. 5603

9. Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained that the defendant corporation owes no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95, which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98, which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of said agents aforesaid were of such embarrassment in the conduct of the business of the corporate defendant and so disruptive to the relations of the corporate defendant with its customers and suppliers, that affiant at all times during the said period of four years importuned the said agents to bring the matter to a conclusion, and at all such times expressed the willingness of the corporation to pay such reasonable amount as the said agents might claim to be due. Nevertheless, and heedless of said importunings, and without completing said examination, and for the purpose of bringing a charge prior to the expiration of the six-year statute of limitations in relation to the first count of said indictment, the matter was presented to the Grand Jury on March 14, 1952, to-wit, the last day of the six years, by a special assistant to the Attorney General who received his authority only the day before.

Voluntary Disclosure

The former voluntary disclosure policy while first adopted in 1919 had its origin in the controversy as to whether criminal liability should be compromised under the law. As early as 1912 the Bureau followed a policy of not accepting monetary payments in compromise of criminal liability where the evidence was sufficient to afford reasonable grounds to believe that a conviction could be secured.

On August 22, 1919, the first draft of a policy statement respecting voluntary disclosures was issued. This was the result of successful criminal prosecutions in cases involving fraudulent tax returns and the publicity attending the indictments in such cases. It was then felt that the tax evaders were responding to the vigorous prosecution work of the Bureau and realized that such an enforcement program would eventually disclose the deficiencies in their returns and result in criminal prosecution. The Bureau then found that many of these tax evaders were coming forward and throwing themselves on the leniency of the Bureau with the hope that they would thereby escape prosecution. The conclusion was reached that the increasing enforcement activities would result in additional criminal cases which would in turn induce additional voluntary disclosures.

The initial draft of the policy statement provided that where voluntary disclosure was made of intentional evasions which, if discovered by internal revenue officers, would be the basis of criminal prosecution, it would be the policy to impose maximum civil penalties and to accept offers in compromise in criminal liability instead of instituting prosecution and insisting on jail sentence. Some 3 weeks later, on September 8, 1919, this policy statement was changed to provide that offers in compromise of criminal liability would be considered rather than accepted in voluntary disclosure cases.

At the outset of the policy there was no outstanding public invitation from which tax evaders could imply a promise of immunity if they came in before the Bureau initiated an investigation. From 1919 until 1934 in voluntary disclosure cases the Treasury entered into legal and binding compromises under the statute where the decision was made not to prosecute because of the circumstances surrounding the voluntary disclosure. On July 2, 1934, decision was reached that the Treasury Department would in no case compromise criminal liability and that prosecution would be recommended or not solely on the basis of whether the evidence was sufficient to afford reasonable grounds for the belief that a conviction could be secured. Also at this time it was decided that in cases in which taxpayers made voluntary disclosures of intentional evasions before investigation by the Bureau had been initiated that the Bureau would not recommend criminal prosecution. The policy was administered on a case-by-case basis and without an open invitation to tax evaders to come in under an implied promise that immunity would be given if investigation had not been initiated.

With the inception of the drive against black marketeers by the Treasury Department in 1945, widespread publicity was given to various statements by Treasury and Bureau officials announcing the existence of the voluntary disclosure policy. It was then hoped that such publicity would result in securing additional revenue which would not otherwise be reached through investigation. As a result of this publicity, many tax evaders who were not under investigation came forth in good faith and in reliance upon the promise of immunity disclosed their deficiencies. There were also instances where tax evaders already under investigation came forward and attempted to secure immunity on the basis of the public announcements. In these cases no difficulty was encountered where the investigations had proceeded to the point where the Bureau could establish that the disclosure was in fact made with knowledge of the investigation and not in good faith reliance on the immunity held out by the policy.

The principal difficulty in the administration of the policy resulted where, despite the prior initiation of an investigation, the Bureau was unable to clearly establish that the taxpayer had knowledge that he was under investigation before he made his alleged voluntary disclosure. In these instances, lack of knowledge on the part of the taxpayer was easy for the tax evaders to simulate and the difficulty was with the Government to disprove the alleged lack of knowledge. In the administrative consideration of these cases -- regardless of whether the question was raised in the collector's office, in the office of the revenue agent in question, before the Intelligence Unit, or before the Chief Counsel's office -- the representative of the Bureau was faced with a border-line case. The cases which fell in this twilight zone, depending upon the decision finally made, were usually susceptible of criticism that the administrative officer had abused his discretion in resolving the case one way or the other.

If the disclosure had actually been made in good faith reliance on the promise of immunity, the taxpayer's confession and the self-imcriminating evidence submitted by him could not be used against him because of the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

The independent authority of the offices of the collector, the revenue agent in charge, and the special agent in charge to initiate investigations resulted in situations where a taxpayer under investigation by one of those offices would attempt to make a voluntary disclosure before an officer of one of the other two offices. Here again it was found that in many instances the Government could not establish that the tax evader had knowledge of the investi ation which had been initiated. Having in mind the open invitation to come in and confess his crime, the tax evader would then appear in one of the offices having no record of the investigation pending elsewhere and submit his confession and self-incriminating evidence before adequate check could be made against the records of various other offices which may have initiated an investigation.

To guard against litigation of cases which would result in decisions that the taxpayer's constitutional rights would be violated if the evidence secured through the disclosure were used, the Bureau attempted to resolve cases in the taxpayer's favor where there was a reasonable doubt that the taxpayer had knowledge of the investigation. Despite the attempt to avoid litigation on this question, the issue was placed before the courts in several cases. In the Lustig case in 1947 the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held in favor of the Government when it was established not only that the investigation had been initiated prior to the disclosure but that the special agent in charge had so advised one of the taxpayer's representatives. In the Colonial Rubber Co. case, the Government's position was again upheld on the basis of evidence showing that the taxpayer knew that the agents were on the trail of the fraud and because of that knowledge had confessed.

In the Abe H. Liebster case in Pennsylvania, the Government's evidence was suppressed on the basis that the evidence did not show that the taxpayer knew he was under investigation when he made his disclosure. The question of knowledge was again decisive in the Saxe case in Massachusetts where the judge concluded that he could not find that the taxpayer, at the time of his disclosure, did not know he was under investigation.

The Government was also successful in opposing motions to suppress evidence in two cases decided in 1951, the Harlic Bag Co. case in Connecticut and the White case in Mississippi. The latter case is now on appeal. The voluntary-disclosure question is currently in litigation in another case in California.

Another factor involved in these border-line voluntary-disclosure cases was the matter of delay where the voluntary-disclosure issue was raised either in the Bureau or after the reference of the cases to the Department of Justice. The belated contentions of voluntary disclosure involving alleged violation of the constitutional rights of the taxpayers often required lengthy supplemental investigations and delayed the ultimate disposition of the prosecution question until voluntary disclosure question could be decided.

The Bureau gave serious consideration to various proposals in 1949 and 1950 that taxpayers be permitted to make voluntary disclosures until they had actual knowledge that their returns were being investigated or until they had knowledge that they were being investigated for fraud. Here again the negative fact of knowledge was such that the adoption of these suggestions would require the mailing of a notice to the taxpayers when investigation was initiated. Among the reasons which made it impractical to adopt such a practice were the following: First, honest taxpayers would resent any form of notice which would imply that it was too late for them to make a voluntary disclosure and such resentment would result in a lessening of the cooperation usually extended by taxpayers in permitting the examination of their books and records; second, early notice in the cases of racketeers and other law breakers that their returns were under investigation would lead to destruction of records, intimidations of witnesses, and general concealment of facts which the agents might otherwise get through continued confidential investigation; and, third, it was believed that such a notice would lead to concealment of assets which might otherwise be reached through jeopardy assessment proceedings to satisfy the civil liability.

The intensified drive against racketeers initiated by the Bureau in 1951 raised the further question as to whether or not racketeers and members of the criminal element were to be allowed to escape criminal prosecution by making voluntary disclosures.

Another practical difficulty with the policy was that it contemplated that confession of an intentional evasion would be folowed by full and complete settlement of the civil liability. It was not unusual to find that once tax evaders were safeguarded from criminal prosecution through their constitutional rights where a promise of immunity had been made, they would refuse to pay the amount of the civil liability. In these instances the Bureau was forced to rely upon statutory remedies to enforce collection, and in many instances found that the fruits of the evasion had disappeared or had been concealed prior to the disclosure.

It was finally concluded that long-range enforcement of the internal revenue laws would be served best by a policy of closing all loopholes to which tax evaders could look to avoid criminal prosecution. It was thus concluded that the abandonment of the policy should be recommended and action to that effect was taken by the Secretary on January 10, 1952.

89 Mr. Dunlap. They are pretty well stated in that document. Of course, I have had some rather harrowing experiences with that voluntary disclosure policy as a field officer in charge. There, again, I think that the facts should be presented to the Department of Justice and that they should take all those things into consideration in determining whether or not the man should be prosecuted. But I do not feel that because of various allegations which have been subjected to a great deal of abuse, we should be prevented from presenting the facts to the Department of Justice.

Many, many claims in the past have been made, of voluntary disclosure, which proved out to be not quite what they appeared on the face. There have been many conflicting court opinions on the subject. It is just not the kind of controversial field that I feel we should be in.

I again feel that all of the facts, including the fact that the taxpayer cooperated 100 percent or he did not, and things of that nature, should be forwarded with our case report to the Department of Justice, who, after all, is the agency charged with the final determination of whether the man should be prosecuted, or not.

Mr. DeWind. If I understand correctly, then, it is the new policy of the bureau of Internal Revenue that the factor of taxpayer cooperation or voluntary coming forward to disclose tax fraud will not be taken into account in the decision to refer the case to the Department of Justice.

Mr. Dunlap. No, but the fact that he did that would be given to the Department of Justice.

Mr. DeWind. But that has no bearing on the decision to recommend prosecution as far as the Bureau is concerned, is that correct?

90 Mr. Dunlap. That is correct. It would be one of the factors that they would consider, of course. The very fact that he did that would be entered into our record of the case as it is transmitted to the Department.

Mr. DeWind. Perhaps I should then ask this question: From your viewpoint, as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, would you recommend that the Department of Justice have a policy of taking into account voluntary disclosure or cooperation of the taxpayer in the decision as to whether or not to refer to the United States attorney.

5632

Mr. Dunlap. Mr. DeWind, I would say it would be very unbecoming on my part to recommend to the Department of Justice anything that they should take into consideration in running their business. I just would not think it would be appropriate.

Mr. DeWind. The question is an important one. I think, from the point of view of this committee as to whether your feeling would be that it is desirable, in the administration of the tax laws, to have voluntary disclosure policy at some level in the consideration of the cases before they reach indictment.

Mr. Dunlap. You know, and I know, that the Department of Justice is going to have to take into account all elements in the case which would tend to influence the decision of a jury. We merely intend to give them all of the facts, and then they would have to make up their minds as to whether or not, in the light of the facts that we have given them, they can hope to secure a conviction.

There, again, I must say that we have to do all of the work anyhow. To get at the true tax liability we must make a complete examination. So we are wasting no time and no effort at any point in the process.

Mr. DeWind. There are really two things involved, are there not. One is whether the actions of the taxpayer may have either legal or as a matter of psychology prejudiced the chances of a successful conviction. That could be one issue and that would be an issue that presumably, in the decision as to whether or not to develop the criminal case, the Bureau would have, to some extent, to take into account as to whether or not, as a legal matter, you have a case that would stand up under prosecution.

The second aspect is something different, though. If the taxpayer decides to come forward voluntarily, should there be any policy or procedure which would guarantee in advance of that timely disclosure that it would result in no recommendation for prosecution?

Mr. Dunlap. That is the very thing that I object to: guaranteeing the taxpayer in advance any immunity from prosecution. I base my thinking on some very unfortunate cases that I know of.

Mr. DeWind. That decision is at the Bureau level. You feel that is a factor that should not weigh in the Bureau's handling of the case.

But is it a factor that should weigh in the handling of the case by the Department of Justice? 5632

Mr. Dunlap. There, again, I will say I think the decision should be made by the people who have to try the case, that our sole responsibility should lie in giving them all of the facts - and I emphasize the word "all".

Mr. DeWind. Of course, the results of the Department of Justice prosecution policy will have a direct bearing on taxpayer morale and a direct influence on tax administration in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Therefore, the question really is whether or not you would favor the Department of Justice having a fixed policy of automatically dropping prosecution in 92 voluntary disclosure situations.

Mr. Dunlap. I do not think they can have a fixed policy in there. The cases vary too much one from another.

Take the case of a taxpayer who, in his own defense, comes in and says, "I want to make a voluntary disclosure," and he makes a voluntary disclosure and he files an amended return. He says, "I have made a voluntary disclosure."

Then you go out in the field and examine that and find out he did not reveal but 10 percent of the income in that case; he just took it for granted you are going to take his word for it.

When you check it you find he only reported 10 percent of it voluntarily.

Now, what are you going to do in that case? He is going to plead before the court that he made a voluntary disclosure when actually he did not. Does the Bureau decide whether that case is to be prosecuted, or does the Department of Justice decide?

I think the only way we can work it satisfactorily is to give them all of the facts and let them decide.

In other cases, the taxpayer may come in and make a 100 percent full and complete disclosure. And in that event, we so tell the Department of Justice, that after our checking, we find he has done that.

Those are the considerations that they must take into account in arriving at their decision. I think they should have our recommendation in each case, and certainly we intend to give it to them.

Mr. Byrnes. By recommendations, what do you mean? The conclusion to be drawn from the facts that you are sending to them? 634

Mr. Dunlap. Conclusions to be drawn from all the facts as we have found them. But we will not recommend no prosecution purely on the basis that the taxpayer is claiming a voluntary disclosure.

Mr. Curtis. Do you that that it is sound public policy to have a situation where a taxpayer who has underreported his income and he honestly and conscientiously decides to make full disclosure, not only voluntary, but full, do you think that it would be sound public policy to compel him to choose between making that disclosure and putting himself right in the position --

Mr. Dunlap. Mr. Curtis, may I inject this thinking into your question, if I may: The policy has been in effect for some time. It has been highly publicized. People who have sinned in that regard in the past have known about it and have had full opportunities.

We have been faced many, many times by the problem, under our former policy, of starting an investigation, having it pretty well underway, and this fellow runs into some office where the head of it does not know that the investigation is underway, and the fellow says: "I want to make a voluntary disclosure," and he starts talking.

Now, under our rules, that was not a voluntary disclosure, but he was laying a predicate for his own defense, and unjustly so. He did not do a thing until we forced him to.

Mr. Curtis. But suppose the investigation had not started, then what is the situation?

Mr. Dunlap. The situation, as I see it, is that we should check his voluntary disclosure to be sure that he has made a 100-percent statement to us; determine all of the facts; what happened, how he did it, what he did in cooperation with us, and how he disclosed it to us, and report those facts to the Department of Justice.

92

Mr. Curtis. Including the fact that you had already started investigating?

Mr. Dunlap. Yes.

Mr. Curtis. Suppose you start investigating his neighbor, but not him, and he decided to make a disclosure; what is his situation?

Mr. Dunlap. I should think that it would be the same picture. We would develop all of the facts, including the fact that he cooperated with us 100 percent; that he did make a full disclosure; that he did it voluntarily, and present that to the judicial branch of the Government for their decision.

5635

Mr. Keogh. May I ask a question here?

Mr. Curtis. Yes.

Mr. Keogh. When you do that, do you recommend prosecution?

Mr. Dunlap. That would depend on the facts involved in each individual case.

Mr. Keogh. But in some cases you might make all those facts known , that he did come in completely voluntarily and disclosed a previously unreported income. Would you in some cases then recommend prosecution, too, or would you leave that up to the Department of Justice?

Mr. Lynch. Mr. Keogh, I wonder if I could answer it along a little different line and then come to this.

I think our difficulty with the voluntary disclosure policy has laid in the fact that it is an open promise of immunity. That means that it is fixed in terms of words, so that anybody could say that there is an open statement from the Bureau of Internal Revenue that anyone that comes in and does that --

Mr. Keogh. Let me interrupt you at that point.

If we assume that the disclosure is voluntary and is prior to the institution of any investigation by you and is complete, are not the objectives of the code carried out?

After all, the idea is not to enforce the penal provisions of the code, but to insure the collection of taxes.

Mr. Lynch. I do not believe so.

Mr. Keogh. Why not?

Mr. Lynch. What I wanted to come to is this point, that obviously any prosecutive agency -- and this happens every day; it must happen every day in the world that we live in -- that any prosecutive agency with respect to any crime, would have to consider whether, taking all the facts as a whole, it is a case where there is a reasonable chance of conviction for the crime.

Mr. Keogh. I do not agree with that statement, Mr. Lynch. Every day in the year, I am sure that district attorneys in the counties in this country send witnesses before grand juries without waivers of indictment, knowing that those people will gain immunity.

Mr. Lynch. Yes; that may be.

Mr. Keogh. Even when they know they have a good case against that particular witness.

Mr. Lynch. But I do not think there is a circumstance equivalent to this, where they are playing against a set rule, that is, the former rule which said that in cases where there were disclosures before any investigation started immunity was 93 automatically promised in advance.

And I wish that when you go into this in detail, that we could present to you all the cases and all the difficulties and all the litigation and all the administrative difficulties.

Mr. Keogh. My question was that if you make the assumptions that I did, would you, in addition to that, recommend prosecution where there has been a voluntary disclosure?

Mr. Lynch. I would have to answer that this way: We would have to consider all the circumstances in a case like that to determine whether it would be considered a prosecution case.

Mr. Keogh. Who do you not tell the Department of Justice that?

Mr. Lynch. I would not want to say that automatically there never would be a prosecution; nor would I want to say that there is any commitment outstanding in the sense of an automatic commitment of immunity, where anyone coming in will, at the beginning, get the commitment of immunity.

It seems to me that is a decision that prosecutors have to make every day regarding the whole facts of the case.

Mr. Curtis. Could I state the problem in another way? I am not speaking in reference to the hardened conniving crook, but in the category of other citizens who are guilty of wrongdoing in reference to their taxes for maybe one, two, or three, or many years.

It is your feeling, from your experience, that fear of prosecution is preventing them from making a disclosure and paying what they know to be owing?

Mr. Dunlap. Are you directing that question to Mr. Lynch, or to me?

Mr. Curtis. To you.

Mr. Dunlap. No, sir; I do not think that fear is preventing them from it. I think that, under the old system, there was a great temptation there, Mr. Curtis, on the part of quite a few of our people, to take advantage of the thing and only come in with the true story when they learned that they were going to be investigated. The temptation was there. All we are doing is removing that temptation. 5637

Mr. Curtis. I wonder what the right policy should be in regard to the individual who has it on his mind but has never disclosed to anyone. He has to choose between taking the risk of never being discovered, or getting right and making a disclosure.

Mr. Dunlap. That is true in a lot of cases other than income tax cases, Mr. Curtis.

This subject has been analyzed, discussed, and talked between us and lawyers on both sides, between our management committees, our study groups, and I might practically say that the preponderance of opinion in the Bureau and among its people who have been working with it is that it should be revoked.

I agree with them, after encountering the many, many difficulties that a field officer in charge has under such a policy.

Mr. Curtis. And the policy you had was not too well fixed with definite guidance, was it?

Mr. Dunlap. There are two definite lines in that regard. In my way of thinking, it wasdefinitely well fixed. In other schools of thought it was pretty vague, and it is very difficult to put down an iron-clad rule of what should constitute a voluntary disclosure.

It is most difficult to define in precise legal termswhat is a true voluntary disclosure, and therein lie the differences of opinion which result in these different schools of thought.

94 Mr. Curtis. Should there be an incentive to people to get right and pay what they owe?

Mr. Dunlap. I think the incentive is there in the knowledge had by most lawyers of the circumstances which would enter into consideration of whether a man is going to be prosecuted, or not.

Certainly all of our attorneys in this country know what must be considered before any prosecuting official is going to take his client before the jury.

Mr. Keogh. Am I correctly informed, General, that, when this abandonment of the voluntary disclosure policy was effected, all pending cases of voluntary disclosure resulted in the taxpayer being notified of the cancellation of the policy?

Mr. Dunlap. No, sir; that is not correct.

Mr. Keogh. But in some instances it happened, did it not?

Mr. Dunlap. There is a directive and explantory mimeograph in preparation on that subject now.

5638

That is right. That is our attitude toward it. Their rights, under the Constitution, would prevent our making it retroactive.

Mr. DeWind. That is, there has been in effect a promise of immunity; is that correct?

Mr. Dunlap. That is right.

Mr. Lynch. But the policy obtains in all cases of voluntary disclosure up to the time of announcement of the change in that policy.

Mr. Keogh. I saw a letter from the Bureau on that.

Mr. Dunlap. Yes. I understand that some of them did go out, Mr. Keogh.

But that has been corrected. In other words, it has been called to the attention of our people that that be not retroactive behind the date of the announcement.

Mr. DeWind. I do not know whether I addressthis to you, or to Mr. Lynch, Mr. Commissioner.

I believe the situation this subcommittee is going to be confronted with may be this; that representatives of bar associations and other groups are likely to appear before this committee and recommend that either through legislative action or through administrative action, either by the Bureau or the Department of Justice, a voluntary disclosure policy, whether roughly the same or some modified policy be reinstituted.

This committee will, therefore, have to consider the desirability of reinstituting that policy.

I judge it to be, in the view of the Department, that it should not be reinstituted at the Bureau level. My question is: Should it be reinstituted at the Department of Justice level?

Mr. Dunlap. I would say that if the Congress adopted such a policy into legislation, or if the committee recommended the adoption of such a policy, that certainly they should be explicit in spelling out the ground rules of what constitutes a true and correct voluntary disclosure, because that has been the source of our headache.

Mr. DeWind. Could you or your penal division people give the committee the benefit of your recommendations on how best that could be done if it were to be done?

Mr. Dunlap. We would be happy to cooperate with the committee in any way; yes, sir.

Mr. DeWind. That is a topic we might go into tomorrow, too.

95 Mr. Dunlap. I think the further you go into it, and if you will particularly analyze the minutes of the meeting of the Wiggins committee held January a year ago, that you will see some of the many, many difficulties that we have encountered in that field over many years.

Mr. DeWind. Does that represent two conclusions on your part, Mr. Commissioner? One, that those basic difficulties outweigh the benefits, the favorable factors that led to the adoption of the voluntary disclosure policy, and, in the second place, that those basic difficulties cannot be corrected legislatively or administratively so as to resolve them in favor of the favorable factors?

Mr. Dunlap. I think so; yes, sir.

Mr. DeWind. I gathered, from what Mr. Lynch said, that it was his view that, as a practical matter, a case that would be, let us say, a clear voluntary disclosure case under the old policy would probably not be recommended for prosecution to the Department of Justice; that is, it would not be forwarded at all to the Department of Justice, but that it should not be a fixed policy on which the taxpayer could have a right or claim an immunity, but rather a discretionary policy in the decision as to whether or not to send it forward. Is that right?

Mr. Lynch. Yes. But again I want to say that in mechanical terms it is not a factor of 90 percent or 50 percent or anything else. What I want to say is that you have a resolution of judgment as to whether or not a case is appropriate for recommendation for prosecution, in which you take into consideration all the circumstances.

Mr. DeWind. Perhaps we can take a.. extreme to get the point. Suppose you have a case of fairly flagrant tax fraud, where there is no question about the fraud involved and the intent and the planning that went into that fraud, but, at the same time, you have a clear disclosure prior to any knowledge or possible investigation by the Bureau; would that be the sort of case that would, nevertheless, be sent forward with recommendation for prosecution?

Mr. Lynch. I should think that would be a consideration that might well lead to sending it forward with a recommendation for prosecution.

It is the automatic aspect of this that has been so disturbing, and it is the fact that we find people are playing so much against it in claims of immunity when we do not think they are well deserved.

Mr. DeWind. It is the abuse of the system or the improper application of the system that has caused the problem. F 5640

Mr. Lynch. I would suggest here that the proper application of the system presents the problem which for ages has been a problem that confronts any prosecutive agency, and that is as to what considerations they give to various factors based upon the particular circumstances.

Mr. DeWind. Then, very clearly, it would still be a factor to be taken into account by the Bureau, in deciding whether or not to send the case forward, that the taxpayer came forward voluntarily or cooperated fully and so forth.

Mr. Lynch. Yes. It certainly is easy to conceive of a case where it would be a waste of time to send it forward with a recommendation for prosecution.

Mr. DeWind. Would that be the test, Mr. Lynch; or would it be somewhat a different test?

96 Is the only test: "Can we successfully prosecute?" or is there a somewhat different test? Is there a quite clear policy in certain cases not to prosecute, so as to encourage voluntary disclosure?

Mr. Lynch, I did not mean that is the only test. I mean a sort of resolution of judgment as to all the facts in the case itself.

Mr. Dunlap. That gets back to the question also, Mr. DeWind, what is public policy. Is it public policy to let people sit back and go for years without paying their taxes and then, when they decide come in and do it, say "Fine and dandy"? Or is it public policy to say that our people should pay their taxes fairly and honestly the da they are due?

Mr. DeWind. I see no easy resolution of these problems. I am not pretending here that I am not perplexed by these same problems. What I am trying to do, though, is to get ultimately your judgment as Commissioner, on a very difficult policy question. It is a matter of judgment.

Mr. Lynch. Could I add one factor with respect to the suggestion of a statutory definition? And, obviously, this has be be in the abstract.

We do not have any particular statutory definition before us; but by and large, the difficulty is that you would have two issues to try in every criminal case. You would have the issue to try as to whether it meets with the statutory voluntary-disclosure requirements of again, automatic immunity, as well as all the issues to determine in the case as to whether or not substantively it is a tax-fraud case.

Now, it may be there is a way to eliminate that difficulty.

Mr. DeWind. I was going to say: In your experience would that be eliminated by a formalization of the policy?

Suppose that, instead of an informal or unformal policy, a formal disclosure could be made to any officer or official of this Bureau of Internal Revenue. Suppose there were a formalized proceeding, in which voluntary disclosure was required to be sent in in writing, sent by mail to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or some Washington official; that they would have to set forth in detail the matters to be disclosed; that the definition of what constituted the beginning of an investigation would be a published definition requiring, I would think setting up within the Bureau some sort of card system, which would fix the time when investigation was begun in fraud cases. Could those mechanics resolve these abuses and lead to a proper voluntary-disclosure policy?

Mr. Dunlap. You get right back to the same difficulties that we have experienced trying to arrive at these conclusions, and that is: When does an investigation start? Is it when an agent goes out and takes some overt action like contacting the taxpayer or contacting the bank, or contacting somebody he has done business with; or is it when we get the lead that is going to lead to the investigation? When did the investigation start?

I tell you, if the Congress, for instance, wanted to spell out a definition of "voluntary disclosure" under which immunity would be granted, I think it should be spelled out for the Department of Justice and not for the Bureau of Internal Revenue. I think we should continue to be the fact-finding body -- give all of those facts to the Department. If, under their policy, he should not be prosecuted, fine, if he should, that is fine, too.

97 Mr. Keogh. You send to the Department of Justice only those cases that you think should be prosecuted; do you not?

Mr. Dunlap. That is correct; yes, sir.

Mr. Keogh. Yes. So that the mere sending over of a case would mean you think it should be prosecuted.

Mr. Dunlap. Yes, sir; and before we send them, of course, every fact is taken into consideration.

Mr. Keogh. If you have no policy with respect to declining prosecution, why do you have a policy with respect to recommending prosecution, in such cases as we were discussing?

Mr. Dunlap. Mr. Lynch will answer that.

642

Mr. Lynch. I think the answer to your question has to be that we do take into consideration all the factors as to whether or not it should go forward with a recommendation for prosecution.

Mr. Keogh. So, your policy is to resolve all those cases where voluntary disclosure is a part, which are sent to Justice in favor of prosecution?

Mr. Lynch. No; I think that what the Commissioner has in mind is that it largely gets down here, as I see it, to whether or not there is a meritorious claim for immunity. We want to take it out of the area that it has been in before under this so-called voluntary-disclosure policy.

Mr. Keogh. You take it out of that area by sending it to Justice, and, by sending it to Justice, you are recommending prosecution. Are you not?

Mr. Lynch. Well, we can deal particularly with that factor of it, Mr. Congressman.

Mr. DeWind. It would seem to me this subcommittee might find itself in a place where it would want a recommendation from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, in the light of its experience, as to whether or not the Bureau considers it possible to frame a voluntary-disclosure policy, either at the Department of Justice level or the Bureau level, which would be a proper and helpful factor in tax administration, or whether it is the judgment that you cannot do that; that it is not possible to set up such a policy.

Mr. Dunlap. We would be glad to give consideration to it, Mr. DeWind, of course.

Mr. DeWind. Could we get the help of your experts in the Penal Division on that tomorrow, their judgment on the questions, and how they might be met, if it were desired to have a voluntary disclosure policy.

Mr. Dunlap. Surely. They will be made available to you.

Mr. Keogh. Mr. Chairman, may I express an opinion, for what it is worth?

Chairman King. You may.

Mr. Keogh. If all doubts are going to be resolved against the taxpayer and criminal prosecution recommended in every possible case, there will, in my opinion, be a reaction to that which, I am fearful, would have worse effects upon our fiscal system, than would your meeting this problem squarely and adopting the policy that all taxpayers know will be applied with uniform force.

Mr. Lynch. Mr. Congressman, I just want to observe this: I think this committee deserves a very precise statement on the 98 effect of the abandonment, what the proposal is with respect to the treatment in such cases, and how they will be handled.

We would be very happy to give that to the committee.

I think the memorandum which was submitted for the record answers mainly the questions as to why it was abandoned, but the inquiry has turned over to the affirmative side, too, and I think I want to direct ourselves to that.

138 MR. DEWIND. Mr. Schwartz, perhaps the easiest way to get into this voluntary-disclosure matter would be if you could outline to the subcommittee the background of the history of development of that policy so that we may have before us as precise a statement as possible of the policy that was abandoned.

MR. SCHWARTZ. The first Bureau instructions respecting voluntary disclosure were issued in 1919. Prior to that date, the Bureau always had before it the question of whether or not the matter of criminal liability would be compromised in any case. I have traced back to Treasury Decision 1795, of September 10, 1912, and I might give you this for background.

That mimeograph, or Treasury decision, states that a policy had been followed by the Commissioner's office for the last few years with gratifying results, and that is the policy of not accepting any money penalty in payment of criminal liability; and at that time, in 1912, it was believed that—

When it becomes generally known among lawbreakers that when caught they must answer for their offense in the courts and cannot escape by more money payment to compromise, the result will be far more beneficial to the interest of the Government in the long run than the acceptance of compromise offers.

139 Now, the first memeograph to which I referred, issued initially within the Bureau on August 22, 1919, provided—and before I give you that provision of the mimeograph respecting voluntary disclosures, it might be helpful to give you the background of the thinking of these men at that time.

The mimeograph states:

Recent successful prosecution of criminal cases arising out of the fraudulent income- and profit-tax returns, and the publicity attending indictments in other cases, has induced the voluntary disclosure of evasion of tax liability and other deficiencies of returns filed in the past years. The persons affected by these cases have felt that the plans of the Bureau for vigorous prosecution or for verifying income- and profits-tax returns on file would eventually disclose these deficiencies and cause indictments to be secured and criminal prosecution to be instituted. They have therefore preferred to make voluntary disclosure at this time in the hope that by following this course and throwing themselves on the leniency of the Bureau they would be able to escape criminal prosecution. The increasing activities of the internal revenue officers will inevitably add to the number of criminal cases now on hand, and this, in turn, will induce a more general desire to disclose voluntarily the evasions and deficiencies of returns filed in past years. Consequently, it is deemed appropriate to announce the general policy which the Bureau will follow with respect to these cases.

Page No.

139 Now, as initially announced on August 22 of that year, 1919, the statement on voluntary disclosures was that—

In cases where voluntary disclosure is made of deficiencies through intentional evasions which, if discovered by internal revenue officers, would be made the basis of criminal prosecution, it will be the policy of the Bureau to impose maximum civil penalties and accept offers in compromise of criminal liability, instead of instituting prosecution and insisting on jail sentence.

About 3 weeks later, September 8, 1919, that was changed to remove the words, "accept offers in compromise," and substitute "consider offers in compromise."

Now, at that time we had a relatively small number of taxpayers, and not a very broad base. Our operations were extremely limited, when we consider what they are today.

The policy as announced in this 1919 mimeograph continued in operation until 1934, when it was again decided that the Bureau would abandon the policy of compromising criminal liability. The policy was then restated, on July 2, 1934, as follows:

Where a violation of the internal revenue laws is deliberate and with intent to defraud, and is discovered through internal revenue officers or is disclosed by a taxpayer after the Bureau has initiated an investigation, the criminal liability will in no case be compromised by the Treasury Department. Prosecution will be recommended solely on the basis of whether the evidence is sufficient to afford reasonable grounds for the belief that a conviction can be secured. In cases in which taxpayers make voluntary disclosures of intentional evasions before investigation by the Bureau has been initiated, the Bureau will not recommend criminal prosecution, but will impose the maximum civil penalties unless there is substantial doubt as to collectibility.

The policy as announced, again within the Bureau, in 1934 by this confidential mimeograph which I have just quoted from, was not made public until 1945. At that time we instituted the drive on black marketeers, and in connection with that drive there were various public statements made by Bureau and Treasury Department officials which in effect held out to the public this policy which had previously been announced in confidential mimeographs, and those announcements invited the public to come in and make disclosures; and if they did so before the initiation of investigation, that prosecution would not be recommended.

140 That is the general background.

MR. DEWIND. Are the announcements you refer to, announcements by then Secretary of the Treasury Vinson in a speech that the Chief Counsel Wenchel made?

MR. SCHWARTZ. That is correct, and there were other releases by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Mr. Nunan; and at or about the time of the Lustig case there were press converences in which statements were made.

MR. DEWIND. Do you have a collection or file of those statements and press releases, and so forth?

MR. SCHWARTZ. Yes: I do.

MR. DEWIND. Could you make that available to be made a part of the record of the subcommittee?

MR. SCHWARTZ. We can furnish this to you later, Mr. DeWind.

MR. DEWIND. Mr. Chairman, would there be any objection at this point to insert in the record copies of the public statements, pronouncements, and press releases of the Treasury relating to the voluntary disclosure policy?

CHAIRMAN KING. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MR. SCHWARTZ. In addition to the public statements to which you refer, I can furnish you the provisions of the two mimeographs which I quoted, together with Treasury Decision 1795 of 1912 which I referred to.

(The documents referred to are as follows:)

(T. D. 1795)

COMPROMISES

Favorable consideration will not be given to offers in compromise where the violation of law is deliberate and with intent to defraud and the evidence is sufficient to convict.

Treasury Department,
Office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue,
Washington, D. C., September 10, 1912.

Mr._____,
United States Attorney.

Sir: This office has under consideration the proposal of _____ to pay $_____ in addition to the $_____ previously deposited, making a total of $_____, together with the cost of guarding the distillery, in compromise of the civil and criminal liabilities charged against him.

Page No.

140 In this connection, I desire to state that it is the belief of this office that section 3229, Revised Statutes, was enacted by Congress for the purpose of affording relief to persons who have unintentionally and without any fraudulent design violated some of the provisions of the internal revenue laws, many of which are exceedingly drastic and for obvious reasons do not make intent a factor in the offense. It is equally of the opinion, however, that, where the violation is deliberate and with intent to defraud, no money penalty, however large, should be accepted by way of compromise in lieu of prosecution, provided only that the evidence is of such character as to afford reasonable grounds for the belief that a conviction can be secured.

This policy has been followed by this office for the last few years with gratifying results, and it is believed that, when it becomes generally known among lawbreakers that when caught they must answer for their offenses in the courts and cannot escape by a mere money payment through compromise, the result will be far more beneficial to the interests of the Government in the long run than the acceptance of compromise offers.

141 Having the foregoing statement of policy in mind, you are requested to advise this office as to your views of the evidence in the case of _____, with your recommendation as to the propriety of acceptance of the offer made.

Please state court costs incurred.

Respectfully,

Royal E. Cabell, Commissioner.

Treasury Department,
Office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue,
Washington, D. C., September 8, 1919.

CONFIDENTIAL.

Cons. Dim. 2239——Amended.*

TO COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE, AND INTERNAL REVENUE AGENTS IN CHARGE:

Recent successful prosecution of criminal cases arising out of fraudulent income and profits tax returns and the publicity attending indictments in other cases has induced the voluntary disclosure of evasions of tax liability and other deficiencies in returns filed for past years. The persons affected by these cases have felt that the plans of the Bureau for the vigorous prosecution of the work of verifying income and profits tax returns on file would eventually disclose these deficiencies and cause indictments to be secured and criminal prosecution instituted. They have therefore preferred to make voluntary disclosure at this time in the hope that by following this course and throwing themselves on the leniency of the Bureau they would be able to escape criminal prosecution. The increasing activities of internal revenue officers will inevitably add to the number of criminal cases

Page No.

1/1 now in hand and this in turn will induce a more general desire to disclose voluntarily the evasions and deficiencies in returns filed in past years. Consequently it is deemed appropriate to announce the general policy which the Bureau will follow with respect to these cases.

In cases in which fraud or intentional evasion is discovered through internal revenue officers, or is disclosed after the Bureau has initiated an investigation of the tax liability, it will be the policy of the Bureau to impose the maximum civil penalties and institute criminal prosecution.

In cases in which deficiencies not involving fraud or intentional evasion are discovered by internal revenue officers no penalties will ordinarily be asserted upon returns for 1917 and prior years and upon returns for 1918 the only penalties ordinarily to be asserted are the 5 percent penalty and interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month, prescribed by paragraph 2 of subdivision (h) of section 250 of the Revenue Act of 1918.

In cases in which deficiencies in returns for past years are voluntarily disclosed by the taxpayer and in which the taxpayer is clearly not guilty of fraud or intentional evasion no penalties will ordinarily be asserted.

In cases in which voluntary disclosure is made of deficiencies through intentional evasions which if discovered by internal revenue officers would be made the basis of criminal prosecution, it will be the policy of the Bureau to impose the maximum civil penalties and to consider offers in compromise of the criminal liability, instead of instituting prosecution and insisting on jail sentence.

In all cases of the kind mentioned above, full statements of fact are to be secured and verified, if possible, by officers making investigations or to whom disclosures are made, and these statements, accompanied by amended returns, should be forwarded to the Bureau for consideration.

Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner.

PART II--FRAUD AND CRIMINAL CASES

17. Where a violation of the internal revenue laws is deliberate and with intent to defraud, and is discovered through internal revenue officers, or is disclosed by the taxpayer after the Bureau has initiated an investigation, the criminal liability will in no case be compromised by the Treasury Department. Prosecution will be recommended or not, solely on the basis of whether the evidence is sufficient to afford reasonable grounds for the belief that a conviction can be secured.

18. In cases in which taxpayers make voluntary disclosures of intentional evasions before investigation by the Bureau has been initiated, the Bureau will not recommend criminal prosecution, but will impose the maximum civil penalties unless there is substantial doubt as to collectibility.

19. In all cases not covered by Paragraphs 17 and 18 in which there is evidence of intentional evasion, the Bureau will impose the maximum civil penalties unless there is substantial doubt as to liability or collectibility.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE
WASHINGTON

(For release, morning newspapers, Friday, October 5, 1945)

PRESS SERVICE NO. V-87

Three officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue left today for the Pacific coast for a series of conferences with district enforcement and administrative heads designed to step up the Treasury's drive against tax evaders and to set up machinery for expediting settlement of tax liabilities for the war years generally.

Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., Commissioner, Norman D. Cann, Deputy Commissioner in charge of the Income Tax Unit, and J. P. Wenchel, chief Counsel, are making the inspection trip. They will arrive in Los Angeles Friday noon, for conferences with Bureau personnel lasting through October 9. They will be in San Francisco October 10, 11, and 12 for meetings with revenue and special agent and collector's staffs.

Mr. Nunan said similar conferences in other sections of the country are contemplated.

Mr. Nunan said one major subject of the conferences will be means of insuring prompt settlement of refunds that will be due many businesses under the so-called relief provisions of wartime tax laws, and thus help industry in the shift to peacetime production.

Another purpose of the meetings is to insure unity of action on the part of all branches of the revenue service in the drive against tax cheats, to plan for effective use of new personnel now being rapidly recruited; and to give personal attention to problems arising from specific investigations now under way.

The Commissioner pointed out that California is the setting for the most far-reaching tax investigation now being conducted by the Bureau, that into the raisin-grape industry. Tax liabilities of scores of operators in this field are being examined, with prospects of collection of many millions of dollars in additional taxes, he said. Suspected black-market operations in meat and poultry and other lines also are under scrutiny.

Mr. Nunan expressed gratification at the progress being made throughout the country in organizing and pushing the campaign against evaders. He said a substantial flow of completed investigations into the courts is under way, with 13 major indictments returned by Federal grand juries during September. New revenue and special agents are being assigned daily as recruiting proceeds, and the effects of the expanding force of investigators will be apparent from now on, he feels. Some 2,500 Bureau employees now are engaged in tax-fraud case work.

Page No.

The Commissioner said that since June 1, some 30,000 delinquent or amended returns had been filed voluntarily, accounting for additional taxes of more than $50,000,000.

Mr. Nunan again stressed the Bureau policy of refraining from instituting criminal proceedings against taxpayers who come forward voluntarily and pay up delinquencies plus interest and civil penalties before the Bureau has begun investigating their cases.

In addition to the drive against evaders, the Bureau executives will give particular attention to organizing in the field the tremendous task of prompt settlement of tax liabilities arising from the war, including such problems as the determination and allowance of refunds and credits where due.

The Commissioner pointed out that many wartime tax laws contained provisions under which thousands of business tax returns must be reopened for adjustments arising from such factors as the carry-back of losses and the unused excess profits credits, postwar credits of excess profits tax and other relief provisions, and the respread of special amortization allowances on war plants and other emergency facilities.

"The disposition of the pending war-year cases will enable business to know precisely where it stands in the matter of tax liabilities, and thus eliminate a possible source of concern which might otherwise interfere with reconversion and employment," Mr. Nunan said.

"This work will be expedited in every possible manner. We promise to exercise every resource so that the taxpayer entitled to refunds may receive his money promptly."

Mr. Nunan also will give attention to the machanism for making refunds of taxes overpaid by individuals. He pointed out that the Bureau recently completed the mailing, ahead of schedule, to some 20,000,000 taxpayers refunds totaling a billion dollars.

(The following address by J. P. TAX FRAUDS AND VOLUNTARY DISCLOSURES

I want to say a few plain words tonight about tax frauds and voluntary disclosures by repentant taxpayers.

I think this subject is particularly important to this audience whose declaration of principles are: "The Tax Executive Institute stands for the practice of the highest ethical standards in the administration of tax accounting and procedure in the preparation of tax returns, reports, and other presentations toward the establishment of confidence by management and tax authorities and to assist its members in their many problems of taxation. The Tax Executives Institute hereby dedicated itself to the observance of these principles."

I think this subject is important to our radio listeners as well, because—sooner or later—the honest taxpayers must make up the revenues that the cheat evades.

At the outset, let me make it clear that the tax laws define two entirely different kinds of tax fraud. One is criminal. The other is civil. Of course, a person may be guilty of both.

But, if you keep this distinction in mind, you will be able better to understand the Treasury's policy of encouraging the repentant taxpayer to clear himself without criminal punishment, even though he may be required to pay his taxes plus a civil money penalty for his fraud upon the Government.

Happily, by far the majority, of course, recognize their obligations and to the best of their ability fulfill them. There is, however, that cross section which, while percentagewise may be small, bulks large in the work of the Department, particularly now, as well as during the war years. With record billions in cash in circulation and high rates of tax, the temptation, and it is simply that, has been strong. Regrettably, too, tax frauds have not been, and are not, confined to a class. The sorry picture is, and you have seen it particularly the last few years in your own newspapers, that all too many in every line of endeavor have been trying to bilk the country.

The cases run the gantlet, and some of them are fantastic. At one end are the New York candy manufacturers who diverted 25 million pounds of sugar for soft-drink purposes and then decided not to pay their taxes. They were caught. There are two interesting side lights on that case. First, the 25 million pounds of sugar were the equivalent of a 2-weeks' wartime ration for every person in the country. Second, the sugar was obtained under the guise that it was being used in the manufacture of foodstuffs for Army and Navy hospitals.

1/5 Then there is the doctor from Georgia whose case always appealed to me. He sent in a return for one year to which he attached a statement that while he did not owe any taxes he felt the country had been so good to him he should make a contribution. He ended up by making quite a contribution, because at the same time he claimed he owed the Government nothing, he in fact owed thousands.

Even the tattooing business skyrocketed during the war. One Hawaiian engaged in that business paid a young Japanese $10 to show him a simple method of understating income. The method? Drawing a line halfway down the true record of receipts and reporting only that amount above the line for tax purposes.

In another case, our examining officers personnally observed the owner of a restaurant making alterations in her records. The original figures were clearly revealed when photographed under infra-red ray lamp. Although reporting a modest income, she had invested thousands of dollars in antiques, single-premium life insurance, and a home and decorations.

Two brothers living in northern Ohio were big-time gamblers. Their illegal activities for years had gone virtually unchecked. A statement submitted with their pleas of guilty offered mitigating circumstances—the death of a bookie with whom they had placed bets on behalf of a local banker. The entire tax evasion resulted from sums the brothers had received in horse-race bets from the banker, and involved several hundred thousand dollars. The judge was so amazed that he remarked he had thought such cases happened only on radio programs.

Looking back over the welter of cases, I have been continually struck with the essential stupidity of the evader.

It's much like a school of fish swimming upstream. Each one pops up his head with what must appear to him as being an original method and quite foolproof. As a matter of fact, we've seen nothing new in the devices employed. All are merely variations of the same old themes. Maybe larger, perhaps more grandiose, but the patterns are the same with only slightly changed overtones.

What can the man do who attempts to evade his just taxes?

If he keeps a record, he is immediately in a dilemma, for once something is written down, curiously enough, some day and in some way that record, or copies, will turn up in the wrong hands. Once something goes down on paper, complications always set in. If a man keeps a wrong record, he must keep a correct one, too, and it is then only a question of time until trouble begins to boil. Witness the gentleman from one of our Southern States, once started, who was forced to end up keeping one set of records for his partnership, one for the OPA, one for internal revenue, one for his partner, and, finally, one for himself. He literally became lost in the morass of his own paper work.

If he keeps no record, then he deals in cash—a favorite form of attempted tax dodging. It is favored because it appears to leave no trail. The converse is actually the case. It is as true today as it always has been that money can either be spent or allowed to rot. Once it is begun to be spent, it leaves a trail, and our agents can and do follow every trail. If it rots, no one is advantaged.

Let me give you an example which occurred just a few months ago on the west coast. Two big-time gamblers had spent several years dodging the tax collector. We had reason to be suspicious that they weren't paying their taxes, and they knew we were suspicious. Eventually both died. But when their estates were handed over to a reputable attorney for handling on behalf of their heirs, he found by means of sealed instructions and reported to us, over $600,000 that the gamblers had buried in the ground. Their cheating of the Government never did them any good. They never felt safe to spend the money, and they couldn't take it with them.

One thing the tax evader seems never able to appreciate is that in these days of high taxes there is always someone comparing his income with his own and wondering how he's able to live as well as he does and still pay his taxes. He doesn't seem to know that there has been on the statute books since 1867 a provision of law which authorizes the Commissioner to pay for information leading to the discovery and recovery of additional revenue. The act of March 4, 1867, now carried in the Internal Revenue Code as section 3792, encourages informers, and the informer runs the complete scale from disgruntled employees to discarded wives. One of the most interesting cases of the latter sort occurred recently when a wife appeared before the Chief of the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau and stated that she wished to inform against her husband for evading his income tax. She was asked whether she had anything more than a suspicion and she replied that she certainly did. Upon being pressed, she stated he had cheated on everything else, including her, and that it was inconceivable that he had not cheated the Government. Another interesting case occurred when one of two partners, having had a falling out over some finances, appeared before a special agent and stated he wished to inform against his partner who had been evading his income tax. Upon questioning, the revenue agent quickly discovered that not only had the partner informed against evaded his income tax but the informer had also evaded his, and, furthermore, that both had connived together to evade the income tax of the partnership.

Quite simply, attempted evasion is a disease, and a disease that has to be fought with strong remedies. That is why, once criminal fraud is discovered by our examining officers, the Federal Government is unbending and relentless. The law requires the prosecution of the tax evader and that is what the Department recommends to the Attorney General.

There is one important exception to that. The Department has broad discretionary power long recognized by the Congress to determine the policy and procedure for the effective enforcement of the internal-revenue laws. The Department, acting under that power, does not recommend prosecution of the evader who repents in time. There is nothing new in the position. For years the position of the Department has been that where the taxpayer makes a voluntary disclosure of intentional evasion before investigation has been initiated, criminal prosecution will not be recommended.

The Department has always encouraged voluntary disclosures. 5655

Page No.

146

And what is a voluntary disclosure? A voluntary disclosure occurs when a taxpayer of his own free will and accord, and before any investigation is initiated, discloses fraud upon the Government.

Healthy administration of the internal revenue laws long ago dictated that policy, and I believe that its worth is obvious.

The making of a voluntary disclosure is a simple thing. The taxpayer or his legal agent can go before any official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue or any of its field offices—whether it is the collector, a deputy collector, a revenue agent, a special agent, or any other responsible Treasury officer.. There is no special form for making the disclosure. The simple statement that "I have filed false tax returns and I want to make the Government whole," would constitute a complete disclosure. Of course, it is usually best to present an amended return or other written document as evidence of the disclosure. If possible, the disclosure should be accompanied by payment of the tax which is known to be due, but this is not a prerequisite.

What kind of people make disclosures? They are all kinds. Some are people who are honestly repentant. Others are people who would rather sacrifice their ill-gotten gains than go to jail. Some are small people. Others are large corporations.

We had a good illustration recently in the Midwest. A large produce concern that had enriched itself on war contracts to help feed the Army, came to see the light. It made a complete statement to our local officials and paid $1,765,000 in taxes, interest, and civil penalties in order to clear its record and to keep its officers out of jail.

We have had voluntary disclosures from black-market meat and car dealers. We have had similar repentances from people in all walks of life. Of the $3,000,000,000 collected from taxpayers within the past 18 months as a result of the current drive against tax evaders, $500,000,000 has been paid on voluntary disclosures.

Now we have said that in order to be considered voluntary, a disclosure must be made before we have initiated an investigation in the case. Therefore, it is essential that we define "the initiation of an investigation."

The mere record of a name does not mean that an investigation has been initiated. The fact is that examining officers throughout the country have thousands of names or possible leads. To deny the existence of a voluntary disclosure merely because we have a name would be comparable to regarding the telephone book as a dossier of tax evaders.

An investigation is initiated when a special agent, an internal revenue agent, a deputy collector, or other Bureau officer, is assigned a return for examination, or where an investigating officer has requested advice of appropriate officers of the Bureau with respect to the filing of a return or the payment of taxes.

The time of disclosure and the time an investigation begins are, therefore, matters which can be ascertained with complete objectivity and certainty, thus protecting both the Government and the taxpayer from decisions based on guesswork or other vague circumstances. To assure adherence to this principle, the Bureau stands ready at all times where a dispute may arise as to the time of a disclosure and the time an investigation was initiated to open its records in that regard.

We are not concerned with the motivating force behind an individual's deciding to come in and talk to us about his evasion. If he "gets religion" before we have done anything, he will not be prosecuted.

Before we leave this subject, let me make one thing clear. When we excuse a man from criminal prosecution because of his voluntary disclosure, we are not in any sense condoning his action. Nor are we letting anyone off easy. At the outset, I mentioned that there are two kinds of fraud, criminal and civil. Voluntary disclosure excuses a man from criminal punishment, but it does not excuse him from the civil penalties. Therefore, the public revenues and the public conscience are both protected by this policy.

In excusing the man from criminal prosecution, we are merely taking a sensible step to produce the revenue called for by law with the minimum cost of investigation. The man who makes a voluntary disclosure saves us a lot of money in investigating. In return, we can spare him a term in jail. This is good business from his standpoint and it is good business from the Government's standpoint.

Turning to the civil sanctions for the protection of the revenues, although a voluntary disclosure may relieve a taxpayer of criminal prosecution, it will not necessarily relieve him of the civil penalty for fraud. The Department may insist upon the maximum civil penalties. Section 293 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, if any part of any income-tax deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, a penalty of 50 percent of the deficiency shall be added to the tax.

This is true even for the year 1942, the year of forgiveness, under section 6 of the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943 and no part of the tax for 1942 is forgiven. Under section 6 of the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943, it is expressly provided that the discharge of the tax for the year 1942 as therein provided shall not be applicable in any case in which the taxpayer is convicted of any criminal offense with respect to the tax for 1942 or in which additions to the tax for the taxable year 1942 are applicable by reason of fraud. Therefore, the practical result of fraud in the year 1942 return brings about not merely a 50-percent penalty but a penalty in astronomical figures.

Since the penalty is measured by the additional tax, no civil penalty can result from fraud unless there is a deficiency. If there is a deficiency, the 50-percent penalty attaches to its entire amount, if any part of it involves fraud. In fact, the penalty reaches back and applies to the entire additional tax which may have been paid, above that shown on the return, and is not limited to 50 percent of the deficiency shown in the deficiency notice. Even if the taxpayer has paid the entire additional tax, further deficiency may be asserted consisting solely of the fraud penalty. The 50-percent fraud penalty and the 25-percent penalty for delinquent filing of the return may both be assessed, making a total penalty of 75 percent, if both fraud and delinquency are present.

Page No.

147 On the other hand, the fraud penalty and the 5-percent negligence penalty are mutually exclusive, and the fraud penalty alone applies if any part of the deficiency was due to fraud, ven if another part was due to negligence. Nevertheless, since an act which appears fraudulent may be found to have been merely negligent, it is not uncommon for the Commissioner to assert a negligence penalty as an alternative in the event that the fraud should not be established. It appears, however, that the courts will not of their own motion determine a negligence penalty when the Commissioner has asserted only fraud.

148

It is impossible to lay down a general definition of fraud for purposes of applying the civil penalty. Mere negligence is not enough, of course, nor is ignorance or error of law. It is not enough that the taxpayer was engaged in a generally fraudulent transaction, such as a fraud on his employer; an intent or purpose to evade tax is essential. A corporation may be held responsible for the fraud of its officials, committed in its behalf; and its responsibility continues notwithstanding their death or withdrawal from its business affairs. Similarly, an individual taxpayer cannot insulate himself against liability for fraud by delegating the preparation of his returns to others, the issue in such cases being essentially one of the taxpayer's good faith. The latter aspect is likewise stressed in the related problem of reliance upon the advice of counsel. While normally if a taxpayer acts upon the advice of reputable counsel, he will not be held liable for fraud penalties; nevertheless, in such cases, it must appear that he conveyed complete and accurate information to his counsel.

The fraud which incurs a civil penalty may be a less serious matter than that for which criminal prosecution is instituted, and there are many cases where the civil penalty alone is asserted. But the mere fact that criminal penalties are imposed does not relieve a taxpayer of the civil penalty. The Supreme Court has held that the purpose of the civil fraud penalty is not punishment but is primarily to safeguard the revenue and to reimburse the Government for the heavy expense of investigation and for the loss resulting from the fraud. Therefore, the taxpayer's right not to be subjected to double jeopardy is not violated by the imposition of the civil fraud penalty after a prosecution for tax evasion, whether the taxpayer was convicted or acquitted of the crime. Conversely, the imposition of the civil penalty is no barrier to subsequent criminal prosecution.

An acquittal on the criminal charge of tax evasion is not res adjudicata with respect to the civil penalty, since the required degree of proof to sustain the criminal charge is greater than for the civil penalty, and the acquittal establishes, not that there was no fraud, but only that it was not proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Further, such an acquittal is not, in a civil case, admissible evidence of the taxpayer's freedom from fraud.

Whether a judgment of conviction for criminal evasion is admissible evidence of fraud in a civil tax case is a matter upon which we have no case law. As a matter of principle, the weight of authority at the common law, as developed in our State jurisdictions, appears to be opposed to the use of criminal convictions as evidence in civil cases of the facts on which they were bases. On the other hand, a respected author has suggested, not only that a conviction should be admissible evidence, but, as well, that it should be considered res adjudicata in a civil action bases upon the same facts, since the praties are the same and the facts would have been proved beyond a reasonable doubt in the criminal action. The application of res adjudicata in the instant situation may be questioned, however, in that the issue involved in a criminal charge of 149 "willfully" attempteding to "evade and defeat" the tax may not be an issue identical with the civil "fraud" which must be proved in a penalty case.

Whatever may be the law with respect to the admissibility and effect of a conviction, as such, there is no doubt that if the taxpayer entered a plea of guilty in the criminal case, it may be introduced in a civil case involving fraud penalties upon the theory that it constitutes an admission tending to prove, not the amount of the penalty or tax, but the fradulent nature of his conduct. On the other hand, if a taxpayer pleads nolo contendere in the criminal case, it is an admission only for the purpose of that case, and may not be used against him in a civil proceding involving the same act.

The difference between the civil and criminal penalties is emphasized by the difference in the procedure for their enforcement. The civil-fraud penalty is assessed and collected in the same manner as a deficiency in tax, rather than through a criminal proceeding. The penalty is included in a deficiency notice, and if the taxpayer wishes to test its validity before payment he must do so in the Tax Court, where, of course, the right of trial by jury and the other features of criminal procedure do not apply. The taxpayer may not enjoin the collection of a civil-fraud penalty duly assessed, any more than collection of the tax itself may be enjoined. If he desires a jury trial on the issue of fraud, he must first pay the tax and penalty and then bring suit in the district court for refund.

The procedure respecting the civil penalty is also unlike a criminal proceeding in that it is not necessary for the Commissioner to prove fraud beyond a reasonable doubt. In fact, prior to 1928, the Board of Tax Appeals attached to the fraud penalty the same presumption of correctness that attaches to other determinations of the Commissioner and placed the burden of disproving fraud on the taxpayer, although there were decisions even under that prior law to the effect that fraud is never presumed and that the Commissioner had the burden of proving it. The Revenue Act of 1928 expressly placed the burden of proof on the Commissioner "in any proceeding involving the issue whether the petitioner has been guilty of fraud with intent to evade tax." The cases hold that it is not enough for the Commissioner to prove fraud by a preponderance of the evidence. The evidence of fraud must be "clear and convincing". That requirment does not, of course, preclude establishing fraud by circumstantial evidence. It is the duty of the court to draw all reasonable inferences from the facts which are proved; and to resort to the entire record in determining fraud regardless of which party actually produced the evidence.

The burden of proof which is thus placed on the Commissioner extends only to the issue of fraud, and the presence of a fraud issue does not affect the usual presumption that the amount of the tax was correctly determined. Thus, if issue is joined and neither party introduces any proof, the tax will be sustained but the fraud penalty will be disallowed.

An analysis of the Tax Court decisions for the fiscal years 1945 and 1946 indicates that during that period the Commissioner successfully sustained his 150 burden of proof in two-thirds of the cases in which he asserted the fraud penalty. During the afore-mentioned period 21 decisions (four by published one-judge opinions, 17 by memorandum opinions) were rendered by the Tax Court, the Coommissioner being successful in 14, and failing to sustain his burden in seven. As a matter of interest it might be noted that on March 31, 1946, there were 155 protested cases involving fraud penalties pending in the offices of the internal revenue agents in charge, the greater number being in the New York division (49 cases) and the Pacific division (27 cases).

Page No.

150 If the taxpayer pays the tax and penalty and sues for its recovery, it is an open question whether the burden of proof on the issue of fraud is on him or on the Government. Since the taxpayer is the plaintiff seeking toget the fraud penalty back and since there is not satute expressly shifting the burden of proof as there is for Tax Court cases, it might be argued that the burden of disproving fraud is on the taxpayer. There is authority to the contrary, however.

The character of the civil-fraud penalty as a remedial device rather than a punishment is further illustrated by the fact that the liability for the penalty survives the death of the taxpayer and may be assessed against and collected from his estate.

In appropriation cases, the Commissioner is authorized to compromise fraud penalties, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Under Secretary or an Assistant Secretary. If the case has been referred to the Department of Justice, that power is exercised by the Attorney General. Since the penalty is an integral part of the tax liability, a compromise of the penalty is deemed a settlement of the tax, and no refund of the tax may subsequently be obtained.

In conclusion, it should be pointed out that a taxpayer can always minimize the possibility of the Commissioner asserting fraud penalties. A complete disclosure in h's return of all the facts, even though the taxpayer vigorously denies any tax responsibility, will go far toward assuring, if not guaranteeing, that no penalties will be asserted or sustained. This is not to say that every failure to disclose justifies the imputation of fraud, for the questioned item may be of highly doubtful characterwhich the taxpayer failed to report after being advised by reputable counsel that there is no tax liability. In such a case, it may be that the failure to disclose is not attributable to fraudulent intent. However, the only reasonably safe method is for a taxpayer at all times to cut "square corners" with his Government, and to submit with his return full information concerning any doubtful item.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON
(For release, Sunday newspapers, May 25, 1947)
Press Service No. S-341

Secretary Snyder said today that the continuing drive against tax evaders recently turned up a $3,700,000 income-tax-fraud case against a large paper and metal concern.

The company had amassed bulging bank accounts under secret names as the result of black-market operations, short-weighting customers, and falsifying tax returns.

The officers of the corporation, who face criminal prosecution, said their purpose in evading taxes was to save up money to pay fines if caught by OPA inspectors.

Page No.

150 The Secretary observed that, although this was the largest case developed in recent weeks, it was generally typical of thousands of smaller cases which brought $1,461,000,000 of additional revenue into the Treasury in the first 9 months of the current fiscal year—an increase of 40.5 percent over the similar period last year.

Although most fraud cases are settled upon payment of the tax plus interest and civil penalties, the number of prosecutions also has been rising. In the 9 month period, 117 persons pleaded guilty or were convicted on income-tax charges, compared with 47 in the similar period last year.

One of the important elements in settling cases, with civil penalties and without prosecution, has been the Treasury's policy of not prosecuting persons who make a voluntary disclosure of their fraud before the Treasury begins an investigation of their cases. This means that, in order to assure himself against criminal prosecution, a repentant taxpayer must disclose his fraud to an official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue before the case has been assigned for examination and before an investigating officer of the Bureau has requested advice from appropriate officers of the Bureau regarding the case. Prior to such action within the Bureau, a taxpayer may make a voluntary disclosure and escape criminal prosecution even though his name may appear in an inactive file of suspects. This presumes, of course, that the repentant taxpayer cooperates with agents of the Bureau in determining the true tax liability.

Full understanding of this policy is expected to stimulate voluntary disclosures by repentant taxpayers, similar to a recent case in the Middle West, where a produce firm paid over $1,000,000 in taxes, interest, and civil penalties in order to avoid prosecution.

Other recent developments in the tax drive include:

A man appealed to his local police to help find the owner of a carton full of currency which appeared mysteriously in the man's cellar. Investigation indicates that the man owned the money himself and was only trying to cover up black-market profits.

Another man who had concealed income-tax frauds by burying currency in his basement was found out when $125,000 of the money got so mouldy that he tried to turn it in for fresh bills.

Investigation of one war contractor recently resulted in additional tax assessments totalling $1,000,000.

A tedious study of gate receipts at a major-league ball park resulted in the filing of criminal charges against a ring of "ticket scalpers."

A Midwestern mortician was found to have cheated on his income tax by claiming "bad debt" deductions on all funerals unpaid for on the last day of the year, even though the bills were invariably paid shortly afterwards.

151 A southern dentist said he was going to move to South America after income-tax agents discovered frauds from which the man had acquired an 18-room house, a racing stable, and many other expensive luxuries.

A west coast bakery was assessed $228,000 after agents discovered that tax frauds had been concealed by juggling the company's books.

In New England, a persistent agent, who had been assigned to check up on an apparent $18,000-tax deficiency owed by a corporation, discovered that the true tax bill was $670,000.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

INFORMATION SERVICE
Washington, D. C.

(Immediate release, Thursday, January 10, 1952)

S-2930

Secretary Snyder announced today that the Treasury Department has abandoned the policy under which criminal prosecution has not been recommended in cases where taxpayers made voluntary disclosures of intentional violation of the internal-revenue laws prior to the initiation of the investigation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This action was recommended by Commissioner Dunlap. In connection with this change of policy, the Secretary issued the following statement:

"While it has been the long-established policy of the Treasury Department to refrain from recommending criminal prosecution where taxpayers make voluntary disclosure of intentional tax evasion prior to the initiation of an investigation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue it has been concluded that such policy will no longer be followed. Litigation in the courts in recent years has illustrated the controversial nature of the question as to what constitutes a true voluntary disclosure in fact. In the administration of the policy it has been difficult and at times impossible to ascertain whether the disclosure 152 was made because the taxpayer realized he was under investigation or whether the disclosure was in fact voluntary and in reliance on the immunity held out by the policy.

"The intensified enforcement activities of the Bureau's special tax fraud drive and racket squads throughout the country are ferreting out the willful tax evaders, and resulting in recovery of the additional taxes and penalties due the Government. It is the policy of the Treasury Department to recommend criminal prosecution in every case where the facts and circumstances warrant that action."

Page No.

152 MR. DEVIND. On that point, are there no memoranda within the Department discussing the issues involved in the adoption of this policy?

MR. LYNCH. I have not found any. I would be glad to search and see if there are any. Right now, I do not know of any at that time. I am speaking of 1945.

As to that statement in 1945, the situation was this: We had gone through several war years where tax collections and tax rates had exceeded by far what they had been on the prewar basis. In addition to that, we had gone through a period when, as you know, it was quite difficult to have adequate staffing of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Many of the people there, of course, were called into the armed services, and to other duties, during the war period. In other words, we had suffered considerably from understaffing.

Then there came a period in 1945 when this vigorous tax-fraud drive was to be instituted. It was directed, of course, against all the enlarged opportunities for tax evasion during the war years.

At that time it was felt that because the years were slipping by from the standpoint of the statute of limitations—the war years of the heaviest income—and also because necessarily you were still limited in bringing quite effective action as quickly as you liked to, it was felt under the circumstances there it would be the most prudent helpful thing in the interest of the revenue to couple the invigorated fraud drive with this prominent public statement of what the policy was about coming forward and making full disclosure.

What I want to point out to you is the coincidence there as to back years—high income-tax years—the fact of previously severe handicaps in the program of enforcement, coincident with a renewed vigorous drive for tax-fraud enforcement that policy was announced.

155 MR. SCHWARTZ. To comply with the provisions of the mimeograph which I quoted, there must be a disclosure before the initiation of an investigation. That disclosure must be full and complete, and that disclosure must be accompanied or followed by the payment of the full amount of the civil penalties and interest to the extent of the taxpayer's ability to make those payments.

MR. DEVIND. Within that description of the operation, the disclosure could have been made in any informal manner whatsoever. That is, you could make an oral disclosure to a revenue agent.

MR. SCHWARTZ. The initial step could have been an oral disclosure to a revenue agent.

Page No.

155

MR. DEVID. So that under the policy that was applied, there would be no necessity to have a written record of the time, place, and nature of the matters disclosed?

MR. SCHWARTZ. Yes. The policy and the instructions to the field officers contemplated that there would be a record made of any contact with a taxpayer.

Incidentally, before I forget, in my description of the policy, I think I omitted to say that the disclosure must have been one of intentional violation of the internal revenue laws.

MR. DEVID. But there was no requirement that a written record be made by the taxpayer of the time, place and nature of his disclosure. If he made an oral disclosure the matter was left to such report as the Revenue Agent might make of the conversation that took place?

MR. SCHWARTZ. As far as the record in the Bureau is concerned, that is what we would have, that agent's memorandum record of the receipt of the information from the taxpayer.

MR. DEVID. In one of the cases we had in our hearings in New York that seemed to be precisely the situation. A year and a half after a tax fraud investigation was begun, it was claimed by the accountant for the taxpayers that he had orally informed the revenue agent at a time when no investigation was under way of the facts involved in the criminal prosecution. It became a matter of word against word. There was no record in the Internal Revenue Bureau of any such conversation, and the accountant swore under oath that he had made such a disclosure.

That was the sort of situation that could arise.

MR. SCHWARTZ. Yes; that could arise.

MR. DEVID. That would not have been a necessary part of the policy.

MR. SCHWARTZ. I would say it would be incident to that particular case, when the disclosure issue finally came down to who was right and wrong, you had a conflict of evidence, and the revenue agent in the case you mentioned was not prepared to back up his own testimony with any entry in his diary or other written record. So you come out with a conflict of testimony between two people.

MR. DEVID. He said there was no occasion for any written record to be made, because the conversation never took place. That was the case where a complaint was filed against the accountant for making a false statement to the Federal Government. That matter is now before the courts.

But it is an indication of what could happen under the informal procedure. That problem could to some extent be eliminated, could it not, by requiring disclosures to be made in writing to a specified official or 156 officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and in other ways pinning down the time, place and manner and nature of the disclosure?

Page No.

* * * * * *

160 MR. DEVIND. As a matter of law, Mr. Schwartz, it is your view that the fact that the offer of immunity was conditioned upon paying of the civil liability would not be sufficient to reopen the criminal prosecution matter if the taxpayer, for example, showed inability to pay?

MR. SCHWARTZ. No, sir; not once you have taken that self-incriminating evidence under promise of immunity.

MR. DEVIND. Is that clear?

MR. SCHWARTZ. That is my clear understanding.

MR. CURTIS. When does the investigation begin?

161 MR. LYNCH. That is our great difficulty.

MR. SCHWARTZ. There have been various definitions of when an investigation begins.

MR. CURTIS. Mr. Kean tells me you covered that in detail in my absence.

MR. SCHWARTZ. Yes; we covered that in general.

MR. CURTIS. I will read the record.

Now, I will ask this question: From the standpoint of the Bureau records, can you always establish with certainty to your own satisfaction, at least, as to when an investigation began?

MR. SCHWARTZ. Not for this purpose, sir.

MR. CURTIS. I would think that even if your policy of voluntary disclosure is abandoned that, in line with preparation for any suit that you might file, a criminal or civil suit, that there ought to be a procedure set up so that at least the Bureau can be free of any doubt as to when they started an investigation. Would that be possible?

MR. LYNCH. I think so, subject to this difficulty; as it involves this policy of voluntary disclosure. As to the "when," from the standpoint of the Bureau or any of its personnel, the investigation is initiated when a particular case is jacketed, and the lead may come from any source, as you know.

234 MR. ARENT. May I add something at this point. I want to say in the first place that the purpose of getting a workable voluntary-disclosure policy and setting up a list of the sort Mr. Mintz mentioned, and on which I will elaborate in a minute, is not to protect a few crooks but to make it possible for reputable lawyers and accountants when they uncover fraud in dealing with their clients to get them to come in and disclose and pay their tax, and interest, and 50-percent penalty.

At present those men who stumble upon fraud in the course of their representation of people are afraid to tell their clients to come in and do this, because at no point can they tell their client definitely that by paying all of these things he can be sure that he will not be prosecuted.

Now, I would suggest that some organization, somebody mentioned the Committee on Enrollment and Practice of the Treasury, keep a central file of cases which have reached that stage of development, wherever it may be, which the Bureau chooses to define as the turning point in a voluntary disclosure. The taxpayer's attorney can come there, armed with a power of attorney, and ask that committee whether his client is on that list, by giving assurance to the comittee that if he is not on that list the taxpayer will proceed to make voluntary disclosure. The offer to disclose could be made in writing, and the Bureau could respond in writing, stating that the off has been received, that it is still timely, provided the taxpayer complies with certain conditions, such as making a complete disclosure, and not holding anything back, and cooperating fully in the investigation.

Now, that does not strike me as being such a hopelessly difficult and impossible task, and yet the Bureau has shied away from it constantly, despite constant efforts to make them become definite.

One further aspect of this: The voluntary-disclosure policy is there, as the Department of Justice officials testified, to plague the Government whether it likes it or not. If it does not establish a definite policy of this sort, it is still going to have to consider the element of cooperation and disclosure in determining which cases to prosecute, because it knows that the thing will be waved as a red flag in the course of the trial. I think we can serve not only the bar, and the accountants and taxpayers, who regardless of their moral attitude and their state of mind, are nevertheless ready to pay up. You can serve not only those groups, but the public through increasing the 235 revenues and by making prosecution a cleaner and more clear-cut business.

MR. DEWIND. To make any such proposal as that work you would really have to have amended returns prepared and submitted for filing subject only to the condition thatthe name not appear on the list.

MR. ARENT. I do not agree with that, Mr. DeWind. When you first learn that a man has concealed income or taken false deductions, you may have 3 or 4 months' work ahead of you before you are able to come in with a proper construction of income. I think all that should be required of the taxpayer—because you want him to come in as fast as he can, at that point—is a statement that "I have failed to report income which should have been

235 disclosed, and which should have been reported"; or "I have taken a deduction to which I was not entitled, and I would like to cooperate in ascertaining the correct amount of tax and making restitution."

I may also say that where there has been good faith on the part of the Bureau officials in certain areas of this country, some of us who practice tax law have come in and have asked whether a certain individual was under investigation, and when told he was not, we have proceeded to make just that kind of written general offer to disclose, followed by cooperation, and the Bureau has kept faith and everybody has benefited.

MR. DEWIND. You would agree at least that if the taxpayer came in under such a system and the name was not on the list, that he would know in advance that that name would then be referred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, regardless of what he did from then on?

MR. ARENT. No; if I understand you correctly, Mr. DeWind, the purpose of setting up a list of this sort in the hands of an independent body, would be so that——

MR. DEWIND. Perhaps you did not understand. You cannot make this list if you are going to have such a thing, a way in which a taxpayer can always find out if anybody has anything on him, without disclosing anything, and so that if he finds his name is not on the list then it would seem to me that at the very least his name would then be forwarded to the Bureau as a person who had a voluntary disclosure to make.

MR. ARENT. If his name is not on the list, he is expected to make the voluntary disclosure, and he would, of course, be investigated if he failed to do it, and the book would be thrown at him, probably.

MR. DEWIND. Assuming that that first step, namely, the check on whether or not it is a timely disclosure, were covered by some such procedure, then do you have specific suggestions as to how the policy might be formalized to prevent the abuses that have been brought out here after that stage? This would establish the date of the intention to make disclosure, but what of the actual disclosure, and it would have to be in writing; would it?

MR. MINTZ. I would assume it should be in writing; yes, sir.

MR. DEWIND. And the notice of acceptance would be a formalized document which would be the only document that could confer immunity, and it would be publicly stated that no oral statement of immunity would have any effect, and the only statement is an official one, namely, a notice of acceptance in writing.

MR. MINTZ. That is right.

236 MR. DEWIND. Are there any other aspects that should be considered in your view to making a satisfactory formalized procedure?

Page No.

236 MR. MINTZ. Well, I had not come today prepared to discuss those phases of it. Certainly our committee will give immediate attention to them, and perhaps file some supplemental suggestions with you.

MR. DEWIND. I think the subcommittee would welcome that. One problem which has arisen here which seems to be very difficult of solution is the problem that arises from the fact that in so many collateral investigations of other taxpayers, information comes to light concerning another taxpayer. And so frequently the Bureau believes, I think, that a taxpayer comes in to make a voluntary disclosure, not because it is voluntary, but because he has been tipped off that an investigation is coming, becuase of information disclosed in a collateral investigation.

MR. MINTZ. I do not know any means of avoiding those inequities. The suggestion today about having some objective indicia, such as a filing system of this nature, presumably would establish a single standard, and it probably would be used by individuals who knew that they were soon to be investigated. I think that as a part of the voluntary-disclosure system it would have to be accepted.

MR. DEWIND. Would you also have to accept the standing temptation to employees of the revenue service to leak information to taxpayers or their representatives concerning imminent investigations?

MR. MINTZ. I have a certain amount of impatience with that question in the sense that if that is the sort of administration that we have, we might as well stop worrying about niceties, such as voluntary-disclosure policy and a lot of other things.

MR. DEWIND. One of the things that this subcommittee has been concerned about is to remove as many temptations as possible from the path of internal-revenue employees. Now, the removal of the temptation is not a controlling factor, but unless some very important value is obtained from exposing employees to such temptation, you do not want to do it.

MR. MINTZ. Iwould suppose in that sense there would be one or two or three hundred other forms of temptation to which Bureau employees are subject, and I would not know why this one should be any more liable to abuse than those other points where knowledge would have come to their attention, which they could use to their own profit by passing it on illicitly to the taxpayers.

MR. DEWIND. This might be a particularly acute form of that. Could you say this, Mr. Mintz, in your experience and the knowledge of others' experience, that you have gained on your committee work or otherwise, are there enough truly voluntary disclosures, that is, disclosures that are not made under the fear of an imminent investigation, to justify the existence of this sort of policy?

MR. MINTZ. I would answer that as follows: I think that there are comparatively few cases where a taxpayer who has filed a criminal tax return has an honest attack of conscience so strong that it compels him to go into the Bureau in an effort to make amends. I think in most instances what prompts the tax evader to desire to file an amended return is publicity in his city or elsewhere, given to a vigorous criminal tax-evasion investigation, word that friends are under investigation, or prominent people in the city are being investigated, a feeling that he may be next.

MR. ARENT. May I add something to that, Mr. DeWind. Within my experience and in the comments made to me by other attorneys and accountants, I find a considerable number of situations where a desire to make voluntary disclosure arises or would arise. I agree with Mr. Mintz that they are not usually matters of conscience, of religion and confession, but I think we confuse the issue when we get into the morals of it. We are dealing here with a long-range matter of raising revenue and our self-assessment system relies first upon respect for our revenue system, and the honesty of its administration, and secondly upon fear of sanctions, and fear of getting caught.

Now, the man who respects the system will file honestly in the first place, and some will file out of fear correctly in the first place. Then you get the group who afterward have a force working on them and they cannot sleep nights, and they hear of things happening to other people, and they may, as I know of two instances within my experience, hear of a friend of theirs who has been prosecuted for a similar type of situation, or a doctor may get inquiry from a revenue agent about whether a certain person paid him a medical fee for which he had taken a deduction, and that begins to ferment in the persons' not conscience, but mind and fears.

Now, from the standpoint of the revenue, if we can let those people who are operating under fear come in and pay their taxes and 50-percent penalty and interest, without spending a lot of money on Government investigations, we are accomplishing something very positive, because as long as they know that there is only a certain point up to which they can walk in and avoid prosecution, you are not weakening the sanction of the criminal prosecution, the fear of criminal prosecution. These people know that they must get in before Internal Revenue gets after them.

I think we would get a tremendous amount of revenue if all of us who are advising people in these situations were able to say to the, "You are still at a stage where you can come in and pay up, and not go to jail."

MR. DEWIND. You believe from your experience that there is a substantial number of such situations that are not simply cases that come in shortly before they would be detected anynow?

MR. ARENT. I failed to make the point I really wanted to make, which is that even if all of those who come in are people who are coming in because they understand Internal Revenue has a lead on them, Internal Revenue would still be way ahead if it let hose people get off by making voluntary disclosure; because we all know that no matter how much we build up Bureau personnel, and I hope it will be built up a great deal more, you are still going to investigate only a very small proportion of your cases, including the cases on which you have leads. In the case of this doctor, for example, the fact that

Page No.

237 Internal Revenue by a thoughtful analysis might have realized from comparing his return with the return of this patient of his, that there is something strange about the amount of income he reported—despite that fact I am certain Internal Revenue would never have followed up in that case, and it has too many vague leads of that sort which are strong enough to drive a man to voluntary disclosure, because he knows the situation and sees all of the 238 implications, whereas the Bureau with its limited personnel cannot see the whole situation, so that there is revenue to be gained there.

MR. DEWIND. Fundamentally you must believe from your experience that there are a substantial number of taxpayers who would respond to that sort of inducement.

MR. ARENT. I do honestly believe that.

MR. DEWIND. So that the taxpayers who wish to make voluntary disclosures in substantial number over and above those who have a fear that they are about to be detected, or I should say particular reason to know that they are about to be detected.

MR. ARENT. I think most of them act out of fear and not out of morality and, nevertheless, I think that their fear comes at a stage where the Bureau is not breathing down their necks, and they think the Bureau is breathing down their necks, but it is not that close, and most of them would get away with it if they had the ability to keep steady nerves and sleep nights, and fortunately they do not, and if you give us a chance we will bring those people in and make them pay their taxes and their penalties.

MR. DEWIND. There is no statistical information to buttress that feeling. We are trying to get what we can from the Bureau of Internal Revenue in connection with the volume of amended returns that are filed under the former voluntary-disclosure policy.

STATEMENT OF ALBERT E. ARENT

Gentlemen, having served for 2 years as chairman of the committee on procedure in fraud cases of the section of taxation of the American Bar Association, I have learned considerable about the handling of fraud cases in both the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Justice and have become familiar with many of the complaints registered against those Departments by members of the bar. Since I no longer represent the section of taxation in the matter of the handling of tax fraud cases, I feel free to present to you my own personal views which, however, I believe are shared by many members of the tax bar.

Basically most tax lawyers respect the job which the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Justice have done in ferreting out fraud and processing cases to prosecution. We believe a better job could be done if both agencies were given additional manpower. Notwithstanding recent disclosures, we believe that most fraud cases have been honestly investigated and honestly prosecuted or withheld from prosecution. Certainly this committee recognizes the importance of separating the sheep from the goats and the need not only for vigorous law enforcement officers to send fraudulent taxpayers to jail but also for men of conscience with courage enough to protect the innocent as well as to prosecute the guilty. Honest men do sometimes get enmeshed in what superficially seems like fraud. It would, indeed, be unfortunate if the zeal for prosecution reached the stage where the effectiveness of Government officials was measured by the number of cases prosecuted, with the result that indictment and conviction rather than justice became the goal of our special agents and Government lawyers.

242

There is a practical as well as a moral side to this question. In addition to the criminal sanction, there is a statute imposing a civil penalty for fraud amounting to 50 percent of the tax deficiency. The elements comprising civil fraud are no different from those constituting criminal fraud. The distinction intended by Congress must have been one of degree—the gradation of guilt in terms of amounts concealed, methods, circumstances, and the quality of proof. Criminal fraud must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt rather than by a mere preponderance of the evidence. Thus, we need not only men of courage and conscience but also men of experience and judgment who will know where to draw the line. This Nation has been fortunate, despite widespread attempts at tax evasion by men of otherwise unblemished reputation, that the crime of tax fraud has not yet become respectable and judges usually impose jail sentences when convictions are obtained. For this, much credit must go to the Government officials who have selected for prosecution mainly the open-and-shut cases and the more shocking cases, and have thereby kept the courts from becoming flooded with so many cases of trivial or borderline character as would tend to make the offense assume the character of a mere misdemeanor in the eyes of the public who make up the juries and of the judges who impose sentence. This duty of selection imposes the gravest of responsibilities upon the public officials concerned and is, of course, open to abuse. Nevertheless, we cannot abandon the task to the courts and run the risk of having income tax enforcement shattered in the way prohibition enforcement ultimately was.

Page No.

The role of the Department of Justice Tax Division in making this selection has been paramount. There in recent years it has been possible for reputable attorneys to learn in reasonable concrete terms what the charges were against their clients and to present evidence to meet those charges in an effort to demonstrate either that their client was not guilty or that the Government's proof was not strong enough to promise conviction or that for other good reasons the particular case ought to be disposed of without prosecution. I cannot emphasize too strongly the feeling that exists among nearly all of the tax lawyers of my acquaintance that for the most part the Tax Division has been staffed with honest, intelligent men who have done, on the whole, a good job in the performance of this difficult task.

Many of us would regard it as a great loss to the sound administration of the tax laws if the Criminal Section of the Tax Division were abolished and cases were referred for prosecution directly from the field offices of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to the United States attorneys. The work of this section has been the principal influence toward uniform treatment of taxpayers throughout the country and one of the principal safeguards against the local pressures which make it so difficult to indict the kind of respectable business and professional men who, unfortunately, in recent years have let themselves degenerate into tax evaders. If the Tax Division of the Department of Justice were not breathing down the necks of the United States attorneys and advising them which cases to prosecute, in my opinion there would be fewer prosecutions of the big, important tax cases, involving figures powerful in the business and political community, than there is today and more prosecution of the small fry who get caught at their inept attempts at chiseling.

Our main complaint has been the unwillingness of the Bureau to state publicly the policies and procedures which govern its handling of fraud cases. Tax lawyers have wanted to know what the rules were so that they might honestly and ably represent their clients within the orbit of those rules. Informally, Bureau officials have repeatedly indicated a desire that their investigators and attorneys respect the constitutional rights of persons under investigation, that they avoid unnecessary injury to the reputation of a suspect until such time as a decision has been made to prosecute, that taxpayers should not be discouraged from seeking the advice of counsel at any stage, etc. Yet, in the absence of any published regulations or instructions, agents in the field from time to time appear to have violated the Bureau's high principles, and taxpayers' representatives have had nothing to which they could refer for the purpose of making the special agent adhere to the proper standards. The result has been uneven practices in different parts of the country, occasional accusations of sharp practice by the Bureau, occasional injustice, and occasional injury to the Government's ability to carry a case through to successful prosecution, as, for example, in the Liebster case in Philadelphia, where the very informality of the Bureau's prodedures made

Page No.

243 it possible for the taxpayers to obtain relief by insinuations of entrapment. The cure, in my view, is not to abandon such policies as voluntary disclosure, which was involved in the Liebster case, but to adopt open and explicit standards against which the conduct of both the taxpayer and the investigation agents can be measured.

Many of us view with regret the abandonment of what is known as the voluntary disclosure policy. We think it is a casualty of the Bureau's lack of candor and explicitness in defining what constitutes a voluntary disclosure for purposes of obtaining immunity from prosecution. Although the task is not without its difficulties, I see no reason why the Bureau could not issue regulations precisely describing at what procedural stage an investigation begins and stating exactly what the taxpayer must do to win immunity from prosecution. Since the policy was the Bureau's own creation, it could set up whatever safeguards it needed to prevent taxpayers from taking unfair advantage of the policy and, at the same time, it could establish guideposts so that honest attorneys and frightened or reformed taxpayers could take advantage of the policy with confidence. Under such a policy, properly administered, hundreds of thousands of dollars will be paid into the Treasury which would otherwise escape detection. We are all aware that no matter how many special agents the Government employs, it can have only sample enforcement. Scores, if not hundreds, escape for each one that gets caught. To collect its taxes, therefore, the Government must rely not only upon its enforcement machinery but primarily upon the integrity of the taxpaying public and, secondly, upon its fear. In my opinion, the threat of prosecution is one of the most effective sanctions available—one that should not be weakened for the sake of any immediate increase in revenue, for in the long the Government would lose. I do not believe, however, that the sanction is weakened by an opportunity for voluntary disclosure if it is known that such disclosure is futile after the Government has begun investigating a taxpayer, especially since a person making voluntary disclosure usually ends up paying not only the full tax due but also interest and a 50-percent fraud penalty. It does not matter whether the taxpayer makes disclosure because he learns that a customer or a patient of his is being investigated and the trail may lead to him or whether he gets religion. We are dealing not with a moral question but with a practical problem of raising revenue. We know that even when it has such collateral leads, the Bureau can follow through and catch up with only a small portion of those who would take advantage of an opportunity to make voluntary disclosure.

Because of the mistakes and transgressions of a small minority of our public officials, we find an increasing timidity among honest and able public officials with respect to assuming responsibility for difficult decisions. This could lead to a bureaucratic paralysis which would seriously harm the effectiveness of our Government and grossly injure all of us who have to deal with our Government—whether as taxpayers, as businessmen, or as servicemen. The abandonment by the Treasury of its voluntary disclosure policy, and perhaps, too, of its recognition of health as an element of decision in the processing of a tax-fraud case, is not the constructive or courageous way out. The Bureau should be encouraged to grapple with its difficult problems and not to run from them.

Office Memorandum • UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO : Special Agent Samuel Krame

DATE: October 16, 1951

FROM : Ernest J. Samber, Assistant Collector

SUBJECT: Shotwell Manufacturing Company

In compliance with your request for a statement from me regarding the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, the following are the facts in the case:

On or about March 15, 1948, at the time I was Chief Field Deputy, Leon J. Busby, a certified public accountant personally known to me, came in to my office and said that he had a problem he would like to discuss with me relating to a client of his, and that he would like to have my advice.

Mr. Busby said that he was not at liberty to disclose the name of his client at this time, but that the client had engaged in the sale of its manufactured product at a price in excess of ceiling prices and that the client had used the funds so obtained to purchase raw materials needed in their manufacturing process for prices in excess of ceiling prices.
